We need to feel as strongly about keeping the Sabbath as we do about the commandment that says don't commit adultery. Don't lie. Not a little lie, no lies. Not a little adultery, no adultery. Not a little Sabbath breaking. You're going to seem fanatical but that will not be your problem. That will be the problem of the viewer. You must be consistent in your obedience. He that doesn't stand for something falls for anything. You've heard me say that before. So we're commanded for one thing to keep the Sabbath and keep it Holy. When you look in Revelation chapter 14 the three angels messages that God's people take to the world before Jesus comes. In Revelation 14 Jesus comes, there is a vision of that. These angels declare, "Worship Him that made the heaven and the earth and the sea." That's a quote right out of the Sabbath commandment. "For in six days the Lord made the heaven the earth and the sea." Then Revelation 14:12, speaking of the saved, "Here is the patience of the saints. Here are those that keep the commandments of God." It is contrasting those who keep the commandments of God with those who worship the beast. Did you catch that?

It says, "If any man worship the beast and his image and receive his mark in his forehead or in his hand the same will drink the wine of the wrath of God that is poured out without mixture into the cup of His indignation and the fire it sends up." The most fearsome curse in the Bible is in Revelation 14 and it's identifying those who worship the beast. The next verse is saying, on the other hand we have those who keep the commandments of God. And it doesn't mean some of them because everybody keeps some of them, right? It's talking about a people who keep them consistently. Now when you look at the 10 Commandments how many of the commandments specifically involve the word keep? "Remember the Sabbath day to keep." It does not say, "Thou shalt not keep adultery." "Thou shalt not keep murder." Now there is one place in the commandment dealing with idolatry where it says "showing mercy unto thousands that love me and keep my commandments." But that's a general phrase for all ten. The only commandment that specifically uses the word keep is the Sabbath commandment.

And it seems strange that it's one of the only commandments the Christian world is saying is no longer an obligation. That sounds very inconsistent to me. I could never buy that. It was there in creation at the beginning. It's going to be in the New Earth. God wants us to keep it now. We may find it's a test in the last days. Let's go to the commandment. Let the Lord speak for Himself. Indeed this is one of the places where God did speak for Himself. Exodus 20:8 and we're going to read the commandment. "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy. Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the Seventh Day is the Sabbath of the Lord your God. In it you shall not do any work. You or your son, or your daughter, nor your male servant, nor your female servant, nor your cattle nor the stranger who is within your gates for in six days the Lord made the Heaven and the Earth and the sea and all that is in them and He rested the seventh day. Therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it." It takes us all the way back to Genesis.

The idea that the Sabbath was not inaugurated until Mt. Sinai is bad scholarship. It springs from ignorance. Exodus 20 is where you hear Him speaking it. He hasn't even written it yet. Exodus 16 God rains the manna down from heaven, right? Six days a week He rains the manna. There's twice as much they gather on Friday because there will be no manna on the seventh day of the week. That's Exodus 16. He has not spoken the Sabbath commandment yet. He has not written the Sabbath commandment yet and He's already treating it like it's something they understood. When some of them went out on the Sabbath day looking for bread God responds by saying, "How long will you, how often will you refuse to keep my commandments, my laws?" He is calling the Sabbath a law before Mt. Sinai. It goes all the way back to the Garden of Eden.

Does man need to rest? Does man need a specific time for worship? Yes! The principle comes from the very beginning. And some people believe because there is silence on something it must not have existed. That is a very foolish logic to prove anything. You catch that? Because you don't hear a lot said about something to assume that it means it wasn't there or it didn't exist you apply that principle to other truths in the Bible and you're going to get all kinds of strange beliefs. It's obvious that it was there. There is no commandment that says you're not supposed to commit adultery before Mt. Sinai but Joseph seemed to know that there was. Some of these things are clearly implied. So this is the commandment. You'll notice that it is the longest of the 10 Commandments. It is the only commandment that begins with the word "remember". It's in the middle of God's law and God takes more time with the Sabbath commandment explaining what that means in case they misunderstood. But here is the point I don't want you to miss. The Ten Commandments are an abbreviation of the law of God.

For instance, when it says, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord in vain" does that commandment go into great detail to explain every way that a person could take God's name in vain? Or is that something for further study? You'll find other examples of that in the Bible. It doesn't in the 10 Commandments go into all the examples of how you could swear or claim to be a Christian and be a hypocrite and all that's involved in taking God's name in vain. You study out the details of that. In the commandment that says you shall not commit adultery. I just quoted it. That's pretty brief. I think you and I know there is a lot more to it than that one statement. What does that involve? How about two people that aren't married? Is it adultery then? And you've got a lot of things where you invest a lot of study and understanding in how do you keep that commandment. It's broader than the statement you find etched in stone, the same thing with the Sabbath commandment.

And God in His Word gives us a lot more detail about what is involved in keeping it holy. It does not mean that you simply swing in a hammock all day long and don't farm. There's a lot more to it than that. But it does give more detail you are to rest, your animals are to rest, your servants are to rest, your family is to rest and everybody within your gates. I'll talk more about some of those specifics when we go on. I'll tell you what confuses people a little bit about the Sabbath. It's because it deals with time.

Wesley tells a story about somebody who was a new convert to Christianity and very devout and as the sun was going down before the Sabbath began he was shining his shoes or cleaning his shoes and it took about fifteen minutes to do each shoe and he got one shoe done and he looked at where the sun was and he knew he would not have the other shoe done before the sun went down and he decided to stop. Did he make the right decision? Went to church the next day. One shiny shoe and one dirty one. Fanatic! Is he? It's either right or it's wrong.

You know that during WWII there were Christians and Jews in concentration camps that were told they had to go dig potatoes on Sabbath. The Nazis loved showing the Jews that they were hypocrites. I have Jewish relatives that were over there and they'd make them go out and dig potatoes or work on the Sabbath and some of them were more devout and they would say, "I cannot do this. It's God's Sabbath." And they were killed. Just like that. Others compromised.

In the days of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego when they stood up do you think they were the only Jews in the crowd that day? I'm sure there were some who bowed down. I'm ashamed and afraid to say that I'm sure that there will be some Sabbath keeping Christians that will go along with the world in the last days. That's why this message is important. And if you don't know how to make a decision to say the sun is almost down. The Sabbath will have begun and this shoe is not done yet but I'm going to do it anyway because that would be fanaticism then you don't understand the principle. You see time makes a difference. In our minds we think, "How can it be good and holy and fine to shine this shoe and then a few more ticks of the clocks and all of a sudden it's a sin?"

I mean it sounds strange to us. Let me use another illustration. A man might have a girl that he's very interested in and it's inappropriate for him to gaze upon her without her clothes on and vice versa. But after they make some vows suddenly what was a sin is now holy. Do little things like that make a difference? What at one moment was wrong after the service it is holy and it's good. So these words of God do make a difference and we've got to understand that because we become very sloppy and we say, "Oh, well, I realize the sun is down, but I've got a little more... a few more dishes to do. I've got, oh, you know. Why would I stop mowing the lawn? I realize the sun's almost down and leave this Mohawk of grass right down the middle. I mean, obviously God doesn't want me to do that. And so then your neighbor drives by and they see that the sun is down and you're mowing that last swath of grass. What message are you sending to your family and your neighborhood?

It does matter, friends! You will be accused of being legalistic and Pharisaical and fanatical. You'll be accused of all that but I can guarantee you they probably had some Jewish friends tugging on their trousers. When the music played and everyone bowed to the image in Babylon Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego probably had some friends that were saying, "Get down! Are you crazy? Just this once. You are a fanatic!"

Yeah, the world, the church probably thought they were fanatics, but God honored them. He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much. Timing makes a difference. Things change. And when God says this is regular time for work, this is holy time. But God commands us to keep it holy. What is holy? If we're going to keep it holy we need to know what that means. Only a few things in the Bible are called holy. Marriage is called holy. Before a girl is married she is available and you can, you know, make your bid and try to court or do whatever you want to do but until she says, "I do." I mean she may have made an engagement commitment, but it ain't over 'til it's over, right? And you've all heard stories how at the last minute the guy or the girl says, "I can't do this! I really love her!" or something else you know. But once they're married if they say that... It's holy. And a violation of that is profaning a marriage, it's called adultery. It's sacred.

There is money, a percentage of money that is called holy. The Bible says that tithe is holy unto the Lord. Now it's hard for us to understand if I've got ten dollars in my wallet that one of them is holy. They all say, "In God we trust." (It'll just be a matter of time before they take that off, right?) But we've got to understand that whatever that, it's the first one I pull out and give at church is the first fruits, but one of them is holy and you've got to be intelligent about that. And if I take the tithe that is set aside for God and I use it to make my VCR payment that is profaning. It's a sin. You're taking something holy and you're making it common. That's a sin. And when you treat a married woman like she's not married it's a sin.

It's holy. There are some things that are holy and they should not be profaned.

God says the time of the Sabbath is holy not because a church teaches it, not because it's a creed, but God said, "I have sanctified it. I have blessed it." And nothing any man in the world can do changes that. Whether you know it's holy or not it's still holy. Whether you know you're breaking it or not doesn't make you less culpable. Oh, I take that back. I believe there are going to be many people... you know sometimes I preach without notes and I'll say something stupid and the Lord arrests my attention. There are going to be many people in heaven who maybe kept the wrong day as the Sabbath and they simply did not know, and the Lord will judge them according to the light they have. But it is still the Sabbath day whether you know it or not. That's what I meant to say. And it is still holy whether you know it or not. You don't make it holy by believing it. It is holy.

You notice God doesn't say, "Remember the Sabbath Day to make it holy." He doesn't ask you to make it holy. You can't. God is the one who declares something holy. And when He says, "keep it holy" He says, "I've already made it holy back in the beginning, before sin. Now I'm asking you to recognize what I have done and respect me." And it's all about a love relationship with God. Now I'm going to begin with a few obvious points that I think are important to understand. What should we do on the Sabbath? Now we'll talk about things that should be done and things that should not be done. You know the Sabbath is one commandment, some commandments are stated in the negative. The Sabbath is stated in the positive and the negative. It says, "You shall keep it holy, you shall not work." It gives both sides. And so I'm approaching this message that way.

First of all I hope it's obvious to everybody that it's a day that we should go to church. How many of you believe that? It's a day for us to have corporate worship. I'm probably going to get some letters. When something is in print it's fair game. Is that right? If you get bold enough to print something then you can critique it. There was an article in the Review in April this year that I thought was appalling. The title of the article was "Some Keep the Sabbath by Going to Church". And the implication is, all through the article I kept saying, "What's the point?" and the only point I could get out of it is you can keep the Sabbath by staying home just as well as you can keep it by going to church. I thought, why on earth would the Review print that? As much trouble as pastors already have impressing on people that it's a holy day to come together and worship, why in the world? And this is the kind of stuff that makes me see that the devil is eroding very simple principles of truth.

And in the article in fairness it quotes the statement there in Genesis, I'm sorry Exodus 16 where Moses told the people there would be no manna on the seventh day and God tells them to stay in their place. So see? They were to keep the Sabbath by staying at home. That's not what it means. He was telling them not to go out of the camp to look for manna. The sanctuary, they would gather together and worship the Lord right there in the camp. And so is the Sabbath a day to stay at home? Oh, no, friends. I was so disappointed to hear that. I'm not going to take any more time critiquing that because I get a little hot doing it. But first of all, Isaiah 66, "it'll come to pass that from one Sabbath to another in heaven shall all flesh come to worship before me." Now is it just me or do you see in this passage that you are to come before the Lord and worship on the Sabbath? You don't just hang out in your tent. I couldn't believe it.

You can read in Leviticus 23, "Six days shall work be done but the seventh day is a Sabbath of solemn rest, a holy convocation." You know what the word convocation means? What's a convention? It means an assembly, a coming together, a time a holy time to come together and worship before the Lord the way we just read. And even in that message, "Fear God and give glory to Him for the hour of His judgement is come and worship Him that made." The Sabbath is a memorial to creation. It's a time we are to come together and worship him that made collectively. So this idea that some keep the Sabbath by staying at home and if that's what you should... No, friends! As we see the day approaching we should not forsake the assembling together all the more as we see the day approaching. And if God has set aside a day for rest what better day to come together and worship Him than the Sabbath day? It's the day when I think He especially walked and talked with Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

I'd like to let me read a couple of quotes here. I hope I included them. Just in case there is anybody who has some questions about that. Oh, tell me I put them in here. Oh, man! I left that. No, wait! I think I've got them. Let's see here. I don't want to tear it. Oh, no! Be patient with me. You know I think I had a whole page of quotes that talk about coming before the Lord for worship and I just wanted to go through some of them. I think I left them. I'm sorry. Come next week. I'll have them there then, God willing. But I think that there is plenty of evidence even from what I've read so far that it is a day for us to come together and worship Him. Do you agree with that? From what I've shown. Come together and worship.

It's a day for studying the word. First of all, everybody here agrees a Christian is what? A follower of Christ. What was the pattern of Jesus? The Bible tells us in Luke 4:16. Did He come to church on the Sabbath? You can use it here too. He came to Nazareth where He had been brought up and as His custom was He went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath day. Do you think they were worshipping God then? Obviously. And what did He do? He stood up to read. And what did He read? It says He read from Isaiah. And what is Isaiah? It's the Bible. A study of the scripture. You can also read in Acts 13:44, "And on the next Sabbath almost the whole city came together to hear the word of God." The Sabbath is a day... Now let me back up. Am I saying we do not worship God every day? No, we do worship God every day. What makes the Sabbath unique is that it is a time for corporate worship. Should we read our Bibles and have personal devotions every day? Yes! But can we do it all day long? No. The Sabbath day is a special time to invest an extra study of the Bible.

Remember, they would gather extra manna on Friday so that they could have plenty on the Sabbath and it's a time when we want to be able to study the word together. I would be shirking my duty as a pastor if I didn't at least remind you here that if you own a Bible bring it to church. I mean what else are you going to do with it if you don't at least carry it as a prop to church once a week, right? It worries me when I see Christians who have become so blasé about the relationship with the Lord they don't even bring their Bibles to church. You know I've got one of these Palm Pilots now. I guess it's the I-PAC version and they've got the Bible in many versions that you can get on these hand held computers. Some of you use those in your business. Put the Bible on it. Bring that with you. But we need to study the word of God. Follow along. How do you know the pastor's not misquoting? We've got to know for ourselves what the Bible teaches.

It's a day for prayer. We pray every day. We worship God every day. We read his Bible every day. But extra prayer because it's holy. You can read in Acts 16:13, "And on the Sabbath day we went out of the city by a river where prayer was customarily made and we sat down and spoke to the women who met there." And that I think is another good point. If possible since it's a day that is a memorial of creation find a place in nature where you and your family can have devotions there. That makes it even more special. I don't know, was that last week, Karen, when we went up to the Taylor's? Yeah. Taylor's have some property up in the hills. We went to visit them and we closed out the Sabbath sitting out there with the trees having prayer and worship. It's a special day for prayer. Be in an attitude of prayer all day long. If ever a Christian should walk with God walk with Him on the Sabbath because think of it this way. You cannot be saved unless you love God. Do you agree with me so far? God is love.

The purpose of the Plan of Salvation is to inspire us, restore in us the attitude of love for God. You cannot love somebody you do not know. You cannot know somebody you do not take time with. The reason that the Sabbath is so important to God is because it is the quality time with God. Those of you who have children know that it is not enough just to say hello and good-bye through the day as you're coming and going from work. You need to sit down and spend some time with them. You need to wrap them in your arms and talk to them individually. If you have a spouse and you want to cultivate your marriage it is not enough just to say "I do" and then go on your separate ways. You need to spend quality time. We hear that word a lot don't we. You need to spend "quality time together." Quite simply the Sabbath is our quality time with God where we especially nourish the relationship unencumbered by the cares of life and once we understand what that principle is this in holy quality time with God then everything else begins to make sense. Anything that distracts us from God or takes away from that time, anything that can be done before that time begins should be done. So that you have preserved, you've insulated that quality time to nurture the love relationship and this ought to help you understand why the devil hates the Sabbath. He does.

Go back in your Bibles to the story of the exodus. I think it's interesting. Sherle, I think I'm going to jump to those slides that I put in about work. Talking to someone in the studio here. I didn't know exactly where I'd go next. When Moses came to liberate the Children of Israel from Egypt at God's command, before he met with the Pharaoh he met with the leaders of Israel. And we don't have all the details of that conversation but he told them that God was going to deliver them. It was the God that their fathers had served and they had been compromising with the Egyptians. And I understand part of that conversation, you can read this in the book Patriarchs and Prophets, was reminding them to remember the Sabbath because in an attempt to keep up with the work demands of the Pharaoh's building projects they were now working seven days a week. After visiting with Moses they began to rest on the seventh day. Why do you think the Pharaoh said, "I know what's going on. You are making the people Sabbath!" That's exactly what he said in the original language. The Pharaoh said to Moses, "I know who you are. You're making them rest! You're making them Sabbath! I'm not going to let them keep Sabbath!" And he increased the workload and then punished them for not reaching the workload because they kept keeping the Sabbath. The whole issue was about that. The exodus from slavery and entrance to the Promised Land revolved around the context of remembering the sacred time and resting and the devil not wanting them to rest. It's going to happen again before we get to the heavenly Promised Land.

We're going to have to learn how to rest in the Lord. And it always strikes me as ironic that whenever I talk about keeping the Sabbath people will say that I'm works oriented. Is it me, or is it really the other way around? We're rest oriented. Those who do not want to keep the Sabbath are works oriented. We're saying, rest! Yes, labor to enter that rest, but the Bible commands us to do that. The Pharaoh wanted them to keep working. He doubled their workload. Make bricks without any straw. It's a day for prayer. It's a day for bringing our gifts to God. No, I believe that you can give a gift anytime but let's be practical. There's not always a time and a place to receive them and God has specified that the time we come before Him to worship is also a time to bring our gifts. Let me give you a scripture. I Chronicles 16:29, "Give to the Lord the glory due His name. Bring an offering and come before Him." Is that plain? "Oh, worship the Lord in beauty of holiness." Notice. Glorify Him, bring an offering, worship Him, come before Him. Isn't the Sabbath a time when we come before Him? Didn't we read in Isaiah 66, "All flesh will worship before Him"?

And bring a gift. I mean when you come before a king it's not a good idea or polite to come empty handed. The very audience of a king is a privilege. Would you agree? To be brought into the presence of a king is a great honor. To come empty handed is an insult. When the Wise Men saw Jesus what did they do when they came into the presence of this king? "Where is he that is born king of the Jews?" They brought a gift. All of them. All seven of them. We don't know how many of them there were, do we? But you thought there were three because we know there were three categories of gifts; gold, frankincense and myrrh. But they all brought gifts we believe. So it's a day for us to bring our offerings. Now if you have nothing to bring come anyway. I mean, one widow came and all she had was two cents and Jesus praised her because she came and at least she gave two cents. But come anyway. He wants you to come. Now this is an area I don't know if I'll get it all in today, but Isaiah 58:13.

Matter of fact turn in your Bibles to Isaiah chapter 58 and I want you to notice something that it says just before the verse we're going to consider. It talks about a group of people... you know what I think was interesting is this morning as I was straightening my tie I turned on 3ABN and Pastor Dwight Nelson was preaching and you know what his sermon title was? "How to Keep the Sabbath". I thought I'd better change my sermon title this morning, or all our members are going to think I'm plagiarizing, but really I planned this for a while! Notice here in Isaiah chapter 58 it talks about a group of people who are repairing and building up. We could start with verse 6, "Is not this the fast that I have chosen to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, to let the oppressed go free, that you break every yoke..." Notice, "undo burdens", "break every yoke." Don't miss that. "Is it not to share your bread with the hungry and that you bring into your house the poor who are cast out when you see the naked that you cover him and that you do not hide yourself from your own flesh." We're going to talk about doing good on the Sabbath and what constitutes the "ox in the ditch." "Then your light will break forth like the morning, your healing will spring forth speedily, and your righteous will go before you. The glory of the Lord will be your rear guard. Then you'll call and the Lord will answer, you'll cry and He will say, 'Here I am!' If you take away from you the yoke from your midst..."

That was another implement of burden, of work. "...the pointing of the finger and speaking wickedness. If you extend your soul to the hungry and satisfy the afflicted soul then your light will dawn in the darkness and your darkness will be like the noonday and the Lord will guide you continually and satisfy your soul in drought and strengthen your bones. You'll be like a watered garden and like a spring of water whose waters do not fail." Like that woman at the well. Artesian, living waters. Notice verse 12, "Those that be from you shall build up the old waste-places." When Jerusalem was broken down and they had to rebuild it. They took the old foundations and they built up new walls. "Those who be from you shall build up the old waste-places, you'll raise up the foundation of many generations." They didn't move the foundation. They raised up the old foundation. "You will be called the repairer of the breach, a restorer of streets to dwell in."

Now I'll submit to you that for many years the Sabbath truth is something that has been obscured, misrepresented. There was a breach in God's law. I mean you even today could go to many churches and preach on nine commandments and get an Amen. Preach on the Sabbath day and you'll be met with scorn. Why? There was a breach in the law. And God said in the last days He would raise up a people that would be restoring the paths, the ancient paths, the ancient foundations. And then you read the next verse He tells you what it is. "If you turn away your foot from the Sabbath..." Your foot means you're desecrating something, you're stepping on something that is holy. "Turn away your foot from the Sabbath, from doing your pleasure on my holy day..." Keep in mind, in the Eastern culture, any of you ever been to a church in Japan or even Hawaii, India? Even if you go to a Mosque they take off their shoes before they go in. If you walk into one of these holy places with your shoes on what did God say to Moses? "Take your shoes off your feet. This is holy ground." So when He talks about turning away your foot it means stomping with dirty shoes on something that is sacred. That's the implication here. "Turn away your foot from the Sabbath, from doing your pleasure on my holy day."

Now this verse has been very misunderstood. It doesn't mean you are not supposed to enjoy anything on the Sabbath. Are you allowed to eat on the Sabbath? If you take pleasure in your food is that a sin? I believe that food should be made in a way that it is pleasant. This isn't what He's talking about. But we'll talk more about that too. "From doing your pleasure on my holy day." You notice he doesn't call it the Jews' holy day. In the Sabbath commandment it says, "the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord" not the Jews. This is God that we're offending not a nation, not a church, not a denomination or a people or a doctrine. He says, "It's my day." "...and call the Sabbath a delight." Now that helps balance it out. He says, Not your own thing, but my day. You know the only way you can call the Sabbath a delight is if you delight in the Lord. If you're trying to keep the Sabbath holy by not doing your pleasure it'll never be a delight if you're not delighting in God. "...and call the Sabbath a delight the holy day of the Lord, honorable and will honor him." So what does this imply?

That when we are going our own secular things on his holy day are we honoring him or dishonoring him? "...and will honor him not finding your own pleasure or speaking your own words."

It says, "Not doing your own ways or finding your own pleasure or speaking your own words then you will delight yourself in the Lord." I like this. "I'll cause you to ride upon the high places of the earth and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob your father." You know what it means "high places of the earth"? I will exalt you. If you honor me I will honor you. Those that honor me I will honor. And one way we honor God is by respecting what he declares to be holy. By keeping sacred what he has sanctified and God has sanctified a day and he's asked us if we love him to not allow the devil and his minions to bring in all these little worldly distractions and he said, "Not doing your own thing." Now I'm not going to completely dissect this verse because we don't have time but I want you to consider something. He says, "Not speaking your own words." Why does he say that? "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks."

True Sabbath keeping begins in the heart. It's an attitude in the heart. It's walking with God in the heart and thinking his thoughts and basking in him. I'd like to read a quote to you. And I've lost the reference but I've got the quote. "God requires not only," I think this is Child Guidance. "God requires not only that we refrain from physical work upon the Sabbath but that the mind be disciplined to dwell upon sacred things." I want to pause there. It's not a sin to try to educate yourself to try to think differently. It's not fanaticism. It's not legalism. Being a Christian is conquering that last frontier, which is what you think about. And if you can keep your mind stayed on holy things this is what it meant when it says, "Enoch walked with God." Every Sabbath we get a chance to practice walking with God for those twenty-four hours. We should discipline the mind to dwell on sacred themes. The fourth commandment is virtually transgressed by conversing upon worldly things or engaging in light trifling conversation. Talking upon anything and everything which may come into the mind and speaking our own words. Every deviation from right brings us into bondage and condemnation." Sometimes you might need to talk to someone who doesn't share your beliefs and when they start talking about the new addition they're going to put... and I've fallen into this before... their new addition on the house and the garage and you forget that it's Sabbath, you know, and you automatically, men are very task oriented. We think about the things we've got to do and you might have to say, "Change your conversation." Or "You know, let's not talk about that right now." And if you have children sometimes kids, you know, their minds are so active and they'll start talking about their Lego Bionicals that can blow up this and that and you know they...and you say, "Let's talk about something else now. It's the Sabbath."

Think about holy things. Think about God. Whatsoever things are good and noble and just and pure think on these things." If ever that verse could be applied it could be applied to the Sabbath. Amen? And so it's a day for doing good. God doesn't want us to have an idea where we dread the Sabbath. He wants it to be a blessing, but let's face it. If we don't have a love relationship with Jesus then we'll be watching the clock. When the Sabbath isn't begun yet we'll be thinking, "Oh, I've got this stuff I want to do. Is it Sabbath yet? Oh, I guess I don't have time to do it." That's not the attitude. And if it is Sabbath I mean you know let's face it who of us has never heard some young person say, "Is it still Sabbath?" How many of you have heard that before? Come on! Doesn't it make you feel bad to have that kind of attitude? And I've caught myself, yes, Pastor Doug, looking wistfully out the window and wondering if the Sabbath is over so I can get to my next project. And I'm ashamed but it's true. You know what that means? A change in the heart.

It's a change in the heart. It's a change in the attitudes. You know it's not the first time that appears. You can find examples of that attitude in the book Amos chapter 8 verse 5. The people were saying, "When will the new moon be passed that I might sell grain and the Sabbath that we might trade wheat?" Isn't it over yet so we can do our own thing? And God says that's the wrong attitude. We want it to be a delight. You know I think the more that we know the Lord the better we love the Lord the more delightful it becomes. It comes from walking with God. Now let me illustrate here. If a young man falls in love and is smitten by a young woman. Two single young people. And because of their schedules they can only spend one day a week together he will do everything he can to arrange his schedule and get all of his business aside and all of the stuff that might distract his thinking so that he can give quality time to his beloved and she can do the same. If while they are together and she's talking to him and he doesn't seem to be paying attention as they're walking and holding hands and she says, "You seem like you're a thousand miles away." And he says, "Well, you know I'm really thinking about the projects I've got this week."

Would that hurt her feelings? Or if they're sitting together over dinner that she's spent all this time preparing and he keeps looking at the clock saying, "Is our date over yet? I've got to leave. You mind if I leave early?" What would that say about his relationship? These attitudes indicate what? We want the Lord to have our hearts and when God has our hearts we won't be asking those kinds of questions. But I've got news for you, friends, even if your attitudes aren't right keep it correctly. Even if you're doing the right thing for the wrong reason still do the right thing. Because he commands you and he's God. And sometimes in doing what you're being told to do you then will understand the meaning. It'll come to you. Still do the right thing and then say, "Lord, I may not have the right attitude. I might be thinking things I shouldn't be thinking but I'm going to try and do the right thing and help me have the right attitude."

Even if a man says, "You know I don't feel for my wife the same way I used to feel." You stay married! Right? Right? So just because you may not feel like it doesn't mean you stop obeying. You know I have had the privilege of meeting one of the only people who received the Congressional Medal of Honor. It's the highest medal that can be given in our country. It was awarded to only one non-combatant. He was a Seventh-Day Adventist Christian named Desmond T. Doss. And when he enlisted during World War II or was drafted, he didn't, he wasn't a conscientious objector, he was a non-combatant. He said, "I will serve. I will try to save lives but I refuse to pick up a gun and to take lives." And going through boot camp and training he would not work on the Sabbath. He told them right from the very beginning. And he didn't say, "I won't do it." He said, "I can't do it because as much as I respect my officers and superiors God comes first." And they would put a rifle in his hands and he wouldn't hold it. And they would try to make him work and he would say, "On the Sabbath I can't. I'll work six days a week twenty-four hours a day but from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday I can't work. Now if life is threatened since I'm a medic I will do that because that's what Jesus did. But the KP and the sweeping of the barracks and this other stuff," he said, "I can't do it."

And I'll tell you what. He was jeered and tormented, ridiculed, and mocked, made fun of all through his military experience until they got on the front lines. And when they got on the front lines and they were under some of the worst fighting in WWII and you know there was some bad fighting in the Pacific. A bunch of men were trying to take this cliff, this escarpment from the Japanese and a hail of fire was coming off the... of machine gun fire coming off the top. A lot of marines and soldiers were wounded. He heard them up there crying and he went up one time after another and he rescued these men who were wounded. And brought seventy men... every time he'd come back down with one they'd say, "You better stop. You got lucky that time. Don't push your luck." He would hear another one crying, "Medic!" And he'd go back up. No one else went. And he brought them down and he never got hit. And they gave him the Congressional Medal of Honor. Hand grenade was thrown in the group where he was standing. He jumped on the grenade. And to this day he's missing some toes. He's still alive. He gave me one of his signed books. It's a book I recommend. It's called The Unlikeliest Hero. But he said, "I'd rather die than disobey." "Those that honor me I will honor."

God is looking for some people who will stand up for Him. And that means you need to be faithful even in that which is least. Don't be ashamed of saying, "I keep the Sabbath." Or "I can't do that." This is God's Sabbath. And God will honor you if you do. This is the first part of a message. We're going to talk more about this. But I would like to see a revival in my life in being more careful to keep that day holy because God is commanding us to do it. Because a big test is coming in the near future, friends, and if we can't get it together regarding something as basic as keeping the Sabbath holy, how are we going to pass the big test? I want to be faithful, don't you? If that's your prayer then why don't you reach for your hymnal? Let's sing our closing hymn. "Don't forget the Sabbath." I forgot the number. What is that? 388 Thank you.

How many of you found yourself having to read the verses because you didn't know them by heart? It's because we don't hear this message enough, do we? I wanted you to read them. There's good theology in there. I'll make a confession to you. I feel like I have sometimes been sloppy keeping the Sabbath and I know that it's a sin. I want to be faithful to keep it holy. It's not my day. It's his day. Because I love him. Anyone else want to confess with me and ask God to help us be faithful?

Father in Heaven, Lord, we're coming before you beginning with repentance. Please forgive us for profaning something you have declared to be holy and your word has creative powers and when you say something is it is. You've said this day is holy, Lord. We are living right now; we're dwelling in sacred times. Help us in our deeds in our thoughts in our words to learn how to keep the Sabbath in a way that pleases and honors you because we love you. Lord, this subject requires some understanding, education, study and I pray that as we continue to explore this theme that we will grow in grace and we will not only be hearers but doers of the word. Bless us now in this way. In Jesus' name we ask. Amen.

Back to Keeping it Holy

^ Top

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Holiday or Holy Day - How to keep the Sabbath Part #2

(Below is a transcript of a sermon given by Pastor Doug Batchelor.)

Holiday or Holy day

Let's face it, there's a lot of people in the world that their concept of the Sabbath, on the first day of the week, is that you put in your time at church and then you go to the football game or you go shopping or you just treat it like a vacation. Now I'm watching an evolution among Sabbath keepers towards that same concept, that I think it's unhealthy and unbiblical.

God will honor those that honor him

You know there's a story about a man who had a banana plantation in South America a number of years ago and he was a Sabbath keeper. And I don't remember all the circumstances because I'm repeating this story by memory, but evidently the fleet of ships, banana boats, that, and pick up the bananas; because of an approaching storm they all arrived in this port city to pick up the cargo of bananas on Friday afternoon and it was unexpected and they all showed up at the same time and they said, "We are leaving Saturday night because there's a storm approaching and we cannot afford to get caught." Well all of the banana farmers they wait to the last minute to cut the bananas to make sure they're transported fresh. This was back before some of it was done by air. And they all had to scramble Friday and Saturday to harvest their bananas and this one man quickly realized he would not be able to do that and keep the Sabbath. And so when some of his neighbors noticed that he did not have his workers out in the field harvesting the bananas they said, "Aren't you going to do it? All the ships are leaving! It'll be the last set of ships for this season because the shipping season for this crop is going to be over and you're going to lose your whole crop!" He said, "I can't do it without breaking the Sabbath, and so I figure this is God's problem and I'm not going to do it." And they labored with him. They said, "What about your family? God understands. He'll understand. I mean look at all the waste! And you can give some to the church."

And there was a scripture that he quoted, "'Has God as great a delight in sacrifices and offerings as in obeying the voice of the Lord? To obey is better than sacrifice.' So what if I give an offering to the church? God would rather have me obey!" And they said, "You're insane!" And so they all went to work and they harvested their bananas and they brought them down to the ships and the ships all took off, and as they were disappearing across the horizon he was in church with his family and his bananas were still in the field.

Well, the rest of the story is unbeknown to them one of the ships had engine trouble and it limped into harbor that Monday wanting to buy some bananas. It got the repairs done. All the other bananas were sold because they thought that all the ships had left and they were now willing to pay nearly twice as much for anyone who had bananas so they would not go back empty. And so this man, because he honored God, God honored him. And all of his friends watched as he then went down to the port and he sold his bananas for almost twice what he would have got if he had panicked. "Those that honor me I will honor."

You will be tested and I promise you that there is a big test coming to God's people about who we will obey. In the last days it will be a battle between those who obey the beast and worship him and those who have the seal of God and worship him. And that's why even something that may seem a small as this, keeping the Sabbath day, could be an internal issue. And these little nuances of how to obey that we're evaluating do make a difference. If we don't study these things and educate ourselves in these areas then pretty soon I can guarantee you instead of the Sabbath day being a holy day soon among Sabbath keepers it'll be treated like a common holiday and I think you know there is a difference.

Now what is the purpose of the Sabbath?

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Sweden, Finland, Hungary, Romania, and Ethiopia (17th Century)

"We can trace these opinions over almost the whole extent of Sweden of that day-from Finland and northern Sweden. "In the district of Upsala the farmers kept Saturday in place of Sunday. "About the year 1625 this religious tendency became so pronounced in these countries that not only large numbers of the common people began to keep Saturday as the rest day, but even many priests did the same." History of the Swedish Church, Vol. I, p.256

"But as they rejected Sunday and rested on the Sabbath, Prince Sigmond Bathory ordered their persecution. Pechi advanced to position of chancellor of state and next in line to throne of Transylvania. He studied his Bible, and composed a number of hymns, mostly in honour of the Sabbath. Pechi was arrested and died in 1640.

Jesuits tried to induce the Abyssinian(Ethiopia) church to accept Roman Catholicism. They influenced King Zadenghel to propose to submit to the Papacy (A. D.1604). "Prohibiting all his subjects, upon severe penalties, to observe Saturday any longer." Gedde's "Church History of Ethiopia." p.311, also Gibbon's "Decline and Fall," ch. 47

Learn more about the great conflict between man's

We talked about that a little bit in our last study. Of course it's a time for reading the word, for prayer, I hope you bring your Bibles to church, for corporate worship. I was shocked when I've seen some of these articles and statements that implicate that just stay in your place on the Sabbath... it's OK to just hang around the house... There are numerous commands in the Bible that it's a place and a time for us "to come together to worship before him" Isaiah 60:6. I even found a place in II Kings where it talks about the Shunamite woman and when her son died and she told her husband, "I'm going to see Elisha." He said, "Why? It's not the Sabbath." That implies that they came before. They gathered together on the Sabbath day. Did you ever catch that? And so there's a lot of evidence in the Bible that it was a day for worship.

Remember I couldn't find some quotes in our last study? One of them all share with you. I had a whole litany of them. "Fathers and mothers," and this is from the book Child Guidance, page 531, "Fathers and mothers should make it a rule that their children attend public worship on the Sabbath and should enforce the rule by their own example." How many of you have heard of fathers that Sunday morning they send the kids to church? They stay home so they can watch the news and read the sports section in peace. Your children are going to do what you do so we ought to do it by example. Of course the Sabbath is a time for physical rest, spiritual rest, mental rest. It should start and end with worship and that doesn't mean that we're scrambling around an hour after the Sabbath has begun and say, "Well, I guess we should have a little prayer." And I'll confess the reason I'm sharing this with you is not because I'm preaching down but I'm preaching up. In the Batchelor home were still studying how to keep the Sabbath and that's why this was important. Sometimes we've found that the Sabbath started and we say, "Well, let's have a prayer, you know, and officially begin it." Instead of really worshipping and reading something with substance and singing together and you know it takes effort to give God the honor that is due his name. And it should and that way. There ought to be decisive beginnings and endings to the event and we should guard the edges of the Sabbath. If you wait until you think that the clock has finally ticked its last tick and now you've entered holy time... why would you wanna push it to the last minute?

If I'm getting on a plane I hate being late! I found out what standby means. It means you stand by and watch the plane takeoff! I like to get there early. If I'm gonna wait I don't always want to wait at home. And when they're boarding the plane I wanna be the first one on. It happened to me again this last week. I took a trip to Florida and back. Two people had my seat and I was not one of them! Same seat number. Computer error. And I watched everybody get on as I stood back. And you know who ever had gotten to that seat first would've been there. I know that sounds selfish and me but you don't wanna be late is my point. And that's the way it is with the Sabbath. And when it's over don't be watching the clock and say, "All right blow the horn! It's over! Let's do our own thing." That's wrong attitude. It's almost an insult to God. Let linger a little bit. Start early and show Him that you care.

It is a Commandment

Now the Sabbath is not one of the ten suggestions or of the ten recommendations. It is a commandment. Let's look at this again. It was in our scripture reading, but the repetition won't hurt us. Exodus twenty verse 8 through eleven. And I especially want you to notice something that is all contained within this commandment. It's got the what, the where, the who, the how, the when, and the why in this one commandment. You know why God did all of that for this one commandment? Because he knew that we would have questions and so he gets more specific about this commandment than any other. It's the longest. It's in the middle of God's law. He gave it a priority. He begins with the word remember. Why do you think he did that? He knew we would be prone to forget. And that doesn't mean start remembering Friday afternoon. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." It is holy. We are to keep it the way he's made it. "Six days..." It's telling us what to do, "six days you shall labor and do all your work but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord your God. In it..." When? In the Sabbath. "...you shall not do any work." Who? "...you or your son or your daughter or your male servant or your female servant nor your cattle nor the stranger who is within your gates." Where? "...within your gates. For in six days..." Why? "For in six days the lord made the heaven and the earth and the sea and blessed them. And the lord rested the Sabbath day there for the lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it." He's covering all that in this one commandment so that we would understand.

Now in keeping with just reading the commandment I would like to remind you that this is not one of the least of the commandments. You know Jesus said, "Whoever therefore shall do and teach the commandments even the least of these commandments will be called a great in the kingdom of heaven." And you'd be surprised how many people look at the Ten Commandments and they figure, "Well, if I was gonna pick the least it would be the Sabbath." But I think they have chosen poorly. You realize that the penalty for Sabbath breaking was death. The penalty for stealing was not death. The penalty for lying was not necessarily death. The penalty for adultery was death if the people were married, if they were unmarried there was a penalty you had a good hour and you married the gal or the guy. But the Sabbath, listen to this, Numbers 15:32. While the children of Israel were in the wilderness they found a man gathering sticks on the Sabbath day and those who found in gathering sticks brought him to Moses and Aaron. We know it's a commandment. Here's a breaker. What's the penalty? We've got this new law. We know what the law is. Now we don't know what the penalty is. And they didn't know what to do. You read on, it says, "The Lord said to Moses, 'The man must surely be put to death.'" For gathering sticks? "All the congregation shall stone him with stones..." they were to participate in the execution! So all the congregation brought him outside the camp and stoned him with stones and he died. I bet they were little more careful next week.

How important is this to God?

Is it a suggestion? Some people go to Romans where it says "one man regards a day under the lord, another man regards every day alike. Let everyone be persuaded in their own mind." And they applied that statement that is dealing with the Jewish holidays, the yearly Sabbaths, to the Sabbath day. Oh no! It's talking about something different there. Then you could read on. Let me give you just a couple more verses if I have time. Ezekiel 20:12 & 13, "Moreover also I gave them my Sabbaths to be a sign between me and them that they might know that I am the lord who sanctifies them." It's a sign of sanctification. Do we need that? Do we need sanctification? "Yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness. They did not walk and my statutes. They despised my judgments which if the man does he will live by them..." Meaning there's sanctifying influence in them. "... and they greatly defiled my Sabbaths. Then I said I would pour out my fury upon them in the wilderness and consume them because they despised my judgments and did not walk in my statutes but profaned my Sabbath." That's pretty serious. You can read also in Ezekiel 20:20 & 21 verse 24 "Hallow my Sabbaths. They'll be a sign between me and you that you might know that I am the lord notwithstanding the children of Israel rebelled against me. They did not walk in my statutes, were not careful to observe my judgments, which if the man does he will live by them" (this is similar) "but they profane my Sabbath and then I said I would pour out my fury on them. I would fulfill my anger against them in the wilderness because they profane my Sabbaths."

Does God care? Is it serious?

I think sometimes we feel like, you know, just everybody be led by your own conscience and if it feels good it's OK. The Bible doesn't teach that. Got is specific about keeping the Sabbath day that is a law, a commandment. Amen? Now there are couple of extremes and this is what I think pollutes our thinking a little bit. By the time Jesus came the Sabbath was being taught by the Pharisees who were extremely legalistic and they even accused Jesus of Sabbath breaking in the Bible. But nowhere in the Bible do you see Jesus ever doing anything that violates the Sabbath commandment the way it's given in scripture. He broke their manmade traditions and how often did you hear Jesus say, "You have a fine way of setting aside the commandment of God that you might observe the traditions of men." That's why he goes on and he says, "In vain to they worship me..." Sabbath and worship are connected. "... teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." They had manmade commandments be taught as though it was a doctrine and it was all vain. You never see Jesus in the carpenter shop on the Sabbath day. You never hear him... or teaching his disciples it's OK to break the Sabbath. Indeed he was in the synagogue every Sabbath day. So by his example he was there worshipping, stood up reading the scriptures out loud and that's a good example for us. So a lot of the conflict that you see in the New Testament was Christ trying to clean and clear the Sabbath from the manmade restrictions.

And there are still Pharisees out there. Amen? That try to make it a burden instead of a blessing. It is supposed to be a blessing. But some people believe that those statements in Isaiah where it says "thine own pleasure" means that were supposed to make ourselves as miserable as possible in order to keep the Sabbath. Let me read that to you. Isaiah 58: 13 & 14, "If you turn away your foot from the Sabbath, from doing your pleasure on the" Jews holy day. Is that what it says? From your holy day? God says "my holy day." So we can't pick our own day. It's his day. "...from doing your own pleasure..." Now the word pleasure there doesn't mean anything you enjoy it means your personal, selfish pursuits. And you know, there's some people say, "You know as long as we're out nature we're gonna go water skiing. We're in a mode snow skiing on Sabbath." I believe that that's a corruption of what the intent is. While the Lord wants you to enjoy the Sabbath you're not out to be doing your own diversions. I believe that it's a time to dedicate to his service and we'll get into that a little more. And he goes on to say, "honor him not doing your own ways or finding your own pleasure" and that word pleasure there means purposes, pursuits, ways. How many of you eat on the Sabbath? Show of hands. Be honest. How many of enjoy it? Would any of you dare to say you find pleasure in it? So we're not supposed to eat on the Sabbath? Well, of course. That's not what he's saying. He's not saying as soon as you start to enjoy something "I must not be doing the right thing because I'm enjoying this." And there are people who take that to mean it. It means your own pursuits, your own ways, your own purposes. Now in keeping with that, and I need to be very delicate in the way I address this.

Intimacy on the Sabbath

I get a question much more than you would imagine on the subject of, "How does that relate to husbands and wives with marital intimacy on the Sabbath day?" There's a lot of confusion in this area. Let me get you to think about something. What day of the week did God make Adam and Eve? Friday. Sixth day. And what was the last thing he says to them before you enter into the Seventh day? "Be fruitful and multiply." What would their honeymoon have been? Is there anything in the Bible... Now was there sin in the world when God made Adam and Eve? There was no sin in the world. Is there anything in scriptures in paradise that implicates that there's something impure or unholy about those natural relations? No, and I would like to give you Hebrews 13:4. "Marriage is honorable." And that word honorable can be translated pure. "among all and the bed undefiled" pure. And so this concept that "well, the Sabbath is a holy day" and so you can't support that Biblically. Paul does say there may be times that a family or husband and wife wants to choose to fast and pray and separate from one another for the purpose of fasting and praying. You notice it's equated with not eating too. And so if it's ok to eat on the Sabbath... Do I need to go much further with this or do you understand? Now what I'm sharing with you I'm sharing by permission and not commandment. If your conscience tells you otherwise or if you and your spouse have made a covenant then hey, there's no sin in that. That's fine. But I just wanted to say biblically I think we need to be balanced about this.

Sabbath In Space

Another question I get and you'd be surprised how often is how do you keep the Sabbath on the space shuttle? Or the international space station? Or how do you keep the Sabbath in the North Pole during the winter when the sun doesn't come up for several months? I don't know, but I thought I should at least address it. I've thought about it because I'd like to go. I'd love to go to the space station maybe before I get too old... I mean you know if I'm 80 John Glenn made it when he was 80. I still have a chance, don't I? If the lord tarries. I've thought before. What if you're up there? You know it goes around the earth. I figured you'd just probably say, "All right, Lord, I'm gonna keep the Sabbath the time and the way they're keeping it in northern California" and just measure it that way, right? I mean, what do you do if you live in a cavern down in the middle of the earth and you're keeping the Sabbath? You'd have to use some kind of artificial time mechanism and give Him that time based on where your home is. I don't know. Same thing with the North Pole. First of all, I don't think the Lord intended you to live there, right? And you know what's interesting when people start presenting some of these little strange challenges, "Well, how do you do it at the International Date line?" They're usually Sunday keepers that are trying to create a problem. You know what my answer is? You do it the same way you keep Sunday in those locations. Sabbath is not my idea. It's God's idea and when you start to imply that it's impossible to keep it certain places you're really attacking him.

I don't know some of these answers but it's God's idea. I know how to keep it where I live and that's what counts, right? And I'm not going to the North Pole so it's not a problem for me. Now here's an area where we want to spend a little time. What to do with children. And this is something that really needs attention because the fact remains that if you do it wrong the Sabbath will be a burden for your children. If you do it right it will be a delight and a blessing. First of all, I think it's a good idea to find as much as you can. Let's face it, kids have more energy. How many of you would like to have the energy of a three year old again? They've got it seems like unending energy and when you put the seatbelt on in their pew Sabbath morning and they're sitting still and then you take them home and you say, "Now we get to sit for another six hours." It's no wonder that they watch the clock. It's important that you keep their active minds engaged and give them positive things to do. But I also want to make something clear. It's my opinion that there's a difference between the Sabbath being a delight and the Sabbath being a blessing and feeling guilty because you're not making the Sabbath fun. I don't know that there's a command anywhere that we are to make every Sabbath day for our children like a trip to Knott's Berry Farm or Disneyland. It's a holy day. That doesn't mean you can't have fun. You might not do something that is fun. I have fun preaching. But the idea of every moment we are to be entertained is I think a plague of our generation. And if I'm not being entertained all the time and if everything isn't always fun then it's not good. That's true, and it's the corruption in our thinking. We should try to make it a blessing. We should try to make it a delight. And that may not be the same thing as... I've seen parents hand their kids their Gameboy during church. And you know you're looking out there and you see this one head... they're shooting asteroids or whatever it is they're doing out there because they're afraid they might not have fun and they want them to enjoy a church. Well, they're not hearing the sermon. Are they going to have that when they're 45 years old? I mean, you know, at some point we need to be teaching the children to be respectful and to sit and listen because you want them to transition from being children into adults and as they get older theoretically they'll understand more and more of the sermon and be able to apply it. But there are things we can do not just in church but during the day.

We have great Sabbath School departments here that keep the young people engaged in learning and that's what I like. They're not only making it interesting, they're learning and that takes a lot of effort. First of all, read spiritual books, nature walks, go visit some old folks. Nature is a good thing. You can't do it all year long. What about the North Pole? Can't do it there as often. But then you always have the question if you go out to the river or the creek can they go swimming? Can they go in up to their ankles? How about up to their knees? And I've heard all kinds of different parents weigh in on this and in different places. Just a few weeks ago our family with another Sabbath keeping family went to a creek up in Covalo on the Sabbath. We took the kids down there and they wanted to know if they could get in. We said, "Well, you can take off your shoes." You know it's OK to wade around and collect rocks and look at the crawdads. I think it's good to get out in god's creation and to feel it with your toes a little bit. But the next thing you know Nathan was completely baptized. And he didn't want to be. The creek was cold. He just, you know, they were bouncing on a log and someone pushed him in. We won't say who. It wasn't me. But you know those things you've got just to give them guidelines so that they can enjoy being out there but let them know it is holy time. Because let's face it it's one thing if you're down at the river with the kids on the Sabbath and they are cooling off their toes or something. It's something else if they're doing cannonballs of the diving board. They're really not thinking about God, are they? And so you understand the differences?

That might be OK to go for a Sabbath drive with the family, but you don't wanna get involved in the Indy 500, right? You could say, "Well, I'm just driving! You drive on the Sabbath. I'm driving." No, you see there's a difference there. And so you need to use intelligence about what is the purpose of it. Somebody gave me a book that, I don't know. Do we carry this at Amazing Facts? We do! Oh good! Commercial. Amazing Facts has this. But it's 52 Things to Do on the Sabbath and a lot of these have to do with children. I will read them all. But they can of course be involved with Pathfinders and Adventure Club. They might get out in nature and collect flowers, pine cones, rocks. Rock collections are interesting. Tracking animals, scavenger hunts in nature, there's of course some of these nature things you can do would be inside the house. Invite a stranger home for you. Draw pictures of nature. You can sing. Do 20 questions on Bible characters. And I'm not gonna read them all. Visit shut-ins. Adopt a grandparent. Just call or write someone who needs encouragement. Write a letter to a Bible character. And there's 52... there are other books and things that are available that have ideas. And it might take some energy, well spent energy, thinking about things that can be done to help them burn off some of their energy and enthusiasm that they naturally have.

Lessons from the Dolphins

You know in nature when dolphins give birth baby dolphins, of course they're mammals, they actually have to learn how to swim. It doesn't take them very long, but you watch them when they're first born, and I've seen this before, they're going upside down. They're going down when they need to go up and shortly after they're born they don't even know how to breathe. They're not sure where the air is, and just like human babies they've got to breathe shortly after they're born or they don't survive. The mother and father or other dolphins in the pod will get under that little one and push it up to the surface and it'll take a breath and they'll let it swim around and they know instinctively when it's ready for another breath. And on a regular basis they begin for its first I don't know if it's hours or days of life they keep pushing it to the surface and telling it where to go for the air. Well, our children need to be trained how to breathe holy air. And it's not like that there's a difference and we need to lift them up and they might resist it. They might go the wrong direction, but they just need that gentle guidance so they will then find out where it is. One of the most important parts of the Sabbath Commandment is summed up in the word "remember" and as I said earlier remembering does not mean you wait until the sun is cresting the horizon Friday afternoon and you say, "Well, it's almost Sabbath. I need to get ready." Because we live to worship God, and keep in mind I believe we should worship God seven days a week, amen? But let's face it; the worship on Sabbath is obviously of a superior nature, context, content because God said so. He said he will meet with us and bless us in a special way. Because we live for the purpose of worshipping him and glorifying him it is worthy of investing time in thinking ahead and remembering. We don't just start remembering the Sabbath on Friday. I think you start remembering it when the sun goes down Saturday evening and thinking about your next Sabbath and plan our week.

You know the Sabbath is a wonderful calibration tool of the Lord in the life of those that worship him because life is made of time and if every week our weeks revolve around this blessed time with God you never lose focus and that's intended. I think God planned it that way so that the Sabbath is something that our whole life revolves around it. It helps us to keep the focus on what our purpose is to worship, to serve him, to glorify him. It also helps us guard against becoming preoccupied with the cares of this life "lest that day overtake us as a thief." And so it's worthy of some attention and planning. A few things I'd like to read you here on that thought. This is, hey like to recommend something. To have a pen? Pencil? A good memory? A lot of what I'm sharing with you can also be found in that classic book Child Guidance. It's chapter 79 called "The Sabbath, the day of delight" and I highly recommend it. There's a lot of material there but I will read a few choice quotes to you.

Prepare Before the Sabbath

"On Friday let the preparation for the Sabbath be completed. See that all the clothing is in its readiness, that all the cooking is done. Let the boots be blacked" your shoes be shined and so forth "and the baths taken." Hey! I want to stop right there. Every Friday, I picked this out yesterday whether you like or not, I just did it in advance. I have my shoes. I pick out my socks and my underwear, the tie, sometimes I'll pick out two or three and I'll ask Karen to tell me what to wear and I try and do it in advance so I'm more relaxed. There's already things the devil is going to do... any of you ever noticed the devil will try to ruin your Sabbath because he knows it's a day that's blessed. He will try to do things to get you so anxious and flustered and things will go wrong and you'll get out in the car all smiling and happy to drive to church you realize someone left the door open that night, the dome light was on, the battery is dead. And so if you don't plan ahead the devil will take advantage of that. But what about, it says here, "the baths taken"? Do I dare ask how many take a bath? Oh, I won't ask that. I'd take a bath or shower. I don't take baths. I'd take showers every day sometimes two times a day not because I'm neurotic but sometimes I wake up to go to work I take a bath. I'll play racquetball. I stink. I'll take another one. Back 100 years ago taking a shower or bath was a very intensive, laborious job. They use to have to haul the water, and I've lived like this before so I know it, heat the water by firewood, pour it, get someone bathed, heat up some more water, pour it. It took hours. And it was very labor intensive to take a bath. It wasn't some command that you have to be dirty. If I'm going to bathe six days a week I'm not going to have the one day of the week I stink be the Sabbath day. And I've got an excuse. The Bible says that the priest washed in the laver on the Sabbath. And so I've got a reason. But let's face it, friends, in our culture to step into the shower and turn that button it's more effort to drive to church than to do that. And so if any of you have been practicing the 1800's pattern of only bathing Friday you don't have to feel guilty, in my opinion, about taking a quick shower on Sabbath as well.

"But let the work be done" it says. Make it your rule to do this. You can if you want. "The Sabbath is not given to the repairing of garments and the cooking of food, to pleasure seeking or any other worldly employment. Before the setting of the sun let all secular work be laid aside and all secular papers be put out of sight." On my desk I've got all kinds of, you know, things you're dealing with. You've got bills and you've got other official papers. I stack them and put them out of the way because you know what happens, you look at them and what happens to your mind? If you're not supposed to be doing your own thing and thinking your own thoughts and speaking your own words it helps if you put that thing out of the way where you don't need to be distracted by it. Now they put the slide up so I'll go ahead and jump to that.

What about cooking on the Sabbath? Exodus 16: 23-26. First of all, it's not a commandment that you eat cold food on the Sabbath, but whatever you can get done in advance it's a good idea. The Sabbath should not be dedicated to elaborate cooking and heavy food preparation. It's not the same thing as preparing heavy food. The Bible says, "Bake what you will bake today and boil what you will boil. Lay it up for yourselves. All that remains shall be kept until the morning." Now some things if you're going to make a salad, you know if you make a salad on Friday and put the dressing on it you've got a limp, soggy salad the next day. Have everything prepared and you throw it together then when you're about to eat it. You all understand some of the little nuances of different foods, but the idea is get as much of it done as you can in advance, cover it up, have it ready so you can relax. What you're trying to do is preserve time. Praise God for time bake ovens! Karen will make the food, on Sabbath she sets the oven on automatic, we come home, it goes 'ding!', and it's ready. It's all heated up. You don't have the cold food. And we live in the age of microwaves. You can all nuke something pretty fast. But the principle is get it done in advance. Of course there are some people who might work in the institutions where there is a cafeteria and they need to feed people who are in a hospital or in a Christian boarding school and naturally those kind of things might need to be taken care of on that day and be done with a cheerful spirit. I don't think you should schedule every Sabbath if you're in some kind of a necessary function like that where you're on duty so that you're busy on every Sabbath and you're not able to sit at Jesus' feet.

Eating in a Restaurant on the Sabbath day

Buying and selling. Nehemiah 10:31, "If the peoples of the land brought wares or any grain to sell on the Sabbath day that we should not buy it from them on the Sabbath day." Why do you think that is? And there are people who will argue, "Well, Doug, you know we take up an offering so we're handling money so what's the difference if you go to a restaurant?" That's a whole different thing. Giving an offering to God is different from buying something, engaging people and trade and hiring somebody. The Bible tells us it's a day where we are to rest and we are to let servants rest. So when we go somewhere and we're paying somebody to cook or food because we haven't made preparation I don't think that's a good thing for Christians. This is radar I just wondered if I was gonna get any support on that. You're not supposed to buy and sell. You should prepare in advance. I don't believe we should be going out to eat on the Sabbath day and mingling with the world in that way. Sometimes, let's face it, the environments in these public places of eating they're playing worldly music, worldly conversations and I just don't know that that's God's plan for us to expose ourselves in that way. Nehemiah 13, I'm gonna read this one to you from the Bible. Nehemiah 13:15, another verse, "In those days I saw Judah in Judah some of the people treading wine presses on the Sabbath." This isn't the first generation that's had problems with this. "Bringing in sheaves and loading donkeys with wine, grapes, figs and all kinds of birds which they brought to Jerusalem on the Sabbath day and I warned them about the day on which they were selling provisions. Men of Tyre who'd will there also have brought in fish and all kinds of goods and sold them on the Sabbath day to the children of Israel." Here you have the pagans selling to the children of Israel. The non Sabbath keepers selling to the Sabbath keepers and Nehemiah is saying, "We're not supposed to do that!"

"Then I contended with the nobles of Judah and said unto them, 'What evil thing is this that you do by which you profane the Sabbath day?'" Now, is this Doug's opinion? Or does the word of God say when we are engaged in buying or selling like this on the Sabbath day we're profaning it? I think that it's something that still matters that God does still care about. It's a day for doing good. You know I don't want to just talk about some of these restrictions. Matthew 12:11-12 Jesus said to them, "What man is there among you that has a sheep if he falls in a fit on the Sabbath day will not lay a hold of it and lift it out? Of how much more value then is a man than a sheep? Therefore it is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day." And obviously there are people who work in hospitals and things, there are folks that are sick and they need care. I think I was teasing Mrs. Batchelor when one of the little Batchelor's was born that she better not be laboring on the Sabbath day when she was pregnant because we had a command for that. I don't know that she did pay attention. But obviously... Huh? Oh, good. Alright then you were paying attention. I forgot. But you know there was a few Sabbaths when she looked pretty close. And it tells us that of course were to take care of these obviously these natural things. Even Jesus talked about on the eighth day they would circumstance of baby. Let's face it in church sometimes pastors stay pretty busy and that's why that scripture says "the priests profane the Sabbath." That means that they do things that are technically not right and yet they're blameless.

On the seventh day the priests would keep the altar fire burning. They're hauling wood. They would keep water in the laver. They're hauling water. If the people outside the sanctuary were doing it they were stoned. So there were things that were done in the sanctuary for the service of the people that God recognized needed to be done. So you've got to understand what is the context of what's being done. And we have people around this church we're very thankful for that perform some acts of service that others might worship, that others might participate, but even there we need to be careful that we don't get so busy serving week after week, and you and I know that there are people like Martha that are fixing for potlucks every week and they may miss the sermon because they are preparing. And once or twice you understand that, but you get so busy serving that you don't hear the word you can lose your relationship. And while I'm on this subject of course the Bible talks about the ox in the ditch. Jesus just referred to a sheep in the ditch. Another passage talks about a donkey in the ditch. They don't fall in the ditch very often. It's amazing how many things were calling an ox in the ditch these days. My idea of an ox in a ditch is on Sabbath I have seen literally people whose cars break down. I know that I can get them going again. I will stop and reconnect their carburetor or whatever it is I can do. Try to keep them going down the road. I think that's... and of course I don't bill them. And that of course is an act of support and mercy. And a few weeks ago I was with Steven and a car broke down on our way home from church right here on Watt Avenue in the middle of the road. There was this man or woman, I don't even remember any more, just stuck there and all the cars were honking and I thought, "Instead of just honking why don't we help them?" Steven and I got out. We helped push the car. Well, I wouldn't wanna do that for living, but on Sabbath there was nothing wrong with that. Amen? How many of you agree with that? You're trying to help somebody. But a lot of things we call the ox in the ditch are not the ox in the ditch.

And I personally am concerned about sometimes youth ministries say, "This Sabbath we are going to go rake people's lawns for Jesus." No! anyone have a problem with that? Or they say, "We're going to go wash everyone's windshields in the parking lot because we're doing good and were blessing people." Or, "We're going to go pick up trash on the highway." I think we're setting a bad precedent for the young people when we get into these "ox in the ditch" "doing good" ministries that are really teaching the kids it's OK to work on the Sabbath day. And that's, I don't think that's what Jesus had in mind with this principle of the ox being in the ditch.

Let me give you an example. Luke 23:55 Jesus dies. I'm going to read on through Luke 24:2. Christ is dead. The sun is going down. It's not Sabbath yet. They want to get his body prepared. They love him. They've spent three years and a half listening to him teach. They know what he wants. "The women who came with him from Galilee followed after. They observed the tomb and how his body was laid and they returned and prepared spices and fragrant oils and they rested the Sabbath day according to the commandment. On the first day of the week early in the morning after the Sabbath was passed" another gospel tells us "they any other women returned with the spices to finish embalming his body."

Now I think that the way that most people are thinking today among Sabbath keepers we would say, "Well, I realize the sun is going down, but we're not quite done enbalming Jesus' body and after all it is Jesus so certainly it would be OK. A lot of things we're calling an ox in the ditch I don't think Jesus would call the ox in the ditch. If it's something that can wait, let it wait. If it doesn't have to be done that day to save someone's life or to take care of some emergency of suffering or something then let it wait. Amen? I mean this was important to the disciples and yet they said hey it can wait till Sunday. I think they were glad they did wait. They got to witness the resurrection because they waited. Amen?

There are people who are faced with practical challenges in college or some work will require you for your profession to take a test and when do they always do it? So many of them on Saturday. A little while ago a policeman stopped me to talk to me, a highway patrolman, and I decided to brush up on my driving education. You know when they offer most of the schools? Praise the Lord! They just started offering one online and I was able to do the whole thing online because it's really difficult. All the other times I had to go traffic school I'd have to find it where you go in little sessions, a half one day and half another day. And what do you do if in order for you to pass a test or something, they have a test and it might mean your grade? And it might mean your job, a promotion? Would you do? Well, first of all, our office here has a letter, we have a few form letters. We run into this all the time, that we will write... praise God in America we have some freedom!

Other countries that roses are even more difficult. And we can write a letter and they will maybe give you another test specially just for you or they will waive it or something like that, but don't say, "Well, I'm going to break the Sabbath just this once because God understands." I think you start sacrificing your principles in little things like this and it'll get easier and easier for you to sacrifice until someday someone is going to tell you to substitute God's Sabbath for their Sabbath and you have made so many little compromises in series that it will seem like a small concession to give up your faith. The devil chips away at our faith little by little. We need to take a stand. Amen? Are we supposed to break the Sabbath when it becomes inconvenient to keep it? Let's ask that question about the other commandments. "Well, you know, I really don't want to lie, but if I lie this one time it's going to save a lot of trouble." And I know there are some people that think there's a good argument for an occasional lie. I don't believe God sees it that way. How many of you ladies would understand if a husband said, "I'm on a four week business trip and a little bit of adultery... I mean, just this once!" A little bit of using God's name in vain, just an occasional, just this once, I need to deny Christ just now, worship another god. I mean, does God care if we make compromises with the other commandments? Yes, he does. And that's why I think we sometimes think the Sabbath is a different kind of commitment and he doesn't care if it's inconvenient we break it. The penalty was death back then, and it's very serious. Now I don't believe we're supposed to execute, but the penalty for sin is what? Death.

What am I supposed to wear on the Sabbath?

Everyone listen now with your eyes closed so you don't look at anyone around you. I do think it's something we should address in how to keep the Sabbath. I believe when we come into the presence of God we should be conscious that he's a holy God and wear what our best is. Don't save your worst for God. Some people come to church I know they go to work all week long they wear a suit, they wear respectful clothing, they come to church looking like they're on a Hawaiian vacation. If the best you have is your Hawaii clothes then praise the Lord! When in Hawaii it's OK. I've been there. No, I'm serious. I go to church in some south Pacific islands and everybody has short sleeves and it's the way that they, it's their respectful clothing. You go to the Philippines they wear the barong. You know what I'm saying? Where what the respectful clothing is because you're coming into God's presence you want to by your example show respect. Let me give you some scriptures. Genesis 35:2&3, "Jacob said to his household and to all who were with him, 'Put away the foreign gods that are among you. Purify yourselves. Change your clothes. Let us arise and go to Bethel.'" Who knows what the word Bethel means? House of God. "And I will an altar there to God." They were to change their clothes as they went before the Lord. When the Lord was about to give the Ten Commandments Moses commanded them to wash their clothes. So one thing is we want to be clean. We should be neat and we should be respectful when we come before the Lord. It's a day for rest.

Oh wait! I want to give you one more scripture. Don't... too late! She almost put that up. I Timothy 2:9-10, "In like manner that the women adorn themselves in modest apparel with propriety and moderation." Not with costly clothing. We should not be, I think, flamboyant or extravagant. Some people, let's face it, they come to church and Saturday is, as far as they're concerned, it's the runway in a fashion show. And everybody wants to outdo everybody else, and I'm not saying you're that way but we all know that there are folks who view it as their opportunity to grandstand their latest purchase. That shouldn't be the spirit. We should be coming wanting to reflect Christ.

Something else popped into my mind that I forgot that I want to mention. The Bible says that the Sabbath is to be kept within our gates. Remember Jacob just said to his family. There are some things we're not responsible for. Your gates means your household. Back in Bible times they had ranches. You cannot be responsible for what people are doing as far as Sabbath keeping outside your gates. Even among the children of Israel were people who were not Israelites and they may not have respected the Sabbath. We just read that in Nehemiah. But within your gates, when your children, when your grown children come home they should be taught even though they may not understand or respect how you keep Sabbath when they're away when they're within your gates it should be kept. And you might say, "Well, you know, I know they're not Sabbath keepers so they're going to be watching football at home while we go to church." No. Tell them to get a hotel room. You might think that's a little tough love, but they need to respect because you've got to decide to love God more than my children. And have them honor it within your gates. What if you're in business and you have business partners that are not Sabbath keepers and they've got a business open on Sabbath? Some of you are doing that right now and you didn't even know it. You take your money to a bank, they invest in stocks and I can guarantee you they're not all closed on Sabbath. You can't control that. Here's the way I understand it. If you have a controlling interest in what's happening you either need to get out of that or they should be keeping the Sabbath. For instance, if you're one of 50 people that owns a hotel you can't tell them to close it down on Sabbath, can you? But "within your gates" means within your authority, within your control you should be keeping it. If it's outside of your control and authority you're not responsible for what everybody else is doing.

Then there will be people will say, "Well, you know you're making others work when you use electricity on the Sabbath, and you're making the phone company work if you pick up your cell phone and stuff like that." I can't control that whether I use it or not. You see what I'm saying? When I turn on the water I'm glad it's running, but I'm not going to work at the water company. Amen? And I know that there's some other things I'm leaving out. This is such a big subject, but I'm running out of time. It's a day for rest very simply.

Another quote from Child Guidance. "Let not the precious hours of the Sabbath be wasted in bed." While it is a day for rest we don't want to be gorging ourselves like lions that just killed an elephant and laying around. I think we should enjoy our food, but eat modestly. The food should be special. I think it should be a treat. Doesn't mean you have to have ninety different items on the table. But it should be a treat. It should be pleasant. I don't think we should eat so much that all we can think about is finding the nearest hammock and sleeping away the rest of the day. It is a day for rest, but how many people do you know that miss church that say, "Well, after all, it's a day for rest! So I stayed home and slept." Oh, get up! Go to church. Then take a nap later. Amen? But don't miss your time worshiping with God.

"Let not the precious hours of the Sabbath be wasted in bed. On Sabbath morning the family should be astir early. If they rise late there's confusion and bustle and preparing for breakfast and Sabbath School. There is hurrying..." I hope you'll come to Sabbath School. "...jostling and impatience, thus unholy feelings come into the home. The Sabbath is thus desecrated and it becomes a weariness and its coming is dreaded rather than loved." God wants us to love it. He wants it to be a blessing. It's to be something that's to be a delight, something that we cherish, something we look forward to. But you know, it takes energy to build that kind of experience. It takes planning. It takes thought. Is God worth it? Is he worth giving your time with someone you love? Is it worth it? I know I've used this example before, but if a man and woman are courting and they have limited time together because of their schedules and where they live, they try to plan that time, they invest energy and it being special. And especially the man who makes those dates special for his beloved, he's appreciated, isn't he, when he thinks ahead? How many of you women like that when your husband does something that shows he actually thought ahead? He planned on doing something special. That makes them very happy.

When I travel Karen often writes a card or two in advance and she hides them in my luggage or my computer. She always tries to hide them where she figures I'll find them because nothing bothers her more than when I get home and she says, "Did you read my card?" I'll say, "What card?" So you don't want to hide it too well, but it's always pleasant when I'm digging through my file for that trip and I pull out a card with a you know little note or kiss or something on it. It's very, she usually has a love letter in there or something, and it shows me she thought about me. Now I've got to learn to do that for her when she... it's time together. And then finally... let me do something before I get to my finally, real quick. I had so much material that I wanted to share with you and I knew that I didn't want to go into part three and I wanted to cover as much of this as I can. We'll put both these messages on one tape. That I summarized some points, concepts for Sabbath keeping, and I have about 200 of these on the table out there so if each family takes one (you're free to make copies of it) and you can pick one up at our information table.

*One, the Sabbath is a day to cease our creative work, it's a day of ceasing as God ceased, and to appreciate what God has done in the world and is doing in us. And there's scripture.

*Two, the Sabbath is not a time for elaborate food preparation. It should be done the days before the Sabbath. It's not a time for heavy baking and cooking. The Sabbath is the time to lay our burdens down and to rest, Jeremiah 17.

*We should not do any servile work on the Sabbath. That means slavely work. This includes our entire family our servants, our animals, and strangers who live among us, visitors within your gates. Sometimes it's hard when you've got family that are not believers that are with you. It's a challenge. You need courage and tact in how to do this.

*The Sabbath is a holy convocation. We should meet and worship with others. A number of scriptures for that.

*The Sabbath should be a day of daylight and rejoicing, a day in which we will for sake our thoughts and words for God's thoughts. How many of you struggle sometimes on Sabbath not thinking about things that you shouldn't think about? It takes some energy and effort to do that but you can.

*The Sabbath, number six, is a time of healing. It's a good time to visit, to minister to those who are suffering. It's not a time to do our trading, buying, and selling engaging in those kind of business transactions. The Sabbath is a time to do good and visit the sick. We should do spiritual work on the Sabbath serving others for Christ. That doesn't mean raking their lawns and washing their cars.

*The Sabbath is a time for prayer, Acts 16.

*Eleven, the Sabbath is a time to reason with each other about spiritual principles and for ministers to teach and read the word of God and Jesus read out loud. I think it's good for us to hear the word of God read.

*And then twelve, the Sabbath is it time for singing. Amen? We'll do that in just a minute. Matter of fact, Psalm 92 if you read the little introduction, is called a Sabbath Psalm. They sang on the Sabbath day. And you've got Ephesians, Colossians, and a number of others. If you want one of these I think we may have enough for one per family that are on the information desk out there.

*Now finally, the Sabbath is a time to be with Jesus. Luke 10:38-42, "It happened as they went and entered a certain village a certain woman named Martha welcomed him into her house and she had a sister called Mary who will also sat at Jesus feet and heard his word, but Martha was distracted with much serving." You know, we sometimes on the Sabbath are so distracted with getting to church and putting in our time and doing it that were not being with him. And the Lord wants us to be with him. If we can convince other people what day the Sabbath is and we're not being with Jesus we're not really keeping the Sabbath. It's in vain. We might have all the arguments. We might put in our time and sit still, but if we're not being with him and abiding in his presence then we're not really keeping the Sabbath. "Martha was distracted by much serving and she approached him and said, 'Lord, do you not care? My sister has left me to serve alone. Therefore tell her to help me!' And Jesus answered and said, 'Martha, Martha, you're worried and troubled about many things but one thing is needed and Mary has chosen that good part that will not be taken away from her.'" Sitting at Jesus' feet, gazing into his face, spending time with him, hearing his voice, this is what the Sabbath is for. Quality time with Jesus. He wants that with us and he was not going to let... even though Martha was preparing a dinner for Jesus he said, "No, not going to interrupt this. This is more important. We're having a relationship. We're getting to know each other." And he wants to have that with you. This is what the Sabbath is for. It's holy time because it's time with God. And I want to keep it that way, don't you, friends? Let's stand together and sing 383 "Oh, Day of Rest and Gladness!"

I'd like to ask a very simple question and you might respond by lifting your hand in God's presence. If you have heard the Lord speak to your heart in this presentation on the practical aspects of keeping the Sabbath holy and you recognize that you need help to do what God wants you to do would you like to say, "Lord, help me keep your day holy. Amen."

Father in heaven, dear Lord, we believe that today and in our previous study we have had our concept of the holiness of the Sabbath raised. I pray, Lord, that you will help us to rise in our keeping of it to meet that truth. Lord, we know that without Jesus We can do nothing but we also still believe that "through Christ all things are possible". We also know, Lord, that no matter how hard we might try to keep the Sabbath holy that if first and foremost you do not have our hearts it's impossible. Lord, I pray that you will make us holy that we may keep this holy time in a holy way. Help us to be cleansed through your Spirit. Help our minds to be purged by the blood of Jesus. And I would pray, Lord, that we can capitalize on this blessed time that you have set aside for us to meet with us in a special way. I pray that we can grow. Some of these things may take time for us to implement, Lord, and in an I pray that we can grow in the way that we learn and we train our families to recognize that you are a holy God and that someday we will gather with all flesh before you in that kingdom and worship you on the Sabbath day. Help us begin now. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

Back to Keeping it Holy

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History |
Sabbath Resources | Home

Current Category - History

Conscientious Objector, The (DVD)

A True Story of An American Soldier, documentary film.

Infantrymen who once ridiculed and scoffed at Desmond's simple faith and refusal to carry a weapon-now owed their lives to him. Director Terry Benedict tells Desmond's incredible story through the eyes of the men who witnessed this humble man's heroic acts. Winning the respect of his fellow soldiers, they recommended him for the highest honor America can bestow on one of her sons-The Medal of Honor.

DV-CO $19.99

From Sabbath to Sunday

A brief but comprehensive history of the Sabbath, this book tells of its transfer from the seventh day of the week to Sunday. By Carlyle B. Haynes.

BK-FSS $7.99

History of Protestantism, The(4 Vol set)

The History of Protestantism by J.A. Wylie pulls back the divine curtain and reveals God's hand in the affairs of His church during the Protestant Reformation. As God's church faces the last days, this compelling book has unique appeal and relevance to all who love the truth. 4 volume set.

BK-HOP $99.95

History of the Sabbath

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Product Categories:

- Bible Studies
- Books
- Creation / Evolution
- General
- History
- Prophecy

➤ Your Satisfaction is
100% Guaranteed!

If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with your purchase, simply return it for a full refund, no questions asked!

J.N. Andrews. Finally, one of the most comprehensive, detailed analyses of the Sabbath-Sunday controversy returns to print! Understand in amazing detail the 6,000-year story of the Sabbath, from its foundation at creation to its final return to prominence in the last-days, and understand step-by-step how forces have tried to use Sunday to usurp the place of God's eternal day. A must-have classic for your study library!

BK-HOS $22.95

---

History of the Waldenses

J.A. Wylie. An extraordinary look at a persecuted Christian people given the guardianship of God's Word in the Dark Ages. Even before the Reformation, these godly witnesses maintained the ancient faith and declared the Bible as the only source of truth—even at the peril of their lives. A profound, thrilling portrayal of sacrifice and courage that will change your life.

BK-HOW $9.95

---

Israel of The Alps, The (DVD)

A three part documentary tracing the almost forgotten history of the Waldenses, who for over a thousand years, and intense sufferings, clung to the word of God. See how they lived, how they trained their children, how they shared their faith. Scattered over many lands, they planted the seeds of the Reformation that began in the time of Wycliffe, grew broad and deep in the days of Luther, and is to be carried forward to the close of time by those who also are willing to suffer all things for the ...

DV-IOTA $20.00

---

John Wicliffe-The Morning Star of The

This biography is a reproduction of a book which has been out of print for many years. His faithfulness to the Word of God and his courage in opposing the ecclesiastical powers of thirteenth century England has such an effect on those who followed, that he is often referred to as the Morning Star of the Reformation.

BK-JWMS $5.95

---

Keepers of the Flame Set Video

This eight episode video series documents the development of the church since its earliest days in the Reformation. Filmed on location, it provides a vivid way to learn about or to teach church history. Hosted by Dr. Allan Lindsay.

VT-KOF $79.95

---

Romanism and the Reformation

H. Grattan Guinness. This generation is dangerously close to falling prey to the horrors of the church's darkest age. A loud cry for a return to Scriptures rooted in the lesson of the Reformation.

BK-RATR $12.95

---

Seventh Day Part 1, The

From Creation through Old Testament times - 52 min. Hosted by veteran actor Hal Holbrook, part one of this five-part documentary series considers various views of human origins from ancient myths to Darwinism, and finds the most satisfactory answers in the book of Genesis. It recounts the loyalty and courage of people who saw the seventh-day Sabbath as a special sign between them and their Creator. Packed with special effects, brilliant graphics, and historical documentation. On DVD.

DV-SD1 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 2, The

From the time of Jesus till the 4th Century - 47 min. Part II of the Seventh Day, exposes the political and religious intrigue behind the Saturday - Sunday controversy in the early Christian Church. Hal Holbrook, in his intimate and captivating style weaves little known historical data and expert testimony into a tapestry of compelling truth.

VT-SD2 $20.00

---

Seventh Day Part 2, The

DVD. From the time of Jesus till the 4th Century - 47 min. Part II of the Seventh Day, exposes the political and religious intrigue behind the Saturday - Sunday controversy in the early Christian Church. Hal Holbrook, in his intimate and captivating style weaves little known historical data and expert testimony into a tapestry of compelling truth.

DV-SD2 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 3, The

From the time of St. Patrick to the 11th Century - 48 min. In Part III of the Seventh Day, Hal Holbrook tells of the battle over the seventh day Sabbath in medieval times. It's a story riddled with fakes and forgeries, warped by legend and propaganda, and steeped in the schemes of patriarchs, popes and kings. With the testimony of experts from England, Scotland and the United States, Part III of this 5-part documentary series presents new Revelations from the Lost Pages of History. (DVD)

DV-SD3 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 4, The

Part four in the riveting Sabbath Day documentary series spotlights the resurgence of Sabbath observance in an era of religious upheaval--from the spiritual revolution in late 15th-century Russia, the religious rebellion of the Protestants, and a radical Sabbath revival in England. Learn even more amazing history and facts about the special gift God gave to humanity! Hosted by Hal Holbrook.

DV-SD4 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 5, The

In this final episode, Hal Holbrook shares today's view of God's holy day and projects the gift of Sabbath rest into the eternal future. Blending history and current events, this epic story travels around the world, from the Taiping revolutionaries in China to the millions of Indigenous Sabbatarians of Africa and the remote village of Paruima in South America. It also spans the centuries from Roger Williams' heroic stand for religious liberty in 17th-century America to the crisis of conscience f ...

DV-SD5 $19.95

---

Trials and Triumphs

by Crystal Earnhardt. Each week Norman, a commercial fisherman, drifts at sea for 24 hours and catches a triple amount of fish the next day. Teri lost her job and nearly every earthly possession, then wound up in court fighting for justice. What do they have in common? A desire to obey God's fourth commandment, regardless of the cost.

BK-ETT $4.95

---

Truth About The Sabbath, The

by Jim Pinkoski.
An illustrated study of the seventh-day Sabbath, from Creation to today.

BK-TAS $3.95

---

Truth Triumphant

B.G. Wilkinson. God has preserved His Word in miraculous ways throughout the centuries, using His faithful workers to spread the gospel even in the most dangerous times. An amazing narrative that will increase your faith for the coming time of trouble.

BK-TTRI $14.95

---

Waldenses: The Church in the Wilderness,

Eulend Borton. Now your children can understand the amazing true story of the faithful witness of the Waldenses in a format appropriate for them. They'll be amazed at God's great faithfulness even in the darkest of times.

BK-WTCI $8.95

1 - 19 of 19 found.

Select how many records to display

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Persecution in the First Centuries

When Jesus revealed to His disciples the fate of Jerusalem and the scenes of the second advent, He foretold also the experience of His people from the time when He should be taken from them, to His return in power and glory for their deliverance. From Olivet the Saviour beheld the storms about to fall upon the apostolic church; and penetrating deeper into the future, His eye discerned the fierce, wasting tempests that were to beat upon His followers in the coming ages of darkness and persecution. In a few brief utterances of awful significance He foretold the portion which the rulers of this world would mete out to the church of God. Matthew 24:9, 21, 22. The followers of Christ must tread the same path of humiliation, reproach, and suffering which their Master trod. The enmity that burst forth against the world's Redeemer would be manifested against all who should believe on His name.

The history of the early church testified to the fulfillment of the Saviour's words. The powers of earth and hell arrayed themselves against Christ in the person of His followers. Paganism foresaw that should the gospel triumph, her temples and altars would be swept away; therefore she summoned her forces to destroy Christianity. The fires of persecution were kindled. Christians were stripped of their possessions and driven from their homes. They "endured a great fight of afflictions." Hebrews 10:32. They "had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment." Hebrews 11:36. Great numbers sealed their testimony with their blood. Noble and slave, rich and poor, learned and ignorant, were alike slain without mercy.

These persecutions, beginning under Nero about the time of the martyrdom of Paul, continued with greater or less fury for centuries. Christians were falsely accused of the most dreadful crimes and declared to be the cause of great calamities--famine, pestilence, and earthquake. As they became the objects of popular hatred and suspicion, informers stood ready, for the sake of gain, to betray the innocent. They were condemned as rebels against the empire, as foes of religion, and pests to society. Great numbers were thrown to wild beasts or burned alive in the amphitheaters. Some were crucified; others were covered with the skins of wild animals and thrust into the arena to be torn by dogs. Their punishment was often made the chief entertainment at public fetes. Vast multitudes assembled to enjoy the sight and greeted their dying agonies with laughter and applause.

Wherever they sought refuge, the followers of Christ were hunted like beasts of prey. They were forced to seek concealment in desolate and solitary places. "Destitute, afflicted, tormented; (of whom the world was not worthy:) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth." Verses 37, 38. The catacombs afforded shelter for thousands. Beneath the hills outside the city of Rome, long galleries had been tunneled through earth and rock; the dark and intricate network of passages extended for miles beyond the city walls. In these underground retreats the followers of Christ buried their dead; and here also, when suspected and proscribed, they found a home. When the Lifegiver shall awaken those who have fought the good fight, many a martyr for Christ's sake will come forth from those gloomy caverns.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Under the fiercest persecution these witnesses for Jesus kept their faith unsullied. Though deprived of every comfort, shut away from the light of the sun, making their home in the dark but friendly bosom of the earth, they uttered no complaint. With words of faith, patience, and hope they encouraged one another to endure privation and distress. The loss of every earthly blessing could not force them to renounce their belief in Christ. Trials and persecution were but steps bringing them nearer their rest and their reward.

Like God's servants of old, many were "tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection." Verse 35. These called to mind the words of their Master, that when persecuted for Christ's sake, they were to be exceeding glad, for great would be their reward in heaven; for so the prophets had been persecuted before them. They rejoiced that they were accounted worthy to suffer for the truth, and songs of triumph ascended from the midst of crackling flames. Looking upward by faith, they saw Christ and angels leaning over the battlements of heaven, gazing upon them with the deepest interest and regarding their steadfastness with approval. A voice came down to them from the throne of God: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Revelation 2: 10.

In vain were Satan's efforts to destroy the church of Christ by violence. The great controversy in which the disciples of Jesus yielded up their lives did not cease when these faithful standard-bearers fell at their post. By defeat they conquered. God's workmen were slain, but His work went steadily forward. The gospel continued to spread and the number of its adherents to increase. It penetrated into regions that were inaccessible even to the eagles of Rome. Said a Christian, expostulating with the heathen rulers who were urging forward the persecution: You may "kill us, torture us, condemn us. . . . Your injustice is the proof that we are innocent . . . . Nor does your cruelty . . . avail you." It was but a stronger invitation to bring others to their persuasion. "The oftener we are mown down by you, the more in number we grow; the blood of Christians is seed."--Tertullian, Apology, paragraph 50.

Thousands were imprisoned and slain, but others sprang up to fill their places. And those who were martyred for their faith were secured to Christ and accounted of Him as conquerors. They had fought the good fight, and they were to receive the crown of glory when Christ should come. The sufferings which they endured brought Christians nearer to one another and to their Redeemer. Their living example and dying testimony were a constant witness for the truth; and where least expected, the subjects of Satan were leaving his service and enlisting under the banner of Christ.

Satan therefore laid his plans to war more successfully against the government of God by planting his banner in the Christian church. If the followers of Christ could be deceived and led to displease God, then their strength, fortitude, and firmness would fail, and they would fall an easy prey.

The great adversary now endeavored to gain by artifice what he had failed to secure by force. Persecution ceased, and in its stead were substituted the dangerous allurements of temporal prosperity and worldly honor. Idolaters were led to receive a part of the Christian faith, while they rejected other essential truths. They professed to accept Jesus as the Son of God and to believe in His death and resurrection, but they had no conviction of sin and felt no need of repentance or of a change of heart. With some concessions on their part they proposed that Christians should make concessions, that all might unite on the platform of belief in Christ.

Now the church was in fearful peril. Prison, torture, fire, and sword were blessings in comparison with this. Some of the Christians stood firm, declaring that they could make no compromise. Others were in favor of yielding or modifying some features of their faith and uniting with those who had accepted a part of Christianity, urging that this might be the means of their full conversion. That was a time of deep anguish to the faithful followers of Christ. Under a cloak of pretended Christianity, Satan was insinuating himself into the church, to corrupt their faith and turn their minds from the word of truth.

Most of the Christians at last consented to lower their standard, and a union was formed between Christianity and paganism. Although the worshipers of idols professed to be converted, and united with the church, they still clung to their idolatry, only changing the objects of their worship to images of Jesus, and even of Mary and the saints. The foul leaven of idolatry, thus brought into the church, continued its baleful work. Unsound doctrines, superstitious rites, and idolatrous ceremonies were incorporated into her faith and worship. As the followers of Christ united with idolaters, the Christian religion became corrupted, and the church lost her purity and power. There were some, however, who were not misled by these delusions. They still maintained their fidelity to the Author of truth and worshiped God alone.

There have ever been two classes among those who profess to be followers of Christ. While one class study the Saviour's life and earnestly seek to correct their defects and conform to the Pattern, the other class shun the plain, practical truths which expose their errors. Even in her best estate the church was not composed wholly of the true, pure, and sincere. Our Saviour taught that those who willfully indulge in sin are not to be received into the church; yet He connected with Himself men who were faulty in character, and granted them the benefits of His teachings and example, that they might have an opportunity to see their errors and correct them. Among the twelve apostles was a traitor. Judas was accepted, not because of his defects of character, but notwithstanding them. He was connected with the disciples, that, through the instruction and example of Christ, he might learn what constitutes Christian character, and thus be led to see his errors, to repent, and, by the aid of divine grace, to purify his soul "in obeying the truth." But Judas did not walk in the light so graciously permitted to shine upon him. By indulgence in sin he invited the temptations of Satan. His evil traits of character became predominant. He yielded his mind to the control of the powers of darkness, he became angry when his faults were reproofed, and thus he was led to commit the fearful crime of betraying his Master. So do all who cherish evil under a profession of godliness hate those who disturb their peace by condemning their course of sin. When a favorable opportunity is presented, they will, like Judas, betray those who for their good have sought to reprove them.

The apostles encountered those in the church who professed godliness while they were secretly cherishing iniquity. Ananias and Sapphira acted the part of deceivers, pretending to make an entire sacrifice for God, when they were covetously withholding a portion for themselves. The Spirit of truth revealed to the apostles the real character of these pretenders, and the judgments of God rid the church of this foul blot upon its purity. This signal evidence of the discerning Spirit of Christ in the church was a terror to hypocrites and evildoers. They could not long remain in connection with those who were, in habit and disposition, constant representatives of Christ; and as trials and persecution came upon His followers, those only who were willing to forsake all for the truth's sake desired to become His disciples. Thus, as long as persecution continued, the church remained comparatively pure. But as it ceased, converts were added who were less sincere and devoted, and the way was open for Satan to obtain a foothold.

But there is no union between the Prince of light and the prince of darkness, and there can be no union between their followers. When Christians consented to unite with those who were but half converted from paganism, they entered upon a path which led further and further from the truth. Satan exulted that he had succeeded in deceiving so large a number of the followers of Christ. He then brought his power to bear more fully upon these, and inspired them to persecute those who remained true to God. None understood so well how to oppose the true Christian faith as did those who had once been its defenders; and these apostate Christians, uniting with their half-pagan companions, directed their warfare against the most essential features of the doctrines of Christ.

It required a desperate struggle for those who would be faithful to stand firm against the deceptions and abominations which were disguised in sacerdotal garments and introduced into the church. The Bible was not accepted as the standard of faith. The doctrine of religious freedom was termed heresy, and its upholders were hated and proscribed.

After a long and severe conflict, the faithful few decided to dissolve all union with the apostate church if she still refused to free herself from falsehood and idolatry. They saw that separation was an absolute necessity if they would obey the word of God. They dared not tolerate errors fatal to their own souls, and set an example which would imperil the faith of their children and children's children. To secure peace and unity they were ready to make any concession consistent with fidelity to God; but they felt that even peace would be too dearly purchased at the sacrifice of principle. If unity could be secured only by the compromise of truth and righteousness, then let there be difference, and even war.

Well would it be for the church and the world if the principles that actuated those steadfast souls were revived in the hearts of God's professed people. There is an alarming indifference in regard to the doctrines which are the pillars of the Christian faith. The opinion is gaining ground, that, after all, these are not of vital importance. This degeneracy is strengthening the hands of the agents of Satan, so that false theories and fatal delusions which the faithful in ages past imperiled their lives to resist and expose, are now regarded with favor by thousands who claim to be followers of Christ.

The early Christians were indeed a peculiar people. Their blameless deportment and unswerving faith were a continual reproof that disturbed the sinner's peace. Though few in numbers, without wealth, position, or honorary titles, they were a terror to evildoers wherever their character and doctrines were known. Therefore they were hated by the wicked, even as Abel was hated by the ungodly Cain. For the same reason that Cain slew Abel, did those who sought to throw off the restraint of the Holy Spirit, put to death God's people. It was for the same reason that the Jews rejected and crucified the Saviour--because the purity and holiness of His character was a constant rebuke to their selfishness and corruption. From the days of Christ until now His faithful disciples have excited the hatred and opposition of those who love and follow the ways of sin.

How, then, can the gospel be called a message of peace? When Isaiah foretold the birth of the Messiah, he ascribed to Him the title, "Prince of Peace." When angels announced to the shepherds that Christ was born, they sang above the plains of Bethlehem: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Luke 2: 14. There is a seeming contradiction between these prophetic declarations and the words of Christ: "I came not to send peace, but a sword." Matthew 10: 34. But, rightly understood, the two are in perfect harmony. The gospel is a message of peace. Christianity is a system which, received and obeyed, would spread peace, harmony, and happiness throughout the earth. The religion of Christ will unite in close brotherhood all who accept its teachings. It was the mission of Jesus to reconcile men to God, and thus to one another. But the world at large are under the control of Satan, Christ's bitterest foe. The gospel presents to them principles of life which are wholly at variance with their habits and desires, and they rise in rebellion against it. They hate the purity which reveals and condemns their sins, and they persecute and destroy those who would urge upon them its just and holy claims. It is in this sense--because the exalted truths it brings occasion hatred and strife--that the gospel is called a sword.

The mysterious providence which permits the righteous to suffer persecution at the hand of the wicked has been a cause of great perplexity to many who are weak in faith. Some are even ready to cast away their confidence in God because He suffers the basest of men to prosper, while the best and purest are afflicted and tormented by their cruel power. How, it is asked, can One who is just and merciful, and who is also infinite in power, tolerate such injustice and oppression? This is a question with which we have nothing to do. God has given us sufficient evidence of His love, and we are not to doubt His goodness because we cannot understand the workings of His providence. Said the Saviour to His disciples, foreseeing the doubts that would press upon their souls in days of trial and darkness: "Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you." John 15: 20. Jesus suffered for us more than any of His followers can be made to suffer through the cruelty of wicked men. Those who are called to endure torture and martyrdom are but following in the steps of God's dear Son.

"The Lord is not slack concerning His promise." 2 Peter 3: 9. He does not forget or neglect His children; but He permits the wicked to reveal their true character, that none who desire to do His will may be deceived concerning them. Again, the righteous are placed in the furnace of affliction, that they themselves may be purified; that their example may convince others of the reality of faith and godliness; and also that their consistent course may condemn the ungodly and unbelieving.

God permits the wicked to prosper and to reveal their enmity against Him, that when they shall have filled up the measure of their iniquity all may see His justice and mercy in their utter destruction. The day of His vengeance hastens, when all who have transgressed His law and oppressed His people will meet the just recompense of their deeds; when every act of cruelty or injustice toward God's faithful ones will be punished as though done to Christ Himself.

There is another and more important question that should engage the attention of the churches of today. The apostle Paul declares that "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Timothy 3: 12. Why is it, then, that persecution seems in a great degree to slumber? The only reason is that the church has conformed to the world's standard and therefore awakens no opposition. The religion which is current in our day is not of the pure and holy character that marked the Christian faith in the days of Christ and His apostles. It is only because of the spirit of compromise with sin, because the great truths of the word of God are so indifferently regarded, because there is so little vital godliness in the church, that Christianity is apparently so popular with the world. Let there be a revival of the faith and power of the early church, and the spirit of persecution will be revived, and the fires of persecution will be rekindled.

To read this in its original source see chapter #2 of The Great Controversy between Christ and Satan (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 2nd Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

An Era of Spiritual Darkness

The apostle Paul, in his second letter to the Thessalonians, foretold the great apostasy which would result in the establishment of the papal power. He declared that the day of Christ should not come, "except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." And furthermore, the apostle warns his brethren that "the mystery of iniquity doth already work." 2 Thessalonians 2:3, 4, 7. Even at that early date he saw, creeping into the church, errors that would prepare the way for the development of the papacy.

Little by little, at first in stealth and silence, and then more openly as it increased in strength and gained control of the minds of men, "the mystery of iniquity" carried forward its deceptive and blasphemous work. Almost imperceptibly the customs of heathenism found their way into the Christian church. The spirit of compromise and conformity was restrained for a time by the fierce persecutions which the church endured under paganism. But as persecution ceased, and Christianity entered the courts and palaces of kings, she laid aside the humble simplicity of Christ and His apostles for the pomp and pride of pagan priests and rulers; and in place of the requirements of God, she substituted human theories and traditions. The nominal conversion of Constantine, in the early part of the fourth century, caused great rejoicing; and the world, cloaked with a form of righteousness, walked into the church. Now the work of corruption rapidly progressed. Paganism, while appearing to be vanquished, became the conqueror. Her spirit controlled the church. Her doctrines, ceremonies, and superstitions were incorporated into the faith and worship of the professed followers of Christ.

This compromise between paganism and Christianity resulted in the development of "the man of sin" foretold in prophecy as opposing and exalting himself above God. That gigantic system of false religion is a masterpiece of Satan's power--a monument of his efforts to seat himself upon the throne to rule the earth according to his will.

Satan once endeavored to form a compromise with Christ. He came to the Son of God in the wilderness of temptation, and showing Him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, offered to give all into His hands if He would but acknowledge the supremacy of the prince of darkness. Christ rebuked the presumptuous tempter and forced him to depart. But Satan meets with greater success in presenting the same temptations to man. To secure worldly gains and honors, the church was led to seek the favor and support of the great men of earth; and having thus rejected Christ, she was induced to yield allegiance to the representative of Satan--the bishop of Rome.

It is one of the leading doctrines of Romanism that the pope is the visible head of the universal church of Christ, invested with supreme authority over bishops and pastors in all parts of the world. More than this, the pope has been given the very titles of Deity. He has been styled "Lord God the Pope" (see Appendix), and has been declared infallible. He demands the homage of all men. The same claim urged by Satan in the wilderness of temptation is still urged by him through the Church of Rome, and vast numbers are ready to yield him homage.

But those who fear and reverence God meet this heaven-daring assumption as Christ met the solicitations of the wily foe: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." Luke 4:8. God has never given a hint in His word that He has appointed any man to be the head of the church. The doctrine of papal supremacy is directly opposed to the teachings of the Scriptures. The pope can have no power over Christ's church except by usurpation.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ Constantine's Sunday Law

Romanists have persisted in bringing against Protestants the charge of heresy and willful separation from the true church. But these accusations apply rather to themselves. They are the ones who laid down the banner of Christ and departed from "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Jude 3.

Satan well knew that the Holy Scriptures would enable men to discern his deceptions and withstand his power. It was by the word that even the Saviour of the world had resisted his attacks. At every assault, Christ presented the shield of eternal truth, saying, "It is written." To every suggestion of the adversary, He opposed the wisdom and power of the word. In order for Satan to maintain his sway over men, and establish the authority of the papal usurper, he must keep them in ignorance of the Scriptures. The Bible would exalt God and place finite men in their true position; therefore its sacred truths must be concealed and suppressed. This logic was adopted by the Roman Church. For hundreds of years the circulation of the Bible was prohibited. The people were forbidden to read it or to have it in their houses, and unprincipled priests and prelates interpreted its teachings to sustain their pretensions. Thus the pope came to be almost universally acknowledged as the vicegerent of God on earth, endowed with authority over church and state.

The detector of error having been removed, Satan worked according to his will. Prophecy had declared that the papacy was to "think to change times and laws." Daniel 7:25. This work it was not slow to attempt. To afford converts from heathenism a substitute for the worship of idols, and thus to promote their nominal acceptance of Christianity, the adoration of images and relics was gradually introduced into the Christian worship. The decree of a general council (see Appendix) finally established this system of idolatry. To complete the sacrilegious work, Rome presumed to expunge from the law of God the second commandment, forbidding image worship, and to divide the tenth commandment, in order to preserve the number.

The spirit of concession to paganism opened the way for a still further disregard of Heaven's authority. Satan, working through unconsecrated leaders of the church, tampered with the fourth commandment also, and essayed to set aside the ancient Sabbath, the day which God had blessed and sanctified (Genesis 2:2, 3), and in its stead to exalt the festival observed by the heathen as "the venerable day of the sun." This change was not at first attempted openly. In the first centuries the true Sabbath had been kept by all Christians. They were jealous for the honor of God, and, believing that His law is immutable, they zealously guarded the sacredness of its precepts. But with great subtlety Satan worked through his agents to bring about his object. That the attention of the people might be called to the Sunday, it was made a festival in honor of the resurrection of Christ. Religious services were held upon it; yet it was regarded as a day of recreation, the Sabbath being still sacredly observed.

To prepare the way for the work which he designed to accomplish, Satan had led the Jews, before the advent of Christ, to load down the Sabbath with the most rigorous exactions, making its observance a burden. Now, taking advantage of the false light in which he had thus caused it to be regarded, he cast contempt upon it as a Jewish institution. While Christians generally continued to observe the Sunday as a joyous festival, he led them, in order to show their hatred of Judaism, to make the Sabbath a fast, a day of sadness and gloom.

In the early part of the fourth century the emperor Constantine issued a decree making Sunday a public festival throughout the Roman Empire. (See Appendix.) The day of the sun was revered by his pagan subjects and was honored by Christians; it was the emperor's policy to unite the conflicting interests of heathenism and Christianity. He was urged to do this by the bishops of the church, who, inspired by ambition and thirst for power, perceived that if the same day was observed by both Christians and heathen, it would promote the nominal acceptance of Christianity by pagans and thus advance the power and glory of the church. But while many God-fearing Christians were gradually led to regard Sunday as possessing a degree of sacredness, they still held the true Sabbath as the holy of the Lord and observed it in obedience to the fourth commandment.

The archdeceiver had not completed his work. He was resolved to gather the Christian world under his banner and to exercise his power through his vicegerent, the proud pontiff who claimed to be the representative of Christ. Through half-converted pagans, ambitious prelates, and world-loving churchmen he accomplished his purpose. Vast councils were held from time to time, in which the dignitaries of the church were convened from all the world. In nearly every council the Sabbath which God had instituted was pressed down a little lower, while the Sunday was correspondingly exalted. Thus the pagan festival came finally to be honored as a divine institution, while the Bible Sabbath was pronounced a relic of Judaism, and its observers were declared to be accursed.

The great apostate had succeeded in exalting himself "above all that is called God, or that is worshiped." 2 Thessalonians 2:4. He had dared to change the only precept of the divine law that unmistakably points all mankind to the true and living God. In the fourth commandment, God is revealed as the Creator of the heavens and the earth, and is thereby distinguished from all false gods. It was as a memorial of the work of creation that the seventh day was sanctified as a rest day for man. It was designed to keep the living God ever before the minds of men as the source of being and the object of reverence and worship. Satan strives to turn men from their allegiance to God, and from rendering obedience to His law; therefore he directs his efforts especially against that commandment which points to God as the Creator.

Protestants now urge that the resurrection of Christ on Sunday made it the Christian Sabbath. But Scripture evidence is lacking. No such honor was given to the day by Christ or His apostles. The observance of Sunday as a Christian institution had its origin in that "mystery of lawlessness" (2 Thessalonians 2:7, R.V.) which, even in Paul's day, had begun its work. Where and when did the Lord adopt this child of the papacy? What valid reason can be given for a change which the Scriptures do not sanction?

In the sixth century the papacy had become firmly established. Its seat of power was fixed in the imperial city, and the bishop of Rome was declared to be the head over the entire church. Paganism had given place to the papacy. The dragon had given to the beast "his power, and his seat, and great authority." Revelation 13:2. And now began the 1260 years of papal oppression foretold in the prophecies of Daniel and the Revelation. Daniel 7:25; Revelation 13:5-7. (See Appendix.) Christians were forced to choose either to yield their integrity and accept the papal ceremonies and worship, or to wear away their lives in dungeons or suffer death by the rack, the fagot, or the headsman's ax. Now were fulfilled the words of Jesus: "Ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death. And ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake." Luke 21:16, 17. Persecution opened upon the faithful with greater fury than ever before, and the world became a vast battlefield. For hundreds of years the church of Christ found refuge in seclusion and obscurity. Thus says the prophet: "The woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and three-score days." Revelation 12:6.

The accession of the Roman Church to power marked the beginning of the Dark Ages. As her power increased, the darkness deepened. Faith was transferred from Christ, the true foundation, to the pope of Rome. Instead of trusting in the Son of God for forgiveness of sins and for eternal salvation, the people looked to the pope, and to the priests and prelates to whom he delegated authority. They were taught that the pope was their earthly mediator and that none could approach God except through him; and, further, that he stood in the place of God to them and was therefore to be implicitly obeyed. A deviation from his requirements was sufficient cause for the severest punishment to be visited upon the bodies and souls of the offenders. Thus the minds of the people were turned away from God to fallible, erring, and cruel men, nay, more, to the prince of darkness himself, who exercised his power through them. Sin was disguised in a garb of sanctity. When the Scriptures are suppressed, and man comes to regard himself as supreme, we need look only for fraud, deception, and debasing iniquity. With the elevation of human laws and traditions was manifest the corruption that ever results from setting aside the law of God.

Those were days of peril for the church of Christ. The faithful standard-bearers were few indeed. Though the truth was not left without witnesses, yet at times it seemed that error and superstition would wholly prevail, and true religion would be banished from the earth. The gospel was lost sight of, but the forms of religion were multiplied, and the people were burdened with rigorous exactions.

They were taught not only to look to the pope as their mediator, but to trust to works of their own to atone for sin. Long pilgrimages, acts of penance, the worship of relics, the erection of churches, shrines, and altars, the payment of large sums to the church--these and many similar acts were enjoined to appease the wrath of God or to secure His favor; as if God were like men, to be angered at trifles, or pacified by gifts or acts of penance!

Notwithstanding that vice prevailed, even among the leaders of the Roman Church, her influence seemed steadily to increase. About the close of the eighth century, papists put forth the claim that in the first ages of the church the bishops of Rome had possessed the same spiritual power which they now assumed. To establish this claim, some means must be employed to give it a show of authority; and this was readily suggested by the father of lies. Ancient writings were forged by monks. Decrees of councils before unheard of were discovered, establishing the universal supremacy of the pope from the earliest times. And a church that had rejected the truth greedily accepted these deceptions. (See Appendix.)

The few faithful builders upon the true foundation (1 Corinthians 3:10, 11) were perplexed and hindered as the rubbish of false doctrine obstructed the work. Like the builders upon the wall of Jerusalem in Nehemiah's day, some were ready to say: "The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build." Nehemiah 4: 10. Wearied with the constant struggle against persecution, fraud, iniquity, and every other obstacle that Satan could devise to hinder their progress, some who had been faithful builders became disheartened; and for the sake of peace and security for their property and their lives, they turned away from the true foundation. Others, undaunted by the opposition of their enemies, fearlessly declared: "Be not ye afraid of them: remember the Lord, which is great and terrible" (verse 14); and they proceeded with the work, everyone with his sword girded by his side. Ephesians 6: 17.

The same spirit of hatred and opposition to the truth has inspired the enemies of God in every age, and the same vigilance and fidelity have been required in His servants. The words of Christ to the first disciples are applicable to His followers to the close of time: "What I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." Mark 13: 37.

The darkness seemed to grow more dense. Image worship became more general. Candles were burned before images, and prayers were offered to them. The most absurd and superstitious customs prevailed. The minds of men were so completely controlled by superstition that reason itself seemed to have lost its sway. While priests and bishops were themselves pleasure-loving, sensual, and corrupt, it could only be expected that the people who looked to them for guidance would be sunken in ignorance and vice.

Another step in papal assumption was taken, when, in the eleventh century, Pope Gregory VII proclaimed the perfection of the Roman Church. Among the propositions which he put forth was one declaring that the church had never erred, nor would it ever err, according to the Scriptures. But the Scripture proofs did not accompany the assertion. The proud pontiff also claimed the power to depose emperors, and declared that no sentence which he pronounced could be reversed by anyone, but that it was his prerogative to reverse the decisions of all others. (See Appendix.)

A striking illustration of the tyrannical character of this advocate of infallibility was given in his treatment of the German emperor, Henry IV. For presuming to disregard the pope's authority, this monarch was declared to be excommunicated and dethroned. Terrified by the desertion and threats of his own princes, who were encouraged in rebellion against him by the papal mandate, Henry felt the necessity of making his peace with Rome. In company with his wife and a faithful servant he crossed the Alps in midwinter, that he might humble himself before the pope. Upon reaching the castle whither Gregory had withdrawn, he was conducted, without his guards, into an outer court, and there, in the severe cold of winter, with uncovered head and naked feet, and in a miserable dress, he awaited the pope's permission to come into his presence. Not until he had continued three days fasting and making confession, did the pontiff condescend to grant him pardon. Even then it was only upon condition that the emperor should await the sanction of the pope before resuming the insignia or exercising the power of royalty. And Gregory, elated with his triumph, boasted that it was his duty to pull down the pride of kings.

How striking the contrast between the overbearing pride of this haughty pontiff and the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who represents Himself as pleading at the door of the heart for admittance, that He may come in to bring pardon and peace, and who taught His disciples: "Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." Matthew 20: 27.

The advancing centuries witnessed a constant increase of error in the doctrines put forth from Rome. Even before the establishment of the papacy the teachings of heathen philosophers had received attention and exerted an influence in the church. Many who professed conversion still clung to the tenets of their pagan philosophy, and not only continued its study themselves, but urged it upon others as a means of extending their influence among the heathen. Serious errors were thus introduced into the Christian faith. Prominent among these was the belief in man's natural immortality and his consciousness in death. This doctrine laid the foundation upon which Rome established the invocation of saints and the adoration of the Virgin Mary. From this sprang also the heresy of eternal torment for the finally impenitent, which was early incorporated into the papal faith.

Then the way was prepared for the introduction of still another invention of paganism, which Rome named purgatory, and employed to terrify the credulous and superstitious multitudes. By this heresy is affirmed the existence of a place of torment, in which the souls of such as have not merited eternal damnation are to suffer punishment for their sins, and from which, when freed from impurity, they are admitted to heaven. (See Appendix.)

Still another fabrication was needed to enable Rome to profit by the fears and the vices of her adherents. This was supplied by the doctrine of indulgences. Full remission of sins, past, present, and future, and release from all the pains and penalties incurred, were promised to all who would enlist in the pontiff's wars to extend his temporal dominion, to punish his enemies, or to exterminate those who dared deny his spiritual supremacy. The people were also taught that by the payment of money to the church they might free themselves from sin, and also release the souls of their deceased friends who were confined in the tormenting flames. By such means did Rome fill her coffers and sustain the magnificence, luxury, and vice of the pretended representatives of Him who had not where to lay His head. (See

Appendix.)

The Scriptural ordinance of the Lord's Supper had been supplanted by the idolatrous sacrifice of the mass. Papal priests pretended, by their senseless mummary, to convert the simple bread and wine into the actual "body and blood of Christ."--Cardinal Wiseman, The Real Presence of the Body and Blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ in the Blessed Eucharist, Proved From Scripture, lecture 8, sec. 3, par. 26. With blasphemous presumption, they openly claimed the power of creating God, the Creator of all things. Christians were required, on pain of death, to avow their faith in this horrible, Heaven-insulting heresy. Multitudes who refused were given to the flames. (See Appendix.)

In the thirteenth century was established that most terrible of all the engines of the papacy--the Inquisition. The prince of darkness wrought with the leaders of the papal hierarchy. In their secret councils Satan and his angels controlled the minds of evil men, while unseen in the midst stood an angel of God, taking the fearful record of their iniquitous decrees and writing the history of deeds too horrible to appear to human eyes. "Babylon the great" was "drunken with the blood of the saints." The mangled forms of millions of martyrs cried to God for vengeance upon that apostate power.

Popery had become the world's despot. Kings and emperors bowed to the decrees of the Roman pontiff. The destinies of men, both for time and for eternity, seemed under his control. For hundreds of years the doctrines of Rome had been extensively and implicitly received, its rites reverently performed, its festivals generally observed. Its clergy were honored and liberally sustained. Never since has the Roman Church attained to greater dignity, magnificence, or power.

But "the noon of the papacy was the midnight of the world."--J. A. Wylie, The History of Protestantism, b. 1, ch. 4. The Holy Scriptures were almost unknown, not only to the people, but to the priests. Like the Pharisees of old, the papal leaders hated the light which would reveal their sins. God's law, the standard of righteousness, having been removed, they exercised power without limit, and practiced vice without restraint. Fraud, avarice, and profligacy prevailed. Men shrank from no crime by which they could gain wealth or position. The palaces of popes and prelates were scenes of the vilest debauchery. Some of the reigning pontiffs were guilty of crimes so revolting that secular rulers endeavored to depose these dignitaries of the church as monsters too vile to be tolerated. For centuries Europe had made no progress in learning, arts, or civilization. A moral and intellectual paralysis had fallen upon Christendom.

The condition of the world under the Romish power presented a fearful and striking fulfillment of the words of the prophet Hosea: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee: . . . seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children." "There is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood." Hosea 4:6, 1, 2. Such were the results of banishing the word of God.

To read this in its original source see chapter #3 of The Great Controversy between Christ and Satan (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 4th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Who Was Saint Patrick - Beyond the Fable

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." —2 Timothy 4:4

Maewyn Succat's legacy to Ireland is both ironic and inspirational. Born to a Christian family around A.D. 380 on the banks of the Clyde in Scotland, he was kidnapped by a gang of ruffians, smuggled to Ireland, and sold as a slave to a cattle and swine herder.

At the time of his capture, Succat was unconvinced about following Jesus. By the age of 15, the troubled boy was given to the earthly pleasures of lust, hate, and deceit, and he ignored the teachings of his father, a respected church leader. Succat believed this selfish incredulity doomed him, albeit temporarily: "It was according to our deserts, because we drew back from God and kept not His precepts."

But during his six years of harsh captivity, wearing rags for clothing and with minimal shelter from pounding rains and frigid nights, he soon gave his life to God. During long evenings of endless hunger and immense suffering, he would hear the voice of his mother and father urging him to follow Jesus. Finally, he began to listen rather than just hear them. And at last, he realized there was something more to life than just himself.

Gazing into the starry heavens, he said to God on the evening of his conversion, "I will arise, and go to my Father." Soon after, he escaped and at last returned to his homeland, ready to follow heaven's call. Invigorated by his new devotion, Succat found and joined a church whose voice in history is unfortunately, though not surprisingly, silent to the general public.

Against the grain of the day's religious teachings, the Celtic Church not only kept the Sabbath as holy, they followed God's health laws and practiced baptism by immersion. They believed God's Law was paramount, and they would only give their allegiance to Christ. In short, they believed there was no difference between obeying the Law and ultimate morality—faithfully obeying God's Word was the ultimate sign of their love and devotion.

Succat quickly rose in the ranks of this church, fighting against the onset of paganism from the outlying Briton isles and Europe. Sometime in his late twenties, he began to dream of the green island he once regretfully called home. He dreamed of how the heathens there suffered under economic and spiritual poverty—and eventually he believed God was calling him to return to Erin, which once held him prisoner, to set it free with His Word. He followed without hesitation.

The conversion of the island is both baffling and miraculous. Succat led a band of likeminded believers across the isle, establishing churches that would glorify the kingdom of God by expressing their faith through obedience to the Decalogue. Queen Margaret wrote about this and other "peculiar" practices of the growing Celtic Church, complaining "'They are accustomed ... to neglect reverence for [Sundays]."

Though the major religious leaders of the day threatened, cajoled, and attempted to otherwise provoke allegiance to their doctrines, Succat's church continually turned these temptations away. Because of his strict adherence to God's desires, Succat is believed to be directly responsible for the establishment of more than 350 churches and the conversion of over 120,000 converts.

In the centuries to follow, Succat's legacy as a faithful Sabbath-keeper would quickly be shrouded with half-truths and mysticism due to the eventual overthrow of the Celtic Church. (The victors attempted to change history.) Indeed, the ire of all of Europe eventually besieged the tiny, peculiar island until it capitulated and adopted more culturally acceptable norms under force.

Succat is still revered and celebrated as few others—he is as much a cultural icon today as he was when he conquered a nation for Christ. Succat is worthy of remembrance and honor—though he, throughout his writings, directed all the glory to his Savior. Sadly, the truth

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Amazing Facts about St. Patrick

Patrick believed that Christianity should be founded with the home and the family as its strength. Too often the Christian organizations of that age were centered in celibacy. This was not true of the Irish Church and its Celtic daughters in Great Britain, Scotland, and on the Continent. The Celtic Church, as organized and developed under Patrick, permitted its clergy to marry.<sup>19</sup>

The absence of celibacy in the Celtic Church gives added proof to the fact that the believers had no connection with the church at Rome. Thus Dr. J. H. Todd writes: "He [Patrick] says nothing of Rome, or of having been commissioned by Pope Celestine. He attributed his Irish apostleship altogether to an inward call, which he regarded as a divine command."<sup>20</sup>

One of the strongest proofs that Patrick did not belong to papal Christianity is found in the historical fact that for centuries Rome made every effort to destroy the church Patrick had founded. Jules Michelet writes of Boniface, who was the pope's apostle to the Germans about two hundred years after Patrick: "His chief hatred is to the Scots [the name equally given to the Scotch and Irish], and he especially condemns their allowing priests to marry."<sup>21</sup>

Patrick rejected the union of church and state. More than behind his powerful work is twisted and dimly lit, but that doesn't mean the real truth can't be told. Ireland prospered in peace for centuries as it obeyed God's commands by Succat's lead. After it incorporated unholy doctrines and practices, it fell into despair and was subjugated by oppression and cruelty. If you haven't guessed it yet, Succat is better known by the name Patrick of Ireland—or even more familiarly, Saint Patrick.

For more information and documentation on this topic read chapter #7 of Truth Triumphant (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 5th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

one hundred years had passed since the first world council at Nicaea had united the church with the empire. Patrick rejected this model. He followed the lesson taught in John's Gospel when Christ refused to be made a king. Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world." (John 18: 36.)

For more information and documentation on this topic read chapter #7 of Truth Triumphant (a .pdf viewer is required)

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

COLUMBA AND THE CHURCH IN SCOTLAND

Columba possessed a superior education. He was familiar with Latin and Greek, secular and ecclesiastical history, the principles of jurisprudence, the law of nations, the science of medicine, and the laws of the mind. He was the greatest Irishman of the Celtic race in mental powers; and he founded in Iona, the most learned school in the British Islands, and probably in Western Europe for a long period.<sup>1</sup>

WHILE the long night of the Dark Ages covered Europe and darkness covered the people, the lamp of truth was shining brightly in Scotland and Ireland. Here arose the commanding figure of Columba. Here, the virile churches, one in faith, but covering two separate islands, proclaimed the truth. Ireland on the western, and Scotland on the northwestern, brink of the known world, stood like a wall to resist the advancing menace of religious tyranny. Scotland in particular, like the Waldenses in northern Italy, found in her rugged mountains strong fortresses to assist her.

Columba, an Irishman, was born in Donegal in 521, and both of his parents were of royal stock. He founded a memorable college on the small island of Iona which was a lighthouse of truth in Europe for centuries. That the Celtic, not the Latin, race populated the British Isles was a determining factor, for the Christian churches in which Patrick had been reared received their doctrine, not from Rome, but from their brethren of the same faith in Asia Minor. Here was the link which connected the faith of Patrick and Columba with primitive Christianity.<sup>2</sup> The farthest lands touching the Atlantic saw the rise of a vigorous apostolic Christianity not connected with the Church of Rome, but independent of it.

The Scottish resistance to the growing European hierarchy had its origins in the work of Columba. About the time he left the schools established by Patrick in Ireland to go to Scotland, the reactionary Council of Constantinople (A.D. 553) was being held. At that council, the churches of the Roman Empire surrendered their freedom to the Papacy. Offended at the unscriptural innovations of medieval European compromises, four large communities in the East - the Armenian, the Coptic, the Jacobite, and the Church of the East (often falsely called the Nestorian Church) - separated from the western hierarchy.<sup>3</sup> The news of these revolutionary happenings had come to the ears of the Celtic believers throughout the British Isles. Scotland and Ireland in the west, with the same spirit of independence which was manifested by these eastern communions toward imperial Christianity, girded themselves to meet the crisis.

In dedicating his life to the spread of Bible religion, Columba, who was of royal descent, is said to have renounced his chance to the Irish throne.<sup>4</sup> He was a descendant of Niall of the Nine Hostages, an Irish king so mighty that it is said of him that he held hostages for the nine kingdoms he had subdued.<sup>5</sup> Columba was also related to the renowned family of Riada who conquered for themselves a principality in northeastern Scotia (the ancient name for Ireland). The new state was Dalriada, from Dal, meaning "inheritance," or the kingdom of the Riadians. This relationship stood Columba well in hand when he decided to make his headquarters in Iona, because a half a century before this, members of the Dalradian clan had crossed over from Ireland and had secured for themselves a goodly portion of west central Caledonia (the former name for Scotland), and called this new kingdom also Dalriada.<sup>6</sup> This act brought the Scots from Ireland, or Scotia. As, in the course of time, the Scots of the second kingdom of Dalriada were to conquer the large kingdom in Caledonia of the Picts to the north and west of them and then the kingdom of the Britons, or Strathclyde, to the immediate south of them, naturally the name Scotland came to ancient Caledonia.<sup>7</sup> For several centuries the two Dalriada kingdoms, one in Ireland and one in Scotland, existed

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

- THE EDUCATION OF COLUMBA
- LABORING IN IRELAND
- JOURNEYS INTO SCOTLAND
- THE MISSION CENTER AT IONA
- DOCTRINES OF THE CHURCH IN SCOTLAND
- BIBLE MANUSCRIPTS AND BIBLE STUDIES
- THE CENTURY AFTER COLUMBA'S DEATH
- BATTLING AGAINST THE NORTHMEN AND THE PAPACY
- QUEEN MARGARET AND THE SCOTTISH CHURCH
- PROBLEMS OF THE COUNCIL
- SCOTLAND SUBSEQUENT TO THE PAPAL PENETRATION

contemporaneously. Thus this clan through Columba not only gave the spiritual leadership to Scotland, but later through their warriors also gained the political overlordship of it.

In the providence of God, Columba appeared at this moment to mold these significant revolutions. Iona, the burial ground of kings and nobles, a sacred seat of the heathen Druidic learning and religion, became the center of the Culdee Church and the college of Columba. Here this great apostle developed a new chapter of Bible Christianity among a warlike and cultured pagan people.

THE EDUCATION OF COLUMBA

At his birth Columba, it is said, was given two names - Crimthann, "wolf," and Colum, "dove."<sup>8</sup> However, in his later days of supreme devotion to Christ and to Bible truth, he was usually known by the second, Colum. In his early youth, the fame of Ireland's colleges, the outgrowth of Patrick's early organization and labors, was known far and wide. Columba, it is usually related, was first taught by Finnian of Moville. After this he removed to Leinster where he placed himself under the instruction of the bard, Gemman.<sup>9</sup>

Probably, the most outstanding of all Columba's teachers was the renowned Finnian of Clonard, widely known for his learning. He was popular, and he placed the Bible at the foundation of all studies. According to Archbishop Ussher, his institute had an enrollment of three thousand pupils and was likened to a university.<sup>10</sup> Many who came there to receive their education gave themselves to the ministry of the gospel.<sup>11</sup> It was at Clonard that Columba became especially skillful in the art of copying and illuminating manuscripts. There he remained several years until the urgency of his spirit to help humanity, to raise up churches, and to plant mission stations sent him upon extensive labors.

LABORING IN IRELAND

Columba was only twenty-five years of age when he built the church at Derry, in northern Ireland, where later he planted a school. This place is now the well-known Londonderry. The youthful zeal and accomplishments of this missionary greatly impressed the historian Bede who makes special mention of Derry.<sup>12</sup>

During the seven years following the establishment of Derry, Columba founded many churches and Biblical institutes. He is credited with bringing into existence during this period more than three hundred churches. About one-third of these were the so-called "monasteries," or church schools. Happy in his activity for God, he was constantly traveling. The sick and infirm blessed his name, while the poor always felt that in him they had a friend. Tall of stature, he had a powerful voice which could be heard at a great distance. No journey was too great, no labor too arduous for him to undertake while serving the needs of the people. In Ireland, where the chieftains were constantly waging war against one another, Columba commanded respect enough to travel in safety. He was devoted to the study of the Scriptures. His biographer mentions that he spent much time in writing, that is, in transcribing portions of the Bible. He is credited with having copied three hundred New Testaments with his own hands. He was the author, not only of Latin hymns, but also of poems in his native Irish tongue. A careful examination of his writings shows that in many places he uses the Itala version of the Bible. Of him Adamnan says: "He could not pass the space even of a single hour without applying himself either to prayer, or reading, or writing, or else to some manual labor."<sup>13</sup>

JOURNEYS INTO SCOTLAND

There are probably three reasons why Columba chose Scotland as his mission field. In the first place, a large part of the island, especially the country of the Picts, was still pagan. Columba longed for a mission field and a life of service. Secondly, about fifty years previous to this his own countrymen, the Dalradians, had won a kingdom in the west central portion of what is now called Scotland. Here was a door open in a dark land. Thirdly, Columba saw that he could there establish a center which would be mighty in its influence not only in Scotland, but also in England, Wales, and Ireland.

After he sailed from his beloved Derry, with about two hundred of his companions, he was tempted to locate on a near-by island, when he discovered that from its highlands he could discern the coasts of Ireland. He then gave the word to sail on. He finally chose the small island of Iona, whose native name was Hy, having the large island of Mull lying between it and the mainland.<sup>14</sup> Here he and his company disembarked in 563. In all probability, the lord of the island of Mull, being a relative of his, granted to him ownership of Iona. His followers held the island for six hundred forty-one years, until they were driven out of it in 1204 by the Benedictine monks.<sup>15</sup>

Pioneering in all its aspects was the story of Iona. Dwellings had to be built; crops had to be planted. In the settlement of Iona and of other centers founded by Columba and his disciples, apparently no effort was made for pomp and ostentation. These simple missionaries allowed no entanglements either in politics or worldly affairs to hinder them from obeying the heavenly vision. Although Columba was needed to direct and oversee the establishment of these new ventures for Christ, he found time, nevertheless, to convert many persons on the large neighboring island of Mull.

He founded a Christian school and training institute which later attained the highest reputation for the pursuit of Biblical study and science.<sup>16</sup> His work made this center so venerated that its abbots had the control of the bordering tribes and churches, and even their pastors (then called bishops), acknowledged the authority of these abbots. He built up in Iona a glorious center of evangelization which has made the island famous for all time. Here are buried not only kings of Scotland, but also kings of Ireland, France, Denmark, and Norway. Even to this day thousands of visitors come annually to this hallowed soil.<sup>17</sup>

THE MISSION CENTER AT IONA

The spirit of God wrought mightily in Columba, and in humility he chose to dwell in a rude shelter of pioneer construction. The humble abode of his energetic and learned co-workers at Iona proves that in their hearts they had brought into subjection the restless spirit of the age. Even a generation later when one of the renowned apostles of Iona erected another mission station in northwestern England, it is related that, "he built a church after the manner of the Scots, not of stone, but of hewn oak, and covered it with reeds."<sup>18</sup> Unlike the ambassadors of imperial Christianity, who loved the associations of capitals and courts, these missionaries chose the wilderness if it might be their happy lot to serve God.

Much ground was required to support the Iona mission. Many acres of land, orchards, and meadows were maintained by the students and faculty who combined manual labor with study. A considerable portion of the day was spent in gathering and winnowing the grain, feeding the lambs and the calves, working in the gardens, in the bakehouse, and in mechanical pursuits. These duties were alternated with classes of instruction by learned teachers and also by spending hours in prayer and in singing psalms. The care with which these theological students were trained to be the guardians of learning as well as the teachers of the gospel may be gathered from the fact that frequently eighteen years of study were required of them before they were ordained.<sup>19</sup> In other words, Iona was not a monastery, but a great mission institute. It can be likened to the schools of the prophets of the Old Testament, or to the wonderful training centers of the Church of the East.

DOCTRINES OF THE CHURCH IN SCOTLAND

The fact that Ireland lay outside the bounds of the Roman Empire kept it from the saint worship, image worship, and relic worship which flooded the state church at that time. And at Iona there is no record of the theological students' digging for relics, or sending to Rome for relics which were reputed to have belonged to some martyred Christian. There were no processions in which relics were displayed, no burning of incense or candles before a tomb. In fact, at the time when the apostle to the Picts had erected his spiritual lighthouse in Scottish Dalriada, England had yet been untouched by papal monasteries of the continental type.

Happily, Columba had more than a generation in which to work before the influence of rulers on the Continent brought another type of Christianity to the shores of England. He built his church on the Bible and the Bible only. He could look to the authentic copy of the Confession of Patrick, his great predecessor, who in this short document had used twenty-five quotations from the Holy Scriptures.<sup>20</sup> Columba taught his followers never to receive as religious truth any doctrine not sustained by proofs drawn from the Sacred Writings. Bede expressly declares that Columba sailed away from Ireland to Scotland for the definite purpose of converting heathen to the word of God.<sup>21</sup> It is said of Baithen, the successor of Columba at Iona, that he had no equal this side of the Alps in his knowledge of the Sacred Scriptures and in his understanding of science.<sup>22</sup> The Columban system of institutions was a confederation of spiritual centers held together by invisible bonds of grace and truth, each locality looking to the brotherhood as the final source of authority. It had no pope, and it had no descending steps of clergy like archbishop, bishop, priest, and deacon. The headman of each locality was generally the abbot of the mission institute.<sup>23</sup> These centers of spiritual life and training grew into well-organized institutions splendidly adapted to the spreading of Bible truths.

For many centuries Iona was recognized as the leading center, whose chief officer besides being called an abbot, was also known as the coarb, or spiritual successor, of Columba.<sup>24</sup> While there was a term resembling the word "bishop" sometimes used to designate the clergy, it did not mean a bishop in the twentieth-century acceptance of the term.<sup>25</sup> The word "Culdee," meaning "man of God," was later used to designate the Columban church.

Maclauchlan states that, generally speaking, most of the features which can be shown to have characterized the Scottish Church, even at the later period, were such that no Protestant could censure them.<sup>26</sup> Success attended these consecrated men as they pioneered in the conversion of the northern and western parts of Scotland, and Christianized the center of Scotland and the eastern portion of England by Iona's colonies. The remains of places of worship, which still stand in the north and are found to extend to the farthest distance of the Hebrides, testify to the all-pervading influence of the Culdee Church.<sup>27</sup>

There was a continual stream of missionaries from the churches of Ireland and Scotland flowing toward the continental church, of which we have ample evidence in the numerous Gaelic MSS. belonging to these churches found in continental monasteries."<sup>28</sup>

BIBLE MANUSCRIPTS AND BIBLE STUDIES

If it be true that Columba with his own hand copied three hundred New Testaments, as well as portions of the Old Testament, what must have been the output of Iona when all the workers assigned to the making of manuscripts produced their contribution? It must not be forgotten that Columba, while supervising the institutions in Scotland, never relinquished the care of the many training centers he had established in Ireland during the first forty years of his life. It is small wonder that the Irish and Scottish Churches covered the British Isles and the continent of Europe with their thousands of missionary centers in a short period. Lucy Menzies, in her life of Columba, gives the following excellent presentation of the copying done by the Scottish Church:

In this as in everything connected with the spread of Christianity in Scotland, we have to look to Ireland for the history and development of the art. Letters were known in Ireland before St. Patrick's day; he used to instruct his disciples in the art of writing. The characters and designs used by these early scribes were probably of Byzantine origin and would come to Ireland from Ravenna through Gaul. The Irish adapted them to their own idea of beauty, but though early Irish manuscripts have features peculiar to Ireland, similar interlacings are found in early Italian churches, especially in those of Ravenna. These interlacings symbolized life and immortality, having neither beginning nor end. Designs of interlaced ribbon work, plaited rushes, bands, cords, and knots are common to the earliest art of various peoples, and when the first missionaries came to Ireland bringing copies of the Gospels, they naturally brought this art with them. The object of the writing was, of course, to multiply copies of the Scriptures.... There must have been at Iona a separate room or hut where the writing materials were kept, a library where those engaged in transcribing the Scriptures might work, where the polaires containing the finished copies hung on the walls and where the valuable manuscripts were kept."<sup>29</sup>

The youth in the Culdee schools clung to the fundamental Christian doctrines, such as the divinity of Christ, baptism, the atonement, inspiration of the Scriptures, and the prophecies connected with the last days. They did not accept the doctrines of infallibility, celibacy, transubstantiation, the confessional, the mass, relic worship, image adoration, and the primacy of Peter. As Killen says:

The monastery was, in fact, a college where all the branches of learning then known were diligently cultivated; where astronomy was studied; where Greek as well as Latin literature entered into the curriculum; where the sons of kings and nobles received tuition; and where pious and promising youths were training up for the sacred office.... But theology was the subject with which the attention of the teachers of the monastery was chiefly occupied; the Bible was their daily textbook; their pupils were required to commit much of it to memory.<sup>30</sup>

The last hours of Columba are recorded as follows:

"Having continued his labors in Scotland thirty-four years, he clearly and openly foretold his death, and on Saturday, the ninth of June, said to his disciple Diermit: "This day is called the Sabbath, that is, the day of rest, and such will it truly be to me; for it will put an end to my labors."<sup>31</sup>

THE CENTURY AFTER COLUMBA'S DEATH

It is written of Saul in the divine word that "them went with him a band of men, whose hearts God had touched." In like manner some members of the noble galaxy surrounding Columba were so filled with the flame of living fire that they subdued unconquerable warriors of that northern land for Christ. Standing first among these contemporaries of Columba was Baithen. Unwilling always to be sheltered under the wing of Iona, the parent institution, he obtained leave to sail westward to the island of Tiree where he built a subordinate training center. Then, after having spread the influence of Iona over northwestern Scotland, he returned to the original center to become its head after Columba died. Although privileged to occupy the abbot's seat for only four years prior to his death, he obtained widespread fame for remarkable learning and courageous labors.

It would be thrilling to read how Kenneth, Ciaran, Colmonnel, Donnan, Molaise, and others pushed their way southward into the promontories of Kintyre; to the Western Isles, or Hebrides; to the beautiful counties of Fife, Forfarshire, Aberdeen, which look out toward the waters of Norway; and above all, to northern Scotland, especially the counties of Caithness, Sutherland, and Ross. Here the members of the Celtic Church converted the heathen and built churches; they founded institutions copied after the model of Iona; they distributed Bibles, taught the people to read, and fired their converts with their own missionary zeal. If Iona was the center of the northern Picts, so Abemethy became the same to the southern Picts. They pushed farther south into the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Northumbria. As early as the middle of the seventh century, or about one hundred years after the founding of Iona, several large and influential mission schools had sprung up in the British Isles.<sup>32</sup> Probably next to Iona in fame is Lindisfarne on the northeastern coast of England. This spiritual center is prominently connected with Aidan whose work is considered in Chapter 12.

BATTLING AGAINST THE NORTHMEN AND THE PAPACY The four hundred years following the establishment of Iona are noted for three events in England and Scotland. First, there was intense rivalry and warfare between the seven kingdoms of England, known as the Heptarchy, and the three kingdoms of Scotland. Second, all three countries-England, Ireland, and Scotland, harassed, invaded, and in the case of England and Ireland, conquered by the Northmen, especially the Danes. Third, and probably the most far-reaching event, was the intense struggle waged between the Papacy and the Celtic Church. In Scotland the kingdoms of the Picts and the Britons were finally absorbed by the ever-increasing Scots. If England suffered such serious consequences at the hands of the Normans, and Ireland at the hands of the Danes, it can readily be seen how difficult must have been the struggle of the Celtic Church to hold its own against the power of the Papacy when backed by the all-powerful states of the Continent.

Within the one hundred twenty-five years after the death of Columba, the Picts had been swayed enough by the mighty influence of Rome to adopt the Roman Easter. Nevertheless, the change in Easter did not represent a complete surrender to the Papacy. About the same time Nechtan, the Pietish king, expelled the Columban clergy. When, however, the conquering Kenneth MacAlpine, king of the Scots, in 846, united under the one crown the Scots and the Picts, he brought the Columban clergy back in honor. He was the king who removed the seat of the government from Iona to Forteviot, the ancient capital of the Pictish kingdom. In his day the Danes were furiously assaulting the coasts, making inroads among the Western Isles, while they practically seized supreme power in both Ireland and England. Fierce warriors as they were, they soon learned that they were no match for the Scots. Scotland must have been a wealthy country at this time because, in those northern latitudes, it attracted the century-long invasion of the Northmen. It is interesting to add that in the midst of these commotions Andrew became the patron saint of Scotland, while the thistle was chosen for its national emblem. The latter was selected because of a historic incident: When the Danes were about to make a surprise attack, a warrior planting his foot on the thistle uttered a cry of pain loud enough to be heard by the fighting Scots.

Although the Danes frequently burned and pillaged Iona, the veneration for it was so great and the pilgrimages made to it so many that it could not long remain in a devastated condition. It was a learned and righteous clergy which directed the Culdee Church, and they were so beloved by the people that this communion was deeply rooted in the affections of all. It must be kept in mind that through the two centuries that the Northmen fought to plant themselves in Scotland, the Danes were still heathen. It is repeatedly recorded how devout kings, warriors, and people would seize the remains of Columba and carry them to a place of safety, sometimes in Ireland, and sometimes further east in Scotland. For some time the bishop of Armagh in Ireland stood forth as the successor of both Columba and Patrick, the two offices often being united in the same person. Through these years as one kingdom sought to conquer another, the warring powers would naturally call for allies. Here was the chance of the Papacy. As the centuries passed, the Celtic Church and the civil rulers who were pro-Celtic would look across to the Continent, but they could discern no great nation which had not made an alliance with Rome.

The dates, 1058 and 1066, stand for startling changes. There were only eight years between the time when Malcolm III became king of Scotland, and the year that William the Norman conquered England. By the time Malcolm III had reached the throne, the aggressive Scots had succeeded in absorbing Strathclyde, the northwest kingdom of the Britons. Vigorously they had extended their territory southward to the River Tweed. As the Northmen were still in possession of the Western Isles, they had driven a wedge between Ireland and Scotland. Since it was the Papacy that abetted the Norman invasion of England by William, the church of Columba in Scotland found herself alone without any strong political backing in Ireland, England, or on the Continent.

Moreover, Malcolm III, or Malcolm Canmore (that is, "large head"), had been educated in England in company with the Roman Catholic king, Edward the Confessor. When he came to the throne of Scotland he was the least imbued with the Celtic atmosphere and Celtic ideas of any of his predecessors. Yet as late as 1058, the Scottish Church remained largely as it had been modeled by its early teachers. But the crowning of Malcolm brought these believers in early Christianity into a fierce struggle. Malcolm III took Margaret as his second wife, a girl who had been determined to enter a nunnery. She was a member of one of the former royal houses of England. In exile in Hungary, she and her brothers. were brought up in a strong Catholic atmosphere. Malcolm III was passionately devoted to her because she had renounced her plan to become a nun to marry him. However, in return she took charge of religious affairs and, instructed by some of the ablest men of the papal church from England and the Continent, set in motion the force which for three centuries placed the church of Columba in the shadows.

QUEEN MARGARET AND THE SCOTTISH CHURCH

Margaret found the Scottish Church a church of the people; she determined to make it the church of the monarch. The passion of her life might be summed up in one word - Rome. As Dr. Barnett writes: "Hungary was a strongly Roman Catholic country.... Here we touch the first vital source from which Queen Margaret drew her passionate attachment to the Roman Church."<sup>33</sup> And again he writes, "Zeal for the church literally consumed her."<sup>34</sup> What her purposes were in marrying Malcolm III, king of Scotland, this same writer states further, "Margaret very soon after her marriage is setting about a movement to Romanize and Anglicize the ancient Celtic Church in Scotland."<sup>35</sup> Still another quotation from the same author helps to clarify the vast and determined purpose of this queen:

"It will be readily understood, therefore, that this saintly queen who had been brought up among the comparative magnificence of monastic religion, first in Hungary, and then in England where buildings like Westminster Abbey were being conceived, would be anxious to bring the church in the land of her adoption into line with all-powerful Rome."<sup>36</sup>

The contest which now opened was a strife between the throne and the people. In herself the queen possessed the weapon of a keen intellect, a strong memory, a readiness in subtle expression, and a polemic training in the defense of papal doctrines. She also brought to the battle a group of monastic scholars who could both prompt and protect her in her attacks on the Celtic Church. When Margaret landed on the shores of Fife with her retinue, the people witnessed the largest vessels ever seen on Caledonian shores. The inhabitants of these rural glades beheld the beauty of the Saxon princess. However, they placed a greater value upon the grace of God than upon the queen's rubies and diamonds. Both the Scriptures and the life and deeds of Columba had taught them the love of the spiritual.

To destroy the glory of Columba was impossible. Margaret might as well attempt to degrade the apostle Paul. In five hundred years the love of Scotland for Columba had not dulled. A more feasible avenue to success would be to legislate against the religious customs of the Celtic Church. Margaret never hesitated to unite church and state. Like Constantine, she joined together that which Christ had put asunder. Beginning with a Sunday law, she proceeded to the demolition of the Celtic Church. How little does the public suspect that religious legislation to enforce Easter and Sunday has often been the method of choking the life out of a liberty-loving church.

This procedure was used by Margaret. The queen called an ecclesiastical congress, and for three days she sat in the chair. She argued, cajoled, commanded, and within a soft glove manipulated an iron hand. The blunt, impatient, warlike king stood by her side with his hand on the hilt of the sword. Did not the emperor Constantine support the episcopal chair at the great Council of Nicaea, in 325, when a pompous church became the spouse of the Roman Empire? Did not King Oswy preside in northern England at the Council of Whitby (A.D. 664), when a terrible blow was struck at the Celtic Church amid the Anglo-Saxons? And so Malcolm's fervent love for his consort led him to place the full power of the state behind the queen.

PROBLEMS OF THE COUNCIL

Though details are lacking, it is not difficult to picture the leaders of Columba's church in Scotland as, for three days, they were obliged to listen to the proceedings of Margaret's council. There were points of difference as is recorded in her Life, written by her priestly confessor, Turgot.<sup>37</sup> The first two points were relative to the age long controversy about Easter. It was all a matter of religious opinion, with which the government had no right to concern itself. As to the third point, on the celebration of the mass, some authorities think this was an indignant threat, because the Culdees conducted the services of the Lord's Supper not in Latin, as Rome did, but in the native language.

The question of Sabbath and Sunday was particularly contested. As shown previously in quotations from Drs. Flick and Barnett,<sup>38</sup> the traditional practice of the Celtic Church was to observe Saturday instead of Sunday as the day of rest. This position is supported by a host of authors. The Roman Catholic historian, Bellesheim, gives the claim of the queen and describes the practice of the Scots as follows:

The queen further protested against the prevailing abuse of Sunday desecration. "Let us," she said, "venerate the Lord's day, inasmuch as upon it our Savior rose from the dead: let us do not servile work on that day."...The Scots in this matter had no doubt kept up the traditional practice of the ancient monastic Church of Ireland, which observed Saturday rather than Sunday as a day of rest."<sup>39</sup> Andrew Lang writing upon the general practice of the Celtic Church says: "They worked on Sunday, but kept Saturday in a sabbatical manner."<sup>40</sup> Another author states:

It seems to have been customary in the Celtic churches of early times, in Ireland as well as Scotland, to keep Saturday the Jewish Sabbath, as a day of rest from labor. They obeyed the fourth commandment literally upon the seventh day of the week."<sup>41</sup> The historian Skene in commenting upon the work of Queen Margaret also reveals the prominence of the Sabbath question as follows:

Her next point was that they did not duly reverence the Lord's day, but in this latter instance they seemed to have followed a custom of which we find traces in the early monastic Church of Ireland, by which they held Saturday to be the Sabbath on which they rested from all their labors, and on Sunday on the Lord's day, they celebrated the resurrection."<sup>42</sup>

As pointed out in the story of Patrick, the opposition to the Ten Commandments failed to recognize that the culminating reason for the death of Christ upon the cross was that while becoming man's substitute He was to uphold the moral law. The papal church denies that it was as man's substitute and surety that Christ died on the cross.<sup>43</sup> Columba, however, did recognize this truth. A verse from the poem by him addressed to his Redeemer reads as follows:

As Thou didst suffer on the cross
To save a guilty race
Show me Thy power, with Thy love
And glory grant, with grace <sup>44</sup>

Nothing so quickly leads to persecution as Sunday laws. In a land like Scotland there could be the Anglo-Saxon sect observing Sunday, the Celtic Church consecrating Saturday from the days of the apostles, Moslems observing Friday, and unbelievers celebrating no day. A law which would single out any one certain day of the week and exalt it to sacredness would be sectarian legislation. Soon the favored sect would indulge in feelings of superiority and point the finger of scorn at those conscientiously observing another day. Bitterness would set in speedily, followed by persecution.

In this way the Culdees were ordered to conform or to depart. When King David, the son of Margaret, had confiscated their Loch Leven lands, he ordered them to conform to the rites of the Sunday-keeping monks, on whom he had conferred the dispossessed property, or to be expelled.<sup>45</sup> Needless to say, they were expelled. This was in the year 1130.

SCOTLAND SUBSEQUENT TO THE PAPAL PENETRATION

The unscrupulousness of the victors in destroying or in misrepresenting the records of the past has placed a false face over the true story of the Celtic Church.<sup>46</sup> The gulf between that church and the Papacy was great even as late as 1120. A severe difference arose between King Alexander, another son of Margaret, and Eadmer, a newly appointed head to the bishopric of Saint Andrews. When he asked counsel of two Canterbury monks, they made a remarkable statement, "For they say that Eadmer cannot accommodate himself to the usages of the Scottish Church without dishonoring his character and hazarding his salvation."<sup>47</sup> Although Rome admits that as late as 1120 the usages of the Culdees were so far from those of Rome that a bishop would endanger his eternal salvation to follow them, yet at the same time she did to Scotland's hero as she had done to Patrick - enrolled Columba as a Roman Saint.

It is a remarkable fact that those very regions in which the Iro-Scottish mission work was most successful during the sixth and seventh centuries were precisely the regions in which the evangelical sects of the later times flourished most.<sup>48</sup>

The transformations in character and practices wrought by Columba and his successors elevated the condition of women, brought loving attention to the children, produced Bible-loving believers, brought proper relations between church and state, and breathed an enduring missionary life into a vigorous western people. In Scotland the seeds were sown plentifully and deep. There was a rich evangelical subsoil. This enrichment endured long, although the growth was later covered by a layer of papal practices and traditions. When the Reformation came to this realm, it was to a large extent a reversal of the royal establishment of popery in Scotland. The Papacy had been unable to wholly exterminate the faith and simpler system of the ancient Culdees, especially in those districts which were the earliest abodes and latest retreats of primitive Christianity. As there were reformers in nearly every country in Europe before the Reformation, it could not be far wrong to conclude that they also continued to exist in that country which was the last to register its public protest against the usurpation of the Church of Rome.

"No religion ever has been destroyed by persecution if the people confessing it were not destroyed." The ancient faith of Columba was handed down from father to son enshrouded in lasting love and affection. The sufferings which the Scots underwent at the hand of the usurping religion also deepened their faith even as expression deepens impression. Encroachments of the Romanists were firmly resisted. As appears later, individuals of the Waldensian communion as well as followers of Wycliffe were found in Scotland during the days of papal supremacy there. The final and permanent uprising against religious tyranny came when the Reformation secured this land as one of her greatest allies. It is not an injustice to history to say that Scotland twice saved the world for the Reformation. At length the Church in the Wilderness triumphed, due in no small degree to the impetus given it by the wonderful organization and godly life of Columba.

To see the footnotes or read this in its original source see chapter #8 of The Truth Triumphant (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 6th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Waldenses - A reflection of the church of the first centuries

Amid the gloom that settled upon the earth during the long period of papal supremacy, the light of truth could not be wholly extinguished. In every age there were witnesses for God--men who cherished faith in Christ as the only mediator between God and man, who held the Bible as the only rule of life, and who hallowed the true Sabbath. How much the world owes to these men, posterity will never know. They were branded as heretics, their motives impugned, their characters maligned, their writings suppressed, misrepresented, or mutilated. Yet they stood firm, and from age to age maintained their faith in its purity, as a sacred heritage for the generations to come.

The history of God's people during the ages of darkness that followed upon Rome's supremacy is written in heaven, but they have little place in human records. Few traces of their existence can be found, except in the accusations of their persecutors. It was the policy of Rome to obliterate every trace of dissent from her doctrines or decrees. Everything heretical, whether persons or writings, she sought to destroy. Expressions of doubt, or questions as to the authority of papal dogmas, were enough to forfeit the life of rich or poor, high or low. Rome endeavored also to destroy every record of her cruelty toward dissenters. Papal councils decreed that books and writings containing such records should be committed to the flames. Before the invention of printing, books were few in number, and in a form not favorable for preservation; therefore there was little to prevent the Romanists from carrying out their purpose.

No church within the limits of Romish jurisdiction was long left undisturbed in the enjoyment of freedom of conscience. No sooner had the papacy obtained power than she stretched out her arms to crush all that refused to acknowledge her sway, and one after another the churches submitted to her dominion.

In Great Britain primitive Christianity had very early taken root. The gospel received by the Britons in the first centuries was then uncorrupted by Romish apostasy. Persecution from pagan emperors, which extended even to these far-off shores, was the only gift that the first churches of Britain received from Rome. Many of the Christians, fleeing from persecution in England, found refuge in Scotland; thence the truth was carried to Ireland, and in all these countries it was received with gladness.

When the Saxons invaded Britain, heathenism gained control. The conquerors disdained to be instructed by their slaves, and the Christians were forced to retreat to the mountains and the wild moors. Yet the light, hidden for a time, continued to burn. In Scotland, a century later, it shone out with a brightness that extended to far-distant lands. From Ireland came the pious Columba and his collaborators, who, gathering about them the scattered believers on the lonely island of Iona, made this the center of their missionary labors. Among these evangelists was an observer of the Bible Sabbath, and thus this truth was introduced among the people. A school was established at Iona, from which missionaries went out, not only to Scotland and England, but to Germany, Switzerland, and even Italy.

But Rome had fixed her eyes on Britain, and resolved to bring it under her supremacy. In the sixth century her missionaries undertook the conversion of the heathen Saxons. They were received with favor by the proud barbarians, and they induced many thousands to profess the Romish faith. As the work progressed, the papal leaders and their converts encountered the primitive Christians. A striking contrast was presented. The latter were simple, humble, and Scriptural in character, doctrine, and manners, while the former

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

"History of the Waldenses"

Their theology included the atoning death and justifying righteousness

of Christ, the trinity, the fall of man, the incarnation of the Son, the perpetual authority of the decalogue as given by God, the need of divine grace in order to good works, the necessity of holiness, the institution of the ministry, the resurrection of the body, and the eternal bliss of heaven.

They also held that "the Pope's pardons were a cheat; that purgatory was a fable; that relics were simply rotten bones which had belonged to one knew not whom; that to go on a pilgrimage served no end, save to empty one's purse; that flesh might be eaten any day if one's appetite served him; that holy water was not a whit more efficacious than rain water; and that prayer in a barn was just as effectual as if offered in a church. They were accused, moreover, of having scoffed at the doctrine of transubstantiation, and of having spoken blasphemously of Rome as the harlot of the Apocalypse." (page 17) They were labled by the inquisition as "the most dangerous of all heretics, because the most ancient." (Page 10)

Learn more about this much maligned group of people whom God used to preserve freedom and the light of truth in the dark ages.

Order the Book

manifested the superstition, pomp, and arrogance of popery. The emissary of Rome demanded that these Christian churches acknowledge the supremacy of the sovereign pontiff. The Britons meekly replied that they desired to love all men, but that the pope was not entitled to supremacy in the church, and they could render to him only that submission which was due to every follower of Christ. Repeated attempts were made to secure their allegiance to Rome; but these humble Christians, amazed at the pride displayed by her emissaries, steadfastly replied that they knew no other master than Christ. Now the true spirit of the papacy was revealed. Said the Romish leader: "If you will not receive brethren who bring you peace, you shall receive enemies who will bring you war. If you will not unite with us in showing the Saxons the way of life, you shall receive from them the stroke of death."--J. H. Merle D'Aubigne, History of the Reformation of the Sixteenth Century, b. 17, ch. 2. These were no idle threats. War, intrigue, and deception were employed against these witnesses for a Bible faith, until the churches of Britain were destroyed, or forced to submit to the authority of the pope.

In lands beyond the jurisdiction of Rome there existed for many centuries bodies of Christians who remained almost wholly free from papal corruption. They were surrounded by heathenism and in the lapse of ages were affected by its errors; but they continued to regard the Bible as the only rule of faith and adhered to many of its truths. These Christians believed in the perpetuity of the law of God and observed the Sabbath of the fourth commandment. Churches that held to this faith and practice existed in Central Africa and among the Armenians of Asia. 64

But of those who resisted the encroachments of the papal power, the Waldenses stood foremost. In the very land where popery had fixed its seat, there its falsehood and corruption were most steadfastly resisted. For centuries the churches of Piedmont maintained their independence; but the time came at last when Rome insisted upon their submission. After ineffectual struggles against her tyranny, the leaders of these churches reluctantly acknowledged the supremacy of the power to which the whole world seemed to pay homage. There were some, however, who refused to yield to the authority of pope or prelate. They were determined to maintain their allegiance to God and to preserve the purity and simplicity of their faith. A separation took place. Those who adhered to the ancient faith now withdrew; some, forsaking their native Alps, raised the banner of truth in foreign lands; others retreated to the secluded glens and rocky fastnesses of the mountains, and there preserved their freedom to worship God.

The faith which for centuries was held and taught by the Waldensian Christians was in marked contrast to the false doctrines put forth from Rome. Their religious belief was founded upon the written word of God, the true system of Christianity. But those humble peasants, in their obscure retreats, shut away from the world, and bound to daily toil among their flocks and their vineyards, had not by themselves arrived at the truth in opposition to the dogmas and heresies of the apostate church. Theirs was not a faith newly received. Their religious belief was their inheritance from their fathers. They contended for the faith of the apostolic church,--"the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Jude 3. "The church in the wilderness," and not the proud hierarchy enthroned in the world's great capital, was the true church of Christ, the guardian of the treasures of truth which God has committed to His people to be given to the world. 65

Among the leading causes that had led to the separation of the true church from Rome was the hatred of the latter toward the Bible Sabbath. As foretold by prophecy, the papal power cast down the truth to the ground. The law of God was trampled in the dust, while the traditions and customs of men were exalted. The churches that were under the rule of the papacy were early compelled to honor the Sunday as a holy day. Amid the prevailing error and superstition, many, even of the true people of God, became so bewildered that while they observed the Sabbath, they refrained from labor also on the Sunday. But this did not satisfy the papal leaders. They demanded not only that Sunday be hallowed, but that the Sabbath be profaned; and they denounced in the strongest language those who dared to show it honor. It was only by fleeing from the power of Rome that any could obey God's law in peace. (See Appendix.)

The Waldenses were among the first of the peoples of Europe to obtain a translation of the Holy Scriptures. (See Appendix.) Hundreds of years before the Reformation they possessed the Bible in manuscript in their native tongue. They had the truth unadulterated, and this rendered them the special objects of hatred and persecution. They declared the Church of Rome to be the apostate Babylon of the Apocalypse, and at the peril of their lives they stood up to resist her corruptions. While, under the pressure of long-continued persecution, some compromised their faith, little by little yielding its distinctive principles, others held fast the truth. Through ages of darkness and apostasy there were Waldenses who denied the supremacy of Rome, who rejected image worship as idolatry, and who kept the true Sabbath. Under the fiercest tempests of opposition they maintained their faith. Though gashed by the Savoyard spear, and scorched by the Romish fagot, they stood unflinchingly for God's word and His honor.

Behind the lofty bulwarks of the mountains--in all ages the refuge of the persecuted and oppressed--the Waldenses 66 found a hiding place. Here the light of truth was kept burning amid the darkness of the Middle Ages. Here, for a thousand years, witnesses for the truth maintained the ancient faith.

God had provided for His people a sanctuary of awful grandeur, befitting the mighty truths committed to their trust. To those faithful exiles the mountains were an emblem of the immutable righteousness of Jehovah. They pointed their children to the heights towering above them in unchanging majesty, and spoke to them of Him with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning, whose word is as enduring as the everlasting hills. God had set fast the mountains and girded them with strength; no arm but that of Infinite Power could move them out of their place. In like manner He had established His law, the foundation of His government in heaven and upon earth. The arm of man might reach his fellow men and destroy their lives; but that arm could as readily uproot the mountains from their foundations, and hurl them into the sea, as it could change one precept of the law of Jehovah, or blot out one of His promises to those who do His will. In their fidelity to His law, God's servants should be as firm as the unchanging hills.

The mountains that girded their lowly valleys were a constant witness to God's creative power, and a never-failing assurance of His protecting care. Those pilgrims learned to love the silent symbols of Jehovah's presence. They indulged no repining because of the hardships of their lot; they were never lonely amid the mountain solitudes. They thanked God that He had provided for them an asylum from the wrath and cruelty of men. They rejoiced in their freedom to worship before Him. Often when pursued by their enemies, the strength of the hills proved a sure defense. From many a lofty cliff they chanted the praise of God, and the armies of Rome could not silence their songs of thanksgiving. 67

Pure, simple, and fervent was the piety of these followers of Christ. The principles of truth they valued above houses and lands, friends, kindred, even life itself. These principles they earnestly sought to impress upon the hearts of the young. From earliest childhood the youth were instructed in the Scriptures and taught to regard sacredly the claims of the law of God. Copies of the Bible were rare; therefore its precious words were committed to memory. Many were able to repeat large portions of both the Old and the New Testament. Thoughts of God were associated alike with the sublime scenery of nature and with the humble blessings of daily life. Little children learned to look with gratitude to God as the giver of every favor and every comfort.

Parents, tender and affectionate as they were, loved their children too wisely to accustom them to self-indulgence. Before them was a life of trial and hardship, perhaps a martyr's death. They were educated from childhood to endure hardness, to submit to control, and yet to think and act for themselves. Very early they were taught to bear responsibilities, to be guarded in speech, and to understand the wisdom of silence. One indiscreet word let fall in the hearing of their enemies might imperil not only the life of the speaker, but the lives of hundreds of his brethren; for as wolves hunting their prey did the enemies of truth pursue those who dared to claim freedom of religious faith.

The Waldenses had sacrificed their worldly prosperity for the truth's sake, and with persevering patience they toiled for their bread. Every spot of tillable land among the mountains was carefully improved; the valleys and the less fertile hillsides were made to yield their increase. Economy and severe self-denial formed a part of the education which the children received as their only legacy. They were taught that God designs life to be a discipline, and that their wants could be supplied only by personal labor, by forethought, care, and faith. The process was laborious and wearisome, but it was 68 wholesome, just what man needs in his fallen state, the school which God has provided for his training and development. While the youth were inured to toil and hardship, the culture of the intellect was not neglected. They were taught that all their powers belonged to God, and that all were to be improved and developed for His service.

The Vaudois churches, in their purity and simplicity, resembled the church of apostolic times. Rejecting the supremacy of the pope and prelate, they held the Bible as the only supreme, infallible authority. Their pastors, unlike the lordly priests of Rome, followed the example of their Master, who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." They fed the flock of God, leading them to the green pastures and living fountains of His holy word. Far from the monuments of human pomp and pride the people assembled, not in magnificent churches or grand cathedrals, but beneath the shadow of the mountains, in the Alpine valleys, or, in time of danger, in some rocky stronghold, to listen to the words of truth from the servants of Christ. The pastors not only preached the gospel, but they visited the sick, catechized the children, admonished the erring, and labored to settle disputes and promote harmony and brotherly love. In times of peace they were sustained by the freewill offerings of the people; but, like Paul the tentmaker, each learned some trade or profession by which, if necessary, to provide for his own support.

From their pastors the youth received instruction. While attention was given to branches of general learning, the Bible was made the chief study. The Gospels of Matthew and John were committed to memory, with many of the Epistles. They were employed also in copying the Scriptures. Some manuscripts contained the whole Bible, others only brief selections, to which some simple explanations of the text were added by those who were able to expound the Scriptures. Thus were brought forth the treasures of truth so long 69 concealed by those who sought to exalt themselves above God.

By patient, untiring labor, sometimes in the deep, dark caverns of the earth, by the light of torches, the Sacred Scriptures were written out, verse by verse, chapter by chapter. Thus the work went on, the revealed will of God shining out like pure gold; how much brighter, clearer, and more powerful because of the trials undergone for its sake only those could realize who were engaged in the work. Angels from heaven surrounded these faithful workers.

Satan had urged on the papal priests and prelates to bury the word of truth beneath the rubbish of error, heresy, and superstition; but in a most wonderful manner it was preserved uncorrupted through all the ages of darkness. It bore not the stamp of man, but the impress of God. Men have been unwearied in their efforts to obscure the plain, simple meaning of the Scriptures, and to make them contradict their own testimony; but like the ark upon the billowy deep, the word of God outrides the storms that threaten it with destruction. As the mine has rich veins of gold and silver hidden beneath the surface, so that all must dig who would discover its precious stores, so the Holy Scriptures have treasures of truth that are revealed only to the earnest, humble, prayerful seeker. God designed the Bible to be a lessonbook to all mankind, in childhood, youth, and manhood, and to be studied through all time. He gave His word to men as a revelation of Himself. Every new truth discerned is a fresh disclosure of the character of its Author. The study of the Scriptures is the means divinely ordained to bring men into closer connection with their Creator and to give them a clearer knowledge of His will. It is the medium of communication between God and man.

While the Waldenses regarded the fear of the Lord as the beginning of wisdom, they were not blind to the importance of a contact with the world, a knowledge of men and of 70 active life, in expanding the mind and quickening the perceptions. From their schools in the mountains some of the youth were sent to institutions of learning in the cities of France or Italy, where was a more extended field for study, thought, and observation than in their native Alps. The youth thus sent forth were exposed to temptation, they witnessed vice, they encountered Satan's wily agents, who urged upon them the most subtle heresies and the most dangerous deceptions. But their education from childhood had been of a character to prepare them for all this.

In the schools whither they went, they were not to make confidants of any. Their garments were so prepared as to conceal their greatest treasure--the precious manuscripts of the Scriptures. These, the fruit of months and years of toil, they carried with them, and whenever they could do so without exciting suspicion, they cautiously placed some portion in the way of those whose hearts seemed open to receive the truth. From their mother's knee the Waldensian youth had been trained with this purpose in view; they understood their work and faithfully performed it. Converts to the true faith were won in these institutions of learning, and frequently its principles were found to be permeating the entire school; yet the papal leaders could not, by the closest inquiry, trace the so-called corrupting heresy to its source.

The spirit of Christ is a missionary spirit. The very first impulse of the renewed heart is to bring others also to the Saviour. Such was the spirit of the Vaudois Christians. They felt that God required more of them than merely to preserve the truth in its purity in their own churches; that a solemn responsibility rested upon them to let their light shine forth to those who were in darkness; by the mighty power of God's word they sought to break the bondage which Rome had imposed. The Vaudois ministers were trained as missionaries, everyone who expected to enter the ministry being required first to gain an experience as an evangelist. Each 71 was to serve three years in some mission field before taking charge of a church at home. This service, requiring at the outset self-denial and sacrifice, was a fitting introduction to the pastor's life in those times that tried men's souls. The youth who received ordination to the sacred office saw before them, not the prospect of earthly wealth and glory, but a life of toil and danger, and possibly a martyr's fate. The missionaries went out two and two, as Jesus sent forth His disciples. With each young man was usually associated a man of age and experience, the youth being under the guidance of his companion, who was held responsible for his training, and whose instruction he was required to heed. These colaborers were not always together, but often met for prayer and counsel, thus strengthening each other in the faith.

To have made known the object of their mission would have ensured its defeat; therefore they carefully concealed their real character. Every minister possessed a knowledge of some trade or profession, and the missionaries prosecuted their work under cover of a secular calling. Usually they chose that of merchant or peddler. "They carried silks, jewelry, and other articles, at that time not easily purchasable save at distant marts; and they were welcomed as merchants where they would have been spurned as missionaries."-- Wylie, b. 1, ch. 7. All the while their hearts were uplifted to God for wisdom to present a treasure more precious than gold or gems. They secretly carried about with them copies of the Bible, in whole or in part; and whenever an opportunity was presented, they called the attention of their customers to these manuscripts. Often an interest to read God's word was thus awakened, and some portion was gladly left with those who desired to receive it.

The work of these missionaries began in the plains and valleys at the foot of their own mountains, but it extended far beyond these limits. With naked feet and in garments coarse and travel-stained as were those of their Master, 72 they passed through great cities and penetrated to distant lands. Everywhere they scattered the precious seed. Churches sprang up in their path, and the blood of martyrs witnessed for the truth. The day of God will reveal a rich harvest of souls garnered by the labors of these faithful men. Veiled and silent, the word of God was making its way through Christendom and meeting a glad reception in the homes and hearts of men.

To the Waldenses the Scriptures were not merely a record of God's dealings with men in the past, and a revelation of the responsibilities and duties of the present, but an unfolding of the perils and glories of the future. They believed that the end of all things was not far distant, and as they studied the Bible with prayer and tears they were the more deeply impressed with its precious utterances and with their duty to make known to others its saving truths. They saw the plan of salvation clearly revealed in the sacred pages, and they found comfort, hope, and peace in believing in Jesus. As the light illuminated their understanding and made glad their hearts, they longed to shed its beams upon those who were in the darkness of papal error.

They saw that under the guidance of pope and priest, multitudes were vainly endeavoring to obtain pardon for afflicting their bodies for the sin of their souls. Taught to trust to their good works to save them, they were ever looking to themselves, their minds dwelling upon their sinful condition, seeing themselves exposed to the wrath of God, afflicting soul and body, yet finding no relief. Thus conscientious souls were bound by the doctrines of Rome. Thousands abandoned friends and kindred, and spent their lives in convent cells. By oft-repeated fasts and cruel scourgings, by midnight vigils, by prostration for weary hours upon the cold, damp stones of their dreary abode, by long pilgrimages, by humiliating penance and fearful torture, thousands vainly sought to obtain peace of conscience. Oppressed with a sense of sin, and haunted with the fear of God's avenging wrath, many suffered on, until exhausted nature gave way, and without one ray of light or hope they sank into the tomb.

The Waldenses longed to break to these starving souls the bread of life, to open to them the messages of peace in the promises of God, and to point them to Christ as their only hope of salvation. The doctrine that good works can atone for the transgression of God's law they held to be based upon falsehood. Reliance upon human merit intercepts the view of Christ's infinite love. Jesus died as a sacrifice for man because the fallen race can do nothing to recommend themselves to God. The merits of a crucified and risen Saviour are the foundation of the Christian's faith. The dependence of the soul upon Christ is as real, and its connection with Him must be as close, as that of a limb to the body, or of a branch to the vine.

The teachings of popes and priests had led men to look upon the character of God, and even of Christ, as stern, gloomy, and forbidding. The Saviour was represented as so far devoid of sympathy with man in his fallen state that the mediation of priests and saints must be invoked. Those whose minds had been enlightened by the word of God longed to point these souls to Jesus as their compassionate, loving Saviour, standing with outstretched arms, inviting all to come to Him with their burden of sin, their care and weariness. They longed to clear away the obstructions which Satan had piled up that men might not see the promises, and come directly to God, confessing their sins, and obtaining pardon and peace.

Eagerly did the Vaudois missionary unfold to the inquiring mind the precious truths of the gospel. Cautiously he produced the carefully written portions of the Holy Scriptures. It was his greatest joy to give hope to the conscientious, sin-stricken soul, who could see only a God of vengeance, waiting to execute justice. With quivering lip and tearful eye did he, often on bended knees, open to his brethren the 74 precious promises that reveal the sinner's only hope. Thus the light of truth penetrated many a darkened mind, rolling back the cloud of gloom, until the Sun of Righteousness shone into the heart with healing in His beams. It was often the case that some portion of Scripture was read again and again, the hearer desiring it to be repeated, as if he would assure himself that he had heard aright. Especially was the repetition of these words eagerly desired: "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:7. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life." John 3:14, 15.

Many were undeceived in regard to the claims of Rome. They saw how vain is the mediation of men or angels in behalf of the sinner. As the true light dawned upon their minds they exclaimed with rejoicing: "Christ is my priest; His blood is my sacrifice; His altar is my confessional." They cast themselves wholly upon the merits of Jesus, repeating the words, "Without faith it is impossible to please Him." Hebrews 11:6. "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12.

The assurance of a Saviour's love seemed too much for some of these poor tempest-tossed souls to realize. So great was the relief which it brought, such a flood of light was shed upon them, that they seemed transported to heaven. Their hands were laid confidently in the hand of Christ; their feet were planted upon the Rock of Ages. All fear of death was banished. They could now covet the prison and the fagot if they might thereby honor the name of their Redeemer.

In secret places the word of God was thus brought forth and read, sometimes to a single soul, sometimes to a little company who were longing for light and truth. Often the entire night was spent in this manner. So great would be the wonder and admiration of the listeners that the messenger of mercy was not infrequently compelled to cease his reading 75 until the understanding could grasp the tidings of salvation. Often would words like these be uttered: "Will God indeed accept my offering? Will He smile upon me? Will He pardon me?" The answer was read: "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give your rest." Matthew 11:28.

Faith grasped the promise, and the glad response was heard: "No more long pilgrimages to make; no more painful journeys to holy shrines. I may come to Jesus just as I am, sinful and unholy, and He will not spurn the penitential prayer. 'Thy sins be forgiven thee.' Mine, even mine, may be forgiven!"

A tide of sacred joy would fill the heart, and the name of Jesus would be magnified by praise and thanksgiving. Those happy souls returned to their homes to diffuse light, to repeat to others, as well as they could, their new experience; that they had found the true and living Way. There was a strange and solemn power in the words of Scripture that spoke directly to the hearts of those who were longing for the truth. It was the voice of God, and it carried conviction to those who heard.

The messenger of truth went on his way; but his appearance of humility, his sincerity, his earnestness and deep fervor, were subjects of frequent remark. In many instances his hearers had not asked him whence he came or whither he went. They had been so overwhelmed, at first with surprise, and afterward with gratitude and joy, that they had not thought to question him. When they had urged him to accompany them to their homes, he had replied that he must visit the lost sheep of the flock. Could he have been an angel from heaven? they queried.

In many cases the messenger of truth was seen no more. He had made his way to other lands, or he was wearing out his life in some unknown dungeon, or perhaps his bones were whitening on the spot where he had witnessed for the 76 truth. But the words he had left behind could not be destroyed. They were doing their work in the hearts of men; the blessed results will be fully known only in the judgment.

The Waldensian missionaries were invading the kingdom of Satan, and the powers of darkness aroused to greater vigilance. Every effort to advance the truth was watched by the prince of evil, and he excited the fears of his agents. The papal leaders saw a portent of danger to their cause from the labors of these humble itinerants. If the light of truth were allowed to shine unobstructed, it would sweep away the heavy clouds of error that enveloped the people. It would direct the minds of men to God alone and would eventually destroy the supremacy of Rome.

The very existence of this people, holding the faith of the ancient church, was a constant testimony to Rome's apostasy, and therefore excited the most bitter hatred and persecution. Their refusal to surrender the Scriptures was also an offense that Rome could not tolerate. She determined to blot them from the earth. Now began the most terrible crusades against God's people in their mountain homes. Inquisitors were put upon their track, and the scene of innocent Abel falling before the murderous Cain was often repeated.

Again and again were their fertile lands laid waste, their dwellings and chapels swept away, so that where once were flourishing fields and the homes of an innocent, industrious people, there remained only a desert. As the ravenous beast is rendered more furious by the taste of blood, so the rage of the papists was kindled to greater intensity by the sufferings of their victims. Many of these witnesses for a pure faith were pursued across the mountains and hunted down in the valleys where they were hidden, shut in by mighty forests and pinnacles of rock.

No charge could be brought against the moral character of this proscribed class. Even their enemies declared them to be a peaceable, quiet, pious people. Their grand offense was that they would not worship God according to the will 77 of the pope. For this crime every humiliation, insult, and torture that men or devils could invent was heaped upon them.

When Rome at one time determined to exterminate the hated sect, a bull was issued by the pope, condemning them as heretics, and delivering them to slaughter. (See Appendix.) They were not accused as idlers, or dishonest, or disorderly; but it was declared that they had an appearance of piety and sanctity that seduced "the sheep of the true fold." Therefore the pope ordered "that malicious and abominable sect of malignants," if they "refuse to abjure, to be crushed like venomous snakes."--Wylie, b. 16, ch. 1. Did this haughty potentate expect to meet those words again? Did he know that they were registered in the books of heaven, to confront him at the judgment? "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren," said Jesus, "ye have done it unto Me." Matthew 25:40.

This bull called upon all members of the church to join the crusade against the heretics. As an incentive to engage in this cruel work, it "absolved from all ecclesiastical pains and penalties, general and particular; it released all who joined the crusade from any oaths they might have taken; it legitimized their title to any property they might have illegally acquired; and promised remission of all their sins to such as should kill any heretic. It annulled all contracts made in favor of Vaudois, ordered their domestics to abandon them, forbade all persons to give them any aid whatever, and empowered all persons to take possession of their property."--Wyllie, b. 16, ch. 1. This document clearly reveals the master spirit behind the scenes. It is the roar of the dragon, and not the voice of Christ, that is heard therein.

The papal leaders would not conform their characters to the great standard of God's law, but erected a standard to suit themselves, and determined to compel all to conform to this because Rome willed it. The most horrible tragedies were enacted. Corrupt and blasphemous priests and popes were doing the work which Satan appointed them. Mercy had no place in their natures. The same spirit that crucified Christ and slew the apostles, the same that moved the blood-thirsty Nero against the faithful in his day, was at work to rid the earth of those who were beloved of God.

The persecutions visited for many centuries upon this God-fearing people were endured by them with a patience and constancy that honored their Redeemer. Notwithstanding the crusades against them, and the inhuman butchery to which they were subjected, they continued to send out their missionaries to scatter the precious truth. They were hunted to death; yet their blood watered the seed sown, and it failed not of yielding fruit. Thus the Waldenses witnessed for God centuries before the birth of Luther. Scattered over many lands, they planted the seeds of the Reformation that began in the time of Wycliffe, grew broad and deep in the days of Luther, and is to be carried forward to the close of time by those who also are willing to suffer all things for "the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ." Revelation 1:9.

To read this in its original source see chapter #4 of The Great Controversy (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 10th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

John Wycliffe - The Morning Star of the Reformation

Before the Reformation there were at times but very few copies of the Bible in existence, but God had not suffered His word to be wholly destroyed. Its truths were not to be forever hidden. He could as easily unchain the words of life as He could open prison doors and unbolt iron gates to set His servants free. In the different countries of Europe men were moved by the Spirit of God to search for the truth as for hid treasures. Providentially guided to the Holy Scriptures, they studied the sacred pages with intense interest. They were willing to accept the light at any cost to themselves. Though they did not see all things clearly, they were enabled to perceive many long-buried truths. As Heaven-sent messengers they went forth, rending asunder the chains of error and superstition, and calling upon those who had been so long enslaved, to arise and assert their liberty.

Except among the Waldenses, the word of God had for ages been locked up in languages known only to the learned; but the time had come for the Scriptures to be translated and given to the people of different lands in their native tongue. The world had passed its midnight. The hours of darkness were wearing away, and in many lands appeared tokens of the coming dawn.

In the fourteenth century arose in England the "morning star of the Reformation." John Wycliffe was the herald of reform, not for England alone, but for all Christendom. The great protest against Rome which it was permitted him to utter was never to be silenced. That protest opened the struggle which was to result in the emancipation of individuals, of churches, and of nations.

Wycliffe received a liberal education, and with him the fear of the Lord was the beginning of wisdom. He was noted at college for his fervent piety as well as for his remarkable talents and sound scholarship. In his thirst for knowledge he sought to become acquainted with every branch of learning. He was educated in the scholastic philosophy, in the canons of the church, and in the civil law, especially that of his own country. In his after labors the value of this early training was apparent. A thorough acquaintance with the speculative philosophy of his time enabled him to expose its errors; and by his study of national and ecclesiastical law he was prepared to engage in the great struggle for civil and religious liberty. While he could wield the weapons drawn from the word of God, he had acquired the intellectual discipline of the schools, and he understood the tactics of the schoolmen. The power of his genius and the extent and thoroughness of his knowledge commanded the respect of both friends and foes. His adherents saw with satisfaction that their champion stood foremost among the leading minds of the nation; and his enemies were prevented from casting contempt upon the cause of reform by exposing the ignorance or weakness of its supporter.

While Wycliffe was still at college, he entered upon the study of the Scriptures. In those early times, when the Bible existed only in the ancient languages, scholars were enabled to find their way to the fountain of truth, which was closed to the uneducated classes. Thus already the way had been prepared for Wycliffe's future work as a Reformer. Men of learning had studied the word of God and had found the great truth of His free grace there revealed. In their teachings they had spread a knowledge of this truth, and had led others to turn to the living oracles.

When Wycliffe's attention was directed to the Scriptures, he entered upon their investigation with the same thoroughness which had enabled him to master the learning of the schools. Heretofore he had felt a great want, which neither his scholastic studies nor the teaching of

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

John Wyclif (1324-1384)

John Wycliffe completed the 1st English translation of the Bible. For additional significant statements made by John Wycliffe see the document entitled: Reformers Reveal the Beast

"John Wicliffe The Morning Star of the Reformation"

His faithfulness to the Word of God and his courage in opposing the ecclesiastical powers of thirteenth century England had such an effect on those who followed, that he is often referred to as the Morning Star of the Reformation.

Order the Book

the church could satisfy. In the word of God he found that which he had before sought in vain. Here he saw the plan of salvation revealed and Christ set forth as the only advocate for man. He gave himself to the service of Christ and determined to proclaim the truths he had discovered.

Like after Reformers, Wycliffe did not, at the opening of his work, foresee whither it would lead him. He did not set himself deliberately in opposition to Rome. But devotion to truth could not but bring him in conflict with falsehood. The more clearly he discerned the errors of the papacy, the more earnestly he presented the teaching of the Bible. He saw that Rome had forsaken the word of God for human tradition; he fearlessly accused the priesthood of having banished the Scriptures, and demanded that the Bible be restored to the people and that its authority be again established in the church. He was an able and earnest teacher and an eloquent preacher, and his daily life was a demonstration of the truths he preached. His knowledge of the Scriptures, the force of his reasoning, the purity of his life, and his unbending courage and integrity won for him general esteem and confidence. Many of the people had become dissatisfied with their former faith as they saw the iniquity that prevailed in the Roman Church, and they hailed with unconcealed joy the truths brought to view by Wycliffe; but the papal leaders were filled with rage when they perceived that this Reformer was gaining an influence greater than their own.

Wycliffe was a keen detector of error, and he struck fearlessly against many of the abuses sanctioned by the authority of Rome. While acting as chaplain for the king, he took a bold stand against the payment of tribute claimed by the pope from the English monarch and showed that the papal assumption of authority over secular rulers was contrary to both reason and revelation. The demands of the pope had excited great indignation, and Wycliffe's teachings exerted an influence upon the leading minds of the nation. The king and the nobles united in denying the pontiff's claim to temporal authority and in refusing the payment of the tribute. Thus an effectual blow was struck against the papal supremacy in England.

Another evil against which the Reformer waged long and resolute battle was the institution of the orders of mendicant friars. These friars swarmed in England, casting a blight upon the greatness and prosperity of the nation. Industry, education, morals, all felt the withering influence. The monk's life of idleness and beggary was not only a heavy drain upon the resources of the people, but it brought useful labor into contempt. The youth were demoralized and corrupted. By the influence of the friars many were induced to enter a cloister and devote themselves to a monastic life, and this not only without the consent of their parents, but even without their knowledge and contrary to their commands. One of the early Fathers of the Roman Church, urging the claims of monasticism above the obligations of filial love and duty, had declared: "Though thy father should lie before thy door weeping and lamenting, and thy mother should show the body that bore thee and the breasts that nursed thee, see that thou trample them underfoot, and go onward straightway to Christ." By this "monstrous inhumanity," as Luther afterward styled it, "savoring more of the wolf and the tyrant than of the Christian and the man," were the hearts of children steeled against their parents.--Barnas Sears, The Life of Luther, pages 70, 69. Thus did the papal leaders, like the Pharisees of old, make the commandment of God of none effect by their tradition. Thus homes were made desolate and parents were deprived of the society of their sons and daughters.

Even the students in the universities were deceived by the false representations of the monks and induced to join their orders. Many afterward repented this step, seeing that they had blighted their own lives and had brought sorrow upon their parents; but once fast in the snare it was impossible for them to obtain their freedom. Many parents, fearing the influence of the monks, refused to send their sons to the universities. There was a marked falling off in the number of students in attendance at the great centers of learning. The schools languished, and ignorance prevailed.

The pope had bestowed on these monks the power to hear confessions and to grant pardon. This became a source of great evil. Bent on enhancing their gains, the friars were so ready to grant absolution that criminals of all descriptions resorted to them, and, as a result, the worst vices rapidly increased. The sick and the poor were left to suffer, while the gifts that should have relieved their wants went to the monks, who with threats demanded the alms of the people, denouncing the impiety of those who should withhold gifts from their orders. Notwithstanding their profession of poverty, the wealth of the friars was constantly increasing, and their magnificent edifices and luxurious tables made more apparent the growing poverty of the nation. And while spending their time in luxury and pleasure, they sent out in their stead ignorant men, who could only recount marvelous tales, legends, and jests to amuse the people and make them still more completely the dupes of the monks. Yet the friars continued to maintain their hold on the superstitious multitudes and led them to believe that all religious duty was comprised in acknowledging the supremacy of the pope, adoring the saints, and making gifts to the monks, and that this was sufficient to secure them a place in heaven.

Men of learning and piety had labored in vain to bring about a reform in these monastic orders; but Wycliffe, with clearer insight, struck at the root of the evil, declaring that the system itself was false and that it should be abolished. Discussion and inquiry were awakening. As the monks traversed the country, vending the pope's pardons, many were led to doubt the possibility of purchasing forgiveness with money, and they questioned whether they should not seek pardon from God rather than from the pontiff of Rome. (See Appendix note for page 59.) Not a few were alarmed at the rapacity of the friars, whose greed seemed never to be satisfied. "The monks and priests of Rome," said they, "are eating us away like a cancer. God must deliver us, or the people will perish."--D'Aubigne, b. 17, ch. 7. To cover their avarice, these begging monks claimed that they were following the Saviour's example, declaring that Jesus and His disciples had been supported by the charities of the people. This claim resulted in injury to their cause, for it led many to the Bible to learn the truth for themselves--a result which of all others was least desired by Rome. The minds of men were directed to the Source of truth, which it was her object to conceal.

Wycliffe began to write and publish tracts against the friars, not, however, seeking so much to enter into dispute with them as to call the minds of the people to the teachings of the Bible and its Author. He declared that the power of pardon or of excommunication is possessed by the pope in no greater degree than by common priests, and that no man can be truly excommunicated unless he has first brought upon himself the condemnation of God. In no more effectual way could he have undertaken the overthrow of that mammoth fabric of spiritual and temporal dominion which the pope had erected and in which the souls and bodies of millions were held captive.

Again Wycliffe was called to defend the rights of the English crown against the encroachments of Rome; and being appointed a royal ambassador, he spent two years in the Netherlands, in conference with the commissioners of the pope. Here he was brought into communication with ecclesiastics from France, Italy, and Spain, and he had an opportunity to look behind the scenes and gain a knowledge of many things which would have remained hidden from him in England. He learned much that was to give point to his after labors. In these representatives from the papal court he read the true character and aims of the hierarchy. He returned to England to repeat his former teachings more openly and with greater zeal, declaring that covetousness, pride, and deception were the gods of Rome.

In one of his tracts he said, speaking of the pope and his collectors: "They draw out of our land poor men's livelihood, and many thousand marks, by the year, of the king's money, for sacraments and spiritual things, that is cursed heresy of simony, and maketh all Christendom assent and maintain this heresy. And certes though our realm had a huge hill of gold, and never other man took thereof but only this proud worldly priest's collector, by process of time this hill must be spende; for he taketh ever money out of our land, and sendeth nought again but God's curse for his simony." --John Lewis, History of the Life and Sufferings of J. Wiclif, page 37.

Soon after his return to England, Wycliffe received from the king the appointment to the rectory of Lutterworth. This was an assurance that the monarch at least had not been displeased by his plain speaking. Wycliffe's influence was felt in shaping the action of the court, as well as in molding the belief of the nation.

The papal thunders were soon hurled against him. Three bulls were dispatched to England,--to the university, to the king, and to the prelates,--all commanding immediate and decisive measures to silence the teacher of heresy. (Augustus Neander, General History of the Christian Religion and Church, period 6, sec. 2, pt. 1, par. 8. See also Appendix.) Before the arrival of the bulls, however, the bishops, in their zeal, had summoned Wycliffe before them for trial. But two of the most powerful princes in the kingdom accompanied him to the tribunal; and the people, surrounding the building and rushing in, so intimidated the judges that the proceedings were for the time suspended, and he was allowed to go his way in peace. A little later, Edward III, whom in his old age the prelates were seeking to influence against the Reformer, died, and Wycliffe's former protector became regent of the kingdom.

But the arrival of the papal bulls laid upon all England a peremptory command for the arrest and imprisonment of the heretic. These measures pointed directly to the stake. It appeared certain that Wycliffe must soon fall a prey to the vengeance of Rome. But He who declared to one of old, "Fear not: . . . I am thy shield" (Genesis 15:1), again stretched out His hand to protect His servant. Death came, not to the Reformer, but to the pontiff who had decreed his destruction. Gregory XI died, and the ecclesiastics who had assembled for Wycliffe's trial, dispersed.

God's providence still further overruled events to give opportunity for the growth of the Reformation. The death of Gregory was followed by the election of two rival popes. Two conflicting powers, each professedly infallible, now claimed obedience. (See Appendix notes for pages 50 and 86.) Each called upon the faithful to assist him in making war upon the other, enforcing his demands by terrible anathemas against his adversaries, and promises of rewards in heaven to his supporters. This occurrence greatly weakened the power of the papacy. The rival factions had all they could do to attack each other, and Wycliffe for a time had rest. Anathemas and recriminations were flying from pope to pope, and torrents of blood were poured out to support their conflicting claims. Crimes and scandals flooded the church. Meanwhile the Reformer, in the quiet retirement of his parish of Lutterworth, was laboring diligently to point men from the contending popes to Jesus, the Prince of Peace.

The schism, with all the strife and corruption which it caused, prepared the way for the Reformation by enabling the people to see what the papacy really was. In a tract which he published, On the Schism of the Popes, Wycliffe called upon the people to consider whether these two priests were not speaking the truth in condemning each other as the anti-christ. "God," said he, "would no longer suffer the fiend to reign in only one such priest, but . . . made division among two, so that men, in Christ's name, may the more easily overcome them both."--R. Vaughan, Life and Opinions of John de Wycliffe, vol. 2, p. 6.

Wycliffe, like his Master, preached the gospel to the poor. Not content with spreading the light in their humble homes in his own parish of Lutterworth, he determined that it should be carried to every part of England. To accomplish this he organized a body of preachers, simple, devout men, who loved the truth and desired nothing so much as to extend it. These men went everywhere, teaching in the market places, in the streets of the great cities, and in the country lanes. They sought out the aged, the sick, and the poor, and opened to them the glad tidings of the grace of God.

As a professor of theology at Oxford, Wycliffe preached the word of God in the halls of the university. So faithfully did he present the truth to the students under his instruction, that he received the title of "the gospel doctor." But the greatest work of his life was to be the translation of the Scriptures into the English language. In a work, On the Truth and Meaning of Scripture, he expressed his intention to translate the Bible, so that every man in England might read, in the language in which he was born, the wonderful works of God.

But suddenly his labors were stopped. Though not yet sixty years of age, unceasing toil, study, and the assaults of his enemies had told upon his strength and made him prematurely old. He was attacked by a dangerous illness. The tidings brought great joy to the friars. Now they thought he would bitterly repent the evil he had done the church, and they hurried to his chamber to listen to his confession. Representatives from the four religious orders, with four civil officers, gathered about the supposed dying man. "You have death on your lips," they said; "be touched by your faults, and retract in our presence all that you have said to our injury." The Reformer listened in silence; then he bade his attendant raise him in his bed, and, gazing steadily upon them as they stood waiting for his recantation, he said, in the firm, strong voice which had so often caused them to tremble: "I shall not die, but live; and again declare the evil deeds of the friars."--D'Aubigne, b. 17, ch. 7. Astonished and abashed, the monks hurried from the room.

Wycliffe's words were fulfilled. He lived to place in the hands of his countrymen the most powerful of all weapons against Rome--to give them the Bible, the Heaven-appointed agent to liberate, enlighten, and evangelize the people. There were many and great obstacles to surmount in the accomplishment of this work. Wycliffe was weighed down with infirmities; he knew that only a few years for labor remained for him; he saw the opposition which he must meet; but, encouraged by the promises of God's word, he went forward nothing daunted. In the full vigor of his intellectual powers, rich in experience, he had been preserved and prepared by God's special providence for this, the greatest of his labors. While all Christendom was filled with tumult, the Reformer in his rectory at Lutterworth, unheeding the storm that raged without, applied himself to his chosen task.

At last the work was completed--the first English translation of the Bible ever made. The word of God was opened to England. The Reformer feared not now the prison or the stake. He had placed in the hands of the English people a light which should never be extinguished. In giving the Bible to his countrymen, he had done more to break the fetters of ignorance and vice, more to liberate and elevate his country, than was ever achieved by the most brilliant victories on fields of battle.

The art of printing being still unknown, it was only by slow and wearisome labor that copies of the Bible could be multiplied. So great was the interest to obtain the book, that many willingly engaged in the work of transcribing it, but it was with difficulty that the copyists could supply the demand. Some of the more wealthy purchasers desired the whole Bible. Others bought only a portion. In many cases, several families united to purchase a copy. Thus Wycliffe's Bible soon found its way to the homes of the people.

The appeal to men's reason aroused them from their passive submission to papal dogmas. Wycliffe now taught the distinctive doctrines of Protestantism--salvation through faith in Christ, and the sole infallibility of the Scriptures. The preachers whom he had sent out circulated the Bible, together with the Reformer's writings, and with such success that the new faith was accepted by nearly one half of the people of England.

The appearance of the Scriptures brought dismay to the authorities of the church. They had now to meet an agency more powerful than Wycliffe--an agency against which their weapons would avail little. There was at this time no law in England prohibiting the Bible, for it had never before been published in the language of the people. Such laws were afterward enacted and rigorously enforced. Meanwhile, notwithstanding the efforts of the priests, there was for a season opportunity for the circulation of the word of God.

Again the papal leaders plotted to silence the Reformer's voice. Before three tribunals he was successively summoned for trial, but without avail. First a synod of bishops declared his writings heretical, and, winning the young king, Richard II, to their side, they obtained a royal decree consigning to prison all who should hold the condemned doctrines.

Wycliffe appealed from the synod to Parliament; he fearlessly arraigned the hierarchy before the national council and demanded a reform of the enormous abuses sanctioned by the church. With convincing power he portrayed the usurpation and corruptions of the papal see. His enemies were brought to confusion. The friends and supporters of Wycliffe had been forced to yield, and it had been confidently expected that the Reformer himself, in his old age, alone and friendless, would bow to the combined authority of the crown and the miter. But instead of this the papists saw themselves defeated. Parliament, roused by the stirring appeals of Wycliffe, repealed the persecuting edict, and the Reformer was again at liberty.

A third time he was brought to trial, and now before the highest ecclesiastical tribunal in the kingdom. Here no favor would be shown to heresy. Here at last Rome would triumph, and the Reformer's work would be stopped. So thought the papists. If they could but accomplish their purpose, Wycliffe would be forced to abjure his doctrines, or would leave the court only for the flames.

But Wycliffe did not retract; he would not dissemble. He fearlessly maintained his teachings and repelled the accusations of his persecutors. Losing sight of himself, of his position, of the occasion, he summoned his hearers before the divine tribunal, and weighed their sophistries and deceptions in the balances of eternal truth. The power of the Holy Spirit was felt in the council room. A spell from God was upon the hearers. They seemed to have no power to leave the place. As arrows from the Lord's quiver, the Reformer's words pierced their hearts. The charge of heresy, which they had brought against him, he with convincing power threw back upon themselves. Why, he demanded, did they dare to spread their errors? For the sake of gain, to make merchandise of the grace of God?

"With whom, think you," he finally said, "are ye contending? with an old man on the brink of the grave? No! with Truth--Truth which is stronger than you, and will overcome you."--Wyllie, b. 2, ch. 13. So saying, he withdrew from the assembly, and not one of his adversaries attempted to prevent him.

Wycliffe's work was almost done; the banner of truth which he had so long borne was soon to fall from his hand; but once more he was to bear witness for the gospel. The truth was to be proclaimed from the very stronghold of the kingdom of error. Wycliffe was summoned for trial before the papal tribunal at Rome, which had so often shed the blood of the saints. He was not blind to the danger that threatened him, yet he would have obeyed the summons had not a shock of palsy made it impossible for him to perform the journey. But though his voice was not to be heard at Rome, he could speak by letter, and this he determined to do. From his rectory the Reformer wrote to the pope a letter, which, while respectful in tone and Christian in spirit, was a keen rebuke to the pomp and pride of the papal see.

"Verily I do rejoice," he said, "to open and declare unto every man the faith which I do hold, and especially unto the bishop of Rome: which, forasmuch as I do suppose to be sound and true, he will most willingly confirm my said faith, or if it be erroneous, amend the same.

"First, I suppose that the gospel of Christ is the whole body of God's law. . . . I do give and hold the bishop of Rome, forasmuch as he is the vicar of Christ here on earth, to be most bound, of all other men, unto that law of the gospel. For the greatness among Christ's disciples did not consist in worldly dignity or honors, but in the near and exact following of Christ in His life and manners.... Christ, for the time of His pilgrimage here, was a most poor man, abjecting and casting off all worldly rule and honor. . . .

"No faithful man ought to follow either the pope himself or any of the holy men, but in such points as he hath followed the Lord Jesus Christ; for Peter and the sons of Zebedee, by desiring worldly honor, contrary to the following of Christ's steps, did offend, and therefore in those errors they are not to be followed. . . .

"The pope ought to leave unto the secular power all temporal dominion and rule, and thereunto effectually to move and exhort his whole clergy; for so did Christ, and especially by His apostles. Wherefore, if I have erred in any of these points, I will most humbly submit myself unto correction, even by death, if necessity so require; and if I could labor according to my will or desire in mine own person, I would surely present myself before the bishop of Rome; but the Lord hath otherwise visited me to the contrary, and hath taught me rather to obey God than men."

In closing he said: "Let us pray unto our God, that He will so stir up our Pope Urban VI, as he began, that he with his clergy may follow the Lord Jesus Christ in life and manners; and that they may teach the people effectually, and that they, likewise, may faithfully follow them in the same."--John Foxe, Acts and Monuments, vol. 3, pp. 49, 50.

Thus Wycliffe presented to the pope and his cardinals the meekness and humility of Christ, exhibiting not only to themselves but to all Christendom the contrast between them and the Master whose representatives they professed to be.

Wycliffe fully expected that his life would be the price of his fidelity. The king, the pope, and the bishops were united to accomplish his ruin, and it seemed certain that a few months at most would bring him to the stake. But his courage was unshaken. "Why do you talk of seeking the crown of martyrdom afar?" he said. "Preach the gospel of Christ to haughty prelates, and martyrdom will not fail you. What! I should live and be silent? . . . Never! Let the blow fall, I await its coming."--D'Aubigne, b. 17, ch. 8.

But God's providence still shielded His servant. The man who for a whole lifetime had stood boldly in defense of the truth, in daily peril of his life, was not to fall a victim of the hatred of its foes. Wycliffe had never sought to shield himself, but the Lord had been his protector; and now, when his enemies felt sure of their prey, God's hand removed him beyond their reach. In his church at Lutterworth, as he was about to dispense the communion, he fell, stricken with palsy, and in a short time yielded up his life.

God had appointed to Wycliffe his work. He had put the word of truth in his mouth, and He set a guard about him that this word might come to the people. His life was protected, and his labors were prolonged, until a foundation was laid for the great work of the Reformation.

Wycliffe came from the obscurity of the Dark Ages. There were none who went before him from whose work he could shape his system of reform. Raised up like John the Baptist to accomplish a special mission, he was the herald of a new era. Yet in the system of truth which he presented there was a unity and completeness which Reformers who followed him did not exceed, and which some did not reach, even a hundred years later. So broad and deep was laid the foundation, so firm and true was the framework, that it needed not to be reconstructed by those who came after him.

The great movement that Wycliffe inaugurated, which was to liberate the conscience and the intellect, and set free the nations so long bound to the triumphal car of Rome, had its spring in the Bible. Here was the source of that stream of blessing, which, like the water of life, has flowed down the ages since the fourteenth century. Wycliffe accepted the Holy Scriptures with implicit faith as the inspired revelation of God's will, a sufficient rule of faith and practice. He had been educated to regard the Church of Rome as the divine, infallible authority, and to accept with unquestioning reverence the established teachings and customs of a thousand years; but he turned away from all these to listen to God's holy word. This was the authority which he urged the people to acknowledge. Instead of the church speaking through the pope, he declared the only true authority to be the voice of God speaking through His word. And he taught not only that the Bible is a perfect revelation of God's will, but that the Holy Spirit is its only interpreter, and that every man is, by the study of its teachings, to learn his duty for himself. Thus he turned the minds of men from the pope and the Church of Rome to the word of God.

Wycliffe was one of the greatest of the Reformers. In breadth of intellect, in clearness of thought, in firmness to maintain the truth, and in boldness to defend it, he was equaled by few who came after him. Purity of life, unwearying diligence in study and in labor, incorruptible integrity, and Christlike love and faithfulness in his ministry, characterized the first of the Reformers. And this notwithstanding the intellectual darkness and moral corruption of the age from which he emerged.

The character of Wycliffe is a testimony to the educating, transforming power of the Holy Scriptures. It was the Bible that made him what he was. The effort to grasp the great truths of revelation imparts freshness and vigor to all the faculties. It expands the mind, sharpens the perceptions, and ripens the judgment. The study of the Bible will ennoble every thought, feeling, and aspiration as no other study can. It gives stability of purpose, patience, courage, and fortitude; it refines the character and sanctifies the soul. An earnest, reverent study of the Scriptures, bringing the mind of the student in direct contact with the infinite mind, would give to the world men of stronger and more active intellect, as well as of nobler principle, than has ever resulted from the ablest training that human philosophy affords. "The entrance of Thy words," says the psalmist, "giveth light; it giveth understanding." Psalm 119:130.

The doctrines which had been taught by Wycliffe continued for a time to spread; his followers, known as Wycliffites and Lollards, not only traversed England, but scattered to other lands, carrying the knowledge of the gospel. Now that their leader was removed, the preachers labored with even greater zeal than before, and multitudes flocked to listen to their teachings. Some of the nobility, and even the wife of the king, were among the converts. In many places there was a marked reform in the manners of the people, and the idolatrous symbols of Romanism were removed from the churches. But soon the pitiless storm of persecution burst upon those who had dared to accept the Bible as their guide. The English monarchs, eager to strengthen their power by securing the support of Rome, did not hesitate to sacrifice the Reformers. For the first time in the history of England the stake was decreed against the disciples of the gospel. Martyrdom succeeded martyrdom. The advocates of truth, proscribed and tortured, could only pour their cries into the ear of the Lord of Sabaoth. Hunted as foes of the church and traitors to the realm, they continued to preach in secret places, finding shelter as best they could in the humble homes of the poor, and often hiding away even in dens and caves.

Notwithstanding the rage of persecution, a calm, devout, earnest, patient protest against the prevailing corruption of religious faith continued for centuries to be uttered. The Christians of that early time had only a partial knowledge of the truth, but they had learned to love and obey God's word, and they patiently suffered for its sake. Like the disciples in apostolic days, many sacrificed their worldly possessions for the cause of Christ. Those who were permitted to dwell in their homes gladly sheltered their banished brethren, and when they too were driven forth they cheerfully accepted the lot of the outcast. Thousands, it is true, terrified by the fury of their persecutors, purchased their freedom at the sacrifice of their faith, and went out of their prisons, clothed in penitents' robes, to publish their recantation. But the number was not small--and among them were men of noble birth as well as the humble and lowly--who bore fearless testimony to the truth in dungeon cells, in "Lollard towers," and in the midst of torture and flame, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to know "the fellowship of His sufferings."

The papists had failed to work their will with Wycliffe during his life, and their hatred could not be satisfied while his body rested quietly in the grave. By the decree of the Council of Constance, more than forty years after his death his bones were exhumed and publicly burned, and the ashes were thrown into a neighboring brook. "This brook," says an old writer, "hath conveyed his ashes into Avon, Avon into Severn, Severn into the narrow seas, they into the main ocean. And thus the ashes of Wycliffe are the emblem of his doctrine, which now is dispersed all the world over."-- T. Fuller, Church History of Britain, b. 4, sec. 2, par. 54. Little did his enemies realize the significance of their malicious act.

It was through the writings of Wycliffe that John Huss, of Bohemia, was led to renounce many of the errors of Romanism and to enter upon the work of reform. Thus in these two countries, so widely separated, the seed of truth was sown. From Bohemia the work extended to other lands. The minds of men were directed to the long-forgotten word of God. A divine hand was preparing the way for the Great Reformation.

To read this in its original source see chapter #5 of The Great Controversy (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 14th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Martin Luther - The man for his time

Foremost among those who were called to lead the church from the darkness of popery into the light of a purer faith, stood Martin Luther. Zealous, ardent, and devoted, knowing no fear but the fear of God, and acknowledging no foundation for religious faith but the Holy Scriptures, Luther was the man for his time; through him God accomplished a great work for the reformation of the church and the enlightenment of the world.

Like the first heralds of the gospel, Luther sprang from the ranks of poverty. His early years were spent in the humble home of a German peasant. By daily toil as a miner his father earned the means for his education. He intended him for a lawyer; but God purposed to make him a builder in the great temple that was rising so slowly through the centuries. Hardship, privation, and severe discipline were the school in which Infinite Wisdom prepared Luther for the important mission of his life.

Luther's father was a man of strong and active mind and great force of character, honest, resolute, and straightforward. He was true to his convictions of duty, let the consequences be what they might. His sterling good sense led him to regard the monastic system with distrust. He was highly displeased when Luther, without his consent, entered a monastery; and it was two years before the father was reconciled to his son, and even then his opinions remained the same.

Luther's parents bestowed great care upon the education and training of their children. They endeavored to instruct them in the knowledge of God and the practice of Christian virtues. The father's prayer often ascended in the hearing of his son that the child might remember the name of the Lord and one day aid in the advancement of His truth. Every advantage for moral or intellectual culture which their life of toil permitted them to enjoy was eagerly improved by these parents. Their efforts were earnest and persevering to prepare their children for a life of piety and usefulness. With their firmness and strength of character they sometimes exercised too great severity; but the Reformer himself, though conscious that in some respects they had erred, found in their discipline more to approve than to condemn.

At school, where he was sent at an early age, Luther was treated with harshness and even violence. So great was the poverty of his parents that upon going from home to school in another town he was for a time obliged to obtain his food by singing from door to door, and he often suffered from hunger. The gloomy, superstitious ideas of religion then prevailing filled him with fear. He would lie down at night with a sorrowful heart, looking forward with trembling to the dark future and in constant terror at the thought of God as a stern, unrelenting judge, a cruel tyrant, rather than a kind heavenly Father.

Yet under so many and so great discouragements Luther pressed resolutely forward toward the high standard of moral and intellectual excellence which attracted his soul. He thirsted for knowledge, and the earnest and practical character of his mind led him to desire the solid and useful rather than the showy and superficial.

When, at the age of eighteen, he entered the University of Erfurt, his situation was more favorable and his prospects were brighter than in his earlier years. His parents having by thrift and industry acquired a competence, they were able to render him all needed assistance. And the influence of judicious friends had somewhat lessened the gloomy effects of his former training. He applied himself to the study of the best authors, diligently treasuring their most weighty thoughts and making the wisdom of the wise his own. Even under the harsh discipline of his former instructors he had early given promise of distinction,

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ Martin Luther (1483-1546)

The Roman Church had made merchandise of the grace of God. The tables of the money-changers (Matthew 21:12) were set up beside her altars, and the air resounded with the shouts of buyers and sellers. Under the plea of raising funds for the erection of St. Peter's Church at Rome, indulgences for sin were publicly offered for sale by the authority of the pope. By the price of crime a temple was to be built up for God's worship--the cornerstone laid with the wages of iniquity! But the very means adopted for Rome's aggrandizement provoked the deadliest blow to her power and greatness. It was this that aroused the most determined and successful of the enemies of popery, and led to the battle which shook the papal throne and jostled the triple crown upon the pontiff's head.

The fear of the Lord dwelt in the heart of Luther, enabling him to maintain his steadfastness of purpose and leading him to deep humility before God.

For significant statements made by Martin Luther see the document entitled: Reformers Reveal the Beast and with favorable influences his mind rapidly developed. A retentive memory, a lively imagination, strong reasoning powers, and untiring application soon placed him in the foremost rank among his associates. Intellectual discipline ripened his understanding and aroused an activity of mind and a keenness of perception that were preparing him for the conflicts of his life.

The fear of the Lord dwelt in the heart of Luther, enabling him to maintain his steadfastness of purpose and leading him to deep humility before God. He had an abiding sense of his dependence upon divine aid, and he did not fail to begin each day with prayer, while his heart was continually breathing a petition for guidance and support. "To pray well," he often said, "is the better half of study."-- D'Aubigne, b. 2, ch. 2.

While one day examining the books in the library of the university, Luther discovered a Latin Bible. Such a book he had never before seen. He was ignorant even of its existence. He had heard portions of the Gospels and Epistles, which were read to the people at public worship, and he supposed that these were the entire Bible. Now, for the first time, he looked upon the whole of God's word. With mingled awe and wonder he turned the sacred pages; with quickened pulse and throbbing heart he read for himself the words of life, pausing now and then to exclaim: "O that God would give me such a book for myself!"--Ibid., b. 2, ch. 2. Angels of heaven were by his side, and rays of light from the throne of God revealed the treasures of truth to his understanding. He had ever feared to offend God, but now the deep conviction of his condition as a sinner took hold upon him as never before.

An earnest desire to be free from sin and to find peace with God led him at last to enter a cloister and devote himself to a monastic life. Here he was required to perform the lowest drudgery and to beg from house to house. He was at an age when respect and appreciation are most eagerly craved, and these menial offices were deeply mortifying to his natural feelings; but he patiently endured this humiliation, believing that it was necessary because of his sins.

Every moment that could be spared from his daily duties he employed in study, robbing himself of sleep and grudging even the time spent at his scanty meals. Above everything else he delighted in the study of God's word. He had found a Bible chained to the convent wall, and to this he often repaired. As his convictions of sin deepened, he sought by his own works to obtain pardon and peace. He led a most rigorous life, endeavoring by fasting, vigils, and scourgings to subdue the evils of his nature, from which the monastic life had brought no release. He shrank from no sacrifice by which he might attain to that purity of heart which would enable him to stand approved before God. "I was indeed a pious monk," he afterward said, "and followed the rules of my order more strictly than I can express. If ever monk could obtain heaven by his monkish works, I should certainly have been entitled to it. . . . If it had continued much longer, I should have carried my mortifications even to death."--Ibid., b. 2, ch. 3. As the result of this painful discipline he lost strength and suffered from fainting spasms, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. But with all his efforts his burdened soul found no relief. He was at last driven to the verge of despair.

When it appeared to Luther that all was lost, God raised up a friend and helper for him. The pious Staupitz opened the word of God to Luther's mind and bade him look away from himself, cease the contemplation of infinite punishment for the violation of God's law, and look to Jesus, his sin-pardoning Saviour. "Instead of torturing yourself on account of your sins, throw yourself into the Redeemer's arms. Trust in Him, in the righteousness of His life, in the atonement of His death. . . . Listen to the Son of God. He became man to give you the assurance of divine favor." "Love Him who first loved you."--Ibid., b. 2, ch. 4. Thus spoke this messenger of mercy. His words made a deep impression upon Luther's mind. After many a struggle with long-cherished errors, he was enabled to grasp the truth, and peace came to his troubled soul.

Luther was ordained a priest and was called from the cloister to a professorship in the University of Wittenberg. Here he applied himself to the study of the Scriptures in the original tongues. He began to lecture upon the Bible; and the book of Psalms, the Gospels, and the Epistles were opened to the understanding of crowds of delighted listeners. Staupitz, his friend and superior, urged him to ascend the pulpit and preach the word of God. Luther hesitated, feeling himself unworthy to speak to the people in Christ's stead. It was only after a long struggle that he yielded to the solicitations of his friends. Already he was mighty in the Scriptures, and the grace of God rested upon him. His eloquence captivated his hearers, the clearness and power with which he presented the truth convinced their understanding, and his fervor touched their hearts.

Luther was still a true son of the papal church and had no thought that he would ever be anything else. In the providence of God he was led to visit Rome. He pursued his journey on foot, lodging at the monasteries on the way. At a convent in Italy he was filled with wonder at the wealth, magnificence, and luxury that he witnessed. Endowed with a princely revenue, the monks dwelt in splendid apartments, attired themselves in the richest and most costly robes, and feasted at a sumptuous table. With painful misgivings Luther contrasted this scene with the self-denial and hardship of his own life. His mind was becoming perplexed.

At last he beheld in the distance the seven-hilled city. With deep emotion he prostrated himself upon the earth, exclaiming: "Holy Rome, I salute thee!"--Ibid., b. 2, ch. 6. He entered the city, visited the churches, listened to the marvelous tales repeated by priests and monks, and performed all the ceremonies required. Everywhere he looked upon scenes that filled him with astonishment and horror. He saw that iniquity existed among all classes of the clergy. He heard indecent jokes from prelates, and was filled with horror at their awful profanity, even during mass. As he mingled with the monks and citizens he met dissipation, debauchery. Turn where he would, in the place of sanctity he found profanation. "No one can imagine," he wrote, "what sins and infamous actions are committed in Rome; they must be seen and heard to be believed. Thus they are in the habit of saying, 'If there is a hell, Rome is built over it: it is an abyss whence issues every kind of sin.'"--Ibid., b. 2, ch. 6.

By a recent decretal an indulgence had been promised by the pope to all who should ascend upon their knees "Pilate's staircase," said to have been descended by our Saviour on leaving the Roman judgment hall and to have been miraculously conveyed from Jerusalem to Rome. Luther was one day devoutly climbing these steps, when suddenly a voice like thunder seemed to say to him: "The just shall live by faith." Romans 1:17. He sprang to his feet and hastened from the place in shame and horror. That text never lost its power upon his soul. From that time he saw more clearly than ever before the fallacy of trusting to human works for salvation, and the necessity of constant faith in the merits of Christ. His eyes had been opened, and were never again to be closed, to the delusions of the papacy. When he turned his face from Rome he had turned away also in heart, and from that time the separation grew wider, until he severed all connection with the papal church.

After his return from Rome, Luther received at the University of Wittenberg the degree of doctor of divinity. Now he was at liberty to devote himself, as never before, to the Scriptures that he loved. He had taken a solemn vow to study carefully and to preach with fidelity the word of God, not the sayings and doctrines of the popes, all the days of his life. He was no longer the mere monk or professor, but the authorized herald of the Bible. He had been called as a shepherd to feed the flock of God, that were hungering and thirsting for the truth. He firmly declared that Christians should receive no other doctrines than those which rest on the authority of the Sacred Scriptures. These words struck at the very foundation of papal supremacy. They contained the vital principle of the Reformation.

Luther saw the danger of exalting human theories above the word of God. He fearlessly attacked the speculative infidelity of the schoolmen and opposed the philosophy and theology which had so long held a controlling influence upon the people. He denounced such studies as not only worthless but pernicious, and sought to turn the minds of his hearers from the sophistries of philosophers and theologians to the eternal truths set forth by prophets and apostles.

Precious was the message which he bore to the eager crowds that hung upon his words. Never before had such teachings fallen upon their ears. The glad tidings of a Saviour's love, the assurance of pardon and peace through His atoning blood, rejoiced their hearts and inspired within them an immortal hope. At Wittenberg a light was kindled whose rays should extend to the uttermost parts of the earth, and which was to increase in brightness to the close of time.

But light and darkness cannot harmonize. Between truth and error there is an irrepressible conflict. To uphold and defend the one is to attack and overthrow the other. Our Saviour Himself declared: "I came not to send peace, but a sword." Matthew 10:34. Said Luther, a few years after the opening of the Reformation: "God does not guide me, He pushes me forward. He carries me away. I am not master of myself. I desire to live in repose; but I am thrown into the midst of tumults and revolutions."--D'Aubigne, b. 5, ch. 2. He was now about to be urged into the contest.

The Roman Church had made merchandise of the grace of God. The tables of the money-changers (Matthew 21:12) were set up beside her altars, and the air resounded with the shouts of buyers and sellers. Under the plea of raising funds for the erection of St. Peter's Church at Rome, indulgences for sin were publicly offered for sale by the authority of the pope. By the price of crime a temple was to be built up for God's worship--the cornerstone laid with the wages of iniquity! But the very means adopted for Rome's aggrandizement provoked the deadliest blow to her power and greatness. It was this that aroused the most determined and successful of the enemies of popery, and led to the battle which shook the papal throne and jostled the triple crown upon the pontiff's head.

The official appointed to conduct the sale of indulgences in Germany--Tetzel by name--had been convicted of the basest offenses against society and against the law of God; but having escaped the punishment due for his crimes, he was employed to further the mercenary and unscrupulous projects of the pope. With great effrontery he repeated the most glaring falsehoods and related marvelous tales to deceive an ignorant, credulous, and superstitious people. Had they possessed the word of God they would not have been thus deceived. It was to keep them under the control of the papacy, in order to swell the power and wealth of her ambitious leaders, that the Bible had been withheld from them. (See John C. L. Gieseler, A Compendium of Ecclesiastical History, per. 4, sec. 1, par. 5.)

As Tetzel entered a town, a messenger went before him, announcing: "The grace of God and of the holy father is at your gates."--D'Aubigne, b. 3, ch. 1. And the people welcomed the blasphemous pretender as if he were God Himself come down from heaven to them. The infamous traffic was set up in the church, and Tetzel, ascending the pulpit, extolled the indulgences as the most precious gift of God. He declared that by virtue of his certificates of pardon all the sins which the purchaser should afterward desire to commit would be forgiven him, and that "not even repentance is necessary."--Ibid., b. 3, ch. 1. More than this, he assured his hearers that the indulgences had power to save not only the living but the dead; that the very moment the money should clink against the bottom of his chest, the soul in whose behalf it had been paid would escape from purgatory and make its way to heaven. (See K. R. Hagenbach, History of the Reformation, vol. 1, p. 96.)

When Simon Magus offered to purchase of the apostles the power to work miracles, Peter answered him: "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money." Acts 8:20. But Tetzel's offer was grasped by eager thousands. Gold and silver flowed into his treasury. A salvation that could be bought with money was more easily obtained than that which requires repentance, faith, and diligent effort to resist and overcome sin. (See Appendix note for page 59.)

The doctrine of indulgences had been opposed by men of learning and piety in the Roman Church, and there were many who had no faith in pretensions so contrary to both reason and revelation. No prelate dared lift his voice against this iniquitous traffic; but the minds of men were becoming disturbed and uneasy, and many eagerly inquired if God would not work through some instrumentality for the purification of His church.

Luther, though still a papist of the strictest sort, was filled with horror at the blasphemous assumptions of the indulgence mongers. Many of his own congregation had purchased certificates of pardon, and they soon began to come to their pastor, confessing their various sins, and expecting absolution, not because they were penitent and wished to reform, but on the ground of the indulgence. Luther refused them absolution, and warned them that unless they should repent and reform their lives, they must perish in their sins. In great perplexity they repaired to Tetzel with the complaint that their confessor had refused his certificates; and some boldly demanded that their money be returned to them. The friar was filled with rage. He uttered the most terrible curses, caused fires to be lighted in the public squares, and declared that he "had received an order from the pope to burn all heretics who presumed to oppose his most holy indulgences."--D'Aubigne, b. 3, ch. 4.

Luther now entered boldly upon his work as a champion of the truth. His voice was heard from the pulpit in earnest, solemn warning. He set before the people the offensive character of sin, and taught them that it is impossible for man, by his own works, to lessen its guilt or evade its punishment. Nothing but repentance toward God and faith in Christ can save the sinner. The grace of Christ cannot be purchased; it is a free gift. He counseled the people not to buy indulgences, but to look in faith to a crucified Redeemer. He related his own painful experience in vainly seeking by humiliation and penance to secure salvation, and assured his hearers that it was by looking away from himself and believing in Christ that he found peace and joy.

As Tetzel continued his traffic and his impious pretensions, Luther determined upon a more effectual protest against these crying abuses. An occasion soon offered. The castle church of Wittenberg possessed many relics, which on certain holy days were exhibited to the people, and full remission of sins was granted to all who then visited the church and made confession. Accordingly on these days the people in great numbers resorted thither. One of the most important of these occasions, the festival of All Saints, was approaching. On the preceding day, Luther, joining the crowds that were already making their way to the church, posted on its door a paper containing ninety-five propositions against the doctrine of indulgences. He declared his willingness to defend these theses next day at the university, against all who should see fit to attack them.

His propositions attracted universal attention. They were read and reread, and repeated in every direction. Great excitement was created in the university and in the whole city. By these theses it was shown that the power to grant the pardon of sin, and to remit its penalty, had never been committed to the pope or to any other man. The whole scheme was a farce,--an artifice to extort money by playing upon the superstitions of the people,--a device of Satan to destroy the souls of all who should trust to its lying pretensions. It was also clearly shown that the gospel of Christ is the most valuable treasure of the church, and that the grace of God, therein revealed, is freely bestowed upon all who seek it by repentance and faith.

Luther's theses challenged discussion; but no one dared accept the challenge. The questions which he proposed had in a few days spread through all Germany, and in a few weeks they had sounded throughout Christendom. Many devoted Romanists, who had seen and lamented the terrible iniquity prevailing in the church, but had not known how to arrest its progress, read the propositions with great joy, recognizing in them the voice of God. They felt that the Lord had graciously set His hand to arrest the rapidly swelling tide of corruption that was issuing from the see of Rome. Princes and magistrates secretly rejoiced that a check was to be put upon the arrogant power which denied the right of appeal from its decisions.

But the sin-loving and superstitious multitudes were terrified as the sophistries that had soothed their fears were swept away. Crafty ecclesiastics, interrupted in their work of sanctioning crime, and seeing their gains endangered, were enraged, and rallied to uphold their pretensions. The Reformer had bitter accusers to meet. Some charged him with acting hastily and from impulse. Others accused him of presumption, declaring that he was not directed of God, but was acting from pride and forwardness. "Who does not know," he responded, "that a man rarely puts forth any new idea without having some appearance of pride, and without being accused of exciting quarrels? . . . Why were Christ and all the martyrs put to death? Because they seemed to be proud contempters of the wisdom of the time, and because they advanced novelties without having first humbly taken counsel of the oracles of the ancient opinions."

Again he declared: "Whatever I do will be done, not by the prudence of men, but by the counsel of God. If the work be of God, who shall stop it? if it be not, who can forward it? Not my will, nor theirs, nor ours; but Thy will, O holy Father, which art in heaven."--Ibid., b. 3, ch. 6.

Though Luther had been moved by the Spirit of God to begin his work, he was not to carry it forward without severe conflicts. The reproaches of his enemies, their misrepresentation of his purposes, and their unjust and malicious reflections upon his character and motives, came in upon him like an overwhelming flood; and they were not without effect. He had felt confident that the leaders of the people, both in the church and in the schools, would gladly unite with him in efforts for reform. Words of encouragement from those in high position had inspired him with joy and hope. Already in anticipation he had seen a brighter day dawning for the church. But encouragement had changed to reproach and condemnation. Many dignitaries, of both church and state, were convicted of the truthfulness of his theses; but they soon saw that the acceptance of these truths would involve great changes. To enlighten and reform the people would be virtually to undermine the authority of Rome, to stop thousands of streams now flowing into her treasury, and thus greatly to curtail the extravagance and luxury of the papal leaders. Furthermore, to teach the people to think and act as responsible beings, looking to Christ alone for salvation, would overthrow the pontiff's throne and eventually destroy their own authority. For this reason they refused the knowledge tendered them of God and arrayed themselves against Christ and the truth by their opposition to the man whom He had sent to enlighten them.

Luther trembled as he looked upon himself--one man opposed to the mightiest powers of earth. He sometimes doubted whether he had indeed been led of God to set himself against the authority of the church. "Who was I," he writes, "to oppose the majesty of the pope, before whom . . . the kings of the earth and the whole world trembled? . . . No one can know what my heart suffered during these first two years, and into what despondency, I may say into what despair, I was sunk."--Ibid., b. 3, ch. 6. But he was not left to become utterly disheartened. When human support failed, he looked to God alone and learned that he could lean in perfect safety upon that all-powerful arm.

To a friend of the Reformation Luther wrote: "We cannot attain to the understanding of Scripture either by study or by the intellect. Your first duty is to begin by prayer. Entreat the Lord to grant you, of His great mercy, the true understanding of His word. There is no other interpreter of the word of God than the Author of this word, as He Himself has said, 'They shall be all taught of God.' Hope for nothing from your own labors, from your own understanding: trust solely in God, and in the influence of His Spirit. Believe this on the word of a man who has had experience."--Ibid., b. 3, ch. 7. Here is a lesson of vital importance to those who feel that God has called them to present to others the solemn truths for this time. These truths will stir the enmity of Satan and of men who love the fables that he has devised. In the conflict with the powers of evil there is need of something more than strength of intellect and human wisdom.

When enemies appealed to custom and tradition, or to the assertions and authority of the pope, Luther met them with the Bible and the Bible only. Here were arguments which they could not answer; therefore the slaves of formalism and superstition clamored for his blood, as the Jews had clamored for the blood of Christ. "He is a heretic," cried the Roman zealots. "It is high treason against the church to allow so horrible a heretic to live one hour longer. Let the scaffold be instantly erected for him!"--Ibid., b. 3, ch. 9. But Luther did not fall a prey to their fury. God had a work for him to do, and angels of heaven were sent to protect him. Many, however, who had received from Luther the precious light were made the objects of Satan's wrath and for the truth's sake fearlessly suffered torture and death.

Luther's teachings attracted the attention of thoughtful minds throughout all Germany. From his sermons and writings issued beams of light which awakened and illuminated thousands. A living faith was taking the place of the dead formalism in which the church had so long been held. The people were daily losing confidence in the superstitions of Romanism. The barriers of prejudice were giving way. The word of God, by which Luther tested every doctrine and every claim, was like a two-edged sword, cutting its way to the hearts of the people. Everywhere there was awakening a desire for spiritual progress. Everywhere was such a hungering and thirsting after righteousness as had not been known for ages. The eyes of the people, so long directed to human rites and earthly mediators, were now turning in penitence and faith to Christ and Him crucified.

This widespread interest aroused still further the fears of the papal authorities. Luther received a summons to appear at Rome to answer to the charge of heresy. The command filled his friends with terror. They knew full well the danger that threatened him in that corrupt city, already drunk with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. They protested against his going to Rome and requested that he receive his examination in Germany.

This arrangement was finally effected, and the pope's legate was appointed to hear the case. In the instructions communicated by the pontiff to this official, it was stated that Luther had already been declared a heretic. The legate was therefore charged "to prosecute and constrain without any delay." If he should remain steadfast, and the legate should fail to gain possession of his person, he was empowered "to proscribe him in every part of Germany; to banish, curse, and excommunicate all those who are attached to him."--Ibid., b. 4, ch. 2. And, further, the pope directed his legate, in order entirely to root out the pestilent heresy, to excommunicate all, of whatever dignity in church or state, except the emperor, who should neglect to seize Luther and his adherents, and deliver them up to the vengeance of Rome.

Here is displayed the true spirit of popery. Not a trace of Christian principle, or even of common justice, is to be seen in the whole document. Luther was at a great distance from Rome; he had had no opportunity to explain or defend his position; yet before his case had been investigated, he was summarily pronounced a heretic, and in the same day, exhorted, accused, judged, and condemned; and all this by the self-styled holy father, the only supreme, infallible authority in church or state!

At this time, when Luther so much needed the sympathy and counsel of a true friend, God's providence sent Melancthon to Wittenberg. Young in years, modest and diffident in his manners, Melancthon's sound judgment, extensive knowledge, and winning eloquence, combined with the purity and uprightness of his character, won universal admiration and esteem. The brilliancy of his talents was not more marked than his gentleness of disposition. He soon became an earnest disciple of the gospel, and Luther's most trusted friend and valued supporter; his gentleness, caution, and exactness serving as a complement to Luther's courage and energy. Their union in the work added strength to the Reformation and was a source of great encouragement to Luther.

Augsburg had been fixed upon as the place of trial, and the Reformer set out on foot to perform the journey thither. Serious fears were entertained in his behalf. Threats had been made openly that he would be seized and murdered on the way, and his friends begged him not to venture. They even entreated him to leave Wittenberg for a time and find safety with those who would gladly protect him. But he would not leave the position where God had placed him. He must continue faithfully to maintain the truth, notwithstanding the storms that were beating upon him. His language was: "I am like Jeremiah, a man of strife and contention; but the more their threats increase, the more my joy is multiplied. . . . They have already destroyed my honor and my reputation. One single thing remains; it is my wretched body: let them take it; they will thus shorten my life by a few hours. But as for my soul, they cannot take that. He who desires to proclaim the word of Christ to the world, must expect death at every moment."--Ibid., b. 4, ch. 4.

The tidings of Luther's arrival at Augsburg gave great satisfaction to the papal legate. The troublesome heretic who was exciting the attention of the whole world seemed now in the power of Rome, and the legate determined that he should not escape. The Reformer had failed to provide himself with a safe-conduct. His friends urged him not to appear before the legate without one, and they themselves undertook to procure it from the emperor. The legate intended to force Luther, if possible, to retract, or, failing in this, to cause him to be conveyed to Rome, to share the fate of Huss and Jerome. Therefore through his agents he endeavored to induce Luther to appear without a safe-conduct, trusting himself to his mercy. This the Reformer firmly declined to do. Not until he had received the document pledging him the emperor's protection, did he appear in the presence of the papal ambassador.

As a matter of policy, the Romanists had decided to attempt to win Luther by an appearance of gentleness. The legate, in his interviews with him, professed great friendliness; but he demanded that Luther submit implicitly to the authority of the church, and yield every point without argument or question. He had not rightly estimated the character of the man with whom he had to deal. Luther, in reply, expressed his regard for the church, his desire for the truth, his readiness to answer all objections to what he had taught, and to submit his doctrines to the decision of certain leading universities. But at the same time he protested against the cardinal's course in requiring him to retract without having proved him in error.

The only response was: "Retract, retract!" The Reformer showed that his position was sustained by the Scriptures and firmly declared that he could not renounce the truth. The legate, unable to reply to Luther's arguments, overwhelmed him with a storm of reproaches, gibes, and flattery, interspersed with quotations from tradition and the sayings of the Fathers, granting the Reformer no opportunity to speak. Seeing that the conference, thus continued, would be utterly futile, Luther finally obtained a reluctant permission to present his answer in writing.

"In so doing," said he, writing to a friend, "the oppressed find double gain; first, what is written may be submitted to the judgment of others; and second, one has a better chance of working on the fears, if not on the conscience, of an arrogant and babbling despot, who would otherwise overpower by his imperious language."--Martyn, The Life and Times of Luther, pages 271, 272.

At the next interview, Luther presented a clear, concise, and forcible exposition of his views, fully supported by many quotations from Scripture. This paper, after reading aloud, he handed to the cardinal, who, however, cast it contemptuously aside, declaring it to be a mass of idle words and irrelevant quotations. Luther, fully aroused, now met the haughty prelate on his own ground--the traditions and teachings of the church--and utterly overthrew his assumptions.

When the prelate saw that Luther's reasoning was unanswerable, he lost all self-control, and in a rage cried out: "Retract! or I will send you to Rome, there to appear before the judges commissioned to take cognizance of your cause. I will excommunicate you and all your partisans, and all who shall at any time countenance you, and will cast them out of the church." And he finally declared, in a haughty and angry tone: "Retract, or return no more."-- D'Aubigne, London ed., b. 4, ch. 8.

The Reformer promptly withdrew with his friends, thus declaring plainly that no retraction was to be expected from him. This was not what the cardinal had purposed. He had flattered himself that by violence he could awe Luther to submission. Now, left alone with his supporters, he looked from one to another in utter chagrin at the unexpected failure of his schemes.

Luther's efforts on this occasion were not without good results. The large assembly present had opportunity to compare the two men, and to judge for themselves of the spirit manifested by them, as well as of the strength and truthfulness of their positions. How marked the contrast! The Reformer, simple, humble, firm, stood up in the strength of God, having truth on his side; the pope's representative, self-important, overbearing, haughty, and unreasonable, was without a single argument from the Scriptures, yet vehemently crying: "Retract, or be sent to Rome for punishment."

Notwithstanding Luther had secured a safe-conduct, the Romanists were plotting to seize and imprison him. His friends urged that as it was useless for him to prolong his stay, he should return to Wittenberg without delay, and that the utmost caution should be observed in order to conceal his intentions. He accordingly left Augsburg before day-break, on horseback, accompanied only by a guide furnished him by the magistrate. With many forebodings he secretly made his way through the dark and silent streets of the city. Enemies, vigilant and cruel, were plotting his destruction. Would he escape the snares prepared for him? Those were moments of anxiety and earnest prayer. He reached a small gate in the wall of the city. It was opened for him, and with his guide he passed through without hindrance. Once safely outside, the fugitives hastened their flight, and before the legate learned of Luther's departure, he was beyond the reach of his persecutors. Satan and his emissaries were defeated. The man whom they had thought in their power was gone, escaped as a bird from the snare of the fowler.

At the news of Luther's escape the legate was overwhelmed with surprise and anger. He had expected to receive great honor for his wisdom and firmness in dealing with this disturber of the church; but his hope was disappointed. He gave expression to his wrath in a letter to Frederick, the elector of Saxony, bitterly denouncing Luther and demanding that Frederick send the Reformer to Rome or banish him from Saxony.

In defense, Luther urged that the legate or the pope show him his errors from the Scriptures, and pledged himself in the most solemn manner to renounce his doctrines if they could be shown to contradict the word of God. And he expressed his gratitude to God that he had been counted worthy to suffer in so holy a cause.

The elector had, as yet, little knowledge of the reformed doctrines, but he was deeply impressed by the candor, force, and clearness of Luther's words; and until the Reformer should be proved to be in error, Frederick resolved to stand as his protector. In reply to the legate's demand he wrote: "Since Dr. Martin has appeared before you at Augsburg, you should be satisfied. We did not expect that you would endeavor to make him retract without having convinced him of his errors. None of the learned men in our principality have informed me that Martin's doctrine is impious, anti-christian, or heretical.' The prince refused, moreover, to send Luther to Rome, or to expel him from his states."-- D'Aubigne, b. 4, ch. 10.

The elector saw that there was a general breaking down of the moral restraints of society. A great work of reform was needed. The complicated and expensive arrangements to restrain and punish crime would be unnecessary if men but acknowledged and obeyed the requirements of God and the dictates of an enlightened conscience. He saw that Luther was laboring to secure this object, and he secretly rejoiced that a better influence was making itself felt in the church.

He saw also that as a professor in the university Luther was eminently successful. Only a year had passed since the Reformer posted his theses on the castle church, yet there was already a great falling off in the number of pilgrims that visited the church at the festival of All Saints. Rome had been deprived of worshipers and offerings, but their place was filled by another class, who now came to Wittenberg, not pilgrims to adore her relics, but students to fill her halls of learning. The writings of Luther had kindled everywhere a new interest in the Holy Scriptures, and not only from all parts of Germany, but from other lands, students flocked to the university. Young men, coming in sight of Wittenberg for the first time, "raised their hands to heaven, and praised God for having caused the light of truth to shine forth from this city, as from Zion in times of old, and whence it spread even to the most distant countries."--Ibid., b. 4, ch. 10.

Luther was as yet but partially converted from the errors of Romanism. But as he compared the Holy Oracles with the papal decrees and constitutions, he was filled with wonder. "I am reading," he wrote, "the decrees of the pontiffs, and . . . I do not know whether the pope is antichrist himself, or his apostle, so greatly is Christ misrepresented and crucified in them."--Ibid., b. 5, ch. 1. Yet at this time Luther was still a supporter of the Roman Church, and had no thought that he would ever separate from her communion.

The Reformer's writings and his doctrine were extending to every nation in Christendom. The work spread to Switzerland and Holland. Copies of his writings found their way to France and Spain. In England his teachings were received as the word of life. To Belgium and Italy also the truth had extended. Thousands were awakening from their deathlike stupor to the joy and hope of a life of faith.

Rome became more and more exasperated by the attacks of Luther, and it was declared by some of his fanatical opponents, even by doctors in Catholic universities, that he who should kill the rebellious monk would be without sin. One day a stranger, with a pistol hidden under his cloak, approached the Reformer and inquired why he went thus alone. "I am in God's hands," answered Luther. "He is my strength and my shield. What can man do unto me?"--Ibid., b. 6, ch. 2. Upon hearing these words, the stranger turned pale and fled away as from the presence of the angels of heaven.

Rome was bent upon the destruction of Luther; but God was his defense. His doctrines were heard everywhere--"in cottages and convents, . . . in the castles of the nobles, in the universities, and in the palaces of kings;" and noble men were rising on every hand to sustain his efforts.--Ibid., b. 6, ch. 2.

It was about this time that Luther, reading the works of Huss, found that the great truth of justification by faith, which he himself was seeking to uphold and teach, had been held by the Bohemian Reformer. "We have all," said Luther, "Paul, Augustine, and myself, been Hussites without knowing it!" "God will surely visit it upon the world," he continued, "that the truth was preached to it a century ago, and burned!"--Wylie, b. 6, ch. 1

In an appeal to the emperor and nobility of Germany in behalf of the reformation of Christianity, Luther wrote concerning the pope: "It is a horrible thing to behold the man who styles himself Christ's vicegerent, displaying a magnificence that no emperor can equal. Is this being like the poor Jesus, or the humble Peter? He is, say they, the lord of the world! But Christ, whose vicar he boasts of being, has said, 'My kingdom is not of this world.' Can the dominions of a vicar extend beyond those of his superior?"--D'Aubigne, b. 6, ch. 3.

He wrote thus of the universities: "I am much afraid that the universities will prove to be the great gates of hell, unless they diligently labor in explaining the Holy Scriptures, and engraving them in the hearts of youth. I advise no one to place his child where the Scriptures do not reign paramount. Every institution in which men are not unceasingly occupied with the word of God must become corrupt."--Ibid., b. 6, ch. 3.

This appeal was rapidly circulated throughout Germany and exerted a powerful influence upon the people. The whole nation was stirred, and multitudes were roused to rally around the standard of reform. Luther's opponents, burning with a desire for revenge, urged the pope to take decisive measures against him. It was decreed that his doctrines should be immediately condemned. Sixty days were granted the Reformer and his adherents, after which, if they did not recant, they were all to be excommunicated.

That was a terrible crisis for the Reformation. For centuries Rome's sentence of excommunication had struck terror to powerful monarchs; it had filled mighty empires with woe and desolation. Those upon whom its condemnation fell were universally regarded with dread and horror; they were cut off from intercourse with their fellows and treated as outlaws, to be hunted to extermination. Luther was not blind to the tempest about to burst upon him; but he stood firm, trusting in Christ to be his support and shield. With a martyr's faith and courage he wrote: "What is about to happen I know not, nor do I care to know. . . . Let the blow light where it may, I am without fear. Not so much as a leaf falls, without the will of our Father. How much rather will He care for us! It is a light thing to die for the Word, since the Word which was made flesh hath Himself died. If we die with Him, we shall live with Him; and passing through that which He has passed through before us, we shall be where He is and dwell with Him forever."--Ibid., 3d London ed., Walther, 1840, b. 6, ch. 9.

When the papal bull reached Luther, he said: "I despise and attack it, as impious, false. . . . It is Christ Himself who is condemned therein. . . . I rejoice in having to bear such ills for the best of causes. Already I feel greater liberty in my heart; for at last I know that the pope is antichrist, and that his throne is that of Satan himself."--D'Aubigne, b. 6, ch. 9.

Yet the mandate of Rome was not without effect. Prison, torture, and sword were weapons potent to enforce obedience. The weak and superstitious trembled before the decree of the pope; and while there was general sympathy for Luther, many felt that life was too dear to be risked in the cause of reform. Everything seemed to indicate that the Reformer's work was about to close.

But Luther was fearless still. Rome had hurled her anathemas against him, and the world looked on, nothing doubting that he would perish or be forced to yield. But with terrible power he flung back upon herself the sentence of condemnation and publicly declared his determination to abandon her forever. In the presence of a crowd of students, doctors, and citizens of all ranks Luther burned the pope's bull, with the canon laws, the decretals, and certain writings sustaining the papal power. "My enemies have been able, by burning my books," he said, "to injure the cause of truth in the minds of the common people, and destroy their souls; for this reason I consumed their books in return. A serious struggle has just begun. Hitherto I have been only playing with the pope. I began this work in God's name; it will be ended without me, and by His might." --Ibid., b. 6, ch. 10.

To the reproaches of his enemies who taunted him with the weakness of his cause, Luther answered: "Who knows if God has not chosen and called me, and if they ought not to fear that, by despising me, they despise God Himself? Moses was alone at the departure from Egypt; Elijah was alone in the reign of King Ahab; Isaiah alone in Jerusalem; Ezekiel alone in Babylon. . . . God never selected as a prophet either the high priest or any other great personage; but ordinarily He chose low and despised men, once even the shepherd Amos. In every age, the saints have had to reprove the great, kings, princes, priests, and wise men, at the peril of their lives. . . . I do not say that I am a prophet; but I say that they ought to fear precisely because I am alone and that they are many. I am sure of this, that the word of God is with me, and that it is not with them."--Ibid., b. 6, ch. 10.

Yet it was not without a terrible struggle with himself that Luther decided upon a final separation from the church. It was about this time that he wrote: "I feel more and more every day how difficult it is to lay aside the scruples which one has imbibed in childhood. Oh, how much pain it has caused me, though I had the Scriptures on my side, to justify it to myself that I should dare to make a stand alone against the pope, and hold him forth as antichrist! What have the tribulations of my heart not been! How many times have I not asked myself with bitterness that question which was so frequent on the lips of the papists: 'Art thou alone wise? Can everyone else be mistaken? How will it be, if, after all, it is thyself who art wrong, and who art involving in thy error so many souls, who will then be eternally damned?' 'Twas so I fought with myself and with Satan, till Christ, by His own infallible word, fortified my heart against these doubts."--Martyn, pages 372, 373.

The pope had threatened Luther with excommunication if he did not recant, and the threat was now fulfilled. A new bull appeared, declaring the Reformer's final separation from the Roman Church, denouncing him as accursed of Heaven, and including in the same condemnation all who should receive his doctrines. The great contest had been fully entered upon.

Opposition is the lot of all whom God employs to present truths specially applicable to their time. There was a present truth in the days of Luther,--a truth at that time of special importance; there is a present truth for the church today. He who does all things according to the counsel of His will has been pleased to place men under various circumstances and to enjoin upon them duties peculiar to the times in which they live and the conditions under which they are placed. If they would prize the light given them, broader views of truth would be opened before them. But truth is no more desired by the majority today than it was by the papists who opposed Luther. There is the same disposition to accept the theories and traditions of men instead of the word of God as in former ages. Those who present the truth for this time should not expect to be received with greater favor than were earlier reformers. The great controversy between truth and error, between Christ and Satan, is to increase in intensity to the close of this world's history.

Said Jesus to His disciples: "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept My saying, they will keep yours also." John 15:19, 20. And on the other hand our Lord declared plainly: "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets." Luke 6:26. The spirit of the world is no more in harmony with the spirit of Christ today than in earlier times, and those who preach the word of God in its purity will be received with no greater favor now than then. The forms of opposition to the truth may change, the enmity may be less open because it is more subtle; but the same antagonism still exists and will be manifested to the end of time.

Continue with Luther - The Diet at Worms

To read this in its original source see chapter #7 of The Great Controversy (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 15th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Zwingli - The Swiss Reformer

In the choice of instrumentalities for the reforming of the church, the same divine plan is seen as in that for the planting of the church. The heavenly Teacher passed by the great men of the earth, the titled and wealthy, who were accustomed to receive praise and homage as leaders of the people. They were so proud and self-confident in their boasted superiority that they could not be molded to sympathize with their fellow men and to become colaborers with the humble Man of Nazareth. To the unlearned, toiling fishermen of Galilee was the call addressed: "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men." Matthew 4:19. These disciples were humble and teachable. The less they had been influenced by the false teaching of their time, the more successfully could Christ instruct and train them for His service. So in the days of the Great Reformation. The leading Reformers were men from humble life--men who were most free of any of their time from pride of rank and from the influence of bigotry and priestcraft. It is God's plan to employ humble instruments to accomplish great results. Then the glory will not be given to men, but to Him who works through them to will and to do of His own good pleasure.

A few weeks after the birth of Luther in a miner's cabin in Saxony, Ulric Zwingli was born in a herdsman's cottage among the Alps. Zwingli's surroundings in childhood, and his early training, were such as to prepare him for his future mission. Reared amid scenes of natural grandeur, beauty, and awful sublimity, his mind was early impressed with a sense of the greatness, the power, and the majesty of God. The history of the brave deeds achieved upon his native mountains kindled his youthful aspirations. And at the side of his pious grandmother he listened to the few precious Bible stories which she had gleaned from amid the legends and traditions of the church. With eager interest he heard of the grand deeds of patriarchs and prophets, of the shepherds who watched their flocks on the hills of Palestine where angels talked with them, of the Babe of Bethlehem and the Man of Calvary.

Like John Luther, Zwingli's father desired an education for his son, and the boy was early sent from his native valley. His mind rapidly developed, and it soon became a question where to find teachers competent to instruct him. At the age of thirteen he went to Bern, which then possessed the most distinguished school in Switzerland. Here, however, a danger arose which threatened to blight the promise of his life. Determined efforts were put forth by the friars to allure him into a monastery. The Dominican and Franciscan monks were in rivalry for popular favor. This they endeavored to secure by the showy adornments of their churches, the pomp of their ceremonials, and the attractions of famous relics and miracle-working images.

The Dominicans of Bern saw that if they could win this talented young scholar, they would secure both gain and honor. His extreme youth, his natural ability as a speaker and writer, and his genius for music and poetry, would be more effective than all their pomp and display, in attracting the people to their services and increasing the revenues of their order. By deceit and flattery they endeavored to induce Zwingli to enter their convent. Luther, while a student at school, had buried himself in a convent cell, and he would have been lost to the world had not God's providence released him. Zwingli was not permitted to encounter the same peril. Providentially his father received information of the designs of the friars. He had no intention of allowing his son to follow the idle and worthless life of the monks. He saw that his future usefulness was at stake, and directed him to return home without delay.

The command was obeyed; but the youth could not be long content in his native valley, and he soon resumed his studies, repairing, after a time, to Basel. It was here that Zwingli first

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ Huldreich Zwingli
(1484-1531)

The doctrine preached by Zwingli was not received from Luther. It was the doctrine of Christ. "If Luther preaches Christ," said the Swiss Reformer, "he does what I am doing. Those whom he has brought to Christ are more numerous than those whom I have led. But this matters not. I will bear no other name than that of Christ, whose soldier I am, and who alone is my Chief. Never has one single word been written by me to Luther, nor by Luther to me. And why? . . . That it might be shown how much the Spirit of God is in unison with itself, since both of us, without any collusion, teach the doctrine of Christ with such uniformity." --D'Aubigne, b. 8, ch. 9.

For significant statements on prophecy made by Zwingli see the document entitled: Reformers Reveal the Beast heard the gospel of God's free grace. Wittenbach, a teacher of the ancient languages, had, while studying Greek and Hebrew, been led to the Holy Scriptures, and thus rays of divine light were shed into the minds of the students under his instruction. He declared that there was a truth more ancient, and of infinitely greater worth, than the theories taught by schoolmen and philosophers. This ancient truth was that the death of Christ is the sinner's only ransom. To Zwingli these words were as the first ray of light that precedes the dawn.

Zwingli was soon called from Basel to enter upon his lifework. His first field of labor was in an Alpine parish, not far distant from his native valley. Having received ordination as a priest, he "devoted himself with his whole soul to the search after divine truth; for he was well aware," says a fellow Reformer, "how much he must know to whom the flock of Christ is entrusted."--Wylie, b. 8, ch. 5. The more he searched the Scriptures, the clearer appeared the contrast between their truths and the heresies of Rome. He submitted himself to the Bible as the word of God, the only sufficient, infallible rule. He saw that it must be its own interpreter. He dared not attempt to explain Scripture to sustain a preconceived theory or doctrine, but held it his duty to learn what is its direct and obvious teaching. He sought to avail himself of every help to obtain a full and correct understanding of its meaning, and he invoked the aid of the Holy Spirit, which would, he declared, reveal it to all who sought it in sincerity and with prayer.

"The Scriptures," said Zwingli, "come from God, not from man, and even that God who enlightens will give thee to understand that the speech comes from God. The word of God . . . cannot fail; it is bright, it teaches itself, it discloses itself, it illumines the soul with all salvation and grace, comforts it in God, humbles it, so that it loses and even forfeits itself, and embraces God." The truth of these words Zwingli himself had proved. Speaking of his experience at this time, he afterward wrote: "When . . . I began to give myself wholly up to the Holy Scriptures, philosophy and theology (scholastic) would always keep suggesting quarrels to me. At last I came to this, that I thought, 'Thou must let all that lie, and learn the meaning of God purely out of His own simple word.' Then I began to ask God for His light, and the Scriptures began to be much easier to me."--Ibid., b. 8, ch. 6.

The doctrine preached by Zwingli was not received from Luther. It was the doctrine of Christ. "If Luther preaches Christ," said the Swiss Reformer, "he does what I am doing. Those whom he has brought to Christ are more numerous than those whom I have led. But this matters not. I will bear no other name than that of Christ, whose soldier I am, and who alone is my Chief. Never has one single word been written by me to Luther, nor by Luther to me. And why? . . . That it might be shown how much the Spirit of God is in unison with itself, since both of us, without any collusion, teach the doctrine of Christ with such uniformity." --D'Aubigne, b. 8, ch. 9.

In 1516 Zwingli was invited to become a preacher in the convent at Einsiedeln. Here he was to have a closer view of the corruptions of Rome and was to exert an influence as a Reformer that would be felt far beyond his native Alps. Among the chief attractions of Einsiedeln was an image of the Virgin which was said to have the power of working miracles. Above the gateway of the convent was the inscription, "Here a plenary remission of sins may be obtained."--Ibid., b. 8, ch. 5. Pilgrims at all seasons resorted to the shrine of the Virgin; but at the great yearly festival of its consecration multitudes came from all parts of Switzerland, and even from France and Germany. Zwingli, greatly afflicted at the sight, seized the opportunity to proclaim liberty through the gospel to these bondslaves of superstition.

"Do not imagine," he said, "that God is in this temple more than in any other part of creation. Whatever be the country in which you dwell, God is around you, and hears you. . . . Can unprofitable works, long pilgrimages, offerings, images, the invocation of the Virgin or of the saints, secure for you the grace of God? . . . What avails the multitude of words with which we embody our prayers? What efficacy has a glossy cowl, a smooth-shorn head, a long and flowing robe, or gold-embroidered slippers? . . . God looks at the heart, and our hearts are far from Him." "Christ," he said, "who was once offered upon the cross, is the sacrifice and victim, that had made satisfaction for the sins of believers to all eternity."--Ibid., b. 8, ch. 5.

To many listeners these teachings were unwelcome. It was a bitter disappointment to them to be told that their toilsome journey had been made in vain. The pardon freely offered to them through Christ they could not comprehend. They were satisfied with the old way to heaven which Rome had marked out for them. They shrank from the perplexity of searching for anything better. It was easier to trust their salvation to the priests and the pope than to seek for purity of heart.

But another class received with gladness the tidings of redemption through Christ. The observances enjoined by Rome had failed to bring peace of soul, and in faith they accepted the Saviour's blood as their propitiation. These returned to their homes to reveal to others the precious light which they had received. The truth was thus carried from hamlet to hamlet, from town to town, and the number of pilgrims to the Virgin's shrine greatly lessened. There was a falling off in the offerings, and consequently in the salary of Zwingli, which was drawn from them. But this caused him only joy as he saw that the power of fanaticism and superstition was being broken.

The authorities of the church were not blind to the work which Zwingli was accomplishing; but for the present they forbore to interfere. Hoping yet to secure him to their cause, they endeavored to win him by flatteries; and meanwhile the truth was gaining a hold upon the hearts of the people.

Zwingli's labors at Einsiedeln had prepared him for a wider field, and this he was soon to enter. After three years here he was called to the office of preacher in the cathedral at Zurich. This was then the most important town of the Swiss confederacy, and the influence exerted here would be widely felt. The ecclesiastics by whose invitation he came to Zurich were, however, desirous of preventing any innovations, and they accordingly proceeded to instruct him as to his duties.

"You will make every exertion," they said, "to collect the revenues of the chapter, without overlooking the least. You will exhort the faithful, both from the pulpit and in the confessional, to pay all tithes and dues, and to show by their offerings their affection to the church. You will be diligent in increasing the income arising from the sick, from masses, and in general from every ecclesiastical ordinance." "As for the administration of the sacraments, the preaching, and the care of the flock," added his instructors, "these are also the duties of the chaplain. But for these you may employ a substitute, and particularly in preaching. You should administer the sacraments to none but persons of note, and only when called upon; you are forbidden to do so without distinction of persons."--Ibid., b. 8, ch. 6.

Zwingli listened in silence to this charge, and in reply, after expressing his gratitude for the honor of a call to this important station, he proceeded to explain the course which he proposed to adopt. "The life of Christ," he said, "has been too long hidden from the people. I shall preach upon the whole of the Gospel of St. Matthew, . . . drawing solely from the fountains of Scripture, sounding its depths, comparing one passage with another, and seeking for understanding by constant and earnest prayer. It is to God's glory, to the praise of His only Son, to the real salvation of souls, and to their edification in the true faith, that I shall consecrate my ministry."--Ibid., b. 8, ch. 6. Though some of the ecclesiastics disapproved his plan, and endeavored to dissuade him from it, Zwingli remained steadfast. He declared that he was about to introduce no new method, but the old method employed by the church in earlier and purer times.

Already an interest had been awakened in the truths he taught; and the people flocked in great numbers to listen to his preaching. Many who had long since ceased to attend service were among his hearers. He began his ministry by opening the Gospels and reading and explaining to his hearers the inspired narrative of the life, teachings, and death of Christ. Here, as at Einsiedeln, he presented the word of God as the only infallible authority and the death of Christ as the only complete sacrifice. "It is to Christ," he said, "that I desire to lead you--to Christ, the true source of salvation." --Ibid., b. 8, ch. 6. Around the preacher crowded the people of all classes, from statesmen and scholars to the artisan and the peasant. With deep interest they listened to his words. He not only proclaimed the offer of a free salvation, but fearlessly rebuked the evils and corruptions of the times. Many returned from the cathedral praising God. "This man," they said, "is a preacher of the truth. He will be our Moses, to lead us forth from this Egyptian darkness."--Ibid., b. 8, ch. 6.

But though at first his labors were received with great enthusiasm, after a time opposition arose. The monks set themselves to hinder his work and condemn his teachings. Many assailed him with gibes and sneers; others resorted to insolence and threats. But Zwingli bore all with patience, saying: "If we desire to gain over the wicked to Jesus Christ, we must shut our eyes against many things." --Ibid., b. 8, ch. 6.

About this time a new agency came in to advance the work of reform. One Lucian was sent to Zurich with some of Luther's writings, by a friend of the reformed faith at Basel, who suggested that the sale of these books might be a powerful means of scattering the light. "Ascertain," he wrote to Zwingli, "whether this man possesses sufficient prudence and skill; if so, let him carry from city to city, from town to town, from village to village, and even from house to house, among the Swiss, the works of Luther, and especially his exposition of the Lord's Prayer written for the laity. The more they are known, the more purchasers they will find." --Ibid., b. 8, ch. 6. Thus the light found entrance.

At the time when God is preparing to break the shackles of ignorance and superstition, then it is that Satan works with greatest power to enshroud men in darkness and to bind their fetters still more firmly. As men were rising up in different lands to present to the people forgiveness and justification through the blood of Christ, Rome proceeded with renewed energy to open her market throughout Christendom, offering pardon for money.

Every sin had its price, and men were granted free license for crime if the treasury of the church was kept well filled. Thus the two movements advanced,--one offering forgiveness of sin for money, the other forgiveness through Christ,-- Rome licensing sin and making it her source of revenue; the Reformers condemning sin and pointing to Christ as the propitiation and deliverer.

In Germany the sale of indulgences had been committed to the Dominican friars and was conducted by the infamous Tetzel. In Switzerland the traffic was put into the hands of the Franciscans, under the control of Samson, an Italian monk. Samson had already done good service to the church, having secured immense sums from Germany and Switzerland to fill the papal treasury. Now he traversed Switzerland, attracting great crowds, despoiling the poor peasants of their scanty earnings, and exacting rich gifts from the wealthy classes. But the influence of the reform already made itself felt in curtailing, though it could not stop, the traffic. Zwingli was still at Einsiedeln when Samson, soon after entering Switzerland, arrived with his wares at a neighboring town. Being apprised of his mission, the Reformer immediately set out to oppose him. The two did not meet, but such was Zwingli's success in exposing the friar's pretensions that he was obliged to leave for other quarters.

At Zurich, Zwingli preached zealously against the pardonmongers; and when Samson approached the place, he was met by a messenger from the council with an intimation that he was expected to pass on. He finally secured an entrance by stratagem, but was sent away without the sale of a single pardon, and he soon after left Switzerland.

A strong impetus was given to the reform by the appearance of the plague, or Great Death, which swept over Switzerland in the year 1519. As men were thus brought face to face with the destroyer, many were led to feel how vain and worthless were the pardons which they had so lately purchased; and they longed for a surer foundation for their faith. Zwingli at Zurich was smitten down; he was brought so low that all hope of his recovery was relinquished, and the report was widely circulated that he was dead. In that trying hour his hope and courage were unshaken. He looked in faith to the cross of Calvary, trusting in the all-sufficient propitiation for sin. When he came back from the gates of death, it was to preach the gospel with greater fervor than ever before; and his words exerted an unwonted power. The people welcomed with joy their beloved pastor, returned to them from the brink of the grave. They themselves had come from attending upon the sick and the dying, and they felt, as never before, the value of the gospel.

Zwingli had arrived at a clearer understanding of its truths, and had more fully experienced in himself its renewing power. The fall of man and the plan of redemption were the subjects upon which he dwelt. "In Adam," he said, "we are all dead, sunk in corruption and condemnation." --Wylie, b. 8, ch. 9. "Christ . . . has purchased for us a never-ending redemption. . . . His passion is . . . an eternal sacrifice, and everlastingly effectual to heal; it satisfies the divine justice forever in behalf of all those who rely upon it with firm and unshaken faith." Yet he clearly taught that men are not, because of the grace of Christ, free to continue in sin. "Wherever there is faith in God, there God is; and wherever God abideth, there a zeal exists urging and impelling men to good works."--D'Aubigne, b. 8, ch. 9.

Such was the interest in Zwingli's preaching that the cathedral was filled to overflowing with the crowds that came to listen to him. Little by little, as they could bear it, he opened the truth to his hearers. He was careful not to introduce, at first, points which would startle them and create prejudice. His work was to win their hearts to the teachings of Christ, to soften them by His love, and keep before them His example; and as they should receive the principles of the gospel, their superstitious beliefs and practices would inevitably be overthrown.

Step by step the Reformation advanced in Zurich. In alarm its enemies aroused to active opposition. One year before, the monk of Wittenberg had uttered his No to the pope and the emperor at Worms, and now everything seemed to indicate a similar withstanding of the papal claims at Zurich. Repeated attacks were made upon Zwingli. In the papal cantons, from time to time, disciples of the gospel were brought to the stake, but this was not enough; the teacher of heresy must be silenced. Accordingly the bishop of Constance dispatched three deputies to the Council of Zurich, accusing Zwingli of teaching the people to transgress the laws of the church, thus endangering the peace and good order of society. If the authority of the church were to be set aside, he urged, universal anarchy would result. Zwingli replied that he had been for four years teaching the gospel in Zurich, "which was more quiet and peaceful than any other town in the confederacy." "Is not, then," he said, "Christianity the best safeguard of the general security?"--Wylie, b. 8, ch. 11.

The deputies had admonished the councilors to continue in the church, out of which, they declared, there was no salvation. Zwingli responded: "Let not this accusation move you. The foundation of the church is the same Rock, the same Christ, that gave Peter his name because he confessed Him faithfully. In every nation whosoever believes with all his heart in the Lord Jesus is accepted of God. Here, truly, is the church, out of which no one can be saved."--D'Aubigne, London ed., b. 8, ch. 11. As a result of the conference, one of the bishop's deputies accepted the reformed faith.

The council declined to take action against Zwingli, and Rome prepared for a fresh attack. The Reformer, when apprised of the plots of his enemies, exclaimed: "Let them come on; I fear them as the beetling cliff fears the waves that thunder at its feet."--Wylie, b. 8, ch. 11. The efforts of the ecclesiastics only furthered the cause which they sought to overthrow. The truth continued to spread. In Germany its adherents, cast down by Luther's disappearance, took heart again, as they saw the progress of the gospel in Switzerland.

As the Reformation became established in Zurich, its fruits were more fully seen in the suppression of vice and the promotion of order and harmony. "Peace has her habitation in our town," wrote Zwingli; "no quarrel, no hypocrisy, no envy, no strife. Whence can such union come but from the Lord, and our doctrine, which fills us with the fruits of peace and piety?"--Ibid., b. 8, ch. 15.

The victories gained by the Reformation stirred the Romanists to still more determined efforts for its overthrow. Seeing how little had been accomplished by persecution in suppressing Luther's work in Germany, they decided to meet the reform with its own weapons. They would hold a disputation with Zwingli, and having the arrangement of matters, they would make sure of victory by choosing, themselves, not only the place of the combat, but the judges that should decide between the disputants. And if they could once get Zwingli into their power, they would take care that he did not escape them. The leader silenced, the movement could speedily be crushed. This purpose, however, was carefully concealed.

The disputation was appointed to be held at Baden; but Zwingli was not present. The Council of Zurich, suspecting the designs of the papists, and warned by the burning piles kindled in the papal cantons for confessors of the gospel, forbade their pastor to expose himself to this peril. At Zurich he was ready to meet all the partisans that Rome might send; but to go to Baden, where the blood of martyrs for the truth had just been shed, was to go to certain death. Oecolampadius and Haller were chosen to represent the Reformers, while the famous Dr. Eck, supported by a host of learned doctors and prelates, was the champion of Rome.

Though Zwingli was not present at the conference, his influence was felt. The secretaries were all chosen by the papists, and others were forbidden to take notes, on pain of death. Notwithstanding this, Zwingli received daily a faithful account of what was said at Baden. A student in attendance at the disputation made a record each evening of the arguments that day presented. These papers two other students undertook to deliver, with the daily letters of Oecolampadius, to Zwingli at Zurich. The Reformer answered, giving counsel and suggestions. His letters were written by night, and the students returned with them to Baden in the morning. To elude the vigilance of the guard stationed at the city gates, these messengers brought baskets of poultry on their heads, and they were permitted to pass without hindrance.

Thus Zwingli maintained the battle with his wily antagonists. He "has labored more," said Myconius, "by his meditations, his sleepless nights, and the advice which he transmitted to Baden, than he would have done by discussing in person in the midst of his enemies."--D'Aubigne, b. 11, ch. 13.

The Romanists, flushed with anticipated triumph, had come to Baden attired in their richest robes and glittering with jewels. They fared luxuriously, their tables spread with the most costly delicacies and the choicest wines. The burden of their ecclesiastical duties was lightened by gaiety and reveling. In marked contrast appeared the Reformers, who were looked upon by the people as little better than a company of beggars, and whose frugal fare kept them but short time at table. Oecolampadius's landlord, taking occasion to watch him in his room, found him always engaged in study or at prayer, and greatly wondering, reported that the heretic was at least "very pious."

At the conference, "Eck haughtily ascended a pulpit splendidly decorated, while the humble Oecolampadius, meanly clothed, was forced to take his seat in front of his opponent on a rudely carved stool."--Ibid., b. 11, ch. 13. Eck's stentorian voice and unbounded assurance never failed him. His zeal was stimulated by the hope of gold as well as fame; for the defender of the faith was to be rewarded by a handsome fee. When better arguments failed, he had resort to insults, and even to oaths.

Oecolampadius, modest and self-distrustful, had shrunk from the combat, and he entered upon it with the solemn avowal: "I acknowledge no other standard of judgment than the word of God."--Ibid., b. 11, ch. 13. Though gentle and courteous in demeanor, he proved himself able and unflinching. While the Romanists, according to their wont, appealed for authority to the customs of the church, the Reformer adhered steadfastly to the Holy Scriptures. "Custom," he said, "has no force in our Switzerland, unless it be according to the constitution; now, in matters of faith, the Bible is our constitution."--Ibid., b. 11, ch. 13. 184

The contrast between the two disputants was not without effect. The calm, clear reasoning of the Reformer, so gently and modestly presented, appealed to minds that turned in disgust from Eck's boastful and boisterous assumptions.

The discussion continued eighteen days. At its close the papists with great confidence claimed the victory. Most of the deputies sided with Rome, and the Diet pronounced the Reformers vanquished and declared that they, together with Zwingli, their leader, were cut off from the church. But the fruits of the conference revealed on which side the advantage lay. The contest resulted in a strong impetus to the Protestant cause, and it was not long afterward that the important cities of Bern and Basel declared for the Reformation.

To read this in its original source see chapter #9 of The Great Controversy (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 16th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Dr. Peter Chamberlen - Woodham Mortimer, Essex, England

St. Margaret's Chapel in Essex, England, contains the tombstone of Puritan Sabbath keeping Dr. Peter Chamberlen, a respected, trusted, and much loved physician to three sets of kings and queens in 17th century England.

The inscription on the tombstone reads as follows:

"The said Peter Chamberlen tooke ye degree of Doctor in Physick, in fever all Universities born att home and abroad and lived such above three score years being physician in ordinary to three Kings and Queens of England. viz. King James & Queen Anne; King Charles ye first & Queen Mary; King Charles ye second & Queen Katherine; & also to some forraigne Princes; having travelled most of partes of Europe & speaking most of the languages.

As for his religion he was a Christian keeping ye Commandments of God & faith of Jesus. being baptized about ye year 1648, & keeping ye 7th day for ye saboth above 32 years.

To tell his Learning and his Life to Men: Enough is said by here Iyes Chamberlen."

Back to the 17th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

> "Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus."
Revelation 14:12

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Later English Reformers

While Luther was opening a closed Bible to the people of Germany, Tyndale was impelled by the Spirit of God to do the same for England. Wycliffe's Bible had been translated from the Latin text, which contained many errors. It had never been printed, and the cost of manuscript copies was so great that few but wealthy men or nobles could procure it; and, furthermore, being strictly proscribed by the church, it had had a comparatively narrow circulation. In 1516, a year before the appearance of Luther's theses, Erasmus had published his Greek and Latin version of the New Testament. Now for the first time the word of God was printed in the original tongue. In this work many errors of former versions were corrected, and the sense was more clearly rendered. It led many among the educated classes to a better knowledge of the truth, and gave a new impetus to the work of reform. But the common people were still, to a great extent, debarred from God's word. Tyndale was to complete the work of Wycliffe in giving the Bible to his countrymen.

A diligent student and an earnest seeker for truth, he had received the gospel from the Greek Testament of Erasmus. He fearlessly preached his convictions, urging that all doctrines be tested by the Scriptures. To the papist claim that the church had given the Bible, and the church alone could explain it, Tyndale responded: "Do you know who taught the eagles to find their prey? Well, that same God teaches His hungry children to find their Father in His word. Far from having given us the Scriptures, it is you who have hidden them from us; it is you who burn those who teach them, and if you could, you would burn the Scriptures themselves."--D'Aubigne, History of the Reformation of the Sixteenth Century, b. 18, ch. 4.

Tyndale's preaching excited great interest; many accepted the truth. But the priests were on the alert, and no sooner had he left the field than they by their threats and misrepresentations endeavored to destroy his work. Too often they succeeded. "What is to be done?" he exclaimed. "While I am sowing in one place, the enemy ravages the field I have just left. I cannot be everywhere. Oh! if Christians possessed the Holy Scriptures in their own tongue, they could of themselves withstand these sophists. Without the Bible it is impossible to establish the laity in the truth."--Ibid., b. 18, ch. 4.

A new purpose now took possession of his mind. "It was in the language of Israel," said he, "that the psalms were sung in the temple of Jehovah; and shall not the gospel speak the language of England among us? . . . Ought the church to have less light at noonday than at the dawn? . . . Christians must read the New Testament in their mother tongue." The doctors and teachers of the church disagreed among themselves. Only by the Bible could men arrive at the truth. "One holdeth this doctor, another that. . . . Now each of these authors contradicts the other. How then can we distinguish him who says right from him who says wrong? . . . How? . . . Verily by God's word."--Ibid., b. 18, ch. 4.

It was not long after that a learned Catholic doctor, engaging in controversy with him, exclaimed: "We were better to be without God's laws than the pope's." Tyndale replied: "I defy the pope and all his laws; and if God spare my life, ere many years I will cause a boy that driveth the plow to know more of the Scripture than you do."--Anderson, Annals of the English Bible, page 19.

The purpose which he had begun to cherish, of giving to the people the New Testament Scriptures in their own language, was now confirmed, and he immediately applied himself to the work. Driven from his home by persecution, he went to London, and there for a time pursued his labors undisturbed. But again the violence of the papists forced him to flee. All

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

- > John Knox
- > Baxter, Flavel, Alleine
- > Latimer
- > Barnes, Firth, the Ridleys, & Cranmer
- > John Wesley

> The Reformers Reveal the Beast.

The reformers knew who the symbolic beast of Revelation chapter 13 referred to.

England seemed closed against him, and he resolved to seek shelter in Germany. Here he began the printing of the English New Testament. Twice the work was stopped; but when forbidden to print in one city, he went to another. At last he made his way to Worms, where, a few years before, Luther had defended the gospel before the Diet. In that ancient city were many friends of the Reformation, and Tyndale there prosecuted his work without further hindrance. Three thousand copies of the New Testament were soon finished, and another edition followed in the same year.

With great earnestness and perseverance he continued his labors. Notwithstanding the English authorities had guarded their ports with the strictest vigilance, the word of God was in various ways secretly conveyed to London and thence circulated throughout the country. The papists attempted to suppress the truth, but in vain. The bishop of Durham at one time bought of a bookseller who was a friend of Tyndale his whole stock of Bibles, for the purpose of destroying them, supposing that this would greatly hinder the work. But, on the contrary, the money thus furnished, purchased material for a new and better edition, which, but for this, could not have been published. When Tyndale was afterward made a prisoner, his liberty was offered him on condition that he would reveal the names of those who had helped him meet the expense of printing his Bibles. He replied that the bishop of Durham had done more than any other person; for by paying a large price for the books left on hand, he had enabled him to go on with good courage.

Tyndale was betrayed into the hands of his enemies, and at one time suffered imprisonment for many months. He finally witnessed for his faith by a martyr's death; but the weapons which he prepared have enabled other soldiers to do battle through all the centuries even to our time.

Latimer maintained from the pulpit that the Bible ought to be read in the language of the people. The Author of Holy Scripture, said he, "is God Himself;" and this Scripture partakes of the might and eternity of its Author. "There is no king, emperor, magistrate, and ruler . . . but are bound to obey . . . His holy word." "Let us not take any bywalks, but let God's word direct us: let us not walk after . . . our forefathers, nor seek not what they did, but what they should have done."--Hugh Latimer, "First Sermon Preached Before King Edward VI."

Barnes and Frith, the faithful friends of Tyndale, arose to defend the truth. The Riddleys and Cranmer followed. These leaders in the English Reformation were men of learning, and most of them had been highly esteemed for zeal or piety in the Romish communion. Their opposition to the papacy was the result of their knowledge of the errors of the "holy see." Their acquaintance with the mysteries of Babylon gave greater power to their testimonies against her.

"Now I would ask a strange question," said Latimer. "Who is the most diligent bishop and prelate in all England? . . . I see you listening and hearkening that I should name him. . . . I will tell you: it is the devil. . . . He is never out of his diocese; call for him when you will, he is ever at home; . . . he is ever at his plow. . . . Ye shall never find him idle, I warrant you. . . . Where the devil is resident, . . . there away with books, and up with candles; away with Bibles, and up with beads; away with the light of the gospel, and up with the light of candles, yea, at noondays; . . . down with Christ's cross, up with purgatory pickpurses; . . . away with clothing the naked, the poor, and impotent, up with decking of images and gay garnishing of stocks and stones; up with man's traditions and his laws, down with God's traditions and His most holy word. . . . O that our prelates would be as diligent to sow the corn of good doctrine, as Satan is to sow cockle and darnel!"--Ibid., "Sermon of the Plough."

The grand principle maintained by these Reformers--the same that had been held by the Waldenses, by Wycliffe, by John Huss, by Luther, Zwingli, and those who united with them--was the infallible authority of the Holy Scriptures as a rule of faith and practice. They denied the right of popes, councils, Fathers, and kings, to control the conscience in matters of religion. The Bible was their authority, and by its teaching they tested all doctrines and all claims. Faith in God and His word sustained these holy men as they yielded up their lives at the stake. "Be of good comfort," exclaimed Latimer to his fellow martyr as the flames were about to silence their voices, "we shall this day light such a candle, by God's grace, in England, as I trust shall never be put out." --Works of Hugh Latimer, vol. 1, p. xiii.

In Scotland the seeds of truth scattered by Columba and his colaborers had never been wholly destroyed. For hundreds of years after the churches of England submitted to Rome, those of Scotland maintained their freedom. In the twelfth century, however, popery became established here, and in no country did it exercise a more absolute sway. Nowhere was the darkness deeper. Still there came rays of light to pierce the gloom and give promise of the coming day. The Lollards, coming from England with the Bible and the teachings of Wycliffe, did much to preserve the knowledge of the gospel, and every century had its witnesses and martyrs.

With the opening of the Great Reformation came the writings of Luther, and then Tyndale's English New Testament. Unnoticed by the hierarchy, these messengers silently traversed the mountains and valleys, kindling into new life the torch of truth so nearly extinguished in Scotland, and undoing the work which Rome for four centuries of oppression had done.

Then the blood of martyrs gave fresh impetus to the movement. The papist leaders, suddenly awakening to the danger that threatened their cause, brought to the stake some of the noblest and most honored of the sons of Scotland. They did but erect a pulpit, from which the words of these dying witnesses were heard throughout the land, thrilling the souls of the people with an undying purpose to cast off the shackles of Rome.

Hamilton and Wishart, princely in character as in birth, with a long line of humbler disciples, yielded up their lives at the stake. But from the burning pile of Wishart there came one whom the flames were not to silence, one who under God was to strike the death knell of popery in Scotland.

John Knox had turned away from the traditions and mysticisms of the church, to feed upon the truths of God's word; and the teaching of Wishart had confirmed his determination to forsake the communion of Rome and join himself to the persecuted Reformers.

Urged by his companions to take the office of preacher, he shrank with trembling from its responsibility, and it was only after days of seclusion and painful conflict with himself that he consented. But having once accepted the position, he pressed forward with inflexible determination and undaunted courage as long as life continued. This truehearted Reformer feared not the face of man. The fires of martyrdom, blazing around him, served only to quicken his zeal to greater intensity. With the tyrant's ax held menacingly over his head, he stood his ground, striking sturdy blows on the right hand and on the left to demolish idolatry.

When brought face to face with the queen of Scotland, in whose presence the zeal of many a leader of the Protestants had abated, John Knox bore unswerving witness for the truth. He was not to be won by caresses; he quailed not before threats. The queen charged him with heresy. He had taught the people to receive a religion prohibited by the state, she declared, and had thus transgressed God's command enjoining subjects to obey their princes. Knox answered firmly:

"As right religion took neither original strength nor authority from worldly princes, but from the eternal God alone, so are not subjects bound to frame their religion according to the appetites of their princes. For oft it is that princes are the most ignorant of all others in God's true religion. . . . If all the seed of Abraham had been of the religion of Pharaoh, whose subjects they long were, I pray you, madam, what religion would there have been in the world? Or if all men in the days of the apostles had been of the religion of the Roman emperors, what religion would there have been upon the face of the earth? . . . And so, madam, ye may perceive that subjects are not bound to the religion of their princes, albeit they are commanded to give them obedience."

Said Mary: "Ye interpret the Scriptures in one manner, and they [the Roman Catholic teachers] interpret in another; whom shall I believe, and who shall be judge?"

"Ye shall believe God, that plainly speaketh in His word," answered the Reformer; "and farther than the word teaches you, ye neither shall believe the one nor the other. The word of God is plain in itself; and if there appear any obscurity in one place, the Holy Ghost, which is never contrary to Himself, explains the same more clearly in other places, so that there can remain no doubt but unto such as obstinately remain ignorant."--David Laing, The Collected Works of John Knox, vol. 2, pp. 281, 284.

Such were the truths that the fearless Reformer, at the peril of his life, spoke in the ear of royalty. With the same undaunted courage he kept to his purpose, praying and fighting the battles of the Lord, until Scotland was free from popery.

In England the establishment of Protestantism as the national religion diminished, but did not wholly stop, persecution. While many of the doctrines of Rome had been renounced, not a few of its forms were retained. The supremacy of the pope was rejected, but in his place the monarch was enthroned as the head of the church. In the service of the church there was still a wide departure from the purity and simplicity of the gospel. The great principle of religious liberty was not yet understood. Though the horrible cruelties which Rome employed against heresy were resorted to but rarely by Protestant rulers, yet the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience was not acknowledged. All were required to accept the doctrines and observe the forms of worship prescribed by the established church. Dissenters suffered persecution, to a greater or less extent, for hundreds of years.

In the seventeenth century thousands of pastors were expelled from their positions. The people were forbidden, on pain of heavy fines, imprisonment, and banishment, to attend any religious meetings except such as were sanctioned by the church. Those faithful souls who could not refrain from gathering to worship God were compelled to meet in dark alleys, in obscure garrets, and at some seasons in the woods at midnight. In the sheltering depths of the forest, a temple of God's own building, those scattered and persecuted children of the Lord assembled to pour out their souls in prayer and praise. But despite all their precautions, many suffered for their faith. The jails were crowded. Families were broken up. Many were banished to foreign lands. Yet God was with His people, and persecution could not prevail to silence their testimony. Many were driven across the ocean to America and here laid the foundations of civil and religious liberty which have been the bulwark and glory of this country.

Again, as in apostolic days, persecution turned out to the furtherance of the gospel. In a loathsome dungeon crowded with profligates and felons, John Bunyan breathed the very atmosphere of heaven; and there he wrote his wonderful allegory of the pilgrim's journey from the land of destruction to the celestial city. For over two hundred years that voice from Bedford jail has spoken with thrilling power to the hearts of men. Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress and Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners have guided many feet into the path of life.

Baxter, Flavel, Alleine, and other men of talent, education, and deep Christian experience stood up in valiant defense of the faith which was once delivered to the saints. The work accomplished by these men, proscribed and outlawed by the rulers of this world, can never perish. Flavel's Fountain of Life and Method of Grace have taught thousands how to commit the keeping of their souls to Christ. Baxter's Reformed Pastor has proved a blessing to many who desire a revival of the work of God, and his Saints' Everlasting Rest has done its work in leading souls to the "rest" that remaineth for the people of God.

A hundred years later, in a day of great spiritual darkness, Whitefield and the Wesleys appeared as light bearers for God. Under the rule of the established church the people of England had lapsed into a state of religious declension hardly to be distinguished from heathenism. Natural religion was the favorite study of the clergy, and included most of their theology. The higher classes sneered at piety, and prided themselves on being above what they called its fanaticism. The lower classes were grossly ignorant and abandoned to vice, while the church had no courage or faith any longer to support the downfallen cause of truth.

The great doctrine of justification by faith, so clearly taught by Luther, had been almost wholly lost sight of; and the Romish principle of trusting to good works for salvation, had taken its place. Whitefield and the Wesleys, who were members of the established church, were sincere seekers for the favor of God, and this they had been taught was to be secured by a virtuous life and an observance of the ordinances of religion.

When Charles Wesley at one time fell ill, and anticipated that death was approaching, he was asked upon what he rested his hope of eternal life. His answer was: "I have used my best endeavors to serve God." As the friend who had put the question seemed not to be fully satisfied with his answer, Wesley thought: "What! are not my endeavors a sufficient ground of hope? Would he rob me of my endeavors? I have nothing else to trust to."--John Whitehead, Life of the Rev. Charles Wesley, page 102. Such was the dense darkness that had settled down on the church, hiding the atonement, robbing Christ of His glory, and turning the minds of men from their only hope of salvation--the blood of the crucified Redeemer.

Wesley and his associates were led to see that true religion is seated in the heart, and that God's law extends to the thoughts as well as to the words and actions. Convinced of the necessity of holiness of heart, as well as correctness of outward deportment, they set out in earnest upon a new life. By the most diligent and prayerful efforts they endeavored to subdue the evils of the natural heart. They lived a life of self-denial, charity, and humiliation, observing with great rigor and exactness every measure which they thought could be helpful to them in obtaining what they most desired--that holiness which could secure the favor of God. But they did not obtain the object which they sought. In vain were their endeavors to free themselves from the condemnation of sin or to break its power. It was the same struggle which Luther had experienced in his cell at Erfurt. It was the same question which had tortured his soul--"How should man be just before God?" Job 9:2.

The fires of divine truth, well-nigh extinguished upon the altars of Protestantism, were to be rekindled from the ancient torch handed down the ages by the Bohemian Christians. After the Reformation, Protestantism in Bohemia had been trampled out by the hordes of Rome. All who refused to renounce the truth were forced to flee. Some of these, finding refuge in Saxony, there maintained the ancient faith. It was from the descendants of these Christians that light came to Wesley and his associates.

John and Charles Wesley, after being ordained to the ministry, were sent on a mission to America. On board the ship was a company of Moravians. Violent storms were encountered on the passage, and John Wesley, brought face to face with death, felt that he had not the assurance of peace with God. The Germans, on the contrary, manifested a calmness and trust to which he was a stranger.

"I had long before," he says, "observed the great seriousness of their behavior. Of their humility they had given a continual proof, by performing those servile offices for the other passengers which none of the English would undertake; for which they desired and would receive no pay, saying it was good for their proud hearts, and their loving Saviour had done more for them. And every day had given them occasion of showing a meekness which no injury could move. If they were pushed, struck, or thrown about, they rose again and went away; but no complaint was found in their mouth. There was now an opportunity of trying whether they were delivered from the spirit of fear, as well as from that of pride, anger, and revenge. In the midst of the psalm wherewith their service began, the sea broke over, split the mainsail in pieces, covered the ship, and poured in between the decks as if the great deep had already swallowed us up. A terrible screaming began among the English. The Germans calmly sang on. I asked one of them afterwards, 'Were you not afraid?' He answered, 'I thank God, no.' I asked, 'But were not your women and children afraid?' He replied mildly, 'No; our women and children are not afraid to die.'"--Whitehead, Life of the Rev. John Wesley, page 10.

Upon arriving in Savannah, Wesley for a short time abode with the Moravians, and was deeply impressed with their Christian deportment. Of one of their religious services, in striking contrast to the lifeless formalism of the Church of England, he wrote: "The great simplicity as well as solemnity of the whole almost made me forget the seventeen hundred years between, and imagine myself in one of those assemblies where form and state were not; but Paul, the tentmaker, or Peter, the fisherman, presided; yet with the demonstration of the Spirit and of power."--Ibid., pages 11, 12.

On his return to England, Wesley, under the instruction of a Moravian preacher, arrived at a clearer understanding of Bible faith. He was convinced that he must renounce all dependence upon his own works for salvation and must trust wholly to "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." At a meeting of the Moravian society in London a statement was read from Luther, describing the change which the Spirit of God works in the heart of the believer. As Wesley listened, faith was kindled in his soul. "I felt my heart strangely warmed," he says. "I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation: and an assurance was given me, that He had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death."-- Ibid., page 52.

Through long years of wearisome and comfortless striving-- years of rigorous self-denial, of reproach and humiliation-- Wesley had steadfastly adhered to his one purpose of seeking God. Now he had found Him; and he found that the grace which he had toiled to win by prayers and fasts, by almsdeeds and self-abnegation, was a gift, "without money and without price."

Once established in the faith of Christ, his whole soul burned with the desire to spread everywhere a knowledge of the glorious gospel of God's free grace. "I look upon all the world as my parish," he said; "in whatever part of it I am, I judge it meet, right, and my bounden duty, to declare unto all that are willing to hear, the glad tidings of salvation."-- Ibid., page 74.

He continued his strict and self-denying life, not now as the ground, but the result of faith; not the root, but the fruit of holiness. The grace of God in Christ is the foundation of the Christian's hope, and that grace will be manifested in obedience. Wesley's life was devoted to the preaching of the great truths which he had received--justification through faith in the atoning blood of Christ, and the renewing power of the Holy Spirit upon the heart, bringing forth fruit in a life conformed to the example of Christ.

Whitefield and the Wesleys had been prepared for their work by long and sharp personal convictions of their own lost condition; and that they might be able to endure hardness as good soldiers of Christ, they had been subjected to the fiery ordeal of scorn, derision, and persecution, both in the university and as they were entering the ministry. They and a few others who sympathized with them were contemptuously called Methodists by their ungodly fellow students--a name which is at the present time regarded as honorable by one of the largest denominations in England and America.

As members of the Church of England they were strongly attached to her forms of worship, but the Lord had presented before them in His word a higher standard. The Holy Spirit urged them to preach Christ and Him crucified. The power of the Highest attended their labors. Thousands were convicted and truly converted. It was necessary that these sheep be protected from ravaging wolves. Wesley had no thought of forming a new denomination, but he organized them under what was called the Methodist Connection.

Mysterious and trying was the opposition which these preachers encountered from the established church; yet God, in His wisdom, had overruled events to cause the reform to begin within the church itself. Had it come wholly from without, it would not have penetrated where it was so much needed. But as the revival preachers were churchmen, and labored within the pale of the church wherever they could find opportunity, the truth had an entrance where the doors would otherwise have remained closed. Some of the clergy were roused from their moral stupor and became zealous preachers in their own parishes. Churches that had been petrified by formalism were quickened into life.

In Wesley's time, as in all ages of the church's history, men of different gifts performed their appointed work. They did not harmonize upon every point of doctrine, but all were moved by the Spirit of God, and united in the absorbing aim to win souls to Christ. The differences between Whitefield and the Wesleys threatened at one time to create alienation; but as they learned meekness in the school of Christ, mutual forbearance and charity reconciled them. They had no time to dispute, while error and iniquity were teeming everywhere, and sinners were going down to ruin.

The servants of God trod a rugged path. Men of influence and learning employed their powers against them. After a time many of the clergy manifested determined hostility, and the doors of the churches were closed against a pure faith and those who proclaimed it. The course of the clergy in denouncing them from the pulpit aroused the elements of darkness, ignorance, and iniquity. Again and again did John Wesley escape death by a miracle of God's mercy. When the rage of the mob was excited against him, and there seemed no way of escape, an angel in human form came to his side, the mob fell back, and the servant of Christ passed in safety from the place of danger.

Of his deliverance from the enraged mob on one of these occasions, Wesley said: "Many endeavored to throw me down while we were going down hill on a slippery path to the town; as well judging that if I was once on the ground, I should hardly rise any more. But I made no stumble at all, nor the least slip, till I was entirely out of their hands. . . . Although many strove to lay hold on my collar or clothes, to pull me down, they could not fasten at all: only one got fast hold of the flap of my waistcoat, which was soon left in his hand; the other flap, in the pocket of which was a bank note, was torn but half off. . . . A lusty man just behind, struck at me several times, with a large oaken stick; with which if he had struck me once on the back part of my head, it would have saved him all further trouble. But every time, the blow was turned aside, I know not how; for I could not move to the right hand or left. . . . Another came rushing through the press, and raising his arm to strike, on a sudden let it drop, and only stroked my head, saying, 'What soft hair he has!' . . . The very first men whose hearts were turned were the heroes of the town, the captains of the rabble on all occasions, one of them having been a prize fighter at the bear gardens. . . .

"By how gentle degrees does God prepare us for His will! Two years ago, a piece of brick grazed my shoulders. It was a year after that the stone struck me between the eyes. Last month I received one blow, and this evening two, one before we came into the town, and one after we were gone out; but both were as nothing: for though one man struck me on the breast with all his might, and the other on the mouth with such force that the blood gushed out immediately, I felt no more pain from either of the blows than if they had touched me with a straw."--John Wesley, Works, vol. 3, pp. 297, 298.

The Methodists of those early days--people as well as preachers--endured ridicule and persecution, alike from church members and from the openly irreligious who were inflamed by their misrepresentations. They were arraigned before courts of justice--such only in name, for justice was rare in the courts of that time. Often they suffered violence from their persecutors. Mobs went from house to house, destroying furniture and goods, plundering whatever they chose, and brutally abusing men, women, and children. In some instances, public notices were posted, calling upon those who desired to assist in breaking the windows and robbing the houses of the Methodists, to assemble at a given time and place. These open violations of both human and divine law were allowed to pass without a reprimand. A systematic persecution was carried on against a people whose only fault was that of seeking to turn the feet of sinners from the path of destruction to the path of holiness.

Said John Wesley, referring to the charges against himself and his associates: "Some allege that the doctrines of these men are false, erroneous, and enthusiastic; that they are new and unheard-of till of late; that they are Quakerism, fanaticism, popery. This whole pretense has been already cut up by the roots, it having been shown at large that every branch of this doctrine is the plain doctrine of Scripture interpreted by our own church. Therefore it cannot be either false or erroneous, provided the Scripture be true." "Others allege, 'Their doctrine is too strict; they make the way to heaven too narrow.' And this is in truth the original objection, (as it was almost the only one for some time,) and is secretly at the bottom of a thousand more, which appear in various forms. But do they make the way to heaven any narrower than our Lord and His apostles made it? Is their doctrine stricter than that of the Bible? Consider only a few plain texts: 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength.' 'For every idle word which men shall speak, they shall give an account in the day of judgment.' 'Whether ye eat, or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God.'

"If their doctrine is stricter than this, they are to blame; but you know in your conscience it is not. And who can be one jot less strict without corrupting the word of God? Can any steward of the mysteries of God be found faithful if he change any part of that sacred depositum? No. He can abate nothing, he can soften nothing; he is constrained to declare to all men, 'I may not bring down the Scripture to your taste. You must come up to it, or perish forever.' This is the real ground of that other popular cry concerning 'the uncharitableness of these men.' Uncharitable, are they? In what respect? Do they not feed the hungry and clothe the naked? 'No; that is not the thing; they are not wanting in this: but they are so uncharitable in judging! they think none can be saved but those of their own way.'"--Ibid., vol. 3, pp. 152, 153.

The spiritual declension which had been manifest in England just before the time of Wesley was in great degree the result of antinomian teaching. Many affirmed that Christ had abolished the moral law and that Christians are therefore under no obligation to observe it; that a believer is freed from the "bondage of good works." Others, though admitting the perpetuity of the law, declared that it was unnecessary for ministers to exhort the people to obedience of its precepts, since those whom God had elected to salvation would, "by the irresistible impulse of divine grace, be led to the practice of piety and virtue," while those who were doomed to eternal reprobation "did not have power to obey the divine law."

Others, also holding that "the elect cannot fall from grace nor forfeit the divine favor," arrived at the still more hideous conclusion that "the wicked actions they commit are not really sinful, nor to be considered as instances of their violation of the divine law, and that, consequently, they have no occasion either to confess their sins or to break them off by repentance."--McClintock and Strong, Cyclopedia, art. "Antinomians." Therefore, they declared that even one of the vilest of sins, "considered universally an enormous violation of the divine law, is not a sin in the sight of God," if committed by one of the elect, "because it is one of the essential and distinctive characteristics of the elect, that they cannot do anything that is either displeasing to God or prohibited by the law."

These monstrous doctrines are essentially the same as the later teaching of popular educators and theologians--that there is no unchangeable divine law as the standard of right, but that the standard of morality is indicated by society itself, and has constantly been subject to change. All these ideas are inspired by the same master spirit--by him who, even among the sinless inhabitants of heaven, began his work of seeking to break down the righteous restraints of the law of God.

The doctrine of the divine decrees, unalterably fixing the character of men, had led many to a virtual rejection of the law of God. Wesley steadfastly opposed the errors of the antinomian teachers and showed that this doctrine which led to antinomianism was contrary to the Scriptures. "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men." "This is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour; who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth. For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave Himself a ransom for all." Titus 2:11; 1 Timothy 2:3-6. The Spirit of God is freely bestowed to enable every man to lay hold upon the means of salvation. Thus Christ, "the true Light," "lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John 1:9. Men fail of salvation through their own willful refusal of the gift of life.

In answer to the claim that at the death of Christ the precepts of the Decalogue had been abolished with the ceremonial law, Wesley said: "The moral law, contained in the Ten Commandments and enforced by the prophets, He did not take away. It was not the design of His coming to revoke any part of this. This is a law which never can be broken, which 'stands fast as the faithful witness in heaven.' . . . This was from the beginning of the world, being 'written not on tables of stone,' but on the hearts of all the children of men, when they came out of the hands of the Creator. And however the letters once wrote by the finger of God are now in a great measure defaced by sin, yet can they not wholly be blotted out, while we have any consciousness of good and evil. Every part of this law must remain in force upon all mankind, and in all ages; as not depending either on time or place, or any other circumstances liable to change, but on the nature of God, and the nature of man, and their unchangeable relation to each other.

"I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.' . . . Without question, His meaning in this place is (consistently with all that goes before and follows after),--I am come to establish it in its fullness, in spite of all the glosses of men: I am come to place in a full and clear view whatsoever was dark or obscure therein: I am come to declare the true and full import of every part of it; to show the length and breadth, the entire extent, of every commandment contained therein, and the height and depth, the inconceivable purity and spirituality of it in all its branches."--Wesley, sermon 25.

Wesley declared the perfect harmony of the law and the gospel. "There is, therefore, the closest connection that can be conceived, between the law and the gospel. On the one hand, the law continually makes way for, and points us to, the gospel; on the other, the gospel continually leads us to a more exact fulfilling of the law. The law, for instance, requires us to love God, to love our neighbor, to be meek, humble, or holy. We feel that we are not sufficient for these things; yea, that 'with man this is impossible;' but we see a promise of God to give us that love, and to make us humble, meek, and holy: we lay hold of this gospel, of these glad tidings; it is done unto us according to our faith; and 'the righteousness of the law is fulfilled in us,' through faith which is in Christ Jesus. . . .

"In the highest rank of the enemies of the gospel of Christ," said Wesley, "are they who openly and explicitly 'judge the law' itself, and 'speak evil of the law;' who teach men to break (to dissolve, to loose, to untie the obligation of) not one only, whether of the least or of the greatest, but all the commandments at a stroke. . . . The most surprising of all the circumstances that attend this strong delusion, is that they who are given up to it, really believe that they honor Christ by overthrowing His law, and that they are magnifying His office while they are destroying His doctrine! Yea, they honor Him just as Judas did when he said, 'Hail, Master, and kissed Him.' And He may as justly say to every one of them, 'Betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?' It is no other than betraying Him with a kiss, to talk of His blood, and take away His crown; to set light by any part of His law, under pretense of advancing His gospel. Nor indeed can anyone escape this charge, who preaches faith in any such a manner as either directly or indirectly tends to set aside any branch of obedience: who preaches Christ so as to disannul, or weaken in any wise, the least of the commandments of God."--Ibid.

To those who urged that "the preaching of the gospel answers all the ends of the law," Wesley replied: "This we utterly deny. It does not answer the very first end of the law, namely, the convincing men of sin, the awakening those who are still asleep on the brink of hell." The apostle Paul declares that "by the law is the knowledge of sin;" "and not until man is convicted of sin, will he truly feel his need of the atoning blood of Christ. . . . 'They that be whole,' as our Lord Himself observes, 'need not a physician, but they that are sick.' It is absurd, therefore, to offer a physician to them that are whole, or that at least imagine themselves so to be. You are first to convince them that they are sick; otherwise they will not thank you for your labor. It is equally absurd to offer Christ to them whose heart is whole, having never yet been broken."--Ibid., sermon 35.

Thus while preaching the gospel of the grace of God, Wesley, like his Master, sought to "magnify the law, and make it honorable." Faithfully did he accomplish the work given him of God, and glorious were the results which he was permitted to behold. At the close of his long life of more than fourscore years--above half a century spent in itinerant ministry--his avowed adherents numbered more than half a million souls. But the multitude that through his labors had been lifted from the ruin and degradation of sin to a higher and a purer life, and the number who by his teaching had attained to a deeper and richer experience, will never be known till the whole family of the redeemed shall be gathered into the kingdom of God. His life presents a lesson of priceless worth to every Christian. Would that the faith and humility, the untiring zeal, self-sacrifice, and devotion of this servant of Christ might be reflected in the churches of today!

To read this in its original source see chapter #14 of The Great Controversy between Christ and Satan (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 17th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

The French Revolution

In the sixteenth century the Reformation, presenting an open Bible to the people, had sought admission to all the countries of Europe. Some nations welcomed it with gladness, as a messenger of Heaven. In other lands the papacy succeeded to a great extent in preventing its entrance; and the light of Bible knowledge, with its elevating influences, was almost wholly excluded. In one country, though the light found entrance, it was not comprehended by the darkness. For centuries, truth and error struggled for the mastery. At last the evil triumphed, and the truth of Heaven was thrust out. "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light." John 3:19. The nation was left to reap the results of the course which she had chosen. The restraint of God's Spirit was removed from a people that had despised the gift of His grace. Evil was permitted to come to maturity. And all the world saw the fruit of willful rejection of the light.

The war against the Bible, carried forward for so many centuries in France, culminated in the scenes of the Revolution. That terrible outbreaking was but the legitimate result of Rome's suppression of the Scriptures. (See Appendix.) It presented the most striking illustration which the world has ever witnessed of the working out of the papal policy-- an illustration of the results to which for more than a thousand years the teaching of the Roman Church had been tending.

The suppression of the Scriptures during the period of papal supremacy was foretold by the prophets; and the Revelator points also to the terrible results that were to accrue especially to France from the domination of the "man of sin."

Said the angel of the Lord: "The holy city shall they tread underfoot forty and two months. And I will give power unto My two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth. . . . And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them. And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. . . . And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth. And after three days and a half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them." Revelation 11:2-11.

The periods here mentioned--"forty and two months," and "a thousand two hundred and threescore days"--are the same, alike representing the time in which the church of Christ was to suffer oppression from Rome. The 1260 years of papal supremacy began in A.D. 538, and would therefore terminate in 1798. (See Appendix note for page 54.) At that time a French army entered Rome and made the pope a prisoner, and he died in exile. Though a new pope was soon afterward elected, the papal hierarchy has never since been able to wield the power which it before possessed.

The persecution of the church did not continue throughout the entire period of the 1260

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

The History of Protestantism

The History of Protestantism pulls back the divine curtain and reveals God's hand in the affairs of His church during the Protestant Reformation. In the last days, this four volume set is extremely relevant to all who love the truth.

Order the Book

years. God in mercy to His people cut short the time of their fiery trial. In foretelling the "great tribulation" to befall the church, the Saviour said: "Except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Matthew 24:22. Through the influence of the Reformation the persecution was brought to an end prior to 1798.

Concerning the two witnesses the prophet declares further: "These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth." "Thy word," said the psalmist, "is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Revelation 11:4; Psalm 119:105. The two witnesses represent the Scriptures of the Old and the New Testament. Both are important testimonies to the origin and perpetuity of the law of God. Both are witnesses also to the plan of salvation. The types, sacrifices, and prophecies of the Old Testament point forward to a Saviour to come. The Gospels and Epistles of the New Testament tell of a Saviour who has come in the exact manner foretold by type and prophecy.

"They shall prophecy a thousand two hundred and three-score days, clothed in sackcloth." During the greater part of this period, God's witnesses remained in a state of obscurity. The papal power sought to hide from the people the word of truth, and set before them false witnesses to contradict its testimony. (See Appendix.) When the Bible was proscribed by religious and secular authority; when its testimony was perverted, and every effort made that men and demons could invent to turn the minds of the people from it; when those who dared proclaim its sacred truths were hunted, betrayed, tortured, buried in dungeon cells, martyred for their faith, or compelled to flee to mountain fastnesses, and to dens and caves of the earth--then the faithful witnesses prophesied in sackcloth. Yet they continued their testimony throughout the entire period of 1260 years. In the darkest times there were faithful men who loved God's word and were jealous for His honor. To these loyal servants were given wisdom, power, and authority to declare His truth during the whole of this time.

"And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed." Revelation 11:5. Men cannot with impunity trample upon the word of God. The meaning of this fearful denunciation is set forth in the closing chapter of the Revelation: "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." Revelation 22:18, 19.

Such are the warnings which God has given to guard men against changing in any manner that which He has revealed or commanded. These solemn denunciations apply to all who by their influence lead men to regard lightly the law of God. They should cause those to fear and tremble who flippantly declare it a matter of little consequence whether we obey God's law or not. All who exalt their own opinions above divine revelation, all who would change the plain meaning of Scripture to suit their own convenience, or for the sake of conforming to the world, are taking upon themselves a fearful responsibility. The written word, the law of God, will measure the character of every man and condemn all whom this unerring test shall declare wanting.

"When they shall have finished [are finishing] their testimony." The period when the two witnesses were to prophesy clothed in sackcloth, ended in 1798. As they were approaching the termination of their work in obscurity, war was to be made upon them by the power represented as "the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit." In many of the nations of Europe the powers that ruled in church and state had for centuries been controlled by Satan through the medium of the papacy. But here is brought to view a new manifestation of satanic power.

It had been Rome's policy, under a profession of reverence for the Bible, to keep it locked up in an unknown tongue and hidden away from the people. Under her rule the witnesses prophesied "clothed in sackcloth." But another power --the beast from the bottomless pit-- was to arise to make open, avowed war upon the word of God.

"The great city" in whose streets the witnesses are slain, and where their dead bodies lie, is "spiritually" Egypt. Of all nations presented in Bible history, Egypt most boldly denied the existence of the living God and resisted His commands. No monarch ever ventured upon more open and highhanded rebellion against the authority of Heaven than did the king of Egypt. When the message was brought him by Moses, in the name of the Lord, Pharaoh proudly answered: "Who is Jehovah, that I should hearken unto His voice to let Israel go? I know not Jehovah, and moreover I will not let Israel go." Exodus 5:2, A.R.V. This is atheism, and the nation represented by Egypt would give voice to a similar denial of the claims of the living God and would manifest a like spirit of unbelief and defiance. "The great city" is also compared, "spiritually," to Sodom. The corruption of Sodom in breaking the law of God was especially manifested in licentiousness. And this sin was also to be a pre-eminent characteristic of the nation that should fulfill the specifications of this scripture.

According to the words of the prophet, then, a little before the year 1798 some power of satanic origin and character would rise to make war upon the Bible. And in the land where the testimony of God's two witnesses should thus be silenced, there would be manifest the atheism of the Pharaoh and the licentiousness of Sodom.

This prophecy has received a most exact and striking fulfillment in the history of France. During the Revolution, in 1793, "the world for the first time heard an assembly of men, born and educated in civilization, and assuming the right to govern one of the finest of the European nations, uplift their united voice to deny the most solemn truth which man's soul receives, and renounce unanimously the belief and worship of a Deity."--Sir Walter Scott, Life of Napoleon, vol. 1, ch. 17. "France is the only nation in the world concerning which the authentic record survives, that as a nation she lifted her hand in open rebellion against the Author of the universe. Plenty of blasphemers, plenty of infidels, there have been, and still continue to be, in England, Germany, Spain, and elsewhere; but France stands apart in the world's history as the single state which, by the decree of her Legislative Assembly, pronounced that there was no God, and of which the entire population of the capital, and a vast majority elsewhere, women as well as men, danced and sang with joy in accepting the announcement."--Blackwood's Magazine, November, 1870.

France presented also the characteristics which especially distinguished Sodom. During the Revolution there was manifest a state of moral debasement and corruption similar to that which brought destruction upon the cities of the plain. And the historian presents together the atheism and the licentiousness of France, as given in the prophecy: "Intimately connected with these laws affecting religion, was that which reduced the union of marriage--the most sacred engagement which human beings can form, and the permanence of which leads most strongly to the consolidation of society--to the state of a mere civil contract of a transitory character, which any two persons might engage in and cast loose at pleasure. . . . If fiends had set themselves to work to discover a mode of most effectually destroying whatever is venerable, graceful, or permanent in domestic life, and of obtaining at the same time an assurance that the mischief which it was their object to create should be perpetuated from one generation to another, they could not have invented a more effectual plan than the degradation of marriage. . . . Sophie Arnoult, an actress famous for the witty things she said, described the republican marriage as 'the sacrament of adultery.'"--Scott, vol. 1, ch. 17.

"Where also our Lord was crucified." This specification of the prophecy was also fulfilled by France. In no land had the spirit of enmity against Christ been more strikingly displayed. In no country had the truth encountered more bitter and cruel opposition. In the persecution which France had visited upon the confessors of the gospel, she had crucified Christ in the person of His disciples.

Century after century the blood of the saints had been shed. While the Waldenses laid down their lives upon the mountains of Piedmont "for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ," similar witness to the truth had been borne by their brethren, the Albigenses of France. In the days of the Reformation its disciples had been put to death with horrible tortures. King and nobles, highborn women and delicate maidens, the pride and chivalry of the nation, had feasted their eyes upon the agonies of the martyrs of Jesus. The brave Huguenots, battling for those rights which the human heart holds most sacred, had poured out their blood on many a hard-fought field. The Protestants were counted as outlaws, a price was set upon their heads, and they were hunted down like wild beasts.

The "Church in the Desert," the few descendants of the ancient Christians that still lingered in France in the eighteenth century, hiding away in the mountains of the south, still cherished the faith of their fathers. As they ventured to meet by night on mountainside or lonely moor, they were chased by dragoons and dragged away to lifelong slavery in the galleys. The purest, the most refined, and the most intelligent of the French were chained, in horrible torture, amidst robbers and assassins. (See Wylie, b. 22, ch. 6.) Others, more mercifully dealt with, were shot down in cold blood, as, unarmed and helpless, they fell upon their knees in prayer. Hundreds of aged men, defenseless women, and innocent children were left dead upon the earth at their place of meeting. In traversing the mountainside or the forest, where they had been accustomed to assemble, it was not unusual to find "at every four paces, dead bodies dotting the sward, and corpses hanging suspended from the trees." Their country, laid waste with the sword, the ax, the fagot, "was converted into one vast, gloomy wilderness." "These atrocities were enacted . . . in no dark age, but in the brilliant era of Louis XIV. Science was then cultivated, letters flourished, the divines of the court and of the capital were learned and eloquent men, and greatly affected the graces of meekness and charity."--Ibid., b. 22, ch. 7.

But blackest in the black catalogue of crime, most horrible among the fiendish deeds of all the dreadful centuries, was the St. Bartholomew Massacre. The world still recalls with shuddering horror the scenes of that most cowardly and cruel onslaught. The king of France, urged on by Romish priests and prelates, lent his sanction to the dreadful work. A bell, tolling at dead of night, was a signal for the slaughter. Protestants by thousands, sleeping quietly in their homes, trusting to the plighted honor of their king, were dragged forth without a warning and murdered in cold blood.

As Christ was the invisible leader of His people from Egyptian bondage, so was Satan the unseen leader of his subjects in this horrible work of multiplying martyrs. For seven days the massacre was continued in Paris, the first three with inconceivable fury. And it was not confined to the city itself, but by special order of the king was extended to all the provinces and towns where Protestants were found. Neither age nor sex was respected. Neither the innocent babe nor the man of gray hairs was spared. Noble and peasant, old and young, mother and child, were cut down together. Throughout France the butchery continued for two months. Seventy thousand of the very flower of the nation perished.

"When the news of the massacre reached Rome, the exultation among the clergy knew no bounds. The cardinal of Lorraine rewarded the messenger with a thousand crowns; the cannon of St. Angelo thundered forth a joyous salute; and bells rang out from every steeple; bonfires turned night into day; and Gregory XIII, attended by the cardinals and other ecclesiastical dignitaries, went in long procession to the church of St. Louis, where the cardinal of Lorraine chanted a Te Deum. . . . A medal was struck to commemorate the massacre, and in the Vatican may still be seen three frescoes of Vasari, describing the attack upon the admiral, the king in council plotting the massacre, and the massacre itself. Gregory sent Charles the Golden Rose; and four months after the massacre, . . . he listened complacently to the sermon of a French priest, . . . who spoke of 'that day so full of happiness and joy, when the most holy father received the news, and went in solemn state to render thanks to God and St. Louis.'"--Henry White, The Massacre of St. Bartholomew, ch. 14, par. 34.

The same master spirit that urged on the St. Bartholomew Massacre led also in the scenes of the Revolution. Jesus Christ was declared to be an impostor, and the rallying cry of the French infidels was, "Crush the Wretch," meaning Christ. Heaven-daring blasphemy and abominable wickedness went hand in hand, and the basest of men, the most abandoned monsters of cruelty and vice, were most highly exalted. In all this, supreme homage was paid to Satan; while Christ, in His characteristics of truth, purity, and unselfish love, was crucified.

"The beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them." The atheistical power that ruled in France during the Revolution and the Reign of Terror, did wage such a war against God and His holy word as the world had never witnessed. The worship of the Deity was abolished by the National Assembly. Bibles were collected and publicly burned with every possible manifestation of scorn. The law of God was trampled underfoot. The institutions of the Bible were abolished. The weekly rest day was set aside, and in its stead every tenth day was devoted to reveling and blasphemy. Baptism and the Communion were prohibited. And announcements posted conspicuously over the burial places declared death to be an eternal sleep.

The fear of God was said to be so far from the beginning of wisdom that it was the beginning of folly. All religious worship was prohibited, except that of liberty and the country. The "constitutional bishop of Paris was brought forward to play the principal part in the most impudent and scandalous farce ever acted in the face of a national representation. . . . He was brought forward in full procession, to declare to the Convention that the religion which he had taught so many years was, in every respect, a piece of priestcraft, which had no foundation either in history or sacred truth. He disowned, in solemn and explicit terms, the existence of the Deity to whose worship he had been consecrated, and devoted himself in future to the homage of liberty, equality, virtue, and morality. He then laid on the table his episcopal decorations, and received a fraternal embrace from the president of the Convention. Several apostate priests followed the example of this prelate."--Scott, vol. 1, ch. 17.

"And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth." Infidel France had silenced the reproving voice of God's two witnesses. The word of truth lay dead in her streets, and those who hated the restrictions and requirements of God's law were jubilant. Men publicly defied the King of heaven. Like the sinners of old, they cried: "How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?" Psalm 73:11.

With blasphemous boldness almost beyond belief, one of the priests of the new order said: "God, if You exist, avenge Your injured name. I bid You defiance! You remain silent; You dare not launch Your thunders. Who after this will believe in Your existence?"--Lacretelle, History, vol. 11, p. 309; in Sir Archibald Alison, History of Europe, vol. 1, ch. 10. What an echo is this of the Pharaoh's demand: "Who is Jehovah, that I should obey His voice?" "I know not Jehovah!"

"The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." Psalm 14:1. And the Lord declares concerning the perverters of the truth: "Their folly shall be manifest unto all." 2 Timothy 3:9. After France had renounced the worship of the living God, "the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity," it was only a little time till she descended to degrading idolatry, by the worship of the Goddess of Reason, in the person of a profligate woman. And this in the representative assembly of the nation, and by its highest civil and legislative authorities! Says the historian: "One of the ceremonies of this insane time stands unrivaled for absurdity combined with impiety. The doors of the Convention were thrown open to a band of musicians, preceded by whom, the members of the municipal body entered in solemn procession, singing a hymn in praise of liberty, and escorting, as the object of their future worship, a veiled female, whom they termed the Goddess of Reason. Being brought within the bar, she was unveiled with great form, and placed on the right of the president, when she was generally recognized as a dancing girl of the opera. . . . To this person, as the fittest representative of that reason whom they worshiped, the National Convention of France rendered public homage.

"This impious and ridiculous mummery had a certain fashion; and the installation of the Goddess of Reason was renewed and imitated throughout the nation, in such places where the inhabitants desired to show themselves equal to all the heights of the Revolution."-- Scott, vol. 1, ch. 17.

Said the orator who introduced the worship of Reason: "Legislators! Fanaticism has given way to reason. Its bleared eyes could not endure the brilliancy of the light. This day an immense concourse has assembled beneath those gothic vaults, which, for the first time, re-echoed the truth. There the French have celebrated the only true worship,--that of Liberty, that of Reason. There we have formed wishes for the prosperity of the arms of the Republic. There we have abandoned inanimate idols for Reason, for that animated image, the masterpiece of nature."--M. A. Thiers, History of the French Revolution, vol. 2, pp. 370, 371.

When the goddess was brought into the Convention, the orator took her by the hand, and turning to the assembly said: "Mortals, cease to tremble before the powerless thunders of a God whom your fears have created. Henceforth acknowledge no divinity but Reason. I offer you its noblest and purest image; if you must have idols, sacrifice only to such as this. . . . Fall before the august Senate of Freedom, oh! Veil of Reason!"

"The goddess, after being embraced by the president, was mounted on a magnificent car, and conducted, amid an immense crowd, to the cathedral of Notre Dame, to take the place of the Deity. There she was elevated on the high altar, and received the adoration of all present."--Alison, vol. 1, ch. 10.

This was followed, not long afterward, by the public burning of the Bible. On one occasion "the Popular Society of the Museum" entered the hall of the municipality, exclaiming, "Vive la Raison!" and carrying on the top of a pole the half-burned remains of several books, among others breviaries, missals, and the Old and New Testaments, which "expiated in a great fire," said the president, "all the fooleries which they have made the human race commit."--Journal of Paris, 1793, No. 318. Quoted in Buchez-Roux, Collection of Parliamentary History, vol. 30, pp. 200, 201.

It was popery that had begun the work which atheism was completing. The policy of Rome had wrought out those conditions, social, political, and religious, that were hurrying France on to ruin. Writers, in referring to the horrors of the Revolution, say that these excesses are to be charged upon the throne and the church. (See Appendix.) In strict justice they are to be charged upon the church. Popery had poisoned the minds of kings against the Reformation, as an enemy to the crown, an element of discord that would be fatal to the peace and harmony of the nation. It was the genius of Rome that by this means inspired the direst cruelty and the most galling oppression which proceeded from the throne.

The spirit of liberty went with the Bible. Wherever the gospel was received, the minds of the people were awakened. They began to cast off the shackles that had held them bondslaves of ignorance, vice, and superstition. They began to think and act as men. Monarchs saw it and trembled for their despotism.

Rome was not slow to inflame their jealous fears. Said the pope to the regent of France in 1525: "This mania [Protestantism] will not only confound and destroy religion, but all principalities, nobility, laws, orders, and ranks besides."-- G. de Felice, History of the Protestants of France, b. 1, ch. 2, par. 8. A few years later a papal nuncio warned the king: "Sire, be not deceived. The Protestants will upset all civil as well as religious order. . . . The throne is in as much danger as the altar. . . . The introduction of a new religion must necessarily introduce a new government."--D'Aubigne, History of the Reformation in Europe in the Time of Calvin, b. 2, ch. 36. And theologians appealed to the prejudices of the people by declaring that the Protestant doctrine "entices men away to novelties and folly; it robs the king of the devoted affection of his subjects, and devastates both church and state." Thus Rome succeeded in arraying France against the Reformation. "It was to uphold the throne, preserve the nobles, and maintain the laws, that the sword of persecution was first unsheathed in France."--Wylie, b. 13, ch. 4.

Little did the rulers of the land foresee the results of that fateful policy. The teaching of the Bible would have implanted in the minds and hearts of the people those principles of justice, temperance, truth, equity, and benevolence which are the very cornerstone of a nation's prosperity. "Righteousness exalteth a nation." Thereby "the throne is established."

Proverbs 14:34; 16:12. "The work of righteousness shall be peace;" and the effect,

"quietness and assurance forever." Isaiah 32:17. He who obeys the divine law will most truly respect and obey the laws of his country. He who fears God will honor the king in the exercise of all just and legitimate authority. But unhappy France prohibited the Bible and banned its disciples. Century after century, men of principle and integrity, men of intellectual acuteness and moral strength, who had the courage to avow their convictions and the faith to suffer for the truth--for centuries these men toiled as slaves in the galleys, perished at the stake, or rotted in dungeon cells. Thousands upon thousands found safety in flight; and this continued for two hundred and fifty years after the opening of the Reformation.

"Scarcely was there a generation of Frenchmen during the long period that did not witness the disciples of the gospel fleeing before the insane fury of the persecutor, and carrying with them the intelligence, the arts, the industry, the order, in which, as a rule, they pre-eminently excelled, to enrich the lands in which they found an asylum. And in proportion as they replenished other countries with these good gifts, did they empty their own of them. If all that was now driven away had been retained in France; if, during these three hundred years, the industrial skill of the exiles had been cultivating her soil; if, during these three hundred years, their artistic bent had been improving her manufactures; if, during these three hundred years, their creative genius and analytic power had been enriching her literature and cultivating her science; if their wisdom had been guiding her councils, their bravery fighting her battles, their equity framing her laws, and the religion of the Bible strengthening the intellect and governing the conscience of her people, what a glory would at this day have encompassed France! What a great, prosperous, and happy country--a pattern to the nations--would she have been!

"But a blind and inexorable bigotry chased from her soil every teacher of virtue, every champion of order, every honest defender of the throne; it said to the men who would have made their country a 'renown and glory' in the earth, Choose which you will have, a stake or exile. At last the ruin of the state was complete; there remained no more conscience to be proscribed; no more religion to be dragged to the stake; no more patriotism to be chased into banishment."--Wylie, b. 13, ch. 20. And the Revolution, with all its horrors, was the dire result.

"With the flight of the Huguenots a general decline settled upon France. Flourishing manufacturing cities fell into decay; fertile districts returned to their native wildness; intellectual dullness and moral declension succeeded a period of unwonted progress. Paris became one vast almshouse, and it is estimated that, at the breaking out of the Revolution, two hundred thousand paupers claimed charity from the hands of the king. The Jesuits alone flourished in the decaying nation, and ruled with dreadful tyranny over churches and schools, the prisons and the galleys."

The gospel would have brought to France the solution of those political and social problems that baffled the skill of her clergy, her king, and her legislators, and finally plunged the nation into anarchy and ruin. But under the domination of Rome the people had lost the Saviour's blessed lessons of self-sacrifice and unselfish love. They had been led away from the practice of self-denial for the good of others. The rich had found no rebuke for their oppression of the poor, the poor no help for their servitude and degradation. The selfishness of the wealthy and powerful grew more and more apparent and oppressive. For centuries the greed and profligacy of the noble resulted in grinding extortion toward the peasant. The rich wronged the poor, and the poor hated the rich.

In many provinces the estates were held by the nobles, and the laboring classes were only tenants; they were at the mercy of their landlords and were forced to submit to their exorbitant demands. The burden of supporting both the church and the state fell upon the middle and lower classes, who were heavily taxed by the civil authorities and by the clergy. "The pleasure of the nobles was considered the supreme law; the farmers and the peasants might starve, for aught their oppressors cared. . . . The people were compelled at every turn to consult the exclusive interest of the landlord. The lives of the agricultural laborers were lives of incessant work and unrelieved misery; their complaints, if they ever dared to complain, were treated with insolent contempt. The courts of justice would always listen to a noble as against a peasant; bribes were notoriously accepted by the judges; and the merest caprice of the aristocracy had the force of law, by virtue of this system of universal corruption. Of the taxes wrung from the commonalty, by the secular magnates on the one hand, and the clergy on the other, not half ever found its way into the royal or episcopal treasury; the rest was squandered in profligate self-indulgence. And the men who thus impoverished their fellow subjects were themselves exempt from taxation, and entitled by law or custom to all the appointments of the state. The privileged classes numbered a hundred and fifty thousand, and for their gratification millions were condemned to hopeless and degrading lives." (See Appendix.)

The court was given up to luxury and profligacy. There was little confidence existing between the people and the rulers. Suspicion fastened upon all the measures of the government as designing and selfish. For more than half a century before the time of the Revolution the throne was occupied by Louis XV, who, even in those evil times, was distinguished as an indolent, frivolous, and sensual monarch. With a depraved and cruel aristocracy and an impoverished and ignorant lower class, the state financially embarrassed and the people exasperated, it needed no prophet's eye to foresee a terrible impending outbreak. To the warnings of his counselors the king was accustomed to reply: "Try to make things go on as long as I am likely to live; after my death it may be as it will." It was in vain that the necessity of reform was urged. He saw the evils, but had neither the courage nor the power to meet them. The doom awaiting France was but too truly pictured in his indolent and selfish answer, "After me, the deluge!"

By working upon the jealousy of the kings and the ruling classes, Rome had influenced them to keep the people in bondage, well knowing that the state would thus be weakened, and purposing by this means to fasten both rulers and people in her thrall. With farsighted policy she perceived that in order to enslave men effectually, the shackles must be bound upon their souls; that the surest way to prevent them from escaping their bondage was to render them incapable of freedom. A thousandfold more terrible than the physical suffering which resulted from her policy, was the moral degradation. Deprived of the Bible, and abandoned to the teachings of bigotry and selfishness, the people were shrouded in ignorance and superstition, and sunken in vice, so that they were wholly unfitted for self-government.

But the outworking of all this was widely different from what Rome had purposed. Instead of holding the masses in a blind submission to her dogmas, her work resulted in making them infidels and revolutionists. Romanism they despised as priestcraft. They beheld the clergy as a party to their oppression. The only god they knew was the god of Rome; her teaching was their only religion. They regarded her greed and cruelty as the legitimate fruit of the Bible, and they would have none of it.

Rome had misrepresented the character of God and perverted His requirements, and now men rejected both the Bible and its Author. She had required a blind faith in her dogmas, under the pretended sanction of the Scriptures. In the reaction, Voltaire and his associates cast aside God's word altogether and spread everywhere the poison of infidelity. Rome had ground down the people under her iron heel; and now the masses, degraded and brutalized, in their recoil from her tyranny, cast off all restraint. Enraged at the glittering cheat to which they had so long paid homage, they rejected truth and falsehood together; and mistaking license for liberty, the slaves of vice exulted in their imagined freedom.

At the opening of the Revolution, by a concession of the king, the people were granted a representation exceeding that of the nobles and the clergy combined. Thus the balance of power was in their hands; but they were not prepared to use it with wisdom and moderation. Eager to redress the wrongs they had suffered, they determined to undertake the reconstruction of society. An outraged populace, whose minds were filled with bitter and long-treasured memories of wrong, resolved to revolutionize the state of misery that had grown unbearable and to avenge themselves upon those whom they regarded as the authors of their sufferings. The oppressed wrought out the lesson they had learned under tyranny and became the oppressors of those who had oppressed them.

Unhappy France reaped in blood the harvest she had sown. Terrible were the results of her submission to the controlling power of Rome. Where France, under the influence of Romanism, had set up the first stake at the opening of the Reformation, there the Revolution set up its first guillotine. On the very spot where the first martyrs to the Protestant faith were burned in the sixteenth century, the first victims were guillotined in the eighteenth. In repelling the gospel, which would have brought her healing, France had opened the door to infidelity and ruin. When the restraints of God's law were cast aside, it was found that the laws of man were inadequate to hold in check the powerful tides of human passion; and the nation swept on to revolt and anarchy. The war against the Bible inaugurated an era which stands in the world's history as the Reign of Terror. Peace and happiness were banished from the homes and hearts of men. No one was secure. He who triumphed today was suspected, condemned, tomorrow. Violence and lust held undisputed sway.

King, clergy, and nobles were compelled to submit to the atrocities of an excited and maddened people. Their thirst for vengeance was only stimulated by the execution of the king; and those who had decreed his death soon followed him to the scaffold. A general slaughter of all suspected of hostility to the Revolution was determined. The prisons were crowded, at one time containing more than two hundred thousand captives. The cities of the kingdom were filled with scenes of horror. One party of revolutionists was against another party, and France became a vast field for contending masses, swayed by the fury of their passions. "In Paris one tumult succeeded another, and the citizens were divided into a medley of factions, that seemed intent on nothing but mutual extermination." And to add to the general misery, the nation became involved in a prolonged and devastating war with the great powers of Europe. "The country was nearly bankrupt, the armies were clamoring for arrears of pay, the Parisians were starving, the provinces were laid waste by brigands, and civilization was almost extinguished in anarchy and license."

All too well the people had learned the lessons of cruelty and torture which Rome had so diligently taught. A day of retribution at last had come. It was not now the disciples of Jesus that were thrust into dungeons and dragged to the stake. Long ago these had perished or been driven into exile. Unsparing Rome now felt the deadly power of those whom she had trained to delight in deeds of blood. "The example of persecution which the clergy of France had exhibited for so many ages, was now retorted upon them with signal vigor. The scaffolds ran red with the blood of the priests. The galleys and the prisons, once crowded with Huguenots, were now filled with their persecutors. Chained to the bench and toiling at the oar, the Roman Catholic clergy experienced all those woes which their church had so freely inflicted on the gentle heretics." (See Appendix.)

"Then came those days when the most barbarous of all codes was administered by the most barbarous of all tribunals; when no man could greet his neighbors or say his prayers . . . without danger of committing a capital crime; when spies lurked in every corner; when the guillotine was long and hard at work every morning; when the jails were filled as close as the holds of a slave ship; when the gutters ran foaming with blood into the Seine. . . . While the daily wagonloads of victims were carried to their doom through the streets of Paris, the proconsuls, whom the sovereign committee had sent forth to the departments, reveled in an extravagance of cruelty unknown even in the capital. The knife of the deadly machine rose and fell too slow for their work of slaughter. Long rows of captives were mowed down with grapeshot. Holes were made in the bottom of crowded barges. Lyons was turned into a desert. At Arras even the cruel mercy of a speedy death was denied to the prisoners. All down the Loire, from Saumur to the sea, great flocks of crows and kites feasted on naked corpses, twined together in hideous embraces. No mercy was shown to sex or age. The number of young lads and of girls of seventeen who were murdered by that execrable government, is to be reckoned by hundreds. Babies torn from the breast were tossed from pike to pike along the Jacobin ranks." (See Appendix.) In the short space of ten years, multitudes of human beings perished.

All this was as Satan would have it. This was what for ages he had been working to secure. His policy is deception from first to last, and his steadfast purpose is to bring woe and wretchedness upon men, to deface and defile the workmanship of God, to mar the divine purposes of benevolence and love, and thus cause grief in heaven. Then by his deceptive arts he blinds the minds of men, and leads them to throw back the blame of his work upon God, as if all this misery were the result of the Creator's plan. In like manner, when those who have been degraded and brutalized through his cruel power achieve their freedom, he urges them on to excesses and atrocities. Then this picture of unbridled license is pointed out by tyrants and oppressors as an illustration of the results of liberty.

When error in one garb has been detected, Satan only masks it in a different disguise, and multitudes receive it as eagerly as at the first. When the people found Romanism to be a deception, and he could not through this agency lead them to transgression of God's law, he urged them to regard all religion as a cheat, and the Bible as a fable; and, casting aside the divine statutes, they gave themselves up to unbridled iniquity.

The fatal error which wrought such woe for the inhabitants of France was the ignoring of this one great truth: that true freedom lies within the proscriptions of the law of God. "O that thou hadst hearkened to My commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea." "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked." "But whoso hearkeneth unto Me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil." Isaiah 48: 18, 22; Proverbs 1:33.

Atheists, infidels, and apostates oppose and denounce God's law; but the results of their influence prove that the well-being of man is bound up with his obedience of the divine statutes. Those who will not read the lesson from the book of God are bidden to read it in the history of nations.

When Satan wrought through the Roman Church to lead men away from obedience, his agency was concealed, and his work was so disguised that the degradation and misery which resulted were not seen to be the fruit of transgression. And his power was so far counteracted by the working of the Spirit of God that his purposes were prevented from reaching their full fruition. The people did not trace the effect to its cause and discover the source of their miseries. But in the Revolution the law of God was openly set aside by the National Council. And in the Reign of Terror which followed, the working of cause and effect could be seen by all.

When France publicly rejected God and set aside the Bible, wicked men and spirits of darkness exulted in their attainment of the object so long desired--a kingdom free from the restraints of the law of God. Because sentence against an evil work was not speedily executed, therefore the heart of the sons of men was "fully set in them to do evil." Ecclesiastes 8: 11. But the transgression of a just and righteous law must inevitably result in misery and ruin. Though not visited at once with judgments, the wickedness of men was nevertheless surely working out their doom. Centuries of apostasy and crime had been treasuring up wrath against the day of retribution; and when their iniquity was full, the despisers of God learned too late that it is a fearful thing to have worn out the divine patience. The restraining Spirit of God, which imposes a check upon the cruel power of Satan, was in a great measure removed, and he whose only delight is the wretchedness of men was permitted to work his will. Those who had chosen the service of rebellion were left to reap its fruits until the land was filled with crimes too horrible for pen to trace. From devastated provinces and ruined cities a terrible cry was heard--a cry of bitterest anguish. France was shaken as if by an earthquake. Religion, law, social order, the family, the state, and the church--all were smitten down by the impious hand that had been lifted against the law of God. Truly spoke the wise man: "The wicked shall fall by his own wickedness."

"Though a sinner do evil a hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that it shall be well with them that fear God, which fear before Him: but it shall not be well with the wicked." Proverbs 11:5; Ecclesiastes 8:12, 13. "They hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord;" "therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices." Proverbs 1:29, 31.

God's faithful witnesses, slain by the blasphemous power that "ascendeth out of the bottomless pit," were not long to remain silent. "After three days and a half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them." Revelation 11:11. It was in 1793 that the decrees which abolished the Christian religion and set aside the Bible passed the French Assembly. Three years and a half later a resolution rescinding these decrees, thus granting toleration to the Scriptures, was adopted by the same body. The world stood aghast at the enormity of guilt which had resulted from a rejection of the Sacred Oracles, and men recognized the necessity of faith in God and His word as the foundation of virtue and morality. Saith the Lord: "Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against the Holy One of Israel," Isaiah 37:23. "Therefore, behold, I will cause them to know, this once will I cause them to know My hand and My might; and they shall know that My name is Jehovah." Jeremiah 16:21, A.R.V.

Concerning the two witnesses the prophet declares further: "And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them." Revelation 11:12. Since France made war upon God's two witnesses, they have been honored as never before. In 1804 the British and Foreign Bible Society was organized. This was followed by similar organizations, with numerous branches, upon the continent of Europe. In 1816 the American Bible Society was founded. When the British Society was formed, the Bible had been printed and circulated in fifty tongues. It has since been translated into many hundreds of languages and dialects. (See Appendix.)

For the fifty years preceding 1792, little attention was given to the work of foreign missions. No new societies were formed, and there were but few churches that made any effort for the spread of Christianity in heathen lands. But toward the close of the eighteenth century a great change took place. Men became dissatisfied with the results of rationalism and realized the necessity of divine revelation and experimental religion. From this time the work of foreign missions attained an unprecedented growth. (See Appendix.)

The improvements in printing have given an impetus to the work of circulating the Bible. The increased facilities for communication between different countries, the breaking down of ancient barriers of prejudice and national exclusiveness, and the loss of secular power by the pontiff of Rome have opened the way for the entrance of the word of God. For some years the Bible has been sold without restraint in the streets of Rome, and it has now been carried to every part of the habitable globe.

The infidel Voltaire once boastingly said: "I am weary of hearing people repeat that twelve men established the Christian religion. I will prove that one man may suffice to overthrow it." Generations have passed since his death. Millions have joined in the war upon the Bible. But it is so far from being destroyed, that where there were a hundred in Voltaire's time, there are now ten thousand, yes, a hundred thousand copies of the book of God. In the words of an early Reformer concerning the Christian church, "The Bible is an anvil that has worn out many hammers." Saith the Lord: "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn." Isaiah 54:17.

"The word of our God shall stand forever." "All His commandments are sure. They stand fast for ever and ever, and are done in truth and uprightness." Isaiah 40:8; Psalm 111:7, 8. Whatever is built upon the authority of man will be overthrown; but that which is founded upon the rock of God's immutable word shall stand forever.

To read this in its original source see chapter #15 of The Great Controversy (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 18th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History |
Sabbath Resources | Home

Table of Contents < - Previous Next - >

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

PART
2

ABSOLUTE PROOF FROM THE BIBLE THAT SATURDAY
IS THE SABBATH DAY !

FRIDAY	SATURDAY	SUNDAY
LUKE 23:52-54 "THIS MAN WENT UNTO PILATE, AND BEGGED THE BODY OF JESUS. AND HE TOOK IT DOWN, AND WRAPPED IT IN LINEN,* AND LAID IT IN A SEPULCHRE THAT WAS HEWN IN STONE, WHEREIN NEVER MAN BEFORE WAS LAID. AND THAT DAY WAS THE PREPARATION, AND THE SABBATH DREW ON... "	LUKE 23:55-56 "... AND THE WOMEN ALSO, WHICH CAME WITH HIM FROM GALILEE, FOLLOWED AFTER, AND BEHELD THE SEPULCHRE, AND HOW HIS BODY WAS LAID. AND THEY RETURNED AND PREPARED SPICES AND OINTMENTS; AND RESTED THE SABBATH DAY ACCORDING TO THE COMMANDMENT. "	MATTHEW 28:1 " IN THE END OF THE SABBATH, AS IT BEGAN TO DAWN TOWARD THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK, CAME MARY MAGDALENE AND THE OTHER MARY TO SEE THE SEPULCHRE ..."
GOOD FRIDAY	THE SABBATH	EASTER SUNDAY

THE "PREPARATION DAY" FOR THE JEWS WAS THE DAY BEFORE THE SABBATH DAY. JESUS WAS CRUCIFIED AND PUT TO DEATH ON THIS DAY WHICH WE NOW CALL "GOOD FRIDAY"...

THE SABBATH ARRIVED AT SUNDOWN FRIDAY, AND LASTED TILL SUNDOWN SATURDAY — THEN ON EARLY SUNDAY MORN (THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK) IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT THE TOMB WAS EMPTY AND JESUS HAD RISEN! THIS IS THE DAY WE CALL EASTER SUNDAY...

SATURDAY IS THE LORD'S SABBATH DAY!

* SEE THE PASSOVER CEREMONY ON PAGE 30

7

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 3

THE 1700 SABBATHS

AND HE CAME TO NAZARETH, WHERE HE HAD BEEN BROUGHT UP, AND AS HIS CUSTOM WAS, HE WENT INTO THE SYNAGOGUE ON THE SABBATH DAY, AND STOOD UP FOR TO READ. LUKE 4:16

JESUS LIVED HERE AMONG US ON OUR WORLD FOR APPROXIMATELY 33 YEARS, AND THIS MEANS THAT HE PARTICIPATED IN 1700 7TH-DAY SABBATHS!

YES, 1700 SATURDAY SABBATHS! ONE A WEEK FOR 33 YEARS!

NOW, IF "SUNDAY" WERE SUPPOSED TO BE HOLY, DON'T YOU THINK THAT JESUS HIMSELF WOULD HAVE TOLD US ??

THINK ABOUT IT! JUST BECAUSE THE JEWS OF TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO REJECTED JESUS AND WERE SCATTERED, DOES THIS MEAN THAT GOD CANCELLED HIS BLESSING OF THE 7TH DAY OF CREATION ??

HARDLY!

JESUS NEVER BLESSED A SINGLE SUNDAY —

HE WORKED ON EVERY ONE OF THOSE "1700 SUNDAYS" !!

AND HE HONORED GOD BY KEEPING 1700 7TH-DAY SABBATHS !!

8

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

PART 4

IS SATURDAY STILL SATURDAY?

THE JULIAN CALENDAR WAS ESTABLISHED AND IN USE IN THE ROMAN EMPIRE FORTY YEARS BEFORE THE BIRTH OF JESUS.

THIS IS THE VERY SAME CALENDAR THAT WE NOW USE TODAY, EXCEPT THERE'S BEEN ONE CHANGE:

TEN DAYS WERE DROPPED FROM IT BACK IN 1582!

BUT THIS DID NOT AFFECT NOR ALTER THE WEEKLY CYCLE!

"FRIDAY" STILL FOLLOWED "THURSDAY," AND "SUNDAY" STILL FOLLOWED "SATURDAY"! EVEN NOWADAYS WHEN WE ADD A DAY FOR LEAP YEAR, IT DOESN'T CHANGE THE ORDER!

THE "SATURDAY" OF TODAY IS THE SAME "SATURDAY" OF JESUS' DAY!

October 1582

sun	mon	tue	wed	thu	fri	sat
	1	2	3	4	15	16
17	18	19	20	21	22	23
24	25	26	27	28	29	30
31

IT MAY COME AS A SURPRISE, BUT THE 7-DAY WEEK WAS ALMOST UNKNOWN AMONG ANCIENT CULTURES. IT COMES FROM ANTIQUITY, THROUGH THE JEWS, WHO PRESERVED IT WHEN SURROUNDING NATIONS DESECRATED IT! EVEN THE EGYPTIANS HAD NO 7-DAY WEEK, WHICH WAS WHY THE JEWS HAD TO BE "REMINDED" OF IT WHEN THEIR EGYPTIAN CAPTIVITY ENDED — *

THE "DAY" COMES FROM THE ROTATION OF OUR PLANET, THE "MONTH" FROM THE MOON CIRCLING THE EARTH, AND THE "YEAR" FROM OUR WORLD GOING AROUND THE SUN — BUT THE "WEEK" COMES ONLY FROM ONE PLACE:

GOD'S COMMAND TO HONOR THE 7TH-DAY SABBATH !!

* SEE PAGE 28

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 5

40 BIBLE FACTS CONCERNING "SUNDAY"

Ahem...

HOW "HOLY" IS SUNDAY IN THE BIBLE ?...

1) THE VERY FIRST THING RECORDED IN THE BIBLE IS WORK DONE ON SUNDAY, THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK. THIS WAS DONE BY THE CREATOR HIMSELF. IF GOD WORKED ON THIS DAY, HOW CAN IT BE WICKED FOR US TO WORK ON SUNDAY ? 2) GOD COMMANDS MEN TO WORK UPON THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK. (GENESIS 20:8-11) IS IT WRONG TO OBEY GOD ? 3) NONE OF THE PATRIARCHS EVER KEPT IT. 4) NONE OF THE HOLY PROPHETS EVER KEPT IT. 5) BY THE EXPRESS COMMAND OF GOD, HIS HOLY PEOPLE USED THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK AS A COMMON WORKING DAY FOR AT LEAST 4,000 YEARS. 6) GOD HIMSELF CALLS IT A "WORKING" DAY. (EZEKIEL 46:1) 7) GOD DID NOT REST UPON IT. 8) HE NEVER BLESSED IT. 9) CHRIST DID NOT REST UPON IT. 10) JESUS WAS A CARPENTER (MARK 6:3), AND WORKED AT HIS TRADE UNTIL HE WAS 30 YEARS OLD. HE KEPT THE SABBATH AND WORKED 6 DAYS IN THE WEEK, AS ALL ADMIT. HENCE HE DID MANY A HARD DAY'S WORK ON SUNDAY. 11) THE APOSTLES WORKED UPON IT DURING THE SAME TIME. 12) THE APOSTLES NEVER RESTED UPON IT. 13) CHRIST NEVER BLESSED IT. 14) IT HAS NEVER BEEN BLESSED BY ANY DIVINE AUTHORITY. 15) IT HAS NEVER BEEN SANCTIFIED. 16) NO LAW WAS EVER GIVEN TO ENFORCE THE KEEPING OF IT, HENCE IT IS NO TRANSGRESSION TO WORK UPON IT. "WHERE NO LAW IS, THERE IS NO TRANSGRESSION." (ROMANS 4:15) 17) THE NEW TESTAMENT NOWHERE FORBIDS WORK TO BE DONE ON IT. 18) NO PENALTY IS PROVIDED FOR ITS VIOLATION. 19) NO BLESSING IS PROMISED FOR ITS OBSERVANCE. 20) NO REGULATION IS GIVEN AS TO HOW IT OUGHT TO BE OBSERVED. WOULD THIS BE SO IF THE LORD WISHED US TO KEEP IT ? 21) IT IS NEVER CALLED THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH. 22) IT IS NEVER CALLED THE SABBATH DAY AT ALL. 23) IT IS NEVER CALLED THE LORD'S DAY. 24) IT IS NEVER CALLED EVEN A REST DAY. 25) NO SACRED TITLE WHATEVER IS APPLIED TO IT. THEN WHY SHOULD WE CALL IT HOLY ? 26) IT WAS SIMPLY CALLED "FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK." 27) JESUS NEVER MENTIONED IT IN ANY WAY, NEVER TOOK ITS NAME UPON HIS LIPS, SO FAR AS THE RECORD SHOWS. 28) THE WORD "SUNDAY" NEVER OCCURS IN THE BIBLE AT ALL. 29) NEITHER GOD, CHRIST, NOR INSPIRED MEN EVER SAID ONE WORD IN FAVOR OF SUNDAY AS A HOLY DAY. 30) THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK IS MENTIONED ONLY 8 TIMES IN ALL THE NEW TESTAMENT. (MATT. 28:1; MARK 16:2,9; LUKE 24:1; JOHN 20:1,19; ACTS 20:7; 1 COR. 16:2) 31) SIX OF THESE TEXTS REFER TO THE SAME FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK. 32) PAUL DIRECTED THE SAINTS TO LOOK OVER THEIR SECULAR AFFAIRS ON THAT DAY. (1 COR. 16:2) 33) IN ALL THE NEW TESTAMENT WE HAVE A RECORD OF ONLY ONE RELIGIOUS MEETING HELD UPON THAT DAY, AND EVEN THIS WAS A NIGHT MEETING, SATURDAY NIGHT! (ACTS 20:5-12) *

Continued...

* (SEE GENESIS 1:5, 8, 13, 14, 21, 31 / THE DARK PART OF THE DAY ALWAYS PRECEDED THE LIGHT PART OF THE DAY / A DAY ENDED AT SUNDOWN / ACCORDINGLY, THIS MEETING WAS HELD IN THE DARK PART OF SUNDAY, ON WHAT WE NOW CALL SATURDAY NIGHT!)

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 7

CONSTANTINE'S SUNDAY BLUE LAW

"Let all judges and all city people and all Tradesmen rest upon the venerable day of the sun. But let those dwelling in the country freely and with full liberty attend to the culture of their fields; since it frequently happens that no other day is so fit for the sowing of grain, or the planting of vines; hence, the favorable time should not be allowed to pass, lest the provisions of heaven be lost."

Given the seventh of March, Crispus and Constantine being consuls, each for the second time.

321 A.D.

THE 1ST SUNDAY BLUE LAW!

LOTS OF CHRISTIANS THINK THAT THIS EVENT WAS "OH-SO-WONDERFUL" — YES, IT WAS GOOD THAT CONSTANTINE HELPED END THE PERSECUTION OF CHRISTIANS, BUT

THIS LAW ORDERS PEOPLE TO BREAK THE 4TH COMMANDMENT !!

THE QUESTIONABLE CONVERSION OF CONSTANTINE BROUGHT A FLOOD OF PAGAN COMPROMISE INTO THE CHURCH! ... IDOLS ... "MOTHER-GODDESS" WORSHIP ... CAESAR-LIKE PROCLAMATIONS OF BEING GOD ... AND WORSHIP ON THE SUN-DAY!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

PART 8

WHAT THE CATHOLICS SAY ABOUT THE SABBATH

THE THIRD COMMANDMENT. *

Q. What is the Third Commandment?
 A. The Third Commandment is: Remember that thou keep holy the Sabbath day.
 Q. Which is the Sabbath day?
 A. Saturday is the Sabbath day.
 Q. Why do we observe Sunday instead of Saturday?
 A. We observe Sunday instead of Saturday because the Catholic Church transferred the solemnity from Saturday to Sunday.
 Q. Why did the Catholic Church substitute Sunday for Saturday?
 A. The Church substituted Sunday for Saturday, because Christ rose from the dead on a Sunday, and the Holy Ghost descended upon the Apostles on a Sunday.
 Q. By what authority did the Church substitute Sunday for Saturday?
 A. The Church substituted Sunday for Saturday by the plenitude of that divine power which Jesus Christ bestowed upon her.
 Q. What does the Third Commandment command?
 A. The Third Commandment commands us to sanctify Sunday as the Lord's Day.

THIS PAGE APPEARS IN THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION

"THE CONVERT'S CATECHISM OF CATHOLIC DOCTRINE"!

* REMEMBER:

THE PAPACY LONG AGO CHANGED AND REWROTE THE TEN COMMANDMENTS — THEIR THIRD COMMANDMENT IS REALLY THE FOURTH!

THIS ATTEMPT ON THE PART OF THE PAPACY TO "IMPROVE" THE TEN COMMANDMENTS IS ILLUSTRATED ON PAGE 19!

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH FULLY ADMITS THAT THE ESTABLISHMENT OF SUNDAY AS A "HOLY DAY" IS COMPLETELY THEIR ACT !!

17

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 10

THE COUNCIL OF TRENT

IT WAS AT THIS COUNCIL THAT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH FORMULATED ITS PERMANENT FUNDAMENTALS OF THE CATHOLIC CREED — THESE SERIES OF SESSIONS WERE HELD TO CONSIDER THE QUESTIONS THAT HAD BEEN RAISED AND FORCED UPON THE ATTENTION OF EUROPE BY THE PROTESTANT REFORMERS: THE REFORMERS HAD CHARGED THAT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH HAD APOSTATIZED FROM THE TRUTH "AS CONTAINED IN THE WRITTEN WORD." THIS WAS THE PROCLAIMED PLATFORM OF THE REFORMATION AND OF PROTESTANTISM: THE WRITTEN WORD, "THE BIBLE AND THE BIBLE ONLY," THESE WERE THEIR CONSTANT WATCHWORDS...

... BUT THE CATHOLICS INSISTED ON "THE SCRIPTURE AND TRADITION," THE BIBLE AS INTERPRETED BY THE CHURCH AND THE REASONING OF ITS "HOLY FATHERS," THE POPES AND BISHOPS, ETC., OF EARLIER GENERATIONS ...

THIS ILLUSTRATION IS FROM AN OLD PRINT DONE OF THE COUNCIL IN THE 1500'S.

THESE MEETINGS LASTED FOR OVER 17 YEARS; THE REASON FOR THEIR FIRST RECESS WAS DUE TO A PLAGUE IN TRENT, THEN THE COUNCIL WAS FREQUENTLY ADJOURNED WHEN THEY COULD NOT REACH AGREEMENT...

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

... THIS IT WAS THE INCONSISTENCY OF THE PROTESTANT PRACTICE WITH "PROTESTANT PROFESSION" THAT GAVE TO THE CATHOLIC CHURCH HER LONG-BOUGHT AND ANXIOUSLY DESIRED GROUND UPON WHICH TO CONDEMN PROTESTANTISM AND THE WHOLE REFORMATION MOVEMENT...

ALL BECAUSE THE PROTESTANTS REJECTED THE BIBLE'S HOLY SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH !!

... SO THE CATHOLICS WON OUT ... AND THE PROTESTANTS FAILED IN WINNING AN IMPORTANT VICTORY FOR THE LORD ... "TRADITION" WAS TO CONTINUE ...

PART II

"TRADITION"

SO, WHAT DID JESUS SAY ABOUT "TRADITION"... ?
HE SAID ...

"WHY DO YE ALSO TRANSGRESS THE COMMANDMENT OF GOD BY YOUR TRADITION ?..."

MATT. 15:3

THE JEWS HAD ENACTED A RULE THAT LET A PERSON BY-PASS LEAVING HIS POSSESSIONS TO HIS PARENTS IN CASE OF HIS DYING, WHICH RAN CONTRARY TO THE COMMANDMENT TO "HONOR THY FATHER AND MOTHER"...

"... THUS HAVE YE MADE THE COMMANDMENT OF GOD OF NONE EFFECT BY YOUR TRADITION!"

MATT. 15:6

CLEARLY THE LORD IS NOT PLEASED WITH US FOLLOWING THE "TRADITIONS" OF MEN IN PLACE OF HIS COMMANDMENTS!

"IN VAIN DO THEY WORSHIP ME, TEACHING FOR DOCTRINES THE COMMANDMENTS OF MEN," SAID THE LORD IN MATTHEW 15:9 ! BUT THIS IS EXACTLY WHAT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH HAS PERPETRATED !! AND WHEN PROTESTANTS ENDORSE WORSHIPPING ON "SUNDAYS," THEY SUPPORT THE ROMAN CHURCH'S "TRADITIONS" !!!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 12

ROME'S CHALLENGE !

THIS 32-PAGE PAMPHLET REPRINTS FOUR EDITORIALS THAT APPEARED IN THE CATHOLIC MIRROR BACK IN SEPTEMBER 2, 9, 16 AND 23, 1893 !

THE CATHOLIC MIRROR WAS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF CARDINAL GIBBONS AND THE PAPACY IN AMERICA...

IN 1893 THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS AND THE SUPREME COURT, DECLARING OUR COUNTRY TO BE "A CHRISTIAN NATION," PASSED THE ORDERS THAT THE WORLD'S FAIR WAS TO BE CLOSED ON SUNDAYS...

THE INTERNATIONAL RELIGIOUS LIBERTY ASSOCIATION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST CHURCH PUBLISHED A 21-PAGE BROCHURE WHICH CITED THE FACT THAT

IT IS IMPROPER FOR OUR GOVERNMENT TO LEGISLATE PUBLIC BEHAVIOR IN REGARD TO "RELIGIOUS" MATTERS !...

IT'S CALLED "SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE" !...

SEE, IF PEOPLE DIDN'T WANT TO ATTEND THE WORLD'S FAIR ON "SUNDAY," THEY COULD STAY HOME ! BUT BY PASSING A LAW TO STOP ALL FROM ATTENDING, THAT'S GETTING VERY CLOSE TO LEGISLATING RELIGION !

THE ADVENTISTS OUTLINED THEIR BELIEF IN WORSHIPPING THE LORD ON HIS SATURDAY SABBATH DAY, VIA "FREE WILL," AND THE CATHOLIC MIRROR WROTE THEIR ARTICLES TO VERIFY THAT "SATURDAY" IS THE BIBLE SABBATH DAY !!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

26

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

PART 14

WHAT WAS "NAILED TO THE CROSS"?

COLOSSIANS 2:14-16 TELLS US THAT THE HANDWRITING OF ORDINANCES WAS "TAKEN OUT OF THE WAY," THAT IT WAS NAILED TO THE CROSS, AND THAT WE SHOULD "LET NO MAN THEREFORE JUDGE YOU IN MEAT, OR IN DRINK, OR IN RESPECT OF AN HOLYDAY, OR OF THE NEW MOON, OR OF THE SABBATH DAYS WHICH ARE A SHADOW OF THINGS TO COME..."

CHRISTIANS WHO ENDORSE SUNDAY WORSHIP SAY THAT THIS IS THE PROOF TEXT IN WHICH GOD NEGATED THE HOLY WEEKLY SABBATH...

BUT THIS INTERPRETATION IS TOTALLY INCORRECT!

THE LAW OF ORDINANCES THAT WAS NAILED TO THE CROSS WAS THE CEREMONIAL LAW! THE "SHADOWY" YEARLY SABBATHS THAT WERE DESCRIBED IN LEVITICUS 23:4-44. THESE SABBATHS POINTED TO THE DEATH OF CHRIST, AND THESE CEREMONIES WERE TO HAVE NO FURTHER MEANING BEYOND THE CROSS, AND THIS WAS WHY PAUL SAID THEY WERE CONTRARY TO THE CHRISTIAN!

THE VEIL IN THE TEMPLE WAS TORN IN HALF FROM TOP TO BOTTOM WHEN CHRIST DIED ON THE CROSS (MATT. 27:51), AND THIS INDICATED THE END OF THE ORDINANCES REQUIRING ANIMAL SACRIFICES! EPHESIANS 2:15 CLEARLY STATES THAT CHRIST ABOLISHED "THE LAW OF COMMANDMENTS CONTAINED IN ORDINANCES" !! *

AS AN EXAMPLE, ** THE PASSOVER...

THE PASSOVER HONORS THE EXODUS FROM EGYPT, BUT SEVERAL PARTS OF THIS CEREMONY POINT TO CHRIST.

- ① THE WOMAN OF THE HOUSE LIGHTS THE CANDLES, SYMBOLIZING THAT THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD, JESUS, ENTERED THE WORLD VIA A WOMAN!
- ② THREE PIECES OF UNLEAVENED BREAD ARE PLACED IN THREE COMPARTMENTS IN A BAG... (THE TRINITY: FATHER, SON, AND HOLY GHOST!)
- ③ THE MIDDLE PIECE OF BREAD IS REMOVED, BROKEN IN HALF, THEN THIS BREAD IS PLACED IN...

* THE TEN COMMANDMENTS WERE NEVER CALLED "ORDINANCES"! * THE HAGGADAH PRINTS THE STEPS OF THE PASSOVER CEREMONY

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 15

FINAL PROOF THAT THE SABBATH WAS NOT
"NAILED TO THE CROSS"

READ MATTHEW 24:20!

THE DISCIPLES ASKED JESUS AS TO WHEN THE TEMPLE WOULD BE DESTROYED.

JESUS TOLD THEM THAT WHEN ITS DESTRUCTION SEEMED IMMINENT, FLEE INTO THE MOUNTAINS!

JESUS SAID, "PRAY YE THAT YOUR FLIGHT BE NOT IN THE WINTER, NEITHER ON THE SABBATH DAY!"

THE JEWISH HISTORIAN JOSEPHUS * WITNESSED AND RECORDED THE ROMAN DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE AND JERUSALEM, AND THIS HAPPENED IN 70 A.D.!

TOTAL PROOF:

70 A.D. WAS NEARLY 40 YEARS AFTER CHRIST'S ASCENSION, AND THE SABBATH WAS STILL INTACT !!

32

* SEE JOSEPHUS, BOOK SIX, CHAPTER FOUR

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 16

GOD'S TEST OF LOYALTY

QUESTION: IS IT OK TO PICK JUST "ANY 7TH DAY" TO KEEP HOLY?

ANSWER: GOD NEVER LET ANYBODY "CHOOSE" WHICH DAY THEY WISHED TO KEEP HOLY!

READ EXODUS 16:4! GOD TESTED MANKIND TO SEE "WHETHER THEY WILL WALK IN MY LAW, OR NO." WHEN HE PROVIDED THE MANNA IN THE DESERT FOR 40 YEARS! AND THE LORD PERFORMED THREE CONTINUING MIRACLES TO SHOW AND PROVE THAT NOT "JUST ANY 7TH DAY" IS HOLY...

① NO MANNA FELL ON THE 7TH DAY OF THE WEEK!

② IF "EXTRA" MANNA WAS GATHERED, IT SPOILED BY THE NEXT DAY!

③ A DOUBLE PORTION GATHERED ON THE 6TH DAY DID NOT SPOIL WHEN KEPT OVER!

IT'S STILL THE GREAT TEST!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first...

II THESSALONIANS 2:3

THIS IS THE "FALLING AWAY" THAT PAUL WROTE OF, A FALLING AWAY FROM TRUTH THAT WAS TAUGHT BY JESUS AND HIS DISCIPLES! HAD THINGS PROGRESSED CORRECTLY, WITH NO "DETOURS," THEN TRUE CHRISTIANITY WOULD HAVE REMAINED INTACT FROM THE 1ST CENTURY UP TO TODAY !!

BUT,

AS PAUL FORETOLD IN ACTS 20:29, "GRIEVOUS WOLVES" DID DESCEND UPON THE SIMPLE AND PURE TEACHINGS OF CHRISTIANITY! DOZENS OF SUPPOSEDLY "HOLY" DOCTRINES WERE INSTATED — AND NOT UNTIL THE REFORMATION WERE THESE ERRORS CORRECTED, ONE BY ONE!

AND THE SABBATH IS THE LAST ONE OF THESE "NEGLECTED BIBLE TRUTHS" TO BE REINSTATED !

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 18

THE COUNCIL OF LAODICEA

STUDY THE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH!

THE EARLIEST CATHOLIC CHURCH COUNCIL TO DEAL WITH SUNDAY AS A DAY OF REST WAS A REGIONAL ONE, MEETING IN LAODICEA IN 364 A.D.

THEY STIPULATED IN CANON 29 THAT :

"Christians shall not Judaize and be idle on Saturday, but shall work on that day; but the Lord's day they shall especially honor, and, as being Christians, shall, if possible, do no work on that day. If, however, they are found Judaizing, they shall be shut out from Christ."

Page 309

Page 184

CHRISTIANS IN ETHIOPIA STILL DO TODAY WHAT WAS THE COMMON CHRISTIAN HABIT BACK IN THE 2ND AND 3RD CENTURIES — THEY KEEP BOTH SATURDAY AND SUNDAY!

Page 147

SOCRATES WROTE IN 439 A.D. THAT "ALTHOUGH ALMOST ALL CHURCHES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD CELEBRATE THE SACRED MYSTERIES ON THE SABBATH OF EVERY WEEK, YET THE CHRISTIANS OF ALEXANDRIA AND AT ROME, ON ACCOUNT OF SOME ANCIENT TRADITION (PAGAN SUN-DAY WORSHIP), HAVE CEASED TO DO THIS." SEE, IT WAS FROM THESE TWO PAGANIZED CATHOLIC PSEUDO-INTELLECTUAL CENTERS THAT CAME "CANONIZED" WORLDWIDE ORDERS TO STOP SABBATH OBSERVANCE!

THIS INFORMATION COMES FROM THE SABBATH IN SCRIPTURE AND HISTORY ©1982 REILLY AND HERALD PUBLISHING

READ THE HISTORY BOOKS! FIND OUT THE TRUTH YOURSELF!

DID YOU KNOW ... THAT THE WORD "SATURDAY" IN APPROXIMATELY 160 ANCIENT AND MODERN LANGUAGES COMES FROM THE WORD "SABBATH"! HERE ARE EXAMPLES:

"SABATO" (ITALIAN) • "SABADO" (SPANISH) • "SOBOTA" (POLISH) • "SHABBUTA" (BULGARIAN) • "SABBATON" (GREEK) • ... AND MANY OTHERS!!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART
21THE "OTHER" REASON FOR CHANGING THE SABBATH

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 22

APOSTATE PROTESTANTISM

ARE JESUS' COMMANDMENTS DIFFERENT FROM GOD'S COMMANDMENTS? NO.
 "I AND MY FATHER ARE ONE." (JOHN 10:30) "IF YE KEEP MY COMMANDMENTS, YE SHALL ABIDE IN MY LOVE; EVEN AS I HAVE KEPT MY FATHER'S COMMANDMENTS, AND ABIDE IN HIS LOVE." (JOHN 15:10)
JESUS' COMMANDMENTS ARE THE SAME AS GOD'S,
 WITH THE ACCENT ON "LOVE"... (VERSE 12)

PSALMS 19:7 SAYS, "THE LAW OF THE LORD IS PERFECT, CONVERTING THE SOUL"... HOW DOES THIS WORK? WHEN WE READ GOD'S LAW, AND SEE ALL IT REQUIRES, IT CONVICTS US THAT WE ARE NOT MEASURING UP TO IT! THUS IT POINTS US TO CHRIST AS THE ONLY ONE WHO CAN JUSTIFY US FREELY AND ENABLE US TO OBEY!

"FOR NOT THE HEARERS OF THE LAW ARE JUST BEFORE GOD, BUT THE DOERS OF THE LAW SHALL BE JUSTIFIED." (ROMANS 2:13)

THERE ARE A LOT OF CHRISTIANS TODAY WHO "CLAIM" TO BE SAVED, BUT ARE THEY REALLY? ACTS 5:32 SAYS THAT GOD GIVES THE HOLY GHOST ONLY TO THOSE WHO OBEY HIM!

... YET THOUSANDS OF PROTESTANT MINISTERS TEACH DISOBEDIENCE TO GOD'S TOTAL LAW! THEY SAY THAT ONLY THE "MORAL" PORTION OF THE TEN COMMANDMENTS WAS CARRIED OVER INTO THE NEW TESTAMENT ERA, YET EVEN MOST OF THESE PASTORS TEACH THAT LIVING ACCORDING TO THE LAW IS "IMPOSSIBLE," AND THEY DEPEND COMPLETELY UPON FAITH WITHOUT WORKS TO GET INTO HEAVEN!

PROTESTANT PASTORS HAVE BEEN LAX IN TEACHING GOD'S TRUTH, AND MOST HAVE TURNED THEIR BACKS ON THE 4TH COMMANDMENT!!

THE FATE OF APOSTATE PASTORS IS STATED IN EZEKIEL 22:21! "I WILL GATHER YOU, AND BLOW UPON YOU IN THE FIRE OF MY WRATH..." WHY? BECAUSE THE PRIESTS, THE PASTORS, "HAVE VIOLATED MY LAW, AND HAVE PROFANED MINE HOLY THINGS: THEY HAVE PUT NO DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE HOLY AND PROFANE, NEITHER HAVE THEY SHOWN DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE UNCLEAN AND THE CLEAN, AND HAVE HID THEIR EYES FROM MY SABBATHS, AND I AM PROFANED AMONG THEM." EZEKIEL 22:26

48

Table of Contents < - Previous Next - >

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

AFTER HIS DEATH UPON THE CROSS,
THE LORD JESUS CHRIST RESTED
THE ENTIRE SABBATH IN THE GRAVE !!

JUST AS HE HAD RESTED AFTER HIS WORK OF CREATION (JOHN 1:3), THE SON OF GOD RESTED AFTER COMPLETING HIS WORK OF REDEMPTION !

THEN, ON SUNDAY, WHICH HAD BEEN A COMMON WORKING DAY FOR OVER 3,000 YEARS , JESUS ROSE FROM THE TOMB, RETURNED TO LIFE, AND LITERALLY WENT BACK TO WORK !

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

IS THE RESURRECTION A SUFFICIENT REASON FOR SUNDAY WORSHIP? NO. THE LORD'S SUPPER HAPPENED ON A THURSDAY NIGHT, BUT WE DON'T CELEBRATE IT EVERY THURSDAY, AND CHRIST'S ATONING DEATH TOOK PLACE ON A FRIDAY, BUT WE DON'T SAY, "EVERY FRIDAY IS A SACRED DAY..." CHRIST DESIGNATED THAT HIS DEATH, BURIAL, AND RESURRECTION SHOULD BE SYMBOLICALLY COMMEMORATED IN THE RITE OF BAPTISM, NOT SUNDAY WORSHIP!*

THE BIBLE CLEARLY STATES THAT ONLY ONE DAY WAS EVER CONSECRATED AND COMMANDED FOR MANKIND TO OBSERVE! THE 7th-DAY SABBATH! AND THE RISEN JESUS NEVER TOLD US ANY DIFFERENT!

* ROMANS 6:4-6

PART
24

SATAN'S ATTACK UPON GOD'S LAW

IN THE 1ST AND 2ND CENTURIES SATAN ATTACKED THE CHURCH DIRECTLY, CAUSING THE ROMAN CAESARS TO CRUELLY MURDER CHRISTIANS IN THE PUBLIC ARENAS AND COLISEUMS...

WHEN CHRISTIANITY BECAME MORE "ACCEPTABLE" IN THE EARLY 4TH CENTURY, SATAN HAD TO CHANGE HIS TACTICS — HE COULDN'T OBLITERATE THE CHURCH AND ITS CHRISTIANS BY VIOLENCE, BUT HE COULD INFILTRATE IT AND WARP GOD'S DOCTRINES FROM THE INSIDE OF THE CHURCH!

AND THIS IS WHAT HAPPENED WITHIN THE CHURCH OF ROME!

SATAN DID A MASTERFUL JOB OF DESTROYING THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE IMPORTANCE OF THE LORD'S SABBATH COMMANDMENT.

IT WAS THE MOST OBVIOUS ONE OF THE TEN TO GET THE GENTILE CHRISTIAN WORLD TO IGNORE, AND GOOD OL' PAGANIZED SUNDAY WAS THE OH-SO-VERY LOGICAL COUNTERFEIT "HOLY DAY"!

A MASTERFUL JOB OF DECEIT, INDEED!

51

Table of Contents < - Previous Next - >

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

PART 25

THE REMNANT

WE READ IN REVELATION 12:17 THAT, "THE DRAGON WAS WROTH WITH THE WOMAN, AND WENT TO MAKE WAR WITH THE REMNANT OF HER SEED, WHICH KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS OF GOD, AND HAVE THE TESTIMONY OF JESUS CHRIST..."

AS WAS COVERED BEFORE IN THE PROPHECIES BOOK, A "WOMAN" IN PROPHECY REPRESENTS A CHURCH — A PURE WOMAN BEING A PURE CHURCH, AND FALLEN WOMAN AN APOSTATE CHURCH!

SO, WHAT IS A "REMNANT"?

A "REMNANT" IS A CONTINUATION OF THE ORIGINAL, SUCH AS THE "LAST PART" OF A BOLT OF CLOTH — THE "REMNANT" CHURCH OF THE LAST DAYS WILL ACTUALLY BE A CONTINUATION OF THE ORIGINAL CHURCH THAT WAS ESTABLISHED IN THIS WORLD BY JESUS CHRIST AND HIS DISCIPLES BACK IN THE FIRST CENTURY !...

THIS "REMNANT" WILL ① KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS OF GOD, AND ② THEY WILL HAVE THE TESTIMONY OF JESUS CHRIST! AND TO "KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS OF GOD" MEANS THAT THE TRUE REMNANT CHURCH WILL ALSO OBSERVE THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH!

LIKE WE DO!

AND ALL OF US TOO !!

52

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

PART 26

CONCLUSION

DEAR FRIENDS,
ALL THE OTHER INHABITED WORLDS HAVE OBSERVED THE BIRTH OF OUR WORLD, THE CREATION OF ADAM AND EVE, THEIR FALL, THE FIRST MURDER
OF ONE HUMAN BEING
BY ANOTHER, CAIN, AND THE CONTINUED DETERIORATION OF AN ENTIRE PLANET INTO SIN...

... AND THE ENTIRE UNIVERSE BEHELD THE CRUCIFIXION OF THE SON OF GOD, HIS ULTIMATE SACRIFICE FOR MANKIND...

SEE, I CORINTHIANS 4:9 SAYS THAT "WE ARE A SPECTACLE UNTO THE WORLD, AND TO ANGELS, AND TO MEN..." AND THAT MEANS ALL MEN, ETC., IN THE ENTIRE GALAXY! THE VAST INHABITED UNIVERSE HAS BIDED ITS TIME TO "WATCH," AND PATIENTLY OBSERVE...*

WHEN LUCIFER CAUSED FULLY A THIRD OF THE ANGELS IN HEAVEN TO REBEL, THEY CHALLENGED THE NECESSITY OF GOD'S LAWS — AND, ACCORDINGLY, THE PATIENTLY WATCHING UNIVERSE, AND THE UNFALLEN TWO THIRDS OF THE ANGELS, HAVE WONDERED IF PERHAPS LUCIFER WAS "RIGHT"... SO, THE EARTH HAS BEEN THE "EXAMPLE," THE STAGE UPON WHICH SIN HAS BEEN ABLE TO COME TO FULL MANIFESTATION!

THE ENTIRE UNIVERSE HAS SEEN THAT LUCIFER WAS A LIAR, AND HAS SEEN THE CONSEQUENCES OF "SIN"!

... AND THE UNIVERSE HAS SEEN THE PAPACY TORTURE, COERCE, AND BOAST THAT THEY HAVE THE "RIGHT" TO TAMPER WITH GOD'S HOLY AND ETERNAL COMMANDMENTS!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History |
Sabbath Resources | Home

Current Category - Creation / Evolution

Amazing Wonders of Creation (PB)

Joe Crews. God's Word is under increasing attack by skeptics, leaving millions to question their faith in God's creation. This brief but eye-opening study is just the resource you need to affirm your faith and help others discover the great mysteries of land and sea that support the biblical account of creation. A must-have in these controversial times!

BK-AWC $0.95

Awesome Forces of God's Creation DVD Set

In this 3-DVD set, you'll discover how the most powerful forces in nature - water, earth, and wind - reveal the power and glory of a master Creator who provides both peace and strength in the storms of life. (45 minutes)

DV-AFGC $44.99

City of the Bees DVD

You're about to visit an incredible city. Where everyone has a job. A place where there's no need for hospitals or retirement homes. The organized, efficient city of the bees. You'll learn how these amazing insects live and work. Moody Science DVD.

DV-COB $12.99

Creation in Six Days

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Product Categories:

- > Bible Studies
- > Books
- > Creation / Evolution
- > General
- > History
- > Prophecy

> Your Satisfaction is 100% Guaranteed!

If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with your purchase, simply return it for a full refund, no questions asked!

The Bible teaches that both the habitats and the life forms of our planet were created by God in six literal, consecutive, 24-hour days. God celebrated this activity by resting on, blessing, and making holy the seventh day. Lesson taught by Pastor Batchelor.

AD-S9287 $5.00

---

Creationist's View of Dinosaurs

Jim Pinoski. Does the Bible mention dinosaurs? Can a Christian believe in evolution? In the great conflict between chance and design, our children are inundated with unscientific and unbiblical theories that will forever affect their lives. This comic-book style resource is a great way to gain back lost ground to show how true science and faith are compatible. Get current and fascinating research on the Christian model of dinosaurs, all in a easy-to-read and eye-catching way that will appeal to ...

BK-CVD $3.95

---

Dust or Destiny DVD

Fish that lay eggs on dry land. Birds that navigate for thousands of miles without a map or compass. Bats that swoop through total darkness without the slightest bump in the night. You will marvel at some of the world's most astonishing natural wonders. And learn how each of them gives fervent testimony to the fact that this planet was not formed from ordinary dust. But from the loving hands of a living God. Moody Institute of Science.

DV-DODE $12.99

---

Experience With An Eel DVD

Moody Science Classics. Marvel at one of God's most amazing creatures, which hunts by "radar" and discharges a powerful but natural electrical impulse. This incredible DVD answers many questions concerning the relationship between science and the Word of God. (24 mins)

DV-EWE $12.99

---

God of the Atom DVD

Moody Science Classics. Explore the amazing and complex wonders of the atom and all the energy it has to unleash! Unfold the mysteries of the universe while understanding humanity's spiritual bankruptcy and need for regeneration. (28 mins.)

DV-GOTA $12.99

---

Hidden World of Africa, The DVD

Barely visible to the human eye, a truly fascinating universe lives in the bush and savannas of Africa. Here, creatures small, smaller and nearly invisible share a world with gigantic animals. Usually overlooked, often feared and despised, theirs may be a small world, but it's an important one too. Remarkable photography reveals some of the hundreds of invertebrates that thrive and support lives far larger than their own. Give this fascinating and tiny world a closer look and you'll discover ...

DV-HWA $15.95

---

Icons of Evolution DVD

Do you know the whole truth about Darwin's theory of evolution and its most famous icons? Learn why the world of science is being harmed by outdated research and how it is impeding scientific progress and education today. A fast-paced, fascinating journey into one of the most controversial issues today. Great for sharing with skeptics. (51 minutes)

DV-IOE $19.95

---

Incred Creatures Defy Evolution 1 DVD

Incredible creatures that defy evolution 1 on DVD - presents powerful evidence that proves that animal designs can only be attributed to a creator. They cannot possibly be explained by evolution. This program will inspire you to look more closely at the world around you.

DV-ICTD1 $19.95

---

Incred Creatures Defy Evolution 2 DVD

Enter the fascinating world of God's amazing animals to reveal sophisticated, complex designs that shake the very foundations of evolutionary theory. Presents powerful evidence that proves we have a loving Creator. Learn about the miracle of the geckos' sticky feet, the giraffe's amazing neck, and the extraordinary bombardier beetle! Great for sharing with skeptics! Available to you on DVD.

DV-ICTD2 $19.95

---

Incred Creatures Defy Evolution 3 DVD

Incredible Creatures That Defy Evolution 3 presents powerful evidence that proves that animal designs can only be attributed to a creator. They cannot possibly be explained by evolution. This program will inspire you to look more closely at the world around you. Available to you on DVD.

DV-ICTD3 $19.95

---

Lions: Kings of Africa DVD

No film has ever captured the true nature of lions like LIONS: Kings of Africa. Wildlife cinematographers spent an entire year living among a lion pride in the Ngorongoro Crater in Northern Tanzania where three generations - cubs, adolescents, and leaders-revealed their fascinating royal lives. In this fantastic setting you'll witness adolescents learning the art of hunting; the introduction of newborn cubs to the pride; the struggle for survival during the dry season; and many other rare images ...

DV-LKA $15.95

---

Mystery of the Three Clocks DVD

Moody Science Classics. Get incredible insight into God's creation by understanding the built-in alarm clocks of humans, cicadas, and chemical reactions. Includes eye-opening experiments that show how living according to God's will is the only way to ensure peace and eternal life. This thrilling DVD includes Spanish track. (29 minutes)

DV-MOTC $12.99

---

Of Books and Sloths DVD

Moody Science Classics. Once thought to be a blunder of nature, the study of the sloth actually reveals God's amazing power and points to the dependability of Scripture compared to man's ideas, which must be constantly revised to correct errors. A great DVD for your creation collection! (29 minutes)

DV-OBS $12.99

---

Our Solar System

Journeys to the edge of Creation-Our Solar System. Moody Institute of Science. Travel among the planets and marvel at their geologic wonders-and feel the touch of a loving Creator in every magnificent and awe-inspiring detail. Approx. 40 minutes.

VT-OSS $19.95

---

Prior Claim DVD

This award-winning DVD video explores the world of the trap-door spider, archer fish, rattlesnake, and many other fascinating creatures that reflect the inventive genius of God - and reveal how the Creator has prior claim not only over our inventions, but also on every human life. Includes Spanish track. (28 minutes)

DV-PC $12.99

---

Red River of Life DVD

Moody Science Classics. Step inside the most complicated factory ever designed, with a trillion cylinders powered by a pump far superior to the finest steel! See how blood takes its precious cargo of oxygen to every corner of your body while also learning how the shed blood of Jesus is the source of all life today. (30 mins.)

DV-RROL $12.99

---

The Milky Way & Beyond

Journeys to the edge of Creation-The Milky Way and Beyond. Moody Institute of Science. Our Milky Way, one of the most brilliant and beautiful of God's creations is a sea of 200 billion stars. Travel deep inside to its core via images from NASA's Hubble telescope. Only the Master Planner could have created it with such precision and artistry. Approx. 40 minutes.

VT-TMW&B $19.95

---

Treasures of the Undersea DVD

Discover the mysteries of the deep blue and the truth of the Bible in this amazing underwater adventure that includes awesome scientific facts and an amazing soundtrack that gives all the glory to God. A great DVD for Sabbath afternoons and for home school. (40 minutes)

DV-TOUN $19.99

---

Treasures of the Universe DVD

Explore heaven's majesty and the accuracy of the Bible in this fascinating journey through the universe. Astounding Hubble images, photorealistic animations, scientific facts, and a grand soundtrack inspire awe for the Creator who formed the galaxies, yet paid the ultimate price for your life. Includes Spanish track. (30 minutes).

DV-TOU $19.99

---

Unlocking the Mystery of Life DVD

Is life the product of purely undirected processes like time, chance, and natural selection? Or can its origin and diversity be traced to an intelligent cause? Explore these timeless questions scientifically and get some compelling evidence that life was created. A great sharing resource that will change hearts and minds! (67 minutes)

DV-UMOL $19.95

---

Voice of the Deep DVD

Have you every heard a fish that croaks? Or shrimp that clac? How about porpoise that moo? The 'Silent deep' is not all so silent after all. Take a trip beneath the sea to discover many strange facts about a little-known world. In Voice of the deep, we see that a person needs not only new ears but a new life to fathom the mysteries of the spiritual realm. Moody Institute of Science.

DV-VOD $12.99

---

Wildebeests, Great African Migration DVD

The great wildebeest migration from the Masai Mara in Kenya to Tanzania's Serengeti National Park is a spectacle of life and death witnessed by few humans. Baron Hugo van Lawick who has made the Serengeti his home for over 25 years, has filmed this remarkable epic of survival-the greatest migration of land animals on the planet - in vivid, riveting detail.

Exploration films

Running time: 1 hour.

Creation friendly. No evolutionary bias. Christian worldview.

DV-WGAM $15.95

Next >

Last >>

1 - 25 of 27 found.

Select how many records to display

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History |
Sabbath Resources | Home

Current Category - Creation / Evolution

Wonders of God's Creation DVD Set

Explore God's™ incredible power and majesty in this breathtaking video series from Moody Science. You'll learn about the incredible planet, amazing animals, and the miracle of human life, and your faith in the Creator will soar. Great for the whole family!

DV-WGCS $44.99

Young Age of The Earth DVD

This 80-minute DVD is up-to-date, powerful, and convincing. Provides revolutionary scientific evidence in support of the biblical account of Creation and a global flood.

DV-YAE $19.95

<< First

< Previous

26 - 27 of 27 found.

Select how many records to display

^ Top

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Product Categories:

- > Bible Studies
- > Books
- > Creation / Evolution
- > General
- > History
- > Prophecy

> Your Satisfaction is 100% Guaranteed!

If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with your purchase, simply return it for a full refund, no questions asked!

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Accident or Dilemma?

Do you know how this world, the sun, moon and stars, and the entire universe came into existence? Astronomers tell us that there are 200 billion stars or suns in the galaxy, the Milky Way, and that there are 100 million other known galaxies. All right, answer my question: How did all this come into existence? No, don't tell me that all the billions of giant suns evolved out of nothing, or out of star dust. If so, where did the star dust come from?

I have a wrist watch on my wrist right now. If I were to tell you that no one made that watch, but that it just happened, you would laugh me to scorn. You know that somebody made it. It did not just happen. That is an utter impossibility. Then, what about this complex universe? Take some of the smaller things. Take the rose and the orchid. Who put them together with their beautiful colors and fragrance? Did they just happen? You know better than that. Even the humblest wild flower that grows in the woods bears evidence of the design of a master workman.

No one would accept a modern collegiate dictionary as just an accident. Wouldn't you lift an eyebrow if you were informed that it is not the product of thousands of hours of patient research, but that it simply came about as the result of an explosion in a modern printing plant? You would laugh at such inanities.

And what about the fine computers that work out the precise route of space rockets? What would be your reaction if someone told you that this electronic marvel somehow evolved from the ruins of an ancient Greek library, ready-programmed with all the wisdom of that golden age? I'll tell you what you'd do—you'd question the sanity of that "someone" who told you such nonsense. But tell me, why is it that modern man cannot conceive of the accidental evolution of a rocket, or a computer, or even a dictionary; and yet he can attribute the marvels of the human brain, which created all these, to chance? Why is this generation so willing to believe that man, his marvelous body, his incredible brain somehow evolved through millions of years with only blind nature and chance to direct?

We know that a rocket had to have intelligent creation, and that its course must have intelligent supervision. But I ask you, friends, are the speeding galaxies of the heavens, in their precision pathways—are they out there in space only because of some celestial accident?

Scientists don't seem to know exactly how our world originated—possibly from some cosmic explosion of the restless gases of the distant past. That is the supposition. And then, several million years ago, they say, life appeared in its simplest form, followed by the slow magic of the ages, the wonders of accident and chance, the reign of tooth and claw, the survival of the fittest. And at last, life and civilization and culture as we know it today—the crowning miracle of unhurried evolution.

But just how much are you willing to attribute to the unlikely magic of accident and chance? If evolution happened, how did it happen? Would it be unreasonable to ask some specific questions? For example, how did tiny creatures of nature come by the fantastic design which enables them to miraculously survive extinction? Did you ever watch the fascinating activities of the common honey bee? Have you ever noticed that the bees are incredible architects? The hive is a masterpiece of engineering, with rows and rows of six-sided rooms with walls of wax. This marble palace—we call it the comb—is built by young bees under seventeen days old. Yet each little room is the same size, six-sided, with three pairs of walls facing each other. The walls of the rooms are only two thousandth of an inch thick, yet so strong that a pound of comb will support at least 25 pounds of honey. Think of that friends—only as thick as a hair of your head.

How do these young bees know that the hexagon has the smallest circumference,

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

therefore requiring the smallest amount of building material? How do they know that hexagon cells are the best and most economical construction? Who told them? Yet they do it all without blueprints or drawing boards or compasses. And every cell is perfect, just the size to fit a bee.

How do they do it? Well, they hang themselves up like a festoon from the roof of the hive. Or it may be in a hollow of a tree. One bee hooks onto the roof, and another bee hooks onto his dangling legs, etc. These chains of bees grow longer and longer, and as they sway, they hook onto bees on the right and left until they form a living curtain. Now they hang up like this to produce wax. You see, there are four wax pockets on each side of the bee's abdomen. And after about 24 hours of hanging, wax begins to appear from these pockets. When a bee feels its wax is ready, it climbs up over the other bees, takes the wax out of its pockets, chews it, and pats it onto the comb. At first they just pile on wax. Then they form rough cups, climb into them, and push. And, of course, a lot of other bees are pushing at the same time. The result—the perfect shape and the incredibly thin walls. And that's the way the comb is built. Now this bees wax is a remarkable substance in itself, friends. It has the highest melting point of any known wax. This keeps it from melting in the 110 degree temperature of the summer heat.

But friends, the bees perform this work in perfect cooperation, as if their assignments were posted on a bulletin board. It must be a marvel of organization, you say. Yes, but who directs it? Who planted that incredible wisdom in the tiny brain of the bee? What engineer taught it how to construct a mathematically precise house which conforms to all the laws of science and nature? It almost seems that the bee has a computer brain which is programmed to building nothing less than perfect cells of wax.

There may be 40 to 75 thousand bees in a hive, or more, all working in perfect harmony, as a unit. But who is the leader? Certainly not the queen. The only time she exerts any leadership is when she is challenged by another queen and the bees follow her to a new hive. But otherwise, the queen bee is in reality nothing more than an egg-laying machine. In a single day she can lay 2,000 eggs. But she does nothing else, and their weight alone could be two to four times more than the bee.

Certainly the drones are not the leaders. These male bees are completely indolent. They are waiting for just one thing—and that is to mate with the queen bee when she soars off on her courtship flight. Only one in a hundred of the drones will ever make it. But what of the workers? They are the real marvels of the hive. Although they have no leader, each bee does just the right thing at the right time.

Bees need two things—pollen and nectar. Both are found in flowers. And as they fly off to the fields of flowers, they go marvelously equipped. In the first place, a honeybee is a fantastically engineered flying machine. Man-made freight planes can carry a payload of about 25 percent of their weight. But a bee can carry almost a hundred percent of its weight. The bee needs no propeller or jet. Its short, wide wings both lift and drive it. It can move straight up or down, or it can hover in mid-air. Its stubby wings fold in a split second when it dives into a flower. Or it can whirl its wings to cool the beehive.

The bee has three places for storing cargo. One is a tank inside its body in which it stores nectar. Then, on its hind legs, it has two storage baskets for carrying pollen. Imagine a freight plane with its load dangling underneath. Are these pollen baskets something that evolved because of a need? Well, man first wrote about the bee in 3000 B.C. It had the pollen baskets then. And it hasn't changed since!

A bee can suck up a load of nectar in a minute. It takes three minutes for it to build up two bulging loads of pollen in the baskets on its hind legs. How does it do it? Well, the bee dives into a flower, its body picking up pollen by brushing past the pollen boxes. It splashes about in the flower, and the yellow powder clings to the hairs on its body. But no, it isn't so simple. How does it get the pollen into the baskets? And how does it keep the pollen from blowing away in flight? The load must be moistened, pressed together, tamped down, and evenly balanced on each leg. But believe it or not, the bee does it—and all the while hovering in mid-air or hanging by one claw!

What kind of a brain does the little honeybee have? You haven't heard anything yet. Let me tell you about the waggle dance. You see, when the hive stirs in the morning, there may be 10,000 bees ready to go out and load up. But where should they go? They wait patiently while perhaps a dozen scouts go out to locate the day's plunder. When a scout bee finds treasure, it loads up and flies straight back to the hive. Here she goes through a peculiar performance. She gives samples of the nectar to the other bees and gets them all excited. Then, as they follow her around, she goes through a figure eight across the face of the comb. The angle at which she goes through the figure eight tells the others the direction of the field. But how far away is it? Bees are short sighted, and they fly high. They must know just how far to go before coming down to earth. So with each movement through the figure eight the scout executes a waggle dance by wagging her abdomen. The number of waggles in 15 seconds tells the distance to the field.

But the problem is not so simple as it appears. A field twice as far away will not be indicated by twice as many waggles, for the number executed is in reverse ratio to the distance. That is, the farther away the field, the fewer the waggles. For example, if it makes ten circles in 15 seconds, the field of flowers is 300 feet away. But if the scout moves in slow motion, say two circles in 15 seconds, the flowers are almost 4 miles away! Still more marvelous is the fact that the ratio will not be one of simple arithmetic, but a number indicated by a logarithmic figure. So the honeybee uses higher mathematics in directing the workers to the field of flowers! I say again, what kind of a brain does she have? Is this an accident?

I wonder if you realize just how necessary the honeybee is, not only to our economy, but even to life itself. Bees, you see, handle up to 80% of all the pollinating that is done by insects. To show just how important bees are in pollination, listen to this. As an experiment, one branch of a pear tree was tied with gauze so that bees could not get to it. The branch did not yield a single pear. Another branch, with no more blossoms than the other, but exposed to bees, produced 33 pears.

Now, of course, without plants and flowers, bees could not exist. But it works both ways. Without bees, plants and flowers could not exist. Without the plant kingdom there would be no oxygen, and the earth could not be inhabited. You and I could not even exist without the honeybee!

Now, did the honeybee, with all its fantastic equipment for its job, just happen? Through long ages? A little bit at a time? Well, think it through. Suppose the bee started out with wings that wouldn't fold up to enable it to dive into a flower? How would it survive until it developed that kind of wing? What if it had no pollen baskets on its hind legs? What if it had the pollen baskets, but not the knee joints to press the pollen into the baskets, or the sense to know how to do it? What if it had no hairs on its body to collect the pollen—or the hairs but no way to comb off the pollen? What if it hadn't developed a nectar tank—yet? What if it had no wax-making equipment—or didn't know it was supposed to hang up in a festoon for 24 hours to make the wax come out? What if the wax would not withstand the high temperatures of the hive, as few waxes would? What if the bees didn't know how to make royal jelly to feed the queen—and the queen died? What if a bee couldn't find its way back to the hive—or back to a field of flowers?

The questions fairly tumble out. They are endless. I think you can see that any one piece of the bee's physical equipment would be completely useless without all the others. To be of any use whatsoever, every bit of the bee's equipment and know-how would have to have developed simultaneously—all at once—and instantly.

Or if evolution happened, consider this. That very first bee, away back there, sitting on the limb of a tree. What kind of bee was it? Was it a queen? But a queen could not survive without a whole colony of bees to feed her, and a drone with which to mate. And the drones have no other reason to exist except to mate with the queen. So they could not have come first. In fact, they could not exist without a queen, anyway—they have no other way to reproduce.

If evolution is true, the bee of today had to gradually develop all the marvelous apparatus and skill to manufacture his food, his hive, etc.—which means that the first bee didn't have all the equipment, such as nectar sac, pollen bags and wax makers. They, supposedly, evolved over the ages of primeval time. Yet, even the evolutionists concede that the bee could not survive without each of the intricately designed features that he possesses RIGHT NOW. The only answer to this dilemma is that God made the bee in the beginning, perfectly equipped and divinely programmed to work and live exactly as he does today. What a testimony to the truth of instant creation by an omnipotent Creator!

^ Top

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Astronomy & The Bible

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today I would like for us to turn our attention to the mighty miracle of the universe as revealed in the heavens above us. So often we plod our way over the earth, hardly lifting our eyes to the incredible beauty which appears nightly in the skies. We spend too much time in the great cities where there is so much light we cannot even glimpse the beautiful stars. Everyone should spend some time alone in the country watching the majestic march of the constellations from dusk until dawn. No thinking mind could ever after that question the existence of God.

Did you know that every astronomical observatory is a fulfillment of a Scriptural command? Notice this interesting text in Isaiah 40:26: "Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their hosts by number: he calleth them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth." How often have we heard the foolish ranting of unbelievers, evolutionists and skeptics. Modern textbooks also loudly proclaim their scores of theories trying to explain the universe; but few of these people or textbooks take God into account at all. Chance and blind nature are given credit for all the complicated operations of our wonderfully balanced world.

Friends, it is hard to believe that men of intelligence and education could take some of the positions that are now held by so-called evolutionistic scientists. In Proverbs 3:19 we read, "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth." Now, we owe our lives to that wisdom of God, friends, that set the forces of nature in operation. Our fate is not hinging upon some lucky accident of arrangement in this world of ours. We have already found out that the moon is just the right distance from this earth to make the tides useful. If the moon and earth were closer together, the tides might come up and actually submerge all the dry land areas. If the atmosphere was thinner over our head, the meteors could come crashing through and do terrible damage to the surface of the earth and to human life. There are thousands of examples which reveal the fact that this universe was designed and engineered by some marvelous intelligence. Not the least of these is the miracle of the stars.

In Psalm 19:1, 2 we read: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard." Only a great mathematician could have ordered the numberless stars to take their place in the vast heavens above. Actually, there are only two or three thousand stars visible to the naked eye of man, but there are thousands, millions, billions, trillions and quadrillions beyond that. In fact, we are appalled by the vast numbers and distances involved in the expansive universe of God. Yet with all the created heavenly bodies, God knows the name of each one. Psalm 147:4, "He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names."

Now for a few moments today, let's take an imaginary celestial journey sightseeing through star-land. We will not go by jet, because that is much too slow. We shall travel on the wings of light, which means that we will be speeding along at 186,000 miles per second. By the way, traveling at that tremendous rate, we will be able to circle the earth seven times in a single second. In one minute's time we can travel 11 million miles. We will start at the sun, the center of our own solar system, which is 93 million miles away from the earth. You know, if some great giant could stand on the earth and put out his arm to touch the sun, it would take a hundred years for him to know that he had been burned, according to the speed of nerve impulses traveling through the body. Think of the immensity of that sun?it is one million, three hundred thousand times larger than our earth. If the earth could swell up to become the same size as the sun, and man should grow up in the same proportion, a man would be 625 feet tall. That gives an idea of just how fantastic the sun is in comparison to earth.

Now we are ready to begin our journey. Remember that the vehicle is a beam of light.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

We are going to travel in one years time five trillion, eight hundred and eighty-one billion, eight hundred and seven million, eight hundred and ten thousand, six hundred and twenty miles. Now this is what we call a light year. This is the yard stick of travel in space. It is the distance that we will be able to travel in a year going at the amazing speed of 186,000 miles per second. So we start out from the sun to make this imaginary journey. Actually, there is no star within one light year of our sun. In fact, the nearest star to the earth is four and one-third light years away. That means it will take us four and one-third years to get there, even though we travel on a beam of light. It takes nine years for us to reach Sirius which is one of the brightest stars in our sky; 47 years to travel to the North star; 160 years to reach Arcturus; and 750,000 years to reach the nebula of Andromeda. So leaving the sun at the speed of light, we pass that nearest star in four and one-third years. But now, this is much too slow. Suppose we open up the throttle and actually travel one million times faster than light. Can you imagine, friends, what we are speaking about now. We will actually be going a million times faster than 186,000 miles per second.

Well, at this rate, we would be able to shoot forward into space passing by great gaseous nebulas and systems much too vast for us to even comprehend. After months of travel we would reach the nearest galaxy to our earth, the great nebula of Andromeda. It would take four months to just pass through it going a million times faster than light. But still we go on until time and space just seem to merge into one. Every few years we would pass an island universe. And after a hundred years, traveling at a million times the speed of light, we would come to the limit of our telescopes. In other words, we would reach the edges of space as far as man has been able to see through his most powerful lenses. But as we look on beyond, friends, there would be a beckoning glow of countless other island universes. You see, the creation of God is limitless. Man has not even begun to investigate it or understand it. Think of it! Those trillions of blazing stars are formed into solar systems. Our nine planets, of course, circling around the sun forms our own solar system. And they all revolve in perfect order in their appointed paths.

Next we have what is known as group systems. Here thousands of suns with their stars and planets are clustered together, and each cluster moves along in its own direction; and yet within the cluster, the different solar systems are circling. Circling in their own directions and in their own paths. But the entire group is moving along also in a common direction. The next part is the amazing island universe which contains our 100 million suns. At least, the one in which the earth is located contains that many. Astronomers say that there are two hundred million island universes out there in the immensity of space. One of them, by the way, is 50,000 times larger than our own. The Milky Way is our island universe. The nearest other Milky Way system to us is a million light years away.

Now let us pause for just a moment, friends, and contemplate the power that is required to keep those systems in order. Why is there not constant collision and chaos? True, they are very far apart; there is plenty of space and yet, friends, they are traveling at tremendous, unbelievable speeds. I think of Arcturus, which is known as the runaway of the heavens. The average speed of a star is 26 miles per second. But Arcturus is rushing madly along at 257 miles per second. By the way, Arcturus is a million times larger than our sun, and we said that our sun was more than a million times larger than the earth. So this gives you an idea of the incredible mass of this star. And as it goes dashing wildly through space, it is drawing hundreds of other star travelers along with it. All at a speed of 900,000 miles per hour. Yet with this headlong rush through space, Arcturus has never yet crashed.

Notice how the Bible speaks of this in Job 38:32, "Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?" Ah, of course, Job seemed to understand about that runaway of the heavens. He spoke of it in his inspired writing.

Even our own world, of course, is no slow-poke, when it comes to travel. The earth turns about a thousand miles per hour on its axis. Then it orbits the sun at a speed of 68,000 miles per hour, and then, of course, our sun and the entire Milky Way system is moving along at 44,000 miles per hour. So, even though we are not conscious of it at all, we are moving at headlong speeds right through space. Now the most wonderful part of all is that these great systems seem to revolve around some common center. No one seems to know just where that spot is located in the heavens, but friends, I have no doubt that it is the very throne of God.

The universe staggers our imagination. But it is so humbling to realize that this little earth is simply a speck of cosmic dust in the great plan of God. We are almost lost out here amidst the complexity of all the space groups and island universes. But, here is a fact we must never forget. This is the only world that went astray. Amidst all the untold billions of other heavenly bodies, this one alone disobeyed God and became a rebel. Oh, friends, what did God do for this prodigal world? Why didn't He just let it go and wipe it out of existence and make another one to put in its place? No, He loved man too much to do that, so He sent His Son down to this tiny planet to save the degraded, sinful rebels who lived here. And, by the way, this one who came down with the power to save and redeem, was the same one who set the orbits of the solar system in their appointed places. He flung the far limits of the universe which man has never been able to probe.

Listen, have you pondered the magnitude of that love which caused Him to be tied to a tiny, ugly world so full of sinful, ugly people? Look at yourself today. How painfully aware we are of our deformity of character. The inroads of sin have cut deeply into the lives of human beings. More than human strength is needed now to save us. We are going down too fast, and we have gone too far already. Yes, we need a deliverer. That same power has been waiting to pick us up, to lift us, to renew us, to change our hearts and lives. When we pray, God reaches down to save us. Isn't that wonderful, friends, how God can love us like that?

We have no way, from our poor human perspective, to even imagine the glory and majesty of that heavenly throne where God rules the universe. Because of the immensity of space, we can't picture the physical reality of an actual city where the mighty Creator God oversees the galaxies and island universes He has created. Once in a while, through the powerful telescopes, men can get glimpses of spectacular glowing gases of indescribable beauty. They have actually captured those scenes on film. But yet the Bible says eye has not seen, ear has not heard, neither has it entered into the heart of man what God has prepared for us in His kingdom.

Friends, I believe God has veiled His glory there and the glory of His great New Jerusalem city in Paradise. Isn't it a wonderful thought that right through those great open spaces in the sky, someday God will come down bringing His holy city with Him and all the angels of heaven. Yes, we know the skies will separate soon. The trumpet army of angels will descend with Him and Jesus will appear seated on a cloud coming back to redeem the earth from its terrible curse of sin. The question is, friends, will we be ready for it? Are we ready now? It is not something to prepare for later. It is something to be ready for today. Won't you receive Him now so that you will be ready to meet Him in that glorious day that is just before us?

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Beyond the Light Years

At present the farthest man has been able to vault himself into space is the moon, a very short distance indeed compared to the vast expanse of the cosmos. Sensitive instruments that have been conveyed to Mars and near other planets in our solar system have detected fascinating mysteries, but no signs of organic life as we know it.

Man has an insatiable curiosity about other worlds and possible life forms which may exist there. If man finds a way to project himself beyond the moon into unexplored space, what will he find? Is there life on other worlds? If there is, what kind of life? Are beings on other worlds in possession of secrets of the universe that we do not have? Or is ours an empty universe? What would research in the far reaches of space do to our existing ideas about God?

The careful student of Scripture is led to believe that there is life on other worlds. Could it be otherwise if these words of the ancient prophet Isaiah are true? "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God Himself that formed the earth and made it; He hath established it, He created it not in vain, He formed it to be inhabited." Isaiah 45:18.

If this small world on which we live—for it is infinitesimally small compared with many of the giants in the sky—if the creation of this world would have been in vain, if it were not inhabited, then by any stretch of the imagination can we conceive of the Creator's leaving the whole universe, except for our world, empty? Certainly not! Bob Considine, former N.B.C. commentator, said it this way: "We are only a remote satellite of an unimportant star in an obscure galaxy in God's universe. Can it be that only upon this cinder God chose to put life?"

According to Scripture there must be life on other worlds. And evidently, these other worlds are inhabited by beings who have never sinned, for we read in Nehemiah 9:6 that "the host of heaven worshippeth Thee." Our little world must be the one lost sheep of the universe. Could it be that all our restless, disturbing questions could be answered if we would turn again to a neglected Book? Could it be that we could know now—without waiting to explore outer space—the vital secrets that the universe holds? If you have any lingering doubts about the credibility of Scripture, a careful study will soon dispel them. In fact, you may decide that the words of the ancient Book are as substantial as any information to be found the other side of light-years.

The Bible, you see, is a scientific Book—more scientific than you may have thought. For instance, Isaiah 40:22 speaks about "the circle of the earth." Did men in Isaiah's day know that the earth is round? Hardly, for it is a comparatively new discovery. Yes, Isaiah, under inspiration, wrote the scientific facts that today's knowledge confirms. In the ancient book of Job—Job 26:7—we read that the earth hangs on nothing. Yet it was only a few centuries ago that men learned that the earth is not held up by something or someone. The Bible, again, was far ahead.

If we would turn to the field of Bible prediction, again we would find test tube accuracy of fulfillment. None but inspired writers have dared attempt to write history thousands of years in advance. Yet Bible writers have done it. And history has followed the schedule of the prophets as if it were a blueprint.

If any man a century ago—before H-bombs or guided missiles or even blockbusters—had predicted the total destruction of New York City, we would have considered him daring, to say the least. But did you know that the prophet Ezekiel made such a prediction about the city of Tyre, as important a seaport in his day as New York is today, and that his prophecy is found in Ezekiel 26? Notice especially these words in verses 4, 5, 12, and 14: "They shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: I will also scrape her dust from me, and make her like the top of a rock. It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea." "They shall lay thy stones and thy timber and

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

thy dust in the midst of the water." "Thou shalt be built no more."

The facts affirm the accuracy of Ezekiel's words. It is true that when Nebuchadnezzar destroyed Tyre, soon after the prophecy was written, the city was not scraped like the top of a rock. But 250 years later, Alexander the Great came with his army to take the new city of Tyre built on an island half a mile offshore. In order to get his army out to the new Tyre, he ordered the timber and the stones and the dust literally scraped from the site of old Tyre and laid down in the water to make a causeway for his men. The site of the city of Tyre became like the top of a rock. And fishermen spread their nets there.

What is the explanation of such accuracy? The Scriptures give their own answer. In 2 Timothy 3:16 is the claim, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." And 2 Peter 1:21 says, "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Either these claims are true or they are false. Through the centuries the critics have attacked the Bible's claim of inspiration. Yet the centuries, and the critics, have gone and the Book stands only polished by their blows.

The archaeologists—the men with the spade—have proved an insurmountable problem to the critics. Year by year they dig up more evidence to support the Bible record. The critics said the city of Sodom never existed. But today, under the shallow waters of the southern end of the Dead Sea, ruins have been found that are generally believed to be those of Sodom. The critics said the Hittites never existed. Today we have quite extensive records of them. They said there was no Belshazzar. Historians today know him. And so it goes.

Among the most spectacular finds of the 20th century are the Dead Sea scrolls discovered by a Bedouin boy looking for a goat. Looking for a goat—but when a stone tossed idly into a cave brought the sound of crashing pottery, it was too much for Bedouin curiosity. That curiosity gave us incontrovertible proof of the authenticity of the Scriptures as we have them today.

Who wrote the Bible? There are two answers, both true. Forty men wrote it—forty men who lived separated by the centuries, with no opportunity to meet together around the committee table to discuss what they should write. Yet these forty men agree perfectly in every detail. The other answer, and the explanation of this complete agreement, is that God wrote the Scriptures. "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." This explains it. The Bible has in reality one Author, not forty. Those forty men were but faithful penmen who recorded the Creator's will.

The Bible has one Author, and one central theme. That central theme is the Man Christ Jesus. The secret of its power, the thing that makes this Book different from any other, is the Man in the Book. They tell us that through all the rope in the British navy there runs a scarlet thread. That rope can be identified anywhere. Just so through all the Bible runs the scarlet thread of the story of a Man.

Jesus invites us to verify the credibility of His claim to be the Saviour of the world by the fulfilled prophecies of His word. He said to His disciples, "Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am He." John 13:19.

Our time is too limited to discuss in all the detail we would like the prophecies found in Jeremiah, Isaiah and Ezekiel concerning Babylon, Tyre and other ancient civilizations, which all underwent exactly what the prophets predicted for them in the smallest detail. God does not ask for man's blind belief. He appeals to us to consider His divine wisdom and legitimate authority on the objectively verifiable basis of His prophetic word. "I have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of My mouth, and I showed them... I have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass... I have showed thee new things from this time, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them." Isaiah. 48:3,5,6.

These Bible detractors grew bolder with the years, until in the eyes of professors and students, and even of some theologians, the Bible was nothing more nor less than a collection of mythological tales. However, a change came in 1799 when the famous Rosetta stone was discovered not far from the mouth of the Nile, and its Egyptian inscriptions were deciphered by the French scholar Champollion in 1822. Thus he provided a key which unlocked the secrets of the treasures of ancient Egypt and other oriental nations.... Archeology was given a tremendous impetus. THE STONES BEGAN TO CRY OUT and their testimony was illuminating. Every document unearthed served but to vindicate the truths of the Bible, and incidentally, to put its critics to shame. Honest doubters cast aside their quibbles and instead became enthusiastic defenders of the infallibility of the Scriptures. We quote from a well-known scientist and archaeologist, Professor A. H. Sayce: "Recent discoveries have retorted the critic's objections upon himself. It is not the Bible writer but the modern author who is proved to have been unacquainted with the contemporaneous history of the time." Quoted from "The Hittites, the Story of a Forgotten People," page 12.

It has been truthfully said that the Scriptures are an anvil which has worn out many a hammer. "The Bible is a book which has been refuted, demolished, overthrown, and exploded more times than any other book you ever heard of....Every little while somebody starts up and upsets this book; and it is like upsetting a solid cube of granite. It is just as big one way as the other; and when you have upset it, it is right side up, and when you overturn it again, it is right side up still....For a book that has been exploded so many times, this book still shows considerable signs of life." Will The Old Book Stand?, pp. 11,12.

The Bible "tells us where we are today in the procession of the ages, and what may be expected in time to come. All that prophecy has foretold as coming to pass, until the present time, has been traced on the pages of history, and we may be assured that all which is yet to come will be fulfilled in its order." Education, p. 178.

Amid the constantly changing theories, speculations, and human opinions, the Bible alone knows no change. Like its divine Author, it is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

"All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field: The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: ....BUT THE WORD OF OUR GOD SHALL STAND FOREVER." Isaiah 40:6,8.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Confessions of Evolution Listen to the audio version Now!

Every thinking person today must confess that there are tremendous mysteries about man and nature which baffle the keenest intellects. After all, who can answer these profound questions from the standpoint of human science or reason: What is the origin of earth? What is the origin of life? And how did the species originate?

Today we have a group of scientists who are evolutionists. They claim that they have practically solved the mystery of life in the test tube of the laboratory. These learned gentlemen maintain that they have removed the problem from the realm of faith, and have banished the supernatural from all phenomena of nature. But what do the evolutionists really know about these three basis questions? We are not interested in theories and hypotheses. As practical people we must deal in facts. Evolutionists profess to speak in the name of science. The term "science" comes from a word meaning "to know."

What do evolutionists actually know about the origin of the earth? Absolutely nothing! Science is admittedly incompetent to explain the origin of anything, for the mystery of creation is outside its purview. To be sure, scientists advance opinions and theories, as though they were demonstrated facts, but theories are, frequently, as vague as they are discordant. For example, their estimates of the age of this earth and of its sister planets, range from twenty-five million, to ten billion years. The enormous discrepancy between these figures proves them to be mere conjectures, and not the result of careful scientific deductions.

Formerly it was supposed that the nebular hypothesis fully explained the evolution of our solar system; but the theory of stellar evolution is now being discredited by some great scientists, including Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory.

The famous British astronomer, Dr. J. H. Jeans, likewise denounces the nebular hypothesis as false, and he adds that, "Everything points with overwhelming force to a definite event, or series of events of creation at some time or times, not infinitely remote. The universe cannot have originated by chance out of its present ingredients, and neither can it have been always the same as now." Eos, or the Wider Aspects of Cosmogony, page 55.

What does the evolutionist know of the origin of life? The evolutionary theory demands that life must have begun from non-living matter somewhere in the remote past. But such a theory is without foundation, since nothing like it is known to science. There have been innumerable attempts to make some form of life in a test tube; but since the days of Louis Pasteur, "father" of bacteriology, all who are willing to abide by the facts of science have been obliged to confess that we know nothing at all about the origin of life. After all his suppositions, H. G. Wells makes this honest confession: "We do not know how life began on this earth."

One thing is certain, there is no such thing as life in the abstract. In other words, all living things come from previous life. Hence, in the beginning, the first living beings must have been created. In what form were they created? Would it have been easier for God to have created an amoeba than to have created a frog, a horse, or a man? It is certain that if an amoeba and nothing else were first created, it would live only long enough to starve to death, for everything in nature is interdependent. If any living object is to maintain its existence, other forms of life are imperative. Nothing lives unto itself—no bird that cleaves the air, no animal that moves upon the ground, but ministers to some other life. The creation of all the different forms of life at the very beginning, as recorded by Moses in the first chapter of Genesis, is, therefore, the only sensible, consistent explanation science can adopt regarding the origin of living things.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

A writer once asked an evolutionist to explain which of the two evolved first in the process of evolution, the hen or the egg? "The egg," he ventured to reply. "Then," said the writer "there was one egg which did not come from a hen; where did this egg come from?" Seeing his predicament, the evolutionist apologized for his mistake and guessed it was the hen which came first. "Very well," said the writer, "then there was a hen which did not come from an egg. Where did that hen come from?" The evolutionist admitted that he did not know. Friends, the first chapter of Genesis contains the only true record of the creation of all forms of life, and according to that record, the first hen was created.

What do the evolutionists know about the origin of the species? Most of them hold to the opinion that the species are the result of gradual changes. However, a few evolutionists confess that the origin of species is an unsolved mystery. In his book, Evolution and Adaptation, Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, of Columbia University, states on page 43: "Within the period of human history we do not know of a single instance of the transformation of one species into another one. ... The theory of descent is lacking, therefore, in the most essential feature that it needs to place the theory on a scientific basis. This must be admitted."

This is a large and frank admission for a leader in this branch of science to make, namely that evolution is essentially unscientific. The three-fold foundation on which evolution must rest as a science—that is the scientific explanation of the origin of our planet, of life, and of species—is lacking. No one has ever seen life spring up from non-living matter; no one has seen one species changing into another; and no person now living has ever seen a world evolving.

The basic theory on which evolution rests is that there has been a uniform and a continuous development from the simplest forms of life to the more complex. But this theory, that there has been a uniform development upward, known as uniformitarianism, is at variance with the true facts of geology. Instead of noticeable evolution and development upward, a comparison between contemporaneous forms of life and that of antiquity, indicates a steady downward trend of degeneration. Even a casual visit to the Washington Museum of Natural History, for example, will convince any impartial observer that at some time in the past, animals far more powerful and of vastly greater size than now exist, had roamed this earth. The giant skeletons of mastodons and dinosaurs that lived on earth in ages past, are mute but eloquent proof that instead of a progression and evolution forward, there is a continuous weakening and retrogression visible among all forms of life, including man.

As Sir William Dawson, British scientist, remarks: "Nothing is more evident in the history of fossil animals and plants of past geological ages than that persistence or degeneracy is the rule rather than the exception. ... We may almost say that all things left to themselves tend to degenerate, and only a new breathing of the Almighty Spirit can start them again on the path of advancement." Modern Ideas of Evolution, Appendix, as quoted in Geology by Prof. G. McCready Price, page 283.

A candid study of fossils and of the remains of prehistoric animals indicates further that instead of uninterrupted uniformity of evolution, there occurred at some time in the past a deluge of world-wide extent, which in the words of a distinguished scientist, has turned this world into a "great cemetery, where the rocks are the tombstones on which the buried dead have written their own epitaphs." In the soil of Bear Island and of Liachoff Islands of the frigid north, have been found entombed frozen bodies of such tropical animals as mammoths in such perfect state of preservation, and with undigested food in their mouths, as to indicate that they were involved in some sudden catastrophe—namely, the flood.

These facts not only confirm the Bible record of a universal flood, but they also indicate that a vast change in the world's climate has occurred since the flood. Sir Henry Howorth, distinguished British scientist, in his work, The Glacial Nightmare and the Flood, writes: "From what has been already stated it appears that the animal and vegetable relics found in the polar regions, embedded in strata deposited in widely separated geological eras, uniformly testify that a warm climate has in former times prevailed over the whole globe." Page 45.

These facts lead us to the inevitable conclusion that whatever geological changes took place in our world, they occurred since man was on the earth and were caused by the flood and not by evolution; and, furthermore, there is no scientific proof that any single type of fossil is older than the human race. Thus the Mosaic record, that the creation of all the basic forms of life was accomplished during the first week of time, stands vindicated.

In the first chapter of the book of Genesis is found the only scientific explanation of the origin of species: "And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so. And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind; and God saw that it was good."

Genesis 1:24, 25.

Here we have true science. This Genesis record states that it was God who created the different species, and that He endowed them with power to procreate after their kind. There is, to be sure, plenty of variation within the species. A grapefruit, a lime, a lemon, an orange, are variations of the citrus fruit. Species cannot overlap. Consequently, a cat has never been known to give birth to a dog. The species are firmly fixed by divine order "after their kind." All things were made by the express will of God: "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. ... For he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast." Psalm 33:6, 9.

Can you understand why professed Christians should have any difficulty with this clear-cut explanation? Why do we have the sad picture before us of religious leaders yielding their belief in God's Word, just to harmonize with scientists who are trying to prove a creation without God. The whole problem centers in man's refusal to accept the authority of the Bible. The rising tide of modernism and higher criticism has spread like a plague within the churches. Theologians have contaminated their ministerial students, who in turn have infected the laity. And the end is not yet. With increasing tempo the tide is sweeping whole denominations into the stream of skepticism. This broadcast is seeking to strengthen the faith of those who take God at His Word, and who accept the Bible as the infallible, inspired counsel of that God. n

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Design in Nature Listen to the audio version Now!

As skepticism increases in the religious world, more and more demand is being made for proof concerning the existence of God. Once upon a time that question was never raised, but even theologians are unsettled today about this basic issue. I contend that open-minded men of sincere hearts will find no lack of evidence to prove that God exists. It is certainly strange that the most obvious evidences are usually overlooked entirely. The naturalist who constantly surveys the miracle design in God's handiwork is seldom unconscious of an intelligent Creator. The overwhelming supply of intricate order and design, altogether beyond the ability of any human to provide, convinces the unprejudiced scientist that God made it all.

Our little world abounds in proof of the existence of God. To illustrate: There are laws which determine the weather, the climate, and the season. Inexorable law reigns in plant and animal life, in chemistry and physics. There are laws governing light, color, and sound. Design, and symmetry are discernible in every flower, leaf and blade of grass. Take, for example, the corn on the cob. Did you know that its longitudinal rows are always even in number, either eight, ten, twelve, or fourteen, etc? You will never find an ear of corn having an odd number of such rows. Inanimate nature cannot count. Who then could have planned such an arrangement if not the mind of the Infinite One?

Consider the tiny snow crystals, with their graceful whorls, the delicately chiseled and beveled edges that decorate them, and their curious dots and loops, all arranged in perfect order about one center. How can one explain the fact that snowflakes are almost always hexagon in shape—either six-sided or six-rayed? Professor Wilson A. Bentley, an authority on snowflakes, and pioneer of snow crystal photography, photographed at least five thousand flakes and never found two that were exactly alike!

Five thousand snowflakes each with a different design! But what are five thousand snowflakes among the countless snow crystals which blanket numberless fields and tops of mountain ranges, and feed the glacial rivers?

Artists and silk designers use these snow crystal photographs for patterns; jewelers use them for gem-cutting and for designing jewelry and filigree work; workers in art-metal, for making the decorative ornamental work, such as tracery in windows; scientists, to study the weather, the clouds, and the snow. Lovers of beauty revel in their symmetrical and fragile loveliness. When he was asked for an explanation of the transcendent beauty of these crystals, Wilson Bentley answered, "Only the Artist who designed and fashioned them knows how it is done." Friends, the very existence of such a law of design proves that there is a super intelligent Artist-Creator behind the miracle of snowflakes. We do not even know any human designer who could produce the myriad fragile art patterns which those flakes reveal. Does anyone have the faith to believe that blind chance could produce something superior to all of man's intelligence?

Now let's think of another example of design and order. The wise man counsels: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise." Proverbs 6:6. Who can explain the wonders of animal behavior? No one knows. Who has endowed the ant with the superior wisdom that makes it the world's first mining engineer? Who made it possible for the humble water spider to be the world's first hydraulic engineer? The water-spider builds its nest under water, fastening it to a rock, log, or stick, with the opening to the nest pointing downward. In order to force the water out of this thimble-sized nest, the spider brings tiny air bubbles into it. It repeats this operation until all the water has been forced out of the nest, and it is ready for the laying of its eggs. Who taught the spider that the air will displace the water in its nest? How was the spider able to discern this scientific fact thousands of years before Archimedes discovered it?

The shell-spider is the world's first civil engineer. It lifts a shell, possibly a hundred times its own weight, to a branch about eighteen inches above the ground. How it performs this feat of engineering is indeed a marvel of marvels! It first turns the shell downward,

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

in order to drain out the water that may be in it; it then spins a web from the shell to the branch. The web shrinks as it dries, and it thus lifts the shell a little closer toward the branch. The spider then spins another web, and still another, each strand lifting the shell closer, until the shell is hoisted and fastened to the branch.

Bees are the world's first sanitary engineers. When a mouse enters their hive, they sting it to death; and inasmuch as bees are vegetarians, they do not feed on the carcass. In order to prevent the decaying corpse from contaminating the rest of the beehive, they seal it air-tight with a special wax, and so perfectly is the work done, that not the slightest taint of decay or the faintest odor can seep through it. Who taught these bees and gave them this marvelous wisdom? The same God who bids His children: "Be ye clean."

Man has within himself a fully equipped "World's Fair," far exceeding the wonders of any other World's Fair. If the living human body could be magnified a million times, what mysterious processes we would behold that would stagger the imagination! We are told that the tissues of our bodies are composed of twenty-eight billions of cells, and that each cell and tissue requires food for metabolism. Does man consciously contribute anything to the accomplishment of this stupendous process? Not in the slightest degree. All that man does is to partake of food, and to masticate it. The stomach, the intestines, the liver, the nerves, the heart, the blood and the lymph do the rest. The blood delivers the nourishment to each of these twenty-eight billion cells, and the body does the rest, forming bone, nerve and muscle.

It is fascinating to observe how quickly the body counteracts disease when some kind of a disturbance occurs. An alarm is immediately sent out from the nerve center in the brain, at once setting in motion nerve activities in the body in its effort to overcome the difficulty. Swarms of white cells are quickly manufactured in the marrow of the bones, and these cells go forth to prevent any further intrusion of the invading germ. Restorative forces are at work, and healing has begun. Whence does the human body obtain this power to repair itself? In the words of the Scriptures: "Who hath put wisdom in the inward parts? or who hath given understanding to the heart?" Job 38:36.

One great Professor of Clinical Medicine at Harvard Medical School, in an address to the Massachusetts Medical Society, enumerated many of the mysterious functions and processes of the body which no scientist understands or can explain. "But what is nature?" he asked. "What are the characteristics of this power? The first is that of its superhuman wisdom. Where does this force come from? Where do we get the healing substance in our tissues? I do not see why we should call it by its natural name. ... It is perfectly obvious that it is God. It is the power of God upon which each one here depends today, for the fact that he is here instead of being underneath the earth. ... The medical profession has learned in studying disease, more about the meaning of this word, God, than the vast majority of the so-called religious people. Why not tell this truth, because it is true?"

The human eye is a marvelous photographic camera constantly sending picture messages to the brain. The ear is a super-sensitized sound apparatus, capable of recognizing a familiar voice among a thousand. And what might not be said of the nervous system, with its millions of tiny nerve endings and shoots reaching every part of the body, carrying messages to the central station—the brain. Who is able to solve the mysteries of the human mind, of man's personality, and destiny? Is it any wonder the inspired psalmist exclaimed: "I am fearfully and wonderfully made"? Psalm 139:14.

Since God bestowed so much thought in the creation of man, is it reasonable to suppose that He will neglect to care for him? Are you at times tempted to think that God doesn't care, that He has forgotten you? Listen to what He has to say concerning this: "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee." Isaiah 49:15.

There was a time when this Scriptural account of the creation of man was sneered and scoffed at by skeptics, and regarded as preposterous, and unscientific. They called the creation story a myth which had come down to us from the ancient peoples of the East. But when chemical analysts tested out the Genesis account in the test tube of the laboratory, they found it to be scientifically sound. Modern scientists agree that the human body is composed of precisely the same elements as the dust of the ground.

Further proof that man was created from dust is demonstrated by the fact that in order to live man must partake of food which comes from the dust of the ground. The inorganic elements of the earth are transformed in the body by the power of God into organic elements which sustain and maintain the life of man. Let man cease to partake of these elements of the earth and he will soon weaken and die. We see, therefore, the same forces at work in man today as were brought into existence in the beginning by the creative power of God. Thus the creation story stands vindicated. n

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution - Part 1

Listen to the audio version Now!

I believe most of us know that Protestantism is not making the progress it did in earlier days. There has been a strange lessening of enthusiasm for Reformation principles. Issues which were once so very, very clear have now been clouded by modern Protestant theology and interpretation. In fact, the historic principle of the Bible and the Bible only is now being questioned as the real source of emphasis for Protestantism today.

We want to study some of these subtle changes that have taken place to steal away the power of that gospel message of old. We would like to know why churches have turned away from the clear Bible preaching of God's Word and put their main emphasis upon social matters and upon a social gospel.

There are two mighty issues facing Protestantism today—evolution and modernism. We are going to take these matters up one by one and see what fearful inroads these heresies have made upon Protestant theology. First of all, we will think about evolution, the theory of evolution. You know, friends, one of the great marvels of this age is how this philosophical theory became acceptable on a scientific plane. This is something we just can't understand, because there is nothing, absolutely nothing, scientific about it. It is utterly unscientific.

Now, we all recognize that science insists upon laboratory methods to verify its propositions. Science always says we must prove it. We must go to the laboratory. We must be sure of everything, put it in the test tube. And yet when science begins to deal in theories of the origin of things, friends, there can be no laboratory proof. There can be no scientific test. After all, no one was here when the world was made. No one was audience to those billions of years which the evolutionists claim for the progression of mankind. So, how could it possibly be scientific?

Now there are only two ways that a person can deal with this matter of the origin of mankind. First, by philosophy and second, by revelation. I have chosen the door of revelation to be the surest and the best. We think God has given us in the Bible a revelation of how things came to be. But philosophy, on the other hand, instead of having any kind of authority such as the Bible, simply speculates on how it might have happened. Now I have no quarrel with philosophy. If they want to imagine how things could have taken place, I don't object. But when these speculations are presented as scientific facts, I do object strenuously.

What is this theory that philosophy instituted and science adopted. Well, it's the idea that way back in the beginning of things there was only a one-celled organism in the whole world, or a tiny monad, as it has been called by some. And this little monad or one-celled organism, without any intelligent design, without any external force applied, over a period of millions of years, simply evolved through a series of spectacular species changes until it turned from a little one-celled thing into an upright man. Now really when I say these things, it's almost with a smile because it's impossible to even imagine an accidental development of a little one-celled animal into an upright individual with all the complexities of his make-up. Yet this is what evolutionary science has now adopted and which it now teaches as fact. Now let me give a fantastic illustration of this word evolution as it is used to describe the doctrine of organic evolution. When I use this illustration, friends, please understand that it's utterly impossible but nevertheless it is a parallel of what the evolutionist is teaching.

Just imagine that the first tiny two-cylinder gas buggy that was ever made was never used by mankind at all. It was simply placed in an open field and left there. According to this theory of evolution, if you just leave something long enough, it's bound to change. And so if you leave this little two-cylinder gas buggy there long enough, and a few million years pass by, it's supposed to change. Without any outside pressure, without any external force applied, without any intelligence involved at all, it's going to change from that little two-cylinder thing into a four-cylinder improvement. Then if you will leave it there long enough, it will also develop into a six-cylinder and finally it will grow into a modern twelve-cylinder automobile. But you say, is that really evolution? No,

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

that's not quite it yet. Actually, if this same process continues and you still leave this modern car out there long enough, if it sprouts wings and then takes off flying as an airplane, that would be evolution.

You say, is it really this preposterous, the theory that is being taught? Listen, friends, it's absolutely no more improbable—the thing that I have told you—than the theory which is being taught by a lot of scientists. It's no more improbable than to think that an amoeba could become a worm and a worm become a fish and a fish an amphibian and that turn into a reptile and that into a bird which changes to a mammal which finally becomes a man. Now that's precisely what the evolutionists teach. All those changes are supposed to take place by pure accident. By simply letting nature and time operate upon the little monad, it develops at last into a fully developed complex human being. So you see the illustration is not altogether without parallel.

Now the problem still remains, where did the little monad come from in the beginning? And that's quite a problem because many scientists don't want to admit that God had anything to do with creation at all. For a long time scientists believed in spontaneous generation. What is that? Well, they thought that if you put a pile of old rags in a corner and left them there, after a while a chemical reaction would take place and suddenly out of those rags, life would emerge. Now this, friends, was modern science some years ago. This was taught by some of the most learned men in the world, spontaneous generation, life just coming into being out of nothing. That became a little unscientific because they finally realized that life comes only from life. But now the scientist is in a quandary if he doesn't believe in the Bible story of creation. I'm sorry to say that some modern scientists are going back to that old theory again. Some of them are actually falling back on this theory of spontaneous generation because they have nothing else to believe in. They have absolutely no other explanation as to how the first little monad came into existence or how it arrived on the scene. That is, unless they take the actual teaching of the Scripture about creation.

Perhaps the greatest problem of all is to prove how that little monad became a man. Now there's a real problem to the scientist who believes in evolution. And you know science has been combing the world looking for some tangible scientific evidence of the change they believe takes place in the progression of these organisms. They have been searching for a missing link, for some integrating form to show that species will change from a smaller form into a higher form of life. But you know, friends, they have never found a single shred of evidence to prove that it ever took place, or that it ever could possibly take place. Every bit of evidence supports the story of the Genesis record, that God spoke the world into existence, that God created man as he is now in an upright form. But still, as I say, these people are hard to convince and they don't want to give up their cherished theories.

Let's go back to the book of Genesis for a moment now. Genesis 1:27: "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Now isn't that clear and simple? It says that God created man in God's image. Now, what was God's image, dear friends? Was it some one-cell form of life? Never! Man was made upright, we are told in the Scriptures, created after the image of God. Now look at verse 11. "And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so."

How did everything reproduce? After its kind. The grass brought forth grass. The trees brought forth trees. Nothing changed its family lines, in other words. There is no such thing as a changing of species. Pansies will always be pansies. Monkeys will always be monkeys. And men will always be men. There are no integrating forms to reveal any change from one family to another or from one species to another. Now friends, if the theory of evolution were correct, we should be able to find many, many varied forms of life changing from one family to another. For example, we should be able to find fish who are turning into mammals and mammals who are turning into birds, etc. But in all the records of civilized man there is no proof of such a change. The scientists will dash madly all over the world if they think some missing link has been discovered. They found some new, strange sounding fish over in Malaya. Immediately the scientists booked a plane to fly over there to see that fish—to see if maybe it didn't have some arms or if it didn't look like some other kind of creature except a fish. But every time they have been disappointed. It just turned out to be a different kind of fish, that's all. Fish remain fish, and birds remain birds, and monkeys remain monkeys, and they don't seem to change their family lines at all.

There is a certain fly called the common fruit fly and its scientific name is drosophila, and this fly is unusual in that it actually produces several generations every week. Now this provides an almost perfect setup for scientific observation. The scientists have been observing the fruit fly for a long time, a hundred years or more. This fruit fly can produce several generations every week. Now, friends, if any change takes place just by the passing of time and the reproducing of successive generations, this fruit fly should show some kind of change after these hundreds and thousands of generations. Yet, in all of these countless numbers of generations, they have not yet found a single change taking place in the fruit fly. It's still just like it was thousands of generations ago. And the evolutionists don't know how to explain it. According to their theory, something should have happened and the fruit fly should have grown up into a big horse fly at least. But nothing has happened. No change has taken place.

All right, another fact which denies this theory is that these family members cannot change their species. They can't crossbreed. Dogs will not interbreed with cats neither will horses with elephants. Everything seems to reproduce after its kind only, just as God said back in the beginning. The reason for this is that all of these families have a different number of chromosomes in their cells which means that they can only produce biologically after their kind. There could not possibly be any biological progression from one family or from one species to another. Now changes may take place within the species—yes. You will get many different varieties developing within a family because of mutational changes. In other words, God didn't have to create all the different kinds of dogs and the different kinds of birds or cats. He simply made one pair and from it, the varieties have developed according to the mutational changes within those species. But they have never gone across family lines to change into a different family. That would be transmutation, and it has never taken place in all history and it can't take place according to the evidence at hand.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution - Part 2

Listen to the audio version Now!

In our last broadcast we introduced the subject of evolution. We are going to continue that strange subject, I say "strange" because it has been accorded a status of scientific fact when actually it's only a theory. Right here I would like to introduce two arguments of the evolutionists based on geology and biology. Now I have no argument with these sciences, friends, because there is true science. Biology is a wonderful science and so is geology. But I object to taking facts and perverting them into theoretical fancy as sometimes has been done in the name of these sciences.

Sir Charles Lyell is called the father of modern geology and he developed the theory of uniformity which has now become very, very popular in certain scientific circles. The theory of uniformity assumes that every change in nature has always taken place at the very same rate of change that we see it now. In other words, they look back over past history and say that anything that we observe today had to be brought into being through the same changes that are taking place presently. Now you can understand how this is pure assumption. This man, Sir Charles Lyell, began to dig down into the earth and he found that there are layers or strata of earth. He noticed that the farther down he dug, the older the layers seemed to be. In fact, he discovered older and older articles in those layers, artifacts and pottery and things like that. So immediately he assumed that the farther down you go, the older the layers of earth become, and the older the civilization which it represents. The scientists eagerly grabbed hold of that idea and modern geology has been based on the assumption that the older civilizations are always represented by the lower strata.

Now, you know something, friends, they discovered in many areas these layers simply have been reversed. They have been turned upside down as though by some violent cataclysmic action of the earth. They have discovered that older beds are right on top with the older artifacts and pottery and the newer layers are down underneath. For example, down in Florida they found some human bones side by side with animal fossils which were supposed to have become extinct long before man ever appeared on the earth. Well, the evolutionist doesn't have any answer for this. He doesn't understand how those human bones got in with all those older articles which supposedly came before man existed. Up in the Rocky Mountains all the way from Montana to Canada, there is a twenty thousand square mile area where the so-called old strata is resting on top of the new. This flatly contradicts the theory of geology that is usually propounded.

But what caused this upheaval, friends? What caused twenty thousand square miles to be just turned upside down so that the older things came to be left on the surface of the earth? Why the flood, of course. But this is something most scientists don't believe. They won't recognize that a flood ever took place. Up on the very highest mountains, even in the Alps range, they have found marine fossils. Now how did those marine fossils get there? Shellfish, starfish, and all the rest of them. Well, we know how they got there. There was a universal flood at one time which left seashells on the mountains. Now this also explains those layers of earth also.

I'm sure all of you have seen those strata in the sides of a hill. How did they get laid down as they appear in the side of a hill or a mountain? According to geology, it took several million years for each one to be put there. Now that would be true, friends, if the theory of uniformity is true. If those layers were put down at the same rate that the earth is being built up at the present, then it would have had to take millions of years. But if you take the flood into account, those layers could have been put down very quickly, because when the waters assuaged from off the earth, as the Bible describes it, naturally all this debris and the dead bodies would have been deposited according to their specific weight and would have been laid down in layers. This would have formed the strata that we now see in the sides of hills. The evolution scientists, of course, won't accept this. But friends, in some places on the face of the earth, they have found great piles of bones as though there was a tremendous deposit made at some time of dead bodies of animals.

In the Grand Canyon and in some of the caves, they have found paintings and carvings

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

of dinosaurs. Now evidently at one time, man lived side by side with these huge animals. Surely the dinosaurs didn't do the drawing, did they? And yet, according to the theories of evolution, the dinosaurs disappeared millions of years before man was ever on the stage. Well how could those men draw pictures of those dinosaurs if they had never seen one? It certainly appears that these men and dinosaurs were here at the same time before the dinosaurs became extinct. What a strange merry-go-round we find in the world because the Bible story of creation is rejected.

In 2 Peter 3:3-6 I read: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water: Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished." Peter says here that a lot of men are willingly ignorant of the flood. They close their ears to it. They won't believe that once upon a time water covered the earth. So today we have this strange situation of the geologist assigning millions and billions of years in order to give time for evolution to take place and the evolutionists assigning billions of years to allow those strata to build up so that the geologists won't be embarrassed. They just go around in a circle. Each one defending the other one and neither having a scientific basis for their conclusions. Well, I'll say this, it takes a lot more faith to believe those theories than it does to believe the Word of God. It really does!

Now what do you think God thinks of all this as He looks down from heaven? God is very patient. He knows our frame. He remembers that we are dust. But, and I say this reverently, I think sometimes there are some things that must try the patience of God. Now understand I'm using that word in the human sense. I think there are some things that must be difficult as God looks down and sees, not our ignorance, because He can tolerate that, but it's the pretended wisdom of men that must be hard. God is not very often sarcastic in speaking to mankind, but I want you to look at something here in the book of Job. Poor Job went through some very hard times as we all know. He suffered a lot and sometimes he even argued a little bit with God. And often when Job spoke he did not know exactly what he was speaking. He made some very rash statements. And one day God talked back to Job in the 38th chapter, verses 1 to 4: "Then the Lord answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said, Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge? Gird up now thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and answer thou me."

God said, "I'm going to ask you a few questions, Job." Here are the questions, "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou has understanding."

God said, "All right, Job, you think you know so much. You have been talking as though you have all the answers. Where were you hiding when I created this world? Were you around the corner somewhere? Did you see how it took place? Is this why you talk so boldly, because you were there?" Quite a question, isn't it, friends. And I think God could ask the very same question of some men today.

One day God looks down and sees a little baby lying in a crib waving its rattle and gurgling. Almost the next day, as far as God is concerned, He sees this same little baby standing up and giving a scientific lecture waving his arms and telling the people exactly how the world came into existence billions of years ago. To that pitiful man, God must desire to say, "Listen, where were you? Did you see what happened? Yet you think you've got all the answers. You know exactly how it took place and how many billions of years it has been since creation." Friends, the only source book into the origin of things is this Bible, none else. We don't have any other record of how the world really came into being and how human life came forth. The Bible tells us.

Now some modern Christians try to harmonize the book of Genesis with the theory of evolution by assuming that the days of creation were long geological periods. They say "Well maybe the first day was a thousand years, or that second day, maybe was ten thousand years." Is there anything wrong with believing that? Well, that gives us a little more time, you see, for evolution to take place. Friends, evolution never did take place and God doesn't need time to do anything. He can do it immediately and instantly. The Bible says, "He spoke and it was done. He commanded and it stood fast."

Now let me give you a few points to show that those days could not have been long geological periods. For one thing in the book of Genesis we are told that the first day was made up of darkness and light and the evening and the morning. In verse 5 it says: "And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day." Now regardless of how long the period was, we must all agree that it was partly dark and partly light. It had evening and morning and was made up of day and night. All right then, now let's just imagine for a moment that it was a thousand years or maybe more, every one of those days. Half of that thousand years, of course, would have to be dark and the other half would have to be light. The Bible makes that very clear. So, we would have five hundred years of light and five hundred years of darkness. How long would vegetation survive in utter darkness, friends? Why, it wouldn't live at all. There would have been no species of plants living through that long period of darkness.

Here's something else to think about. The plants were created on the third day and the insects were created two days later. Everybody knows and even the scientists agree that the flowers and plants cannot reproduce without pollination provided by insects. All of these species would have died out long before the insects came along. Besides, we are told that Adam was created on the sixth day. He lived through two days of creation week. If those days were long geological periods, it would make Adam several thousand years old. And yet the Bible says plainly he was only nine hundred and thirty years old when he died. So the thing doesn't fit. It contradicts all of the Bible truth and we have to throw it out and agree that God meant what He said.

The world was created in six literal days and then came the Sabbath. The Sabbath would have no meaning if those days were not literal solar days. The ten commandments that God wrote with His own hand would be meaningless if those days of creation were long periods of time. Now, please don't misunderstand me, friends. I'm not making a wholesale condemnation of science, I pass no reflection upon true science at all. I only object to the manipulation of facts to make them support theories that are false theories and do not agree either with the Word of God or with true science.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution - Part 3

We have been talking for the last two days about evolution. And friends, how strange it is that the creationist and evolutionist, looking at the same facts, come up with such violently contrary conclusions. What is the answer for this? The scientists have access to the same facts, of course, that the creationists do but they interpret those facts to support theories that are not scientific. For example, the biology proof that is used by the evolutionists is the missing link. You go into a museum of natural history and you will see there a series of skeletons arranged arbitrarily by the scientist. The first little skeleton will be small and animal-like. It looks like a skeleton of a monkey. The next one will be a little more developed and a little taller. The third one will be a bit more complex. Finally you come to the modern skeleton of a modern man. The curator of the museum will tell you that this is the orderly process of evolution. This shows how man developed from one stage to another.

What about this? What about the Java man? the Piltdown man? and the Peking man? You see, they've got names for all those skeletons now. They also have so many millions of years assigned to the age of those different skeletons. What can we say about them? Where did they find those skeletons anyway? Well, bless your heart, they didn't find a skeleton at all. They found a tooth or a piece of a knee bone or a bit of an ankle bone or a piece of skull and then they filled it in with plaster of paris to create whatever they wanted to create. Then they set it up and said, "Here are your ancestors. Here's what your great, great, great grandfather looked like." Now don't misunderstand me. They only say that man and monkeys evolve from the same family stock. They don't actually say that we were once monkeys but that we all came from the same original stock as the monkeys did. But anyway these bones have been found and put together, the fragments, I should say.

Have you ever heard of the Piltdown man? The Piltdown man for many, many years stood in the British Museum as Exhibit #1 to prove evolution. No, they hadn't found very much, just a little handful of bones, but they had made a great big skeleton out of it, which looked fearful and very much apelike. The scientists would lecture to their students, saying, "Now here's the Piltdown man. He lived from so many thousands to so many millions of years ago. This proves evolution. You see how this fellow looks. He's got a low brow and he's a little bit stooped. His facial bones are not fully developed, etc., etc." Well, when I was over in India a few years ago they made a few scientific tests on the bones of this fellow and discovered that somebody had taken some modern bones and put on a little acid to give the appearance of age and it was all a hoax. Yet, it had stood there for years in the great British Museum and had been proclaimed by the greatest scientists of all time as proof of evolution. So they had to take the poor old Piltdown man down and throw him out the door and say, "We're sorry. We made a little mistake and it wasn't really a man after all." I mean, it's almost laughable, friends, if it wasn't so pitiful.

What about the Java man? The Java man was discovered by Dr. DuBois and they named him after the place where he was found, Java. Now Dr. DuBois took that tiny little handful of bones he dug up and put them in his safe at home and refused to let anybody see them. Friends, believe it or not, those bones were not seen by another man except Dr. DuBois for 32 years after he found them. According to Dr. Harry Rimmer he wouldn't even let another scientist see them. Men traveled from all around the world and begged Dr. DuBois to let them see the bones he had found. No. He made a few plaster of paris copies, at least he said they were accurate copies, and sent them to the great museums of science. From these plaster of paris copies, the anthropologists created a man. They said, "This is the Java man and he lived so many millions of years ago." Well, 32 years later, after these copies of the bones had been on exhibit all over the world to prove evolution, Dr. DuBois finally agreed for one scientist to see the bones. It was a man from the Smithsonian Institute and when he examined them, this great scientist wrote back and explained that the bones were not the same as the copies that had been sent out earlier. In fact, he said, in writing about it, "none of the published illustrations or casts, now in various museums, are accurate. The jaw fragment was from another type of man. The femur is without doubt human." So 32 years after they used these bones to prove evolution, finally a scientist gets to look at them and he said, "Really, I'm sorry but they're not the same that we've had on display." Yet all of these great scientists based their doctrine on those pictures of some bones that one man found and wouldn't show. These inaccurate casts are still being used, I presume. Now if that's scientific I don't want to be scientific. The evolutionary scientists are desperate, of course, and so they are glad to grab anything that comes along which might offer a shade of support.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

I would like to tell you a bit about the Scopes trial in Dayton, Tennessee. Many of you remember this famous trial. Evolution was actually on trial. The Word of God was also on trial. The arguments in that courtroom were to vindicate either the Scriptures or the theories of evolution. On one side were massed the scientific genius of mankind and on the other side was this plain spoken man, a very wonderful speaker, William Jennings Bryan. Well, one of the experts who was called on the stand was Dr. H. H. Newman from the University of Chicago. Dr. Newman took the stand and William Jennings Bryan was called to be questioned by him. Of course, Bryan didn't believe in evolution. He told the court that he would take the Bible only. But this man, Newman, asked Williams Jennings Bryan, "How long do you think man has been on the earth?" "Well," Dr. Bryan said, "I believe just what the Bible says—it's been about six thousand years." Dr. Newman laughed and laughed and said, "Do you know in Nebraska, my home state, we have found a man who lived a million years ago in Nebraska. Now what do you think about that?" "Well," Bryan said, "I just don't accept your evidence that such a man existed." Well, all the scientists laughed and laughed at the poor ignorant man who wouldn't accept the facts of science about the famous million-year-old man in the state of Nebraska.

Now, let me tell you a little bit about that man. They had found up in Nebraska a tooth, that's right, nothing more than a tooth, a single tooth. From this tooth they had built up a theory that it belonged to a man who lived a million years ago. Some of the great scientists had written books and papers and tracts about this tooth. The greatest anthropologists looked at the tooth and gave their studied scientific opinion that this was a tooth of a man who lived a million years ago. The poor Dr. Bryan couldn't prove that they were wrong. He just had to say, "Well, I don't think that you've got evidence that this really was a man!" Now listen friends, after all these books had been written and the scientific dissertations and treatise had been presented, they did discover that the tooth was a pig's tooth who hadn't lived too long ago. Yet here were the great experts. They had already committed themselves. They had written books and tracts and it was even in the learned volumes. Then they found that it was a pig's tooth. But poor Dr. Bryan never knew. He died, of course, at the end of that trial and he never knew that his position was vindicated by the passage of time.

We marvel at the credulity of these scientists. We say, "How could they do something like that? They're supposed scientific. They're supposed to get laboratory evidence." You know what kind of evidence these evolutionists will use in their desperate efforts to support their theory—they will even take the morphological evidence. They will look at the hand of a monkey and the hand of a man and say, "You see it's got the same bones, it's got the same nerves, and the same blood vessels; why, it's almost the same. Therefore, man and monkey must come from the same ancestors." Now isn't that scientific friends? Just to look at the surface and say that it looks alike so it must be the same. Such shallow conclusions are unworthy of scientific notice.

Now evolution has spawned modernism. Evolution has led men to deny the Word of God, to deny prayer, miracles, to even deny the necessity of a divine Saviour. You say, what do you mean? How does evolution take away the need of a Saviour? Well, friends, if man has started out as some tiny form and has progressed and developed ever since, there's certainly no place for a fall of man. Man hasn't fallen, according to evolution, unless he has fallen upward. He has gotten better all the time, they say. In the Bible we find that man began in the form of God and has come down ever since. He fell and he needs to be lifted up and redeemed out of his fallen state. That means he needs a Saviour. But evolution says we don't need any Saviour because man has gotten better all the time. He has never fallen, therefore he doesn't need to be lifted up; he doesn't need to be redeemed. That's why I say evolution has spawned modernism.

I'll never forget driving from Florida up north a few years ago, passing through the little town of Rome, Georgia. As we drove along, I had my family with me, we passed a young fellow, well-dressed, out beside the road hitch-hiking. I passed him by, but as I did, he flashed a big smile. He was a clean-cut, fine-looking young fellow so I said, "Let's go back and pick him up. He must be all right or he wouldn't have smiled that way." So we turned around and went back and picked up the young man and it turned out he was the principal of a local junior high school there in that Georgia town.

We drove along and he found out that I was a minister. He said, "I started out to be a minister also. In fact I spent one year in the seminary but now I don't believe in religion at all. I don't even believe in God." I was amazed. I said, "You started to be a preacher, you went to the seminary, and you lost your faith in God! How did it happen?" "Well," he said, "I attended Emory University over here in Atlanta." By the way, that's one of the largest theological schools, I guess, in the South. He said he studied there for a year. Then he said this, "They taught me that the Bible was just a good book, that Christ was just a good man, that prayer is only for the psychology of your thinking; there's no such thing as a miracle," etc. etc. I said, "Now wait a minute, you may have had one teacher who taught those things, but not all of the professors held those opinions in the school of Theology." "Oh, yes," he said, "everyone of them did, and finally I gave up and went down to Stetson University and took Education and became a teacher." "Well," I said, "how did it affect the faith of the others. A lot of young men must come in there believing the Bible having been taught in their homes the authority of the Scriptures." He said, "Many of them gave up their faith in God just like I did. Others harmonized their minds with it and went on out to preach."

Listen. I have a statement here published by the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism and they have an annual report. This is what it said several years ago: "The spread of atheism was never faster. It's not measured by atheistic groups but by the decline of religious belief as a controlling factor in the lives of men. This loss of faith causes consternation among the orthodox who are powerless to arrest this movement. The reconcilers, the liberals, and modernists are heroically saving the ship of Christianity by throwing her cargo overboard. They may save the ship of ecclesiasticism but how long will men sail the seas in an empty ship. We welcome the aid of modernists and pledge them our fullest cooperation in ridding the world of fundamentalism."

So I say, friends, that evolution works with modernism which works with atheism, and the truth of God and His Word are quickly thrown overboard. Let me say this that God has an answer to evolution! What is it? It's the Sabbath. In the beginning God made everything in six days and then rested on the seventh day, sanctified it and blessed it. My friends, no one can be an evolutionist who believes in the Sabbath of the Lord because every time he keeps the Sabbath, he's affirming his belief that the world was created in six literal days and that man was made in the image of God. That is God's answer to evolution, the Bible Sabbath.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution - Part 4 Listen to the audio version Now!

One of the greatest forces working against true religion today, is the growing strength of humanism. In simple language, this is the doctrine which seeks to explain everything on the basis of natural law and human effort. It denies the supernatural acts of God as far as both material and spiritual worlds are concerned. Perhaps this doctrine could be expected from materialistic scientists who insist on laboratory proof for all its propositions. But, friends, we are facing a world of religion which is largely turning away from the Biblical concept of God as Creator, Sustainer and Saviour. High placed theologians have generally rejected the authority of God's Word—that is, the claims of its own inspiration and infallibility. The Bible itself declares, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." 2 Timothy 3:16. But, what about the book of Genesis, and its clear cut account of Creation and the flood? If all Scripture is inspired, then this story of man's origin must be inspired by God also. Why is there such reluctance to agree with the simple recital of God's power in calling all things into existence? A few years ago there was scarcely any disagreement among religious leaders concerning the origin of life. No one was skeptical enough to challenge the authenticity of the Book. It was the only source of absolute truth, and was so recognized by all, save the most defiant atheist or agnostic.

True, many scientists of the day were looking for some other explanation of things than that offered by the Creationists, but most Christians were secure in their Bible-based faith in Genesis 1. Suddenly, the speculative theories of Darwin sprang into view, and the unbelievers grabbed desperately for an explanation of things that did not involve God. The idea that long ages of time could produce all the complexities of plant and animal life, was used as an argument against the special creation spelled out in the Bible.

When Darwin took his famous trip on the Beagle along the coast of South America, he noted that species of animal life on certain of the Galapagos Islands were a little different from the species on other islands. That started the thought in his mind that given enough time and enough geographical separation, plus other factors, entirely different species would be developed, then different genera, different families, and so on. Without our becoming involved in the endless intricacies of his theory, we may say that Darwin needed only to add the factors of favorable variation and the survival of the fittest in order to account not only for different kinds of life, but for rising levels of life, even up to man.

Now, conservative Christians can agree that Darwin dealt with a fact of nature when he declared that species often varied. What we question is the enormous super-structure of conclusions from those facts. There was a day when men could prove to their complete satisfaction, and to the confusion and rout of their few opponents, that if the world is round, the sailor foolhardy enough to sail endlessly westward would ultimately slip over the side and fall off. Probably no argument could be more easily proved than that. We can visualize their "proof" even today by holding up a ball and watching what finally happens to an object on its surface as it moves in any direction from what we call the top side. It falls off. Q.E.D. How simple! At least, so the medievalists thought.

There was only one thing lacking in their simple demonstration and in their logic, and that was a knowledge of the law of gravitation. They thought they understood nature. They did—in part. They thought their conclusion unassailable. But we only smile as we look back on the matter and muse on the fact that an apparently unanswerable argument can suddenly become pointless by the addition of a lone new fact—in this case the fact of gravitation.

For many decades after scientists began to endorse evolution, liberal-minded theologians endeavored to harmonize the Genesis creation record with the theory of evolution. At last they were able to rationalize that if only enough time could be allowed, there would be room enough for Evolution and the Bible. They reasoned that God could have done the work in the slow four billion year span designated by evolutionary science. It is amazing that this tragic compromise has leavened the whole structure of modern Christianity to this day. It is even more astonishing when we consider the implications of it. What does the so-called Christian evolutionist believe about creation? Listen, this is the heart of his position: He believes that the great God, presumably infinite in power and wisdom, saw fit to employ the stumbling method of trial and error in creating our world. In other words, God tried one procedure that worked, and carried the world a certain distance upward. Then after more ages, He discovered further procedures that carried the world a little higher still. And so on, finally, up to man.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

All during this long period of trial and error, there were, as Darwin described it, endless exhibits of "the survival of the fittest." For example, an animal with a little longer neck could eat a little higher of the green leaves on the trees and so would have a better chance of survival when food was short. Hence, the world would be favored with taller species. Or, a certain strain of animal might be fleet of foot and thus escape the clutches of predatory animals. The net result would be a species of animal with perhaps longer legs or stronger muscles, or possibly both.

According to the evolution theory, man is the end product of the whole evolution chain that began with microscopic creatures in the swamps. He inherits all the past. That means that there run in his blood and dictate to his nervous system, endless urges of the animal kingdom. In other words, it has been hard for man suddenly to break away from all the evil past. The very first man must have started out under a tremendous handicap. And with all this animal nature, man perhaps shouldn't be blamed so much for his brutality and violence. Maybe this explains the unprecedented juvenile crime rate, too. Can we blame them for rioting and killing, if they have inherited the urges of an animal past? What a perfect set-up for the modern rationalist and theologians who fear to call sin by its right name. If our glands are at fault, plus a poor environment, then there can be no personal responsibility for wrong-doing. Believe it or not, this is the basis for a major school of psychology today. And the Christian evolutionist provides the doctrine that makes it sound so scientific and reasonable. But it's all hog-wash, friends. But he still believes it rather than to believe the simple logical account of the Bible. What has been the result of such unscriptural ramblings?

The result has been the most overwhelming revolution in Christian thinking in the two thousand years since Christ. The evolution theory, of course, allows for no perfect man named Adam at the beginning of the way, and no perfect earth. Hence there is no place for Moses' account of the fall of man, or for the promise of One who would come to lift man from his fallen state. Nor is there any place for the prophecy of John the Revelator, that God will finally destroy this evil world and create a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. In fact, there is no place for the word sin as the Bible defines it from Genesis to Revelation, nor for the earlier Biblical ages of earth's history. Amoeba do not sin, nor do frogs, fishes, monkeys, or any other segment of what evolution describes as man's ancestors. Nor does evolution even suggest as to when man began to sin as he slowly struggled upward. Though theologians of our day still use Biblical terms, those terms do not have the same meaning they had in all past time.

Little did theologians realize that by interpreting the days of Creation as long periods of time, they were playing right into the hands of the evolutionists, who think of time as a substitute for the miraculous. Given enough time, plus a dash of imagination and speculation, almost anything can happen.

One of the very reasons why scientists have tended through the years to give a longer and still longer span to the history of our world is that a longer period is needed in order to explain the origin and development of the world and all its inhabitants on a natural basis; that is without the aid of the supernatural. Scientists can never be quite sure, even in their own minds.

Now, the theistic evolutionists, having committed themselves to harmonizing their theology with scientific beliefs, have trustingly gone along with the scientists—back, back, back through the rolling years—and accepted the present four-billion-year estimate for the age of the world. But what such churchmen evidently forget, is that the scientists have rolled time back into the oblivion of the past in order to find what they feel is a rational, non-supernatural explanation for the world; that is, an explanation that calls for no action by God in the process of the making of the earth and its inhabitants. The churchman's dilemma is this: How can he insist that he is keeping God squarely in the picture through the four billion years when scientists have set up those years in order to keep everything exclusively within the framework of natural phenomena, which means that God is not in the picture?

Nor has the churchman any way of escape from the dilemma. For him to attempt to inject any evidence of God's taking any part in the making of the earth, on the assumption that natural processes cannot account for all, is to part company with the scientists, who insist that all we need to do is to add a billion or so more years in order to compass everything within the natural framework.

But what shall we say of the theologian, who calls himself a theistic evolutionist? Only this: Every stride he takes back through the ages in an endeavor to walk in step with the scientists is a stride away from a truly theistic explanation of our earth. If the scientists, with whom he wishes to agree, have finally carried him back with them to the point where they say it is possible to explain all the phenomena without bringing God into the picture, why not agree with them there also? There seems something a little tragic in the idea of a religious man's traveling back trustingly for billions of years because he thinks the scientists have the truth, and that he is watching his great God at work, only to discover in the infinity of the past that the scientists took him back that far in order to explain everything without God!

Let modernist theologians protest, and they most certainly will, that they still believe in God. I ask again, "What kind of God?" Surely not a God who is very important to all the processes of the world. And if God is so unnecessary and everything can be explained on a naturalistic basis, if enough time is allowed, "Why be concerned about promoting belief in God or giving obedience to His will, or indeed doing anything about God?" The answer to that question is painfully evident. And in that answer, I believe, is found the chief explanation for our present secular age. By the very logic of the evolution-believing theologians, God has become so secondary, even so incidental, as to seem a wholly unimportant force in the universe. Why not let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die? Surely a God so unimportant to our lives will not bring us into judgment, nor can He be expected to provide for us a life in a world beyond. Obviously, the classic idea of God—a Being all wise and powerful, personally concerned about our lives, simply cannot be harmonized with the whole evolution philosophy.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution & Nature - Part 1

Today I'd like to deal with the theme of evolution and the Bible. You know, friends, tremendous issues revolve around this matter of creation versus evolution. In fact, not only our faith in God's Holy Word is involved, but the very plan of salvation hinges upon the successful refutation of the claims of evolutionary scientists. Evolutionists believe that man has never fallen; that there has never been any kind of moral fall since the beginning of the world. They say that man has proceeded upward from the first appearance of life in the earth; naturally, therefore, no one needs to be lifted up or redeemed through the blood sacrifice and atonement of Jesus. The Bible, on the other hand, tells us that man was created upright in the very image of God, and that a terrible moral fall took place, plunging the human race into the pit of depravity. He must be lifted up and redeemed from that fallen state. Thus God put into effect the great plan of salvation whereby Jesus came to die and pay the penalty for man's sins. We can easily see, then, that these two philosophies are far, far apart. There is no compatibility between them whatsoever. It is most important for us to know where we stand and why we stand, because the very heart of the gospel story is at stake in the true understanding of this Bible teaching.

We will concentrate today on but one phase of the question. We will search the world of nature to find if design and intelligence had anything to do with producing the complicated forms of life we see around us. According to the evolutionists, there has been no orderly or pre-existent design in the development of life. They say that all the various adaptations of life came into being purely by accident or chance—no outside intelligence was involved either in the plant world or among the creatures. But let's turn to our Bibles now, friends, to the scripture lesson of Job 12:7-9. "But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee: Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee: and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee. Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the Lord hath wrought this?" Job says, If you want to know how God operated in the work of creation, ask these various forms of life. He said to ask the fishes and also the beasts of the field. Ask the fowls of the air and even speak to the earth, and the earth will explain how mightily God has wrought in these things.

Well, friends, that is exactly what we are going to do right now. What does the earth have to say to us concerning God's great power? Did you know there is miracle in every square inch of this earth and its surface? From the towering mountains to the vast restless ocean and throughout the limitless universe of God, there is the throb and hum of life. From the microscopic up to the immense we can discover the fingerprints of the great Creator who has brought all things into existence. An individual would have to be in craven ignorance or be utterly blind not to recognize that more than mere chance is involved in the production of this world and its creatures.

A certain man had a watch that would not keep perfect time. It continually gave trouble, so he kept taking it back to the watchmaker. Finally, he said in desperation, "You've got to find out something about this watch. It just isn't running right. Something is wrong with it." Well, the watchmaker took it apart completely. He took every tiny little wheel out of that watchcase and even counted the cogs on the various wheels. And do you know, friends, he discovered that one wheel had 59 cogs when it should have had 60. One small cog was missing, and therefore, the entire works of that watch were inaccurate. Now the inventor of that watch had engineered it to operate according to a certain very careful plan. It had to have a certain number of cogs in order to work, and the maker of that watch was intelligent. He knew how to count, how to multiply and divide, and he had made a very intricate mechanism.

Now, friends, when I look at the universe and see the amazing fact that it is in perfect balance, that life in this world has been perfectly adapted to the conditions we find here, I know that some great intelligent power is behind it, making it operate in such an accurate manner. The Genesis account of the Bible has been completely vindicated by all the findings of true science. The writings of Moses have been found to be scientific as well as historically accurate. Today we're going to look at the water and land in particular. By studying the mysteries of land and sea you will notice how wonderfully they support the story of creation.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Let's go to Genesis now and take a look at the story as God gave it to Moses. Chapter 1 verse 6, "And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters. And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so. And God called the firmament Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day." We notice that long, long ago the waters which are over the earth were actually right down upon its surface. We know there is a vast ocean in space—lots of water is suspended in the atmosphere. We'll find out just what purpose it serves in a moment, but at one time that water was resting right down upon the earth. God divided it and lifted part of it up into the heavens while part of it remained down.

Now look at verses 9 and 10. "And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so. And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good." Now listen, How did Moses know that there would be several oceans or seas? He had absolutely no physical or human way of knowing that there could be more than one body of water in all the world. Moses never traveled that far. He never went around to see how many oceans were in the world; but, God inspired this truth in Moses's mind. He said there were seas or oceans.

Here's another good question to ask. How did Moses know that all these various bodies of water would be connected and would rest in only one bed? Now isn't that what he said? He said, "Let all the waters be gathered into one place and let the dry land appear." In the next verse he says, "There were seas or oceans" and yet, friends, it is a scientific fact, a geographical fact that all the oceans of the world are joined together, and they do all rest in a common bed. Moses could not have known that of himself. He didn't say this of the dry land. No, it was divided up into continents. Part of it would be over here and another big mass of it would be in another location. But concerning the waters he said it would all be in one place together, and yet it would be divided into oceans. I think it is tremendous that the Bible is so scientifically accurate as to reveal these things right here in Genesis.

Now let's see how intelligence and design came into the matter of ratio between land and water. One-fourth of the earth's surface is dry land, and three-fourths is water. In the United States alone we have three and three-fourths million square miles of dry land, and all of it has to be watered and cared for. In fact, if it weren't watered, there would be no vegetation, no grass or trees growing. The earth's rainfall is determined by the proportion of water and land. Just imagine for a moment that the ratio of land and water was changed from what it is at present. Suppose the ocean was only one-half its present size. That would mean our rainfall would be only 1/4 of what we now receive. What would that mean for the United States and these 3.75 million square miles of land we have? Why, all of it would be turned into a vast desert. On the other hand, if you took away half the present land and added it to the ocean, we would get four times as much rainfall as we now have, and the whole United States would be turned into a vast marshland in which human life would be almost impossible. Isn't it wonderful that God made it just right for our needs and pleasure?

Now, suppose that mankind had to water all this 3.75 million square miles. How could we ever spread that water out and irrigate effectively? We have enough trouble getting a few square feet in our yards watered during the hot summer months, don't we? But imagine, friends, if mankind had to devise some way of spreading water out over earth's vast land area to keep the grass growing and keep everything green. What a tremendous task it would be! Somebody says, "There's plenty of water in the ocean. We could just take that water and use it for watering the dry land." It sounds all right, but there are three little problems connected with it. First of all, the little problem of transportation. We'd have to get that water out of the ocean and spread it evenly over the land. The second little problem is that the salt water would kill every green thing it was sprinkled on. And the third little problem is that the weight of water is 800 times the weight of the atmosphere. What a tremendous weight to lift and spread out! Now, how has God overcome these problems?

Well, first of all, the weight problem He solved with heat. We know that heat expands things and cold contracts them. And of all material, water is the most subject to expansion. In fact, when water is turned into steam it becomes 16 or 17 hundred times its original volume. But remember, this water is 800 times heavier than the atmosphere. How does God overcome that weight? He simply sends down the warming rays of the sun, and its heat turns the water into vapor, which is 900 times lighter than the water. This means it is now one-eighth lighter than the atmosphere, so this vapor simply rises up out of the ocean into the sky, perhaps miles into the air, and forms great cloud masses. That's the way God handled the weight problem.

The second problem was the damaging salt in the water. But God did something for that also. He simply evaporated the water, leaving all the mineral deposits and impurities behind. The water taken up into the clouds is sweet, soft water, perfectly adapted to irrigate the face of the earth.

Now what about transportation, the third problem? Here was plenty of water floating up over the ocean—thousands and thousands of tons of it—but, it is still out over the ocean, which doesn't need any more water. God sent along winds to blow the clouds, and they drifted away and spread over the dry land area where the water was needed. But, friends, how does the water get down out of the clouds? Here we see another wonderful miracle. Cold will contract, of course, so when the clouds pass over the mountain peaks, the cold air reaches up and begins to cool those clouds, turning the vapor into a condensation of moisture. But suppose all the water spilled out at one time. If that happened it would flood three feet of water over the entire surface of the earth. It had to be a gradual cooling process. For example, if the temperature of a cloud were lowered by 9 degrees, it would give up 1/4 of its water; if it were cooled by 21 degrees, it would give up 1/2 its water. God arranged for the cooling to be done on a gradual basis so that water comes down in gentle to vigorous rainfalls, providing just the amount of water the earth needs to be revived. Isn't that tremendous, friend? Of course, some rain falls back into the sea, but this supplies the needed oxygen for the fish and other creatures living in the salty ocean beds.

We must close now, but we'll continue this fascinating study tomorrow. Friend, I just marvel at the wonderful balance that God has placed in the world of nature. Who can say that no divine intelligence was behind the creation of this world? Furthermore, God gave a grand memorial of His creation, which you will want to read about in the second chapter of Genesis. You'll find that the Sabbath, the seventh-day Sabbath, was the memorial God set up by which man should remember His great power in the act of creation.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution & Nature - Part 2

One of the ridiculous claims of evolutionistic scientists revolves around the operation of blind chance. According to their claims, all plant and animal life in this world developed entirely apart from any design or intelligent order. Even the intricate balance of nature is attributed to the blind forces of chance and unlimited time. In our last broadcast we investigated some of the miraculous arrangements of earth and its water, which man has never been able to duplicate. The distribution of water over all the earth to keep vegetation alive is one of these. The condensation and transportation of the billions of tons of water has been accomplished with no equipment whatsoever except the sun, air, and clouds. Man has been able to distill pure water from the ocean on a fractional scale, but the operation requires mammoth machinery and expense. Friends, God did it first, and He still does it a million times more efficiently than the wisest men. Yet some of those wise men deny the existence of God. What a travesty!

If there is no intelligence or design behind our earth and life, these evolutionists must admit that blind, dumb nature is more intelligent than they are. Now don't misunderstand what I'm saying, friends. All scientists are not atheists by any means. In fact, in true science there is profound recognition of God as Creator. Among the 15,000 members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, you can scarcely find a man who confesses himself an atheist. A group of the most eminent of them, headed by Dr. Millikan who obtained fame long before he isolated the atom, recently sent forth a signed statement declaring in no uncertain terms their faith and belief in God the Creator.

It's a mistake to think that true science is essentially atheistic. It's actually the opposite. But there is a science, falsely so-called, which does deny any divine act of creation. Just remember friends, there are errors in some scientific thought. In fact, the opinions of scientists change very rapidly. It is reported that the Library of the Louvre in Paris contains three and one-half miles of bookshelves holding volumes of science that have become obsolete in fifty years. The listener may recall that famous list of 51 scientific facts published by the French Academy of Science back in 1861, all of which supposedly contradicted some statement of Scripture. Those few score years have gone by and not one word of the Bible has been changed. In those same few score years the knowledge of science has so vastly increased that there's not a living man of science today who holds one of those 51 so-called facts that were at one time advanced to refute the inspiration of the Bible.

If all the crops of all the world were gathered into one central storehouse and the whole human race were put on starvation rations—just enough to keep them alive—every edible thing would be consumed within eighteen months. If in that time God withheld the rain and obscured the sun or flooded all the fields, life would perish from the face of the earth. We talk about man being far away from God—the whole world must stay close to Him, and the farthest away we can get is a year and a half!

Now let's look at something interesting here in the Bible. Did you know that these great facts of nature were all known and understood long before the scientists and naturalists discovered them? Ecclesiastes 1:7 tells us, "All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full. . . ." Think now friends, why isn't the sea full after all the waters run back into it? The text continues and gives the answer. "Unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again." The Bible says the reason the ocean does not overflow is that the water is taken up again and returned to where the rivers come from. There is a constant movement of water going up from the ocean in vapor form, carried by the clouds over the dry land, being brought down again through the waters of the rivers into the waters of the oceans. So here it is in the Bible—scientific knowledge that men could have discovered for themselves just by reading the Scriptures. Yet the great naturalists felt they had made some new discovery when they found out about the cycle of water and clouds.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Let's look at another Bible text, Job 26:8. "He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds; and the cloud is not rent under them." This is a beautiful text. Millions of tons of water are taken up from the oceans into the clouds, and yet the clouds don't break and spill it all at one time. That's what Job said, and of course, he was correct. We've just found that God has a process of gradual cooling which releases the water little by little as it's needed to irrigate the surface of the earth. The cloud doesn't just break open and spill all of it at once. If it did, we would have three feet of water all over the face of the earth. But Job knew this long before man figured it out. He said the clouds receive the water and just hold it there until it's needed and then releases it in gentle rain.

I think all of us know that water has weight. In fact, its pressure is increased tremendously as we go down deeper and deeper into the ocean. Certain fish are living down in the very bottom of the ocean who are especially engineered by God to withstand the tremendous pressure. If these fish were brought up quickly from the ocean depths to the surface, they would explode from the inside pressure which God put into their muscular structure.

This is a wonderful fact, but do you realize that we also live in the bottom of an atmospheric sea that also has tremendous weight? At sea level we are living down in the bottom of a very, very dense, heavy covering. Just as the ocean is around the fish, so the atmosphere is around us. Every moment we live, there is 14 pounds per square inch exerted upon our body structure. Now that's pretty heavy. We think a man is strong if he can lift 200 pounds on his back, and the strongest man that ever lived put only 415 pounds over his head. Yet friends, every single form of life on this earth, including the frail 90 lb. ladies as well as the strongest men, has a constant pressure of more than 14 tons at sea level pushing in and pressing in on him from every direction.

From the filmy, gauzy insects right on up to man and the largest animals, all have been designed by God to withstand this terrific pressure. That little insect, so light and frail it seems anything could crush it, has been built by God to withstand this awful pressure. Can you think this happened by accident? Could this incredible circumstance come about by mere chance? Look at Job 28:25. "To make the weight for the winds; and he weigheth the waters by measure." The Bible says the wind has weight. The air is heavy, in other words. You climb up a mountain, and the higher up you go where the atmosphere becomes thinner, the more distressed and uncomfortable you become. Why? Because the pressure is not as great on the outside. Yet God has built in a certain amount of inside pressure to balance that which is on the outside at sea level. As you get higher and higher the outside pressure becomes less and less and there's discomfort. If you went high enough, you would be torn apart just like the fish that was brought up from the depths of the sea. God has compensated by engineering the human body and the bodies of all other living creatures so they are able to endure the pressure and be comfortable in the process.

Now let's consider another even greater miracle. The atmosphere around us is made up of two main ingredients—nitrogen and oxygen. But notice, the mixture of these two elements is always exactly in the same proportion wherever you find it—on top of the highest mountain or down in the bottom of the deepest cave. The air around us is mixed in a perfect proportion of 79% nitrogen and 21% oxygen. It never varies. You ask, "Why is it made like that? Is there some particular reason? Is it important that we have this exact mixture of nitrogen and oxygen?" I want to assure you that it is VERY important. If the nitrogen were increased in the air about us, our life processes would slow down and we'd soon die. If the oxygen were measurably increased, life processes would be rapidly increased also. But God made it just right. Suppose for example that it was 50% nitrogen and 50% oxygen. If that were the case and an electrical reaction caused the elements to combine, do you realize that the whole world would be turned into laughing maniacs? Everybody would be laughing, because that would produce the same laughing gas, N<sub>2</sub>O, that the dentist uses sometimes when extracting teeth. Suppose it was a 50-50 mixture. That would produce nitric oxide, which would be fatal very quickly to all forms of life.

Was it just a lucky accident, friends, that it happened to come out like it did? Did some blind power of nature just happen to produce the exact mixture needed for mankind to live with pleasantly? Or was there some intelligent design in all of it? This world would simply be a chaos if the smallest accident happened in nature. Should this atmospheric mixture slip out of control for just a single instant, we would see one of the most tremendous explosions, because nitrogen is the basic component of gunpowder, and oxygen, of course, makes for rapid combustion. Just think what would happen if you got nitrogen and oxygen in the wrong proportions and the wrong chemical reaction took place. You could just say, "Goodbye, world." And yet some day, apparently, there will be such an explosion. The Bible says the elements are going to melt with fervent heat. II Peter 3:12 tells us about it. I don't know how God will arrange that, but I do know that some great fire, one of these days, is going to burn, and the earth will be purified by this strange fire of God. The elements will be involved in it because the elements are going to melt. Maybe God will change just ever so slightly the present proportion of nitrogen and oxygen, thus causing this great conflagration to take place. I do know this—we must be ready for that day when it comes. The Bible indicates that it is near at hand.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution & Nature - Part 3

Listen to the audio version Now!

We continue today our fascinating study about the intelligent design of created things which proves the existence of a divine Creator. One of the mysteries of nature was described in the Bible long before it was investigated by science. Let's read about it now in Job 38:8-11. "Or who shut up the sea with doors, when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb? When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddlingband for it, And brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors, And said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?"

What beautiful poetic language we find here to describe the creation of the ocean! It speaks of it as being born and coming forth from the womb. God says that the cloud was the garment of it and a thick darkness was a swaddlingband placed around the ocean at its birth. But then God added, "Here ye may come, but no further. Here shall thy proud waves be stayed." And friends, the scientists of this world have been amazed in learning the secrets of tidal actions. They still don't understand all the deep, cataclysmic actions underwater which affect the tides and wave patterns. No naturalist on the face of the earth has figured out all the secrets of the swift tidal waves that move to and fro in their own mysterious ways.

By the way, these tidal movements have been in perfect balance to contribute to man's comfort. I think of the mighty Gulf Stream, for instance. We don't know very much about it as an ordinary thing, but we do know that life in this United States of America would be almost impossible were it not for the tremendous influence of that great stream. The Gulf Stream comes up from the Gulf of Mexico and goes along the eastern seaboard and on up into the northern sections of the world. This stream is just like a river flowing through the midst of the sea. You can see that it has a different color. You can tell exactly where the edge of it is, because the water changes color there. When you look down on it from above you can see just how wide it is; in fact, it is about 70 miles wide and about 3,000 feet deep, and it flows along leisurely on its way from the deep south, going up toward the northern clime. The temperature of the water is 86 degrees when it leaves the Gulf of Mexico, and when it gets up by the Carolinas it is still 84 degrees. The warming influence of that water actually makes the coast of North America and Northern Europe to be inhabitable. Otherwise, they would simply be frozen wastelands. People wouldn't be able to live there were it not for the Gulf Stream. The British Isles would be frozen and abandoned. The Maritime Provinces of Canada depend completely upon its warming effect; otherwise those places would be left in frozen desolation.

Now, notice what happens as this water flows north. As it comes to the arctic entrance of Baffin Bay, it meets the frigid Polar Stream rushing out to start southward. There is a titanic collision and struggle between the warm Gulf Stream and the frigid Polar Stream. Now what happens? Well, the Gulf Stream wins, so to speak, and the Polar Stream dives down thousands of feet underneath and goes right on flowing southward, coming up in the West Indies during their hottest season, where it cools the terrible tropical heat. It was in God's plan for this to happen. But as a result of this collision the Gulf Stream is deflected across the ocean where it goes up along the British Isles, making those places livable. In fact, some of those northern lands would be locked in eternal winter without the deflection of the Gulf Stream which creates a warmer climate. Now, friends, did all of this happen by chance and accident? Did these great streams of water just sort of come into existence by blind chance? Did the Gulf stream get deflected by some casual happenstance? I don't believe it for a moment! God was behind the entire plan.

Let's take a quick look at the creatures of the sea, and see how intelligence and design came into the picture. Think of the fish for a moment that inhabit the oceans. I only wish I had time for more details! Fish are constantly subject to attack. They have enemies within the waters around them and also on the outside—gulls and other birds, which swoop down to make meals of the marine life forms. Do you know that fish have a specially constructed eyeball that is able to look in any and all directions? He can almost instantaneously see behind, below, on the sides, and above. Furthermore, his eye is designed to take into account the fraction of light. Yes, these fish can see 30% farther than other visual instruments, because God designed the eyeball of the fish to take into consideration the refraction of light. When the oculist manufactures special goggles for divers to wear, they also make them compensate for refraction in the water. We think this is wonderful, of course, but God did it long before. All fish have that kind of eyeball, yet the evolutionists say it just happened. No goggles could come into existence by chance, friends; neither could the fish accidentally develop specialized eyeballs.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

In the waters of Malaya lives a fish with bifocal lens built right into his eyes. This little sardine-sized fish is especially prized for food by seagulls. They are always swooping down and gobbling up this little fish if they can. So the little fish has to watch carefully for the approaching danger of the gulls. He must have good distance vision, but since he feeds on the microscopic larvae found in the water, he must have very good near vision as well. Do you know that the Creator provided a little membrane that comes halfway up his eye, giving him bifocal vision? He can look up and see the gulls coming; he looks down and can see near at hand the little bits of life that he feeds on. We think it is wonderful that skilled optometrists and oculists can perfect glasses that permit us to see near and far away; yet, here is a fish that's been around for hundreds of years, which God made that way from the beginning. It did not just develop blindly. Intelligent design was behind its creation.

Now let's examine two Pacific coast water birds. I can find no stronger evidence of design in nature than I find in one of these birds called the Ousel. It is a very friendly little bird that lives near mountain streams, and is usually found where the water is very swift-flowing and splashy. It can be seen floating buoyantly along on the surface of the water, apparently weightless; then suddenly, this bird will sink to the bottom like a piece of lead. I mean that it will just suddenly drop down to the bottom of the stream and begin to walk around, picking up bits of food from the bed of the stream. That's where he gets most of his food supply. But the mystery is that after he has taken his fill, he walks over to the bank, shakes himself, and glides off on the surface again like a bit of fluff. It has been discovered that this strange bird has some special equipment, a muscular apparatus which can instantly exhaust every bit of air from his body. He drops down like a piece of lead to the bottom, but then when he walks out, he can breathe in air again and float off on the surface. Now, friends, that is special creation, isn't it? The evolutionists would say, "Well, he needed to have this bit of apparatus and so nature provided it." They don't say what "nature" is, friends. They maintain that it just grew by some accidental development. The truth is that God provided it. He made this particular bird as He did because He saw that it needed this for survival.

Another Pacific coast bird lives on a diet of large worms, which he finds in holes in the sand. Because this worm is down at the very bottom of the hole, the bird must go down into the hole to get the worm out. It so happens that his beak is just exactly the right size to reach down into the hole, but when he gets into the hole, his beak is squeezed in there, and he can't open it to pick up the worm. Now it would be a pretty bad predicament for the bird to see a luscious worm, put his beak down, but not be able to pick the worm up! Do you know what God arranged for this particular bird? He created a tiny flap, similar to a surgeon's forceps, at the bottom of the beak. With this special organ he can easily pick up the worm, pull his beak up, and gobble down his meal.

Isn't it wonderful that God thought of a little bird and made something special so that it could get food conveniently? Yet men say God didn't have anything to do with it; it just grew that way because he needed it. "Nature" came along and made some forceps. No, God had everything to do with that development, friends. Isn't it wonderful that we have a God like that? And if He loves the little birds, and provided the necessities for their existence and comfort, don't you think He is willing to provide everything that WE might need? He knows when a sparrow falls, but He loves us even more!

Some years ago, a clever biologist who did not believe in evolution wrote an article on his findings, titled, "Evolution Goes to Pieces on a Bee's Knees." The author reviewed the fact that evolution teaches that when a need for a certain organ develops in any creature, the organ is produced in response to the need. Nature itself or some blind chance supposedly comes along and produces the necessary organ in order that the creature might survive. Well, he cited the example of the bees. When bees crawl into the pollen-filled blossoms, they get all stopped up with pollen. In fact, their breathing apparatus becomes so completely clogged that they can't even breathe while they are inside gathering the pollen. Now, it so happens that every bee has special brushes located on his knees—stiff brushes, which he uses to clean out his breathing apparatus when he comes out of the blossom so that he doesn't suffocate. This biologist noted that if it were true that creatures develop special body parts in response to a need, the very first bee to exist did not have them. Since he did not have any brushes on his knees, he would have suffocated when he went into the flower, and the whole bee family would have become extinct right then and there. Instead of these brushes developing slowly through the ages in response to a need, God made them on the bee so that the very first bee would survive. Otherwise we wouldn't be seeing any busy little bees flying around.

Well, the conclusion is that God anticipated the needs of His creatures, and made them with all the necessary apparatus. How thankful we ought to be that God can supply all our needs in advance! The Bible says the fool hath said in his heart, there is no God. Only a God of love and power could have made these living creatures as we see them about us. And if He cares for the tiny animal world, he cares for us too. He loves us as much as He loves that little bird out on the west coast, and He wants to save us, friends. He wants to take us at last to a place where nature will be in perfect balance again and where all the curse of sin will be forever removed.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Evolution & the Body - Part 1

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we want to look at one of the most fascinating evidences of creation as opposed to evolution. In no other area is so much heated conviction and dogmatism revealed. Now the reason for this is because we're dealing with a doctrine that cannot be proven scientifically, or by any of the commonly applied laboratory methods. After all, no one was here when the earth was made and when life was first created. Our belief in this matter must be based on faith. In the case of the creationist, his faith is placed in the Bible. But the evolutionist puts his faith in philosophy. Since there is no scientific evidence, certain theories may be propounded in seeking an explanation of the physical world around us, but they must not be presented as scientific truth. Believe me, friend, it's a world of miracle and marvel. The evolutionist and creationist all look upon the same intricate pattern of life and organization, but their explanation of the world is entirely different. From the microscopic to the immense, tremendous wonders are revealed in both form and function.

I don't think any should stir us with more astonishment than the body itself. How can the evolutionist explain the existence of such a delicate, complex machine as the human system? There is only one answer, really, and that is a Mighty, Infinite Intelligence is behind it. The evolutionist says, "No, nature did it. Blind chance and time produced every organ and developed every function of the human body."

Now this position is one of the most amazing that we can imagine, friends. Because only a fraction of the wisdom and mystery of our body is even understood by the greatest scientists of the day. Is chance and blind nature able to baffle the keenest intellects of the human race? Could mere happenstance produce the highly complicated functions of both body and mind of a human being? Utterly fantastic, we can't believe it for a moment. Every cell of the body is a miracle by itself. By the way, this is the only machine that can repair itself. Man can hardly duplicate even the simplest processes of our bodily functions. Of course, some of them could be duplicated, but what would it require, dear friends, for man to perform some of the simple functions of our body? It has been estimated that it would require machinery and electronic equipment to fill a building as large as the empire state building. Then it would take all the electrical energy of Niagara Falls to operate the equipment, and all the water of Niagara Falls to keep it cool. Yet substances are produced in the body by a few microscopic cells in just a fraction of a second that would require weeks to produce by giant machinery that would cover acres of floor space.

According to the evolutionist, of course, man's origin goes all the way back to a little one-celled amoeba. Proof for this? of course, there isn't any. The fact is, that until the invention of a microscope, there was no scientific evidence of the existence of an amoeba. There were no fossil remains, of course, because they're made out of pure protoplasm (which is just like jelly). Now don't misunderstand me, friends, I do believe that these one-celled forms of life were in existence from the very beginning of creation as Genesis 1:20 reveals: "God said let the waters bring forth the moving creatures that hath life." But I do say that there was no scientific proof about the existence of those things long before man appeared—this is what the evolutionist claims. Yes, there are multitudes of those one-celled forms, paramecium, protozoa, etc. By the way, the zoologist observing these cells through the microscope can see just as much difference between them as we see between cows and horses. Their methods of moving, of eating, or reproducing are different; but, friends, there is always one thing in common with these one-celled forms of life—they only reproduce after their kind. There is no reason to believe that an amoeba ever changed into any higher form of life. Now here is a question the evolutionist can't answer: How is it that the dinosaurs and some of the other great creatures have perished from the earth, literally disappeared from the stage of history; and yet the one-celled ancestor remains here by the billions, and not one of them is in the process of changing after countless of generations of being observed?

Yes, another interesting fact too, the cells are all different in these different families or

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

species. You take chromosomes, for example. These are found in all cells, of course, and they determine the characteristics and the family lines. There is a different number of chromosomes for all species. This makes cross-breeding impossible, by the way. Cats and dogs can only reproduce after their kind, they can't form any kind of unholy mixture between the different families of animals. Now this is interesting because it actually fits in exactly with what the Bible teaches. In 1 Corinthians 15:38,39, we read: "But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased Him and to every seed his own body. All flesh is not the same flesh but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts and another of fishes and another of birds." In other words, friends, no matter how much alike they might look on the outside, they're all different. It's a different kind of flesh as the Bible puts it. How often a man and a monkey may look alike as far as the external form is concerned! The hand of a monkey and the hand of a man may be very similar. Now friends, does this prove that there is any kind of relationship between the two forms of life? This is looking at the morphological evidence which is only the external evidence. But we're more concerned with histology which deals with the minute internal make-up of cells, etc. Now if there is going to be any scientific evidence, we insist on it being more than just mere external form and shape. It must be based upon some very careful scientific examination, a histological approach, in other words.

It reminds me of a little boy who came in one day and told his dad very excitedly: "Dad, at last I know how horses are made." His dad said, "Well, how is that, son?" "Why," he said, "the blacksmith makes them." His dad said, "Oh, no, how did you come to such a conclusion as that?" "Well," he said, "I saw him." His father said, "What did you see? Really, you didn't see him making a horse." He said, "Well, he wasn't making it, but he was just finishing one up. He was just nailing his feet on as I came by." Well, that is a little bit amusing to us, friends, but really if we just take the appearance of things, we might be led to many false conclusions.

Now what do we find on close microscopic examination of these cells? Well, not only are cells different within families, but even the cells of different organs within the same body differ considerably from each other. Apparently there are certain elements in certain cells for certain organs and they will not function in or for any other part of the body, or any other organ of the body. Now why do I say that? Well, in a living body cells are constantly dying. Most cells can live approximately 28 days and the shortest about 7 days. So many of the 26 trillion cells of the body are replaced completely within every four-week period. Now that's a tremendous rate of cell replacement, of course, but what happens to all the dead cells? They make a complete circuit in the blood stream and return to the parent organ where they died. For example, the liver cells will enter the blood stream and make a complete circuit and come right back to the liver again; but, friends, those liver cells will not be received by any other organ of the body. They will come back only to the liver. Heart cells will come back only to the heart, they would be expelled by the lungs or any other organ of the body. Now when they return, what happens to them? They're broken down into component elements and used again in the creation of new cells. Now that's very interesting, friends. They are almost like a fertilizer to produce other cells in that same organ of the body.

Well, these facts about cells prove beyond any question that man has no relationship to other animals because the bodies are different, the cells are different, and even the different parts of the body itself contain cells that differ from other parts of the body; so there could be no question of one form of life turning into another form. They all have two things in common, bodies of dust and the breath of life; but that ends the kinship. Man has reason and conscience which sets him apart as a different order of being entirely.

I read about one man who was trying to determine if monkeys had any human characteristics. This researcher was trying to get a monkey to put a few simple blocks together, but the monkey wasn't responding very well and the man finally thought that maybe the animal was a bit embarrassed by his presence, so he slipped out the door and bent down to look through the keyhole to watch the animal. To his utter amazement, he saw on the other side the monkey peering through the keyhole at him from the other side. So he found at least one human characteristic in the monkey—curiosity. No, the missing link is still missing, friends, and always will be. There's not one instance of animals crossing lines of own families in reproducing. One of the most unreasonable claims of evolution relates to the accidental development of the complicated human body. The marvel of this intricate machine furnishes the strongest proof against the claims of evolution. Only an Intelligent Designer and Master Engineer could have developed this miracle of form and function.

Consider the heart, for example, it's an amazing pumping machine, about the size of a human fist; but it pumps all six quarts of blood through the entire body every minute. In a lifetime, forty one million gallons of blood will be pumped from each ventricle of the heart. That's a hundred and fifty thousand tons, by the way. And that little organ has no rest any longer than three-fourths of a second. Every twenty-four hours that heart does an amount of work equal to what the leg muscles of a man would perform in climbing a mountain thirteen thousand feet high. Think of that! The heart, in fact, is a powerful muscle which has a very powerful contraction, but what causes it to beat? Well, it has a kind of electrical timing apparatus called a pacemaker which generates a tiny electrical impulse 70 times a minute which sweeps across the muscle fibers of the heart causing it to contract.

Now, friends, they can call this a pacemaker if they like, but I prefer to call it the power of God. To consider this mysterious generator as a product of chance is just too incredible, we can't believe that — not for a moment.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

God of Creation

The science of astronomy has produced some of the most incredible information about the heavenly bodies in space. By means of powerful new telescopes the edge of infinity is being pushed farther and farther beyond the range of our natural sight. There is absolutely no limits to the universe according to the conclusions of space computers. The deeper men probe into the sky the more extensive and mysterious the stars and planets seem to be.

The most fascinating fact about astronomy is the uncanny accuracy of the movement of those unnumbered worlds, suns, moons and stars. We set our watches by them today, just as men have reckoned time by them in every age of the past. Scientists assure us that not 1/1000 of a second of time has been lost in a thousand years. This suggests that some mighty intelligence is controlling the course of these gigantic stars and their systems. Few of us can realize that they hurtle in their orbits at fantastic speeds, yet with never a collision with the billions of others in space. We go to sleep peacefully tonight with no fear concerning the safety of our solar system. Why? Why do we not worry about one of those countless stars slipping out of place and disrupting the universe. There's only one answer to that, and even the professed atheist must admit it. We know there is a God who controls with perfect precision the worlds He created.

Today I want to take just one aspect of the wonderful character of God for our study—His omnipotence. That means—all power. If God is anything, He is the greatest power in the universe. No religious man would deny that. The atheist alone would dare to lift his voice in denial. I believe that we can even compel the unbelievers today to admit that there is a God who possesses all power. You say "How?" I answer—by proving the miracle of creation. I don't mean scientific proof, because I wasn't there. I didn't see it. Neither were you. The things I'm going to say cannot be placed in the test tube of the laboratory, but they are so reasonable that only an unreasonable man could persist in saying that God did not create the world. One thing cannot be denied by anyone, the marvelous earth is here and its intricate operation is still successful after millenniums of time have passed. Who caused the first proton, neutron, molecule and atom to spring into existence? Where did matter itself originate? It is not adapted to self-creation. It could not have formed without an originating power. I know there are lots of theories in circulation. I have studied with interest the fantastic imaginings of so-called scientists who describe the details of a creation which they classify as one hundred million years ago. They paint a picture of gases in motion, of swirling hot elements solidifying into planets, moons and stars. Listen, my friends, I've never read about the origin of those gases. No scientist has yet explained where those molecules and atoms came from.

And what about the order of things in our solar system today? Suppose matter could spring into being of itself, a property which even science doesn't attribute to it, could it arrange itself in the unbelievable orderly universe we see around us? Consider the rhythm of our solar system. Watch the fiery ball of the sun sink into the west. That giant atomic power plant is the center about which the earth swings at a distance of more than 90 million miles. We travel around this solar race track at a speed of over 1,100 miles per minute. Men talk of traveling with the speed of sound but the fact is we are all flying over the earth seventy times the speed of sound right now as we journey around the sun. What keeps the earth traveling 1,140 miles per minute, from flying off into space and colliding? Take a piece of string, tie it to a spool, whirl it over the head in a circle and then let it go. Does the spool still keep going around? No. What kind of a string would it take to hold the earth on a path around the sun?

The total attraction between the earth and the sun equals the breaking strain of a steel rod 3,000 miles in diameter. That rod is 90 million miles long. But there is no rod, so what holds it then? The power of God! There is omnipotence so vast that we cannot comprehend. Have you ever heard of a man making an atom? We have only heard of splitting the atom. Man can change, but he can't create. It would be folly to talk of making a sun, stars or planets. Man has been able to place a few satellites 200 miles up in the air to encircle the earth. But, friends, so many vast worlds are up there in space that man can't even count them. If you want to feel small and insignificant go out some clear night and try to count them. Is it an accident that they move so orderly and precisely in their path? Is it an accident that we can set our watches to the fraction of a second by the movements of heavenly bodies? Is there a man so blind as to say there is no God with omnipotent power behind it?

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

I would say this, if it's an accident, it is a mighty lucky accident. Consider our moon. Suppose it was larger and nearer than now; our tides would be raised to overflow the earth. If the moon was smaller and farther away, then the tides would be worthless. Suppose the earth turned faster on its axis, our days and nights would be shortened, and the regions at the equator would be covered with sea. If the motion was slower than now, the sea would cover the temperate regions. But the moon is just the right size, and the earth rotates at just the right speed making the earth fruitful and happy. My friends, if there is no God, this is the most wonderful and incredible thing I have ever heard.

It reminds me of a man who saw a turning shaft coming from a wall. He marveled at the steel rod which was capable of turning by itself but never realized the motor beyond the wall which generated power. Even Napoleon, the great general, could not tolerate his soldiers debate on God's existence. He pointed to the stars and asked how they came into existence.

Friends, God is! He is the fountain of power, He is omnipotent, mighty, inscrutable. How did He make matter? How did He create the Universe? What did He have to start with? Psalm 33:6,9: "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. For he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast."

The fact is, He started something out of nothing. Why do we limit God here? He is so powerful that He spoke the earth into existence. Now read something else in the Bible we all agree with. Isaiah 45:18: "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else."

He made it to be inhabited. It was a beautiful, perfect world God made—not the earth we see today. Several thousand years of sin have passed since creation. God made it perfect, and to even God it appeared very good. The Bible teaches that God made everything in six days. I believe that with all my heart. Someday soon I want to tell you why I do not believe it took God millions of years to make things. On the sixth day God made man perfect, upright and better looking than any man since. In another broadcast I want to show you why God didn't make a jelly fish, and a million years later turn it into a monkey and another million years later turn it into a man. Man was made in the image of God, with a righteous character also. In that first week of time when the earth burst into existence in the perfection of a divine creation, there was nothing to harm or hurt. There was no lack of anything. God gave man a beautiful home in a most exquisite garden; He gave man a character like His own and He gave him a perfect diet—later on we will talk more about that perfect diet. He gave man life!

Talk about the power of God—here it is. Who can give life but God? Man who is advanced in science, has never been able to give life to a flea. Life and death are issues in the hands of God. When a man reaches the last stages of life, medicines, drugs, injections are all in vain. His life is gone. Science has analyzed the body; we know exactly what elements are in the body and what percent of each. We know how much of phosphorous, magnesium, etc., are there. We can mix them together in correct proportions but there will be no life. Gone are the days when scientists talked so confidently about a spontaneous generation and about the sudden formation of life out of the elements. Now it is a scientific fact, life comes only from life. Could you produce one man who can explain the existence of life without God? I challenge you to do so. Show me a scientist, doctor, or physiologist who can explain what power keeps this heart beating and pumping blood day after day, year after year, without believing in God? Every 60 seconds, six quarts of blood is circulated through the heart. This is continued each minute of each year of life. But there is no generating plant to keep it working. No laboratory has been able to produce any mechanism that could operate even a few months without rest. This body of ours is a strange and wonderfully balanced organism. It is a constant reminder of the fact of creation and the existence of an omnipotent God. We could multiply evidence to confound the atheist, agnostic and skeptic. The most reasonable thing in the world is to believe in the existence of God. And we must all agree that He is omnipotent, that He is the source of power, of life itself.

One more question is in order. Is this omnipotent God of the universe so busy with the operation of worlds and stars that He forgets you and me? The most wonderful thing I know is this: The great God who measured out the oceans in His hand, and stretched the sky over the heavens, is interested in each one of us. He is concerned with the smallest cell in the leaf and grass; He has set a pattern and rule for the smallest animal in the world. Not a sparrow falls to the earth but He knows it. Not a hair of your head falls, but He knows. Does He have a plan for your life and mine? Before you were born He had planned in love for you. To find and follow that plan is the purpose of life. It is the happiest road in the world. The purpose of these broadcasts is to help you find and follow the plan of God. God wants us to be happy. Millions are frustrated, discouraged because life has no meaning. God wants us to enjoy to the full every heartbeat. And I can assure you on the highest authority that there is only one way to experience the fullest and most satisfying of human happiness. It's in following the way marked out in God's Book, the Bible. How few realize that the true secret of contentment and security is found in this one source. Perhaps this explains the empty frustration and emotional problems that plague the modern generation. I daresay that the insecurity and unhappiness has developed in direct proportion to the neglect of God's Word. In this age of skepticism and unbelief, millions have abandoned their faith in the Bible and have become disillusioned seekers for materialistic security. This they have not found and they never will. The total wisdom of the world is like a broken cistern compared to the springs of truth found in the Divine Word of God.

Now let me say in closing that the wonderful doctrine of creationism is being attacked by evolutionary scientists and humanists of every variety. You need to understand that there is nothing unscientific about believing in a fiat creation of this world and everything in it. The fact is that there is no laboratory proof or demonstrable proof for any theory of origins. No one was there to see it happen. But let me assure you that the evidence available on the subject supports creationism over evolution.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

God's Answer - Part 1 Listen to the audio version Now!

Several years ago the dreadful crime of Charles Witman shook the world. His brutal murder of 16 people shocked the sensibilities of upright citizens. Perhaps one of the most amazing things about the case was that this young man was an educated man, a university student. Thus, the Utopian theory that education is the solution to the crime problem was dashed in a thousand pieces to the ground.

The whole shortcoming of the philosophy which was prevalent a few years ago was that men failed to realize that education cannot provide moral force. It cannot change the sinful hearts of men. Only a knowledge of God can do this. And education in this modern age seems set upon the task of denying God and His rulership in the universe. Thus, the only moral force or anchor of strength to youth is torn away, and he drifts aimlessly on a sea of atheism and godlessness.

Probably the reason militant atheism has gained such a strong foothold on the educational system of the land is that the theory of evolution swept the world in the latter part of the last century.

The godless theory of evolution, actually, was in existence among the heathen in ancient times, but it took modern men of science who had fertile imaginations to crystallize it into a set theory which was to pervade all science. A number of men took part in formulating this modern version of evolutionary theory, but the prominent ones were Lyell, the geologist, and Charles Darwin, the biologist.

Whole books have been written on the subject, but there are three main points that must hold if the evolutionary theory is to be true. Here are the three basic principles in this theory. The first principle is that life must have arisen originally from inorganic matter. According to the theory, in other words, in the dim and distant past, there was a time when life came from that which was not living. The second of these principles is that the more complicated forms of life evolved from the simpler forms through millions of years. Therefore, according to the theory, the species are constantly and gradually changing and progressing. The third principle is that all forms of life are progressing upward and improving through "natural selection." This means that those who hold this theory believe, basically, that if an animal wishes for anything hard enough, he will get it. To illustrate, in the dim and distant past, perhaps the snakes thought it would be nice if they could have legs, so they wished and wished, and eventually turned into lizards. That is the general idea. It would be nice if wishing really did make things so, wouldn't it? Well, anyway, such are the principles upon which the evolutionary theory is founded.

This theory is in direct opposition to the Bible story of Creation which tells us that God created all forms of life simultaneously. But the theory of evolution really tears down, not only the creation story, but the whole basis for the Bible plan of redemption. If man is actually getting better, the Bible is untrue, for the Bible teaches that through sin, men are getting worse and worse. The way this theory wreaks havoc with Bible principles is mentioned by H. G. Wells, the prominent atheistic historian. Notice this statement found in Mr. Wells' autobiography. "It was only slowly that the general intelligence of the Western world was awakened to two disconcerting facts: first, that the succession of life in the geological record did not correspond with the acts of the six days of biological facts, pointed away from the Bible assertion of a separate creation of each species, straight toward a genetic relation between all forms of life, in which even man was included. The importance of this last issue to the existing doctrinal system was manifest. If all the animals and man had been evolved in this ascendant manner, then there had been no first parents, no Eden, no fall. And if there had been no fall, then the entire historical fabric of Christianity, the story of the first sin and the reason for an atonement, upon which the current teaching based Christian emotions and morality, collapsed like a house of cards."

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Here we see that what is really involved in the evolutionary theory is the denial of every major point of faith in the Bible.

This godless, evolutionary philosophy was picked up quickly and incorporated into the educational system. The textbooks treat it as though it is a fact, when in reality, it is only a theory and a disproven one at that. Thus, in a century's time the vicious teaching of atheism has almost completely supplanted faith in the Bible. Dr. Joseph Findlay Paydon, a teacher himself, summed up the situation in these words, "For several years, my experience as a teacher, first in public schools in Illinois, later at Northwestern University, and now at the Naval Academy, and my service as a naval officer during the late war have brought me into close contact with young people from all parts of the country. Some very saddening facts have been brought to my attention, with ever increasing emphasis. Chief among these is that the Protestants, to our great disgrace, are neglecting to rear our children in the admonition of the Lord."

"Our neglect is so marked as to approach treason to our sovereign Master. We are allowing—no, we are forcing—our children to grow to maturity through a system of education deliberately designed to prevent their receiving a really accurate knowledge of the One person in history it is most needful they should know the truth about. In our schools, our children are subjected to a vicious barrage of insidious propaganda, from direct but unproved accusations to slowly phrased insinuations, denying the importance of our Lord. It sneers at His authority, and His unique claim upon mankind. It scoffs at the truthfulness of His Word. It seems to aim at the erasure of the evidence of His existence as well as His power. It is constantly working to eradicate and destroy any confidence in our Creator and God, that our young people may have developed."

Thus, we can see that the educational system is permeated with this godless theory. In the wake of this type of training, our country is caught in the throes of crime and moral confusion. It is no wonder that the young people go astray when their faith is so undermined.

More and more children are being led toward crime, as parents throw away responsibility. Selfishness is often the keynote of the day and materialism the inspiration for living. God, in many instances, is not accepted in the home, and concepts of morality have been relegated to the junk heap. Our generation, it seems, has allowed old, faithful religious practices to slip into oblivion. As a result family life has been weakened. The nation has suffered and many of its children have become spiritually starved. A godless home is built upon the sand; it is an inviting breeding ground for moral decay and crime.

And yet, how unnecessary it all is for the theory of evolution is only an unproved and unprovable hypothesis. It is the result of sheer guesswork and misinterpretation of facts. Every basic assumption of evolution has been thoroughly disproved.

Let us take the first one we mentioned. This is the assumption that life must have sprung up spontaneously. The brilliant experiments of Louis Pasteur proved beyond any doubt that life comes only from life. This is the citadel upon which modern methods of sterilization and cleanliness are founded. Science definitely proves that there is a great unbridgeable gap between the living and the non-living. So the very first assumption of evolution is totally unscientific.

Taking the next assumption of evolution, is it logical to suppose that all life originally sprang from the simpler forms, such as the one-celled animals? Here is a statement from one of the world's most renowned biologists, Austin H. Clark of the Smithsonian Institution. "There is no logic in the assumption that the early animals were of the single celled or protozoan type. All the single celled animals that we know are quite as highly specialized as are any other animals, though they are specialized in a wholly different way." We can easily see, then, on the basis of this statement, that the foundation of the evolutionary theory is cut out by real science. There is no likelihood, even from an imaginary viewpoint, that all life stemmed from microscopic organisms.

Another foundation stone of the theory is that there are no set species, but the various animals are evolving upwards into higher forms of life. This is directly contrary to the Biblical teaching that the animals were to reproduce "after their kind." (Genesis 1:24,25) What does science have to say about the evolution of species? Here is a statement from Dr. Bateson of the British Association of scientists. "Although we must hold to our faith in the evolution of species, there is little evidence as to how it has come about, and no clear proof that the process is continuing in any degree at the present time. The thought uppermost in our minds is that the knowledge of the nature of life is altogether too slender to warrant speculation on these fundamental subjects. Did we presume to offer such speculation they would have no more value than those which the alchemists might have made as to the nature of the elements." Now isn't that peculiar? Although Dr. Bateson admits there is no proof for the theory, he still says they must have faith in it.

The scientist derides the Christian for exercising faith, and yet here he has greaer faith than a Christian ever had, faith to believe a theory that every scientific evidence refutes. Mr. Austin H. Clark, who was quoted a moment ago, has something to say also on this subject of the evolution of species. "The complete absence of any intermediate forms between the major groups of animals, which is one of the most striking and most significant phenomena brought out by the study of zoology, has hitherto been overlooked, or at least ignored."

The amazing facts are, then, that the majority of scientists are still clinging to the theory of evolution, despite the fact that it is bilogically unproven and scientifically unscientific. How amazing it is that the minds of so many are able to believe the philosophy of evolution and still deny the simple Bible account of creation. It requires so much more faith to accept the claims of Darwin and his disciples. The miracle which evolution requires one to believe is staggering to contemplate. The creation and development of the human mind and body—purely through the blind nature and chance—it is too much to accept. Even the greatest scientists have not been able to duplicate the simplest processes of tiny cells in the body; yet, they ask us to believe that our complicated eyes, ears, etc. were produced without any intelligent design. What faith it would require to believe that!

What a contrast to the beautiful story of Genesis and its description of God's power in making man.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

God's Two Books

It has been stated that "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing." This is particularly true in the field of science, as Sir Francis Bacon, one of the founders of natural science, expressed it: "This . . . I affirm in the knowledge of nature, that a little natural philosophy, and the first entrance into it, doth dispose the opinion to atheism, but on the other side, much natural philosophy, and wading deep into it, will bring about men's minds to religion."

There are those who assert that the Bible and science are antagonistic one to the other, and that between the facts of science and the statements of Scripture there exists an irreconcilable conflict. It is evident that they possess but little knowledge of the Book of books.

The truly great man readily acknowledges his limitations. Sir Isaac Newton, discoverer of the law of gravitation, and probably the greatest scientific genius of all time, had a very humble opinion of his scientific attainments. Sensing how puny is man's wisdom in comparison with the wisdom of God, he declared: "I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me!" From Brewster's "Memoirs of Newton." Vol. 2, chapter 27.

In these words Sir Isaac set a worthy precedent for all to follow. Newton saw "a great ocean of truth" not only in nature, but in the scriptures as well; he was a diligent student of the word of God, and wrote volumes on Bible prophecy. In all his research he found no discrepancy between the facts of science and the words of Inspiration, for truth is consistent with every other truth.

The Bible was not only ahead of science when it was written; the Bible is still hundreds of years ahead of science. There is a statement in Job 26:7, written hundreds of years before Christ was born — at least 3,500 years ago, and maybe more! — speaking of God, "He . . . hangeth the earth upon nothing." Just think of the fantastic myths and legends about the earth to be found in nearly all ancient nations. Some believed it was supported by a great tortoise or by a giant named Atlas. Some said it was upheld by an elephant. What upheld these upholders, no one knew! The Holy Bible gives the only possible scientific reply to this question, "what upholds the earth?" God hung the earth upon nothing. How could a body as vast as the earth turn upon any physical bearings? It had to hang by gravity and float in space, which is the only way such a vast body could be suspended. According to the United States Bureau of Standards, this earth weighs a little more than 592 quintillion tons. Only God could make it whirl upon its axis at a thousand miles an hour and cause no friction whatsoever. Surely the Bible is way ahead of its times. It took science thousands of years to catch up with it, and in some scientific areas the wisdom of men will never catch up.

Here is something else. For hundreds of years the ancient scientists thought the earth was flat, that the sun went around it; but all through these thousands of years the Bible kept speaking of the "circle of the earth." See Isaiah 40:22.

Did you know that the Bible describes the air as having weight? It's found in Job 28:24,25. Speaking of God, the writer declares: "For he looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven; To make the weight for the winds; and he weigheth the waters by measure."

Air pressure at sea level is nearly 15 pounds per square inch of surface, an average of 14 tons pressing upon every living person. About one ton of air rests upon every square foot of surface. Think of it! The air is pressing down with the weight of about a ton for every square foot of all the land and water surface of the globe, and this fact — that the air has weight — was recorded in Holy Scriptures at least 2,500 years before Toricelli invented the barometer to measure its weight. Before his day, scientists simply

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

explained certain strange phenomena by saying that nature hates a vacuum. They knew nothing about the weight of air.

The more wonders men discover in this universe, the more are the wonderful works of God and the vastness of the universe to be realized. Many make their God too small. "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised," we read in Psalm 145:3. Modern science is underlining this by discovering a little more about the greatness of God's universe.

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, of the University of Chicago once said, "The world is beautiful to the scientist who is opening new vistas continually. The molecules made from atoms, the atoms made from electrons and protons, show a universe within a universe. And a God who can control a universe like that is mighty beyond imagination."

This, my friend, is the God of the Bible, the Creator, the Almighty One, the Ruler of the universe; the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; The God of the Bible is the Creator, the God who balanced the atmosphere with 78 per cent nitrogen and 21 per cent oxygen. The atmosphere is proportioned exactly to fit the needs of the human race and all living creatures on the earth. A slight change in one direction or the other would make life impossible.

The God of science is the God of the honey bee with its 6,000 sense plates in its two antennae; its five eyes with their thousands of six-sided lenses like a fixed-focus camera, color blind to red, but able to see ultraviolet rays invisible to us; and with its wings that vibrate 11,140 times a minute, making bees complete masters of the air — being able to fly forward, backward, up and down, from side to side, or poise motionless like a helicopter! Yes, friends, the God who made the honey bee, on which volumes could be and have been written, is the God of whom the Scripture says, "He hath made every thing beautiful in his time." Ecclesiastes 3:11.

He is the God who created water, which, like all fluids, becomes heavier when it becomes colder. This is true of water, however, only until it reaches four degrees above freezing, when it suddenly begins to lose its specific gravity, becomes lighter, and rises to the surface as ice. If it should sink to the bottom, rivers and lakes would soon become solid. Even the seas in many parts of the world would become frozen from bottom to top, and all animal and vegetable life would cease.

The God of the Bible is the One of whom we read in Psalm 135:7: "He causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; he maketh lightnings for the rain! he bringeth the wind out of his treasures."

He is the God who made water 800 times heavier than air, yet made it so that it could be lifted against the force of gravity.

He is the God who caused the sun's rays to vaporize water, expanding it to occupy a space 1,600 times greater than it does in its liquid state. The water vapor is much lighter than air, floating readily and ascending into the higher regions, where it is carried all over the earth.

He is the God who inspired the Bible writers to say, "All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again." Ecclesiastes 1:7.

God knew and wrote of this water-equalization phenomenon while the wise men did not know it, many, many centuries ago. It shows again that science is just catching up with the Bible, and explaining to us the circulation of water all over the earth: into the sea, out of the sea by evaporation, onto the land in the form of snow and rain, and back by way of the rivers, into the ocean again. Has anyone ever seen a river run uphill? "Unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again," says the Bible. And God held the pen of the author of Ecclesiastes that day, when he wrote more wisdom than mere man could ever have known. It is true that waters do go back to the hills and mountains "from whence the rivers come." They go by way of the sky and the clouds.

The God who can carry this great earth and take it 525 million miles in 365 days, 5 hours 45 minutes, and 46 seconds, not varying more than one thousandth of a second in a century — that God is the God of the Bible.

Wallace, a great scientist of half a century or more ago, showed that if there were either a decrease or an increase in the size of the earth amounting to as much as 10 per cent, no life would be possible upon it. In one case, the atmosphere would be too thin; in the other, too dense. God asked Job the question, "Where was thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding. Who hath laid the measures thereof, it thou knowest?" Job 38:4, 5.

God made the earth just right for people to live upon it. If the sun were 193 million miles from the earth, the intense cold would kill us all. If we were only 15 million miles distant, the heat would destroy us. Since it is about 93 million miles away, everything is just right. The range of temperature within which life is possible is very narrow, so God in His wisdom set the sun just the right distance from the earth, and made it just the right size — some 866,000 miles in diameter — more than 300,000 times the mass of this little earth. The surface temperature of the sun is about 15,000 degrees Fahrenheit, just right to keep the earth habitable.

Think of the deadly actinic rays coming from the sun. Why do they not kill us all? Because there is a protective blanket around the earth, a layer of ozone thousands of feet thick. Tanning and sunburn are only mild forms of what would occur if this ozone were absent. Professor Rudolph Loudenburg, of Princeton University, says this layer is from 15 to 20 miles above the earth, and may be nearly 100,000 feet thick.

We have mentioned only a few of the scientific allusions in the Bible. The more scientific facts we learn, the more we can say, "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and his greatness is unsearchable. One generation shall praise thy works to another, and shall declare thy mighty acts." Psalm 145:3, 4.

Only an all-wise Creator could know all the necessities and requirements of human life, and He made nature to fit them. The book of nature and the Book of God, the written Book of His revelation, come from the same hand, and both show His love. There are things in both books we cannot fully understand; but we must remember they are the utterances of the Creator whom we would certainly expect to know more than we know. Let us read both as the Word of God.

The great Albert Einstein, physicist, Nobel prize winner, and genius behind the law of relativity, and one of the great brains behind the atomic age, said, "Certain it is that a conviction akin to religious feeling of the rationality or intelligibility of the world lies behind all scientific work of a higher order. This firm belief, a belief bound up with a deep feeling and a superior mind that reveals itself in the world of experience, represents my conception of God. It is enough for me to contemplate the mystery of conscious life perpetuating itself throughout all eternity, to reflect upon the marvelous structure of the universe which we can dimly perceive, and to try humbly to comprehend even an infinitesimal part of the intelligence manifested in nature."

As we look upon the pages of God's book of nature with awe and wonder, let us also open the volume of His written Word with faith in His goodness, who sent the Lord Jesus Christ to be the Redeemer of the world.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

How Evolution Flunked Science - Part 1 Listen to the audio version Now!

Recently I talked to a man with a fantastic amount of faith. Not one shade of doubt crept into his animated description of man's origin and destiny. He was an evolutionist I met on an airplane. With incredible confidence he bridged the eons of prehistoric time to explain the existence of modern plant and animal life. His detailed description of human ascent from a tiny one-celled monad was so vivid and convincing that one could almost believe he had seen the microscopic amoeba turn into a man.

What is this evolution doctrine which inspires so much faith in its disciples? How has it turned great scientists into dogmatic opponents of any other viewpoint? Many evolutionary scientists have united their professional influence to forbid any classroom instruction contrary to their own views. Does the theory of evolution merit this kind of fanatic support which would silence all opposing ideas? When religious people take such a position, they are called bigots, but scientists seem to escape that charge. In February 1977 almost 200 of the nation's academic community sent letters to school boards across the U.S. urging that no alternate ideas on origins be permitted in the classrooms.

This indicates that the evolutionists are feeling the threat of a rising revolt against the stereotyped, contradictory versions of their theory. Many students are looking for honest answers to their questions about the origin and purpose of life. For the first time the stale traditions of evolution are having to go on the defensive. But let's take a look at what they have to defend. Then you will understand why these evolutionary scientists are people of such extraordinary faith, and why they are so fearful of facing competition at the school level.

How does the evolutionist explain the existence of that first one-celled animal from which all life forms supposedly evolved? For many years the medieval idea of spontaneous generation was the accepted explanation. According to Webster, spontaneous generation is "the generation of living from nonliving matter ... (it is taken) from a belief, now abandoned, that organisms found in putrid organic matter arose spontaneously from it."

Simply stated, this means that under the proper conditions of temperature, time, place, etc., decaying matter simply turns into organic life. This simplistic idea dominated scientific thinking until 1846 when Louis Pasteur completely shattered the theory by his experiments. He exposed the whole concept as utter foolishness. Under controlled laboratory conditions, in a vacuum, no organic life ever emerged from decaying nonliving matter. Reluctantly it was abandoned as a valid scientific issue. Today no reputable scientist tries to defend it on a demonstrable basis. That is why Webster said it was "now abandoned." It never has been and never can be demonstrated in the test tube. No present process is observed that could support the idea of spontaneous generation. Obviously if spontaneous generation actually did take place in the distant past to produce the first spark of life, it must be assumed that the laws which govern life had to be completely different from what they are now. But wait a minute! This won't work either, because the whole evolutionary theory rests upon the assumption that conditions on the earth have remained uniform throughout the ages.

Do you begin to see the dilemma of the evolutionist in explaining that first amoeba, or monad, or whatever formed the first cell of life? If it sprang up spontaneously from no previous life, it contradicts a basic law of nature which forms the foundation of the entire theory. Yet without believing in spontaneous generation, the evolutionist would have to acknowledge other than natural forces at work—in other words, God. How do they get around this dilemma?

Dr. George Wald, Nobel Prize Winner of Harvard University, states it as cryptically and honestly as an evolutionist can: "One has only to contemplate the magnitude of this task to concede that the spontaneous generation of a living organism is impossible. Yet here

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

we are—as a result, I believe, of spontaneous generation.” Scientific American, August 1954.

That statement by Dr. Wald demonstrates a much greater faith than a religious creationist can muster. Notice that the great evolutionary scientist says it could not have happened. It was impossible. Yet he believes it did happen. What can we say to that kind of faith? At least the creationist believes that God was able to speak life into existence. His is not a blind faith in something that he concedes to be impossible.

So here we are face to face with the first contradiction of evolution with a basic law of science. In order to sustain his humanistic explanation of the origin of life he must accept the exploded, unscientific theory of spontaneous generation. And the big question is this: Why is he so violently opposed to the spontaneous generation spoken of in the Bible? A miracle of creation is required in either case. Either God did it by divine fiat, or blind unintelligent nature produced Wald's impossible act. Let any reasonable mind contemplate the alternatives for a moment. Doesn't it take more faith to believe that chance could produce life easier than infinite intelligence could produce it?

Why did Dr. Wald say that it was impossible for life to result from spontaneous generation? That was not an easy concession for a confirmed evolutionist to make. His exhaustive search for a scientific explanation ended in failure, as it has for all other evolutionary scientists, and he had the courage to admit it. But he also had an incredible faith to believe in it even though it was a scientific impossibility. A Christian who confessed to such a faith would be labeled as naive and gullible. What a difference the cloak of higher education makes upon our easily impressed minds! How much simpler and sweeter the faith which accepts the inspired account, “In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.” Genesis 1:1.

What would be involved in the accidental development of a single living cell? The fact is that the most elementary form of life is more complicated than any man-made thing on earth. The entire complex of New York City is less complicated than the makeup of the simplest microscopic cell. It is more than ridiculous to talk about its chance production. Scientists themselves assure us that the structure of a single cell is unbelievably intricate. The chance for a proper combination of molecules into amino acids, and then into proteins with the properties of life is entirely unrealistic. The American Scientist magazine made this admission in January, 1955: “From the probability standpoint, the ordering of the present environment into a single amino acid molecule would be utterly improbable in all the time and space available for the origin of terrestrial life.”

A Swiss mathematician, Charles Eugene Guye, actually computes the odds against such an occurrence at only one chance in  $10^{160}$ . That means 10 multiplied by itself 160 times, a number too large even to articulate. Another scientist expressed it this way: “The amount of matter to be shaken together to produce a single molecule of protein would be millions of times greater than that in the whole universe. For it to occur on earth alone would require many, almost endless billions of years.” The Evidence of God in an Expanding Universe, page 23.

How can we explain the naive insistence of evolutionists to believe something so extremely out of character for their scientific background? And how can we harmonize the normal broadminded tolerance of the educated, with the narrow bigotry exhibited by many evolutionary scientists in trying to suppress opposing points of view? The obvious explanation would seem to be rooted in the desperation of such evolutionists to retain their reputation as the sole dispensers of dogmatic truth. To acknowledge a superior wisdom would shatter the egocentric image which has been too long cultivated by the evolutionist community. They have repeated their assumptions for so long in support of their theories that they have started accepting them as facts. No one objects to their assuming whatever they want to assume, but to assume happenings that go contrary to all scientific evidence and still call it science is being dishonest.

Now let's look at a second basic evolutionary teaching which is contrary to scientific law. One of the most necessary parts of evolution which is supposed to provide the power for changing the amoeba into a man is mutation. This refers to abnormal changes in the organism which is assumed to be caused by chemical changes in the genes themselves. The genes are the hereditary factors within the chromosomes of each species. Every species has its own particular number of chromosomes which contain the genes. Within every human being are twenty-four chromosomes containing an estimated 100,000 genes, each one of which is able to affect in some way the size, color, texture, or quality of the individual. The assumption is that these genes, which provide the inherited characteristics we get from our ancestors, occasionally become affected by unusual pairing, chemical damage, or other influences, causing them to produce an unusual change in one of the offspring. This is referred to as a mutation.

Through gradual changes wrought in the various species through mutation it is assumed by the evolutionists that the amoeba turned into an invertebrate, which became an amphibian, then a reptile, a quadruped, an ape form, and finally a man. In other words, the species are not fixed in the eyes of the evolutionists. Families are forever drifting over into another higher form as time progresses. This means that all the fossil records of animal history should reveal an utter absence of precise family boundaries. Everything should be in the process of changing into something else—with literally hundreds of millions of half-developed fish trying to become amphibious, and reptiles halfway transformed into birds, and mammals looking like half-apes or man.

Now everybody knows that instead of finding those billions of confused family fossils, the scientists have found exactly the opposite. Not one single drifting, changing life-form has been located in all the years that fossils have been studied. Everything stays within the well-defined limits of its own basic kind, and absolutely refuses to cooperate with the demands of modern evolutionists. Most people would give up and change their theory when faced with such a crushing, deflating blow, but not the evolutionist! He still searches for that illusive missing link which could at least prove that he hasn't been 100% wrong.

But let's look at the vehicle which the evolutionists have depended upon to provide the possibility of the drastic changes required by their theory. Sir Julian Huxley, a principal spokesman for evolution said this: "Mutation provides the raw material of evolution." Again he said, "Mutation is the ultimate source of all ... heritable variation." Evolution in Action, page 38.

Professor Ernst Mayr, another leader of the evolutionists, made this statement: "Yet it must not be forgotten that mutation is the ultimate source of all genetic variation found in natural populations and the only raw material available for natural selection to work on." Animal Species and Evolution, page 170.

Please keep this in mind clearly: Evolutionists say that mutation is absolutely essential to provide the inexorable upgrading of species which changed the simple forms into more complex forms. But, the scientific fact is that mutation could never accomplish what evolution demands of it, for several reasons. As all scientists agree, mutations are very rare. Huxley guesses that only about one in a hundred thousand is a mutant. Secondly, when they do occur they are almost certain to be harmful or deadly to the organism. In other words, the vast majority of such mutations lead toward extinction instead of evolution; they make the organism worse instead of better. Huxley admits: "... the great majority of mutant genes are harmful in their effects on the organism." Ibid., page 39.

Other scientists, including Darwin himself, conceded that most mutants are recessive and degenerative; therefore, they would actually be eliminated by natural selection rather than effect any significant improvement in the organism.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

How Evolution Flunked Science - Part 2 Listen to the audio version Now!

Professor G. G. Simpson, one of the elite spokesmen for evolution, writes about multiple, simultaneous mutations and reports that the mathematical likelihood of getting good evolutionary results would occur only once in 274 billion years! And that would be assuming 100 million individuals are reproducing a new generation Every Day! He concludes by saying, "Obviously, such a process has played no part whatever in evolution." The Major Features of Evolution, page 7.

Does this sound sort of confusing to you? They say mutation is necessary to make the changes required by their theory, yet they have to confess that it is scientifically impossible for mutation to make the changes. This is too typical of the puzzling twists and turns made by our evolutionist friends in their efforts to uphold an exploded theory. So the second point of contradiction with true science has been established.

Mutations, of course, do affect minor changes within the basic kinds, but those changes are limited, never producing a new family. They can explain many of the varieties of both plant and animals, but can never explain the creation of basic kinds as required by evolution.

Since we have discovered that the fossil record gives no support to the idea of species gradually changing into other species, let us see if fossil evidence is in harmony with the Bible. Ten times in the book of Genesis we read God's decree concerning the reproduction of His creatures "after its kind." The word "kind" refers to species, or families. Each created family was to produce only its own kind. This forever precludes the drifting, changing process required by organic evolution where one species turns into another.

Take note that God did not say there could be no changes within the family. He did not create all the varieties of dogs, cats, other animals, etc., in the very beginning. There was only a male and female of each species, and many changes have since occurred to produce a wide assortment of varieties within the family. But, please keep it straight in your mind that cats have always remained cats, dogs are still dogs, and men are still men. Mutation has only been responsible for producing a new variety of the same species, but never originating another new kind. Selective breeding has also brought tremendous improvements such as hornless cattle, white turkeys, and seedless oranges; but, all the organisms continue to reproduce exactly as God decreed at creation—"after its kind."

The "common ancestor" that evolution demands has never existed. He is not a "missing link." He is a link who never was. Man and monkeys are supposed to stem from the same animal ancestry. Even chimpanzees and many monkey groups vary tremendously. Some are smart, others dumb. Some have short tails and some long. Some have no tails at all. Their teeth vary in number. A few have thumbs and others do not. Their genes are different. Their chromosomes do not jibe. Interestingly enough, apes only breed with apes, chimpanzees with chimpanzees, and monkeys with monkeys.

But when we start comparing humans with monkeys we get even more impossible differences than those between the simian types. In fact, these differences constitute another unanswerable support for the Bible rule of "after its kind." The fact that some monkeys can be trained to smoke a pipe, ride a scooter, or even hoist a test tube in a laboratory does not prove that scientists are evolved animals, or that monkeys are retarded, developing humans.

It has already been stated that evolutionists expected the fossil record to support their theory of species change. Their doctrine demanded vast numbers of scaly reptiles transforming the scales into feathers and their front feet into wings. Other reptiles, supposedly, should be changing into fur-bearing quadrupeds. Did they find those

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

thousands of multi-changing creatures? Not one! No matter what particular strata they sifted through, all the fossils were easily recognized and classified within its own family, just as God decreed. If the evolutionary doctrine were true, the strata would be teeming with hundreds of millions of transition forms with combination features of two or more species. Not only so, but there would have to be millions upon millions of observable living links right now in the process of turning into a higher form. Darwin confessed: "There are two or three million species on earth. A sufficient field one might think for observation; but it must be said today that in spite of all the evidence of trained observers, not one change of the species to another is on record." Life and Letters, Volume 3, page 25.

How interesting! Then why insist that it had to be that way? This is one of the marvels of those who cling to a traditional theory. Even the most ancient fossil forms in the lowest fossil beds have stubbornly retained the same features of their modern counterparts, and it is amusing to listen to the exclamations of surprise by the evolutionists. The creationist is not surprised at all. His Bible told him it would be that way, and he has not been forced to puzzle over contradictory evidence.

Another frustration for the poor evolutionists is the strange case of the empty strata. Let me explain. As one digs deep into the earth, one layer or stratum after another is revealed. Often we can see these layers clearly exposed in the side of a mountain or roadbed cut. Geologists have given names to the succession of strata which pile one on top of another. Descending into the Grand Canyon, for example, one moves downward past the Mississippian, Devonian, Cambrian, etc., as they have been tagged by the scientists.

Here is the perplexity for the evolutionists: The Cambrian is the last stratum of the descending levels that has any fossils in it. All the lower strata below the Cambrian have absolutely no record of life, period. Why not? The Cambrian layer is full of all the major kinds of animals found today. In other words, there is nothing primitive about the structure of these most ancient fossils known to man. Essentially they compare with the complexity of current living creatures. But the big question is, "Where are their ancestors? Where are all the evolving creatures that should have led up to these highly developed fossils?" According to the theory of evolution, the pre-Cambrian strata should be filled with more primitive forms of those Cambrian fossils, in the process of evolving upward.

Darwin confessed in his book, Origin of the Species: "To the question why we do not find rich fossiliferous deposits belonging to these assumed earliest periods prior to the Cambrian system I can give no satisfactory answer ... the case at present must remain inexplicable; and may be truly urged as a valid argument against the views here entertained." Page 309.

How amazing! Darwin admitted having no way to defend his theory, but he still would not adjust his theory to meet the unanswerable arguments against it. Many other evolutionary scientists have expressed similar disappointment and frustration. Dr. Daniel Axelrod of the University of California calls it "one of the major unsolved problems of geology and evolution."

Dr. Austin Clark of the U.S. National Museum wrote concerning the Cambrian fossils, "Strange as it may seem ... mollusks were mollusks just as unmistakably as they are now." The New Evolution: Zoogenesis, page 101.

Drs. Marshall Kay and Edwin Colbert of Columbia University marveled over the problem in these words: "Why should such complex organic forms be in rocks about 600 million years old and be absent or unrecognized in the records of the preceding two billion years? ... If there has been evolution of life, the absence of the requisite fossils in the rocks older than Cambrian is puzzling." Stratigraphy and Life History, page 102.

George Gaylord Simpson, the Crown Prince of Evolution, summarized it: "The sudden appearance of life is not only the most puzzling feature of the whole fossil record, but also its greatest apparent inadequacy." The Evolution of Life, page 144.

In the face of these forced admissions of failure to find supporting scientific evidence, how can these men of science continue to press so dogmatically for their shaky views? No wonder they fight to keep students from hearing the opposing arguments. Their positions would crumble under the impartial investigation of honest research.

The absence of pre-Cambrian fossils points to one great fact unacceptable to the evolutionists—a sudden creative act of God which brought all the major creatures into existence at the same time. Their claims that creationism is unscientific are made only to camouflage their own lack of true evidence. The preponderance of physical scientific data is on the side of creation, not evolution.

The subject of strata beds leads into the interesting question as to how these layers were formed, and why the evolutionists have "guesstimated" their age in the billions of years. The dating of those layers has been done on the basis of the theory of uniformity. This theory assumes that all the natural processes at work in the past have operated exactly as they do today. In other words, we can only explain the creation of those strata on the basis of what we see happening in the world now. How long does it require now for sedimentation to build a foot deep stratum? Then that age is assigned to any 12-inch layer, no matter how deeply located within the earth.

Is that a valid assumption to make? Have all the natural forces of the past been just what we can demonstrate and understand today? How naive and conceited to compel ages past to conform to our limited observation and experience. We can assume what we please, but it proves absolutely nothing except our own gullibility. The Bible explains very graphically about a flood which ravaged the face of this earth, covering the highest mountains, and completely destroying all plant and animal life outside the ark. The destructive action of the deluge is expressed by these words in the Bible: "The same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened. And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights." Genesis 7:11, 12.

The existence of those strata can be scientifically accounted for in perfect harmony with the Bible record. The universal flood of Genesis provides a much more reasonable explanation of the strata than evolution's speculations. As the waters receded from the earth, powerful tides and currents carved out the great canyons in a short time. Layers of debris, according to the specific weight, were laid down, compressing plant and animal life into a compact seam or stratum. Only thus can we explain the vast oil reserves and coal beds around the world. These are the products of vegetation and animal bodies being buried under extreme heat and pressure. No such process of fossilization is taking place today. No oil or coal is forming by present natural forces at work. Uniformity fails here.

The fact is, there had to be a gigantic, cataclysmic overturn of nature, killing and burying millions of tons of plant and animal life. The position of some fossils standing upright through one or more strata indicates that the process was not slow or age long. The material had to be deposited quickly around the body of the animal, or it could not have remained in its erect position. Millions of fish were buried by the flood, many of them contorted as though suddenly overtaken by a phenomenal force. Marine fossils have been recovered from the highest mountain ranges, and a check list on other scientific evidences point to a universal deluge over the entire planet.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Living Fossils
Listen to the audio version Now!

We are astounded today by the tremendous state of ferment and change in which our world is now involved. Even religious faith has been shaken about and altered by the upheaval in current ideas. What has led to this incredible confusion? Friends, it didn't happen all at once. The seeds of religious skepticism were sown long ago, when theologians first accepted the higher critical methods of Bible study. Under the cloak of scholarship and Biblical exegesis, the critics began to dissect the message of the Bible, point by point, in order to expose its supposed errors. Many, many of the so-called mistakes tabulated by those scholars have been completely refuted by more recent discoveries of archaeology.

One of the greatest areas of doubt has been that of creation according to the Genesis account. When religious leaders chose to believe the philosophical conclusions of evolution over the clear cut record of the Bible, they embarked on a perilous, downward road. By denying the act of Creation, which God claims as His identifying mark of authority, men set themselves in a path which has culminated in gross skepticism. These extravagant end-products of evolution and modernism should serve as a fearful warning to every Christian who is attracted by the theories of men. There can be no trifling with God's Word—not even in the name of science.

No one yet has been able to fabricate a theory of origins which did not require more faith to accept than the simple Bible account. Some of the great men of science must be commended for the faith they have to believe certain of their own speculative propositions. Probably no one was more surprised than Darwin himself, when science began to recognize the theories he worked out to explain the variation of species. I have before me right now a copy of a letter written by Darwin soon after he published his views on natural selection. I saw the actual letter in Darwins hand-writing in the British Museum, and made a photograph of it on the spot. Here's what he wrote a friend who had criticized his book: "I feel not a shade of surprise at your entirely rejecting my views, My surprise is that I have been successful in converting some few eminent botanists and geologists ... I entirely agree with you that there is no more direct proof of variation being unlimited in amount than there is that it is strictly limited."

Doubtless Darwin was a sincere person when he observed, on a world voyage, how the animals were apparently separated according to variety and strength. As a suggestive possibility of how this could have happened, he presented the theory on natural selection and the survival of the fittest. Since many scientists were searching at that time for an alternate to the Bible account of special creation they eagerly grasped this to use against the despised fundamentalists. Now let it be said that the creationists of that day were undoubtedly too narrow and iron-clad in their concepts. Their explanation of variation involved a belief that God created a special family of Spaniel dogs, and a special family of Collie dogs, and so right on through the hundreds of varieties. Actually God needed only to create one basic family of dogs, from which all the varieties have developed. Since all dogs belong to the same family and can cross-breed, their differences can be explained entirely on the basis of mutational changes. It was not necessary for each different kind to be especially created. But, please notice friends, that dogs can only produce other dogs—they can never produce any other species of animal.

If the evolutionist could ever prove that even one basic kind or species had ever crossed over into another species, he would have at least, a small evidence to begin building evolution upon. But that missing link is just as missing today as it was when Darwin wrote his theory. In spite of world-wide searching by the most famous scientific researchers, there has never appeared one single intergraded form of life which is in the process of changing from one species to another. Everything continues to reproduce only after its kind exactly as God decreed in the book of Genesis. There have been some exciting moments when the scientists felt that the missing link had been found, but alas, it always ended in disappointment. For example a few years ago a strange-looking new sea creature was hauled out of the ocean near the shores of Malaya. Evolutionists rushed excitedly to the scene, feeling that the missing link might have been found. To their amazement they discovered a fish which was supposed to have become extinct millions of years ago. Identified as the Sealacanth, this fish has been an embarrassing exhibit against the basic claims of evolution. One scientist made this shocking admission in The Scientific American: "Throughout the hundreds of millions of years the Coelacanth has kept the same form and structure. Here is one of the great mysteries of evolution." (Dec. 1955) But, friends, it is only a mystery to the evolutionists. Although they assign millions of years for this fish to pass through several stages of evolutionary development, it insists on remaining unchanged. It refuses to conform to the theories of speculative men.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

The Coelacanth is just one of many living fossils which continue to confound the poor evolutionist. Upon the published admissions of evolutionary scientists, the cockroaches and ants still retain almost the exact form which they bore millions of years ago. In fact according to The Scientific American, the cockroach was almost identical 250,000,000 years ago. Now if the scientist really believes that cockroaches were here that long ago and that they have not changed till this very day, what happens to his theory of evolution? The same stubborn resistance to change can be found in the dragon fly and common fruit-fly. In the 1950's a deep-sea mollusk was recovered off the coast of Central America. It lives in the sea at a depth of two miles. Notice what science has conceded about this creature; this is taken from the book Essentials of Earth History: "Its fossil relatives have been discovered in rock estimated to be some 350 million years old, where they are ... with the trilobites". (Page 43)

Now friends, evolution teaches that the trilobites are among the earth's earliest inhabitants. They constituted the earliest forms of evolutionary life. Yet here is a mollusk which existed side by side with trilobites and who has confessedly made little if any change in form. Those mollusks were supposed to have become extinct 280,000,000 years ago, according to Science magazine. They are fossils alright, but living fossils. And instead of providing any missing link or evidence favorable to evolution, they absolutely shatter the whole theory to pieces.

Here is a question which has only one answer. Why have the scientists failed to discover a single intermediate type and yet they have discovered multiplied millions of fossils which are strictly classified under well-defined species? If life did evolve slowly from the simple to the complex then there would actually be far more intermediate forms than of fixed species. In the absence of a single one, how can the theory survive? This is a question that puzzles and perplexes. There are some valid scientific reasons to accept the account of creation in the Bible. It is more reasonable to believe that God can work a miracle by making matter than to believe that dumb unintelligent nature and time could create anything. It would have to be a miracle under either condition, but a miracle by a God of design is more easy to believe than a miracle by blind force or chance. It all boils down to the faith we exercise in the Bible. If we believe it, our faith will accept God as Creator. If we reject the Word of God, we can choose between a score of man-made theories about the origin of life.

Perhaps it is easier to understand the secular scientists than the religious leaders of our day. With the living powerful Word of God before them to testify of a Creator who spoke and it was done, who commanded and it stood fast, they still choose to believe fables, instead. Step by step this rejection of Bible truth has led them to dare question the very existence of God. I press this point, friends, because there are so many who have started the same path of doubt toward God's Word. That unbelief grows as it is encouraged. Gradually the Word of God is humanized and robbed of its divine power. Soon only the covers are left, and inspiration has been cast out the window. Don't let it happen to you!

You know, a survey of 3,000 Protestant ministers throughout the United States reveals that they are disturbed. Nearly half of the clergy in their 20's and 30's confessed that they thought seriously of leaving the ministry. "Much of the disillusionment among church leaders is caused by the hypocrisy of their preachers," said the Los Angeles Herald Examiner. And what about the attitude of the clergymen toward the Bible? The survey concluded with these words, "The Bible is not only not to be taken literally (less than 5 percent of the whole sampling did so) but also there is little specific guidance in it for specific problems," and that is what most of these theologians said, friends. Consistent with their downgrading of the Bible, only 20 percent of the ministers 35 years and under did not condemn extramarital sex. Now, if these ministers are disillusioned with their parishioners they had better examine what they are teaching them themselves.

In the letters section of Christianity Today a spokesman for the United Church of Christ, Dr. William Elliott, who wants to enlist evangelical Protestants in an ecumenical dialogue frankly declares that many ecumenical leaders strongly hate the evangelical doctrine of an infallible Bible. Dr. Elliott himself has characterized this notion of an infallible book as demonic. Now there are his actual words, friends. He said, "I consider adherence to the infallibility of Scripture demonic." And then he said this, "But hatred for the doctrine of the Perfect Book is very strong in a very large segment of ecumenical leadership and I can hardly be considered irresponsible and ecumenically inauthentic in voicing this hatred." Now there is a man who is a leader of the ecumenical movement who says I hate this idea of an infallibility of the Bible.

Well, a recent convention of the National Council of Churches produced the following results when a survey of delegates was made. Remember now, this is the elite of this organization which purports to represent millions of Protestant Christians in the United States. Two-thirds of the delegates were ordained clergymen, ninety percent of these were college graduates. To this representative group some elementary theologian questions were asked, and here are the questions and the answers that were given.

"What factors are absolutely necessary to salvation?" And the answer, the majority put "love your neighbor" as first. Now friends, what's happened to the text, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved"? The majority of these leaders of the National Council of Churches said that the first absolute essential of salvation is just to love your neighbor. All right, here is the second question. "I know that God exists and I have no doubts about it. Do you affirm or deny this statement?" Believe it or not, one in three of these ministers could not affirm his belief in the existence of God. The next question, "Jesus is a divine Son of God and I have no doubts about it. What do you think?" Thirty-six percent of the delegates assembled could not check this off without reservation. All right, the next question, "There is life beyond death. Do you believe it?" Thirty-one percent could not bring themselves to believe that. And then: "Miracles happened just as the Bible said. What do you think of that?" Sixty-two percent could not agree. Thirty-five percent put the miracles down to natural causes while twenty-six percent were either unsure that miracles happened at all or they were sure that they didn't. As to the doctrine of the virgin birth only twenty-eight percent believe that the devil actually exists. Well, these are interesting things, friends. We are living in a day of unbelief.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Missing Links

Listen to the audio version Now!

One of the greatest tragedies of modern civilization is that man has turned his back on the only Book in the world that tells us where we came from, why we are here and where we are going. In its place we have taken the guesses of man. It is true that for many years the Bible was the world's best-selling book, but it probably has the dubious distinction of being the only book that has been a best-seller that very few people have ever read. Oh, everyone has read a little of it; everyone has read at least the Lord's Prayer, the Beatitudes, the Twenty-Third Psalm, and some other well known passages, but very few have really studied God's Holy Word to learn of His plan for our lives.

There was a certain pastor who was visiting one of his parishioners. As he prepared to leave the home, he asked the lady if he could use her Bible for he wanted to read a passage of Scripture and have prayer before he left. She turned to her little six-year-old girl seated beside her and said, "Honey, will you get the Bible for the minister? He wants to read something to us before he goes." A questioning look came upon the little girl's face. She obviously didn't know what her mother was talking about. The mother, quick to cover up the embarrassment said, "You know, Honey, the big book that we use so much." The little girl brightened up and immediately left the room. Soon she was back with the Sears-Roebuck Catalog. She had done exactly what her mother had told her to do—she got the big book that they used so much.

One of the major questions in the world today is with respect to the origin of life. I suppose the overwhelming majority of people, even Christians, would have to be classified as believers in evolution. There are still a few people who believe in special creation as recorded in the first chapters of Genesis in the Holy Scriptures. Even among those who believe in special creation there are those who are a little uncertain. They read things from week to week in the paper; they hear things on the radio; and they wonder just how the Bible-believing Christian should relate himself to some of the so-called scientific facts that are presented. They seem to be in direct contradiction, and indeed they are, to the facts that are given in Scripture. If science is really true, and we cannot doubt but that true science is, then how can the Bible be correct when the two present entirely different pictures regarding the origin of life?

Now I will use the word faith to apply to every one of you whether you class yourself as an evolutionist or as a believer in special creation, because one thing we must acknowledge at the very outset is this—you cannot scientifically demonstrate today either evolution or special creation. Neither is taking place right now. The evolutionist will admit that he has never witnessed a change from one "kind" to another. And obviously the believer in special creation does not claim that creation is taking place today. Therefore, whichever theory you believe, you must believe it by faith. My purpose is to show you, to the best of my ability, that there is a solid basis for real faith in believing the account of special creation as recorded in the first two chapters of Genesis. There are some weaknesses in the theory of evolution that I want to mention. I do not wish to ridicule or anything of that nature, but we must recognize the fact that in spite of the claims of some, evolution is not an established scientific fact. It is only a theory. Charles Darwin himself admitted, "There are two or three million species on earth. A sufficient field one might think for observation; but it must be said today that in spite of all the evidence of trained observers, that not one change of the species to another is on record." Life and Letters, Vol. 3. p.25.

Now, let us look at some things in close detail. Whenever we discuss the theory of evolution and special creation we must remember that there are various kinds of scientific words that we will use. There is a great deal of evidence according to most scientists today to support the theory of evolution. You must realize that the theory of evolution is supported entirely by persuasive evidence, or subjective evidence. Now the opposite of this is coercive evidence. Coercive evidence is evidence that admits of only one truth. Persuasive evidence is evidence that can be interpreted more than one way.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Let me give you an illustration of each.

A good illustration of persuasive evidence would be the evidence contained in the study of geology, the fossil record such as found in the layers of sandstone, shale or whatever type of deposit it is. Generally speaking, this evidence is stacked up like this—the deeper you go into the earth, the more simple forms of animal fossils are found. Now, not all of it is like this, but the majority of it is. To the evolutionist, you see, this tends to support his theory that the earth is billions of years old, that life has developed from the simple to the complex over millennia. They believe that as time passed deposits settled on the earth, the simple remains of life left their fossil remains buried deep and that the closer we come to the surface the more complex forms are found.

However, this can also be explained another way. This type of evidence, we believe, establishes the truth of the flood recorded in the sixth chapter of Genesis. You see, the Bible plainly states that the flood did not come in one day but about six weeks passed from the time the waters began to build up on the earth until the earth was eventually covered by water. During this period of time, the simple forms of life which had no means of escaping the water perished first. From the flowing of the silt and dirt and debris back and forth over the surface of the earth these simpler forms of life were buried first. The stronger animals were able to retreat and flee to higher ground and were buried last because they were able to escape the lower places. This is persuasive evidence. I can use it to support the record of the flood as found in Genesis 6:8, and the evolutionist can use it to support the theory of evolution. It can be used both ways.

An illustration of coercive evidence is the shape of the earth. All of us agree that the world is round. One of the things that demonstrates this is that the passengers of a ship crossing the ocean see the tops of mountains first as they approach land. This can be explained in no other way except that the world is circular. The fact that the astronauts out in space have taken pictures hundreds of miles above the earth, in which we can clearly see the curvature of the earth can only be explained by the fact that the earth is round. So you see what I mean by the two types of evidence. Now we find that supporting the theory of evolution is no coercive evidence. All of the evidence in that theory is persuasive evidence. This is a significant point to remember.

Another thing we need to understand is a definition of special creation. The fact that people for centuries have misunderstood what the Bible-believing Christian actually believes about special creation has led some to doubt creation when they actually did not understand what was meant. In the Middle Ages it was commonly believed that the first two chapters of Genesis taught that in the beginning God created fixed varieties of species. That every time a species reproduced itself, be it plant or mammal, every generation was as exactly like its parents as the coins from a mint. But this is not what Genesis teaches.

Take your Bible and turn with me to the record given in Genesis. This is what God tells us took place at the time of creation. I want you specifically to notice that the word, "species," nowhere appears. But another word is found which I have used earlier in this broadcast. You may have wondered just exactly what I meant. In Genesis 1:24 we read: "And God said, let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind: cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so." Someone will say, "Well, preacher, what is the difference between the word "kind" and the word "species," as used in this discussion?" Simply this—a kind is a basic type, a family group. A simple illustration would be the horse family.

Now in the horse family there are many species. There are Arabian horses, Shetland ponies, etc.; and these are species within the horse "kind" or horse family.

Now there is something interesting here. There are no two things in this world exactly alike in the field of nature. Even identical twins are not completely identical. The maple tree may have a thousand leaves, but no two of them will be exactly alike. In the field of horses again, in the same species no two animals are exactly alike. But when you see a horse you have no difficulty knowing it is of the horse family. You don't ask yourself, "Now, is that a horse or a cow?" That question never enters your mind. In spite of the fact that there are many species within the horse family, they are a distinct "kind" and easily distinguishable as horses. There is no connecting link between horses and cows.

There are many species within the kind but there is no overlapping of the kinds. Every time a female duck hatches one of her eggs, there is never anything but a duck inside. Now, that almost seems ridiculous to mention, but this is of vital importance. There is no connecting link between a duck and a chicken. They both have feathers, they both lay eggs, they both have very similar habits; but there is a distinct difference between the two kinds. Many species of chickens, many species of ducks; but there is a distinct barrier between them. The same is true of animals. This is true of every living thing.

We have all kinds of hybrids in the world today. But scientists have never produced any new kinds. Never! Changing the species, yes. They can change the color of the kernels on the ear of corn; they can change the color of the petals of the flower; they can even change the characteristics of animals. For instance, in the poultry business they can produce a hybrid such as the New Hampshire Red chicken which has the hardy characteristics of the Rhode Island Reds, but the egg-laying characteristics of the Leghorn. But they cannot produce a new basic type.

The very reason for the theory of evolution is that Charles Darwin as he studied theology at Cambridge University was taught that the Bible said that God created various species, and as he observed nature, he saw that there was a great variety of species. So he concluded that the Bible must be wrong. The trouble with Darwin was that he took hearsay for what the Bible said, rather than reading it for himself. When he saw these many varieties within the species, he thought that this was conclusive proof that the Bible account was incorrect. The truth of the matter was that the Bible did not say anything about species. How tragic that the theory of evolution grew out of a misunderstanding of what the Bible actually taught.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Proof of God Listen to the audio version Now!

In several recent talks on modern skepticism, we have been trying to show evidence from many angles that God is just exactly what the Bible claims Him to be. Not one word of Scripture has ever been broken and disproven by generations of critics. All the latest facts of true science coincide with the Bible record. God does exist, and He still functions as the mighty Sustainer of the Universe He created—in spite of the modern blasphemy of theologians and scholars.

There are those who tell us that they do not believe in the existence of God simply because no one has ever seen such a Being. In other words, they would have us think that they believe in only that which they have the ability to see. However, human experience daily teaches us that we actually believe a great many things which we do not see nor understand. Take, for instance, gravitation, electricity, air, thought. No one has ever seen these forces and yet we know that they exist because of what they do and accomplish. The Scripture declares: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork." Psalm 19:1.

That is to say, as we view His created works we may clearly see and understand that there must be an invisible Being, namely God, who has brought all these things into existence. To illustrate, we understand that there is a skywriter in the clouds when we see the skywriting, even though our limited vision may be unable to penetrate the distance and see the one who does the writing. In both cases to disbelieve would be utter foolishness.

There is such abundant and conclusive evidence in the heavens of the existence of a Supreme Being, that no unbiased person can consistently deny it. The sublime pageant of the heavenly bodies in their orderly march through infinite space, testifies of the Deity. Says the prophet: "Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number: he calleth them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth." Isaiah 40:26.

Our finite minds are incapable of comprehending the vastness of the universe. Astronomers tell us that all the grains of sand on all the beaches of the world would scarcely equal the number of the stars in the universe. Dr. Howard Shapley, noted American astronomer, estimates that there are 200 billion galaxies or island universes each of which contains billions of stars or suns. All these stars are in perpetual motion. Countless billions of these blazing suns plow their way through limitless space, orbit intersecting orbit like the links of a chain, and yet there is no conflict, no collision! What mathematical Genius has conceived, planned, made and coordinated all these worlds?

"The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." Psalm 14:1. Such an one may ascribe the existence of this infinitely complex universe to chance, but chance cannot invent, organize, or plan. Chance cannot even make a watch. Each little wheel, spring, jewel, or cog in the watch has its place. Were we to place the parts of a watch, its jewels, wheels, and springs, in a container, and shake them together ever so vigorously for a million years, those parts would never of themselves make a watch. Only an experienced mind, and skilled hands can fit those parts together. A prominent businessman, a manufacturer of cutlery, who had been delivered from the soul destroying influence of skepticism, and who became a firm and ardent believer in the existence of God, was asked to give one reason for his strong and unyielding faith in the God of the Bible. His answer was as follows: "It takes a girl in our factory about two days to learn to put the seventeen parts of a meat chopper together. It may be that these millions of worlds, each with its separate orbit—all balanced so wonderfully in space—it may be that by a billion years of tumbling about they finally arranged themselves. I don't know, I am merely a plain manufacturer of cutlery. But this I do know, that you can shake the seventeen parts of a meat chopper around in a wash tub for the next seventeen billion years and you will never make a meat chopper."

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Dr. Compton, nationally known physicist, believes in God, and assures us that his faith is a very real thing to him. Answering his own question as to what faith is, he says: "For myself, faith begins with the realization that a supreme intelligence brought the universe into being and created man. It is not difficult for me to have this faith, for it is incontrovertible that where there is a plan there is intelligence, and an orderly, unfolding universe testifies to the truth of the most majestic statement ever uttered: 'In the beginning, God. ...'"

Let me ask you, Do you know of anything that is superior to your mind? Look at the planets coursing through the sky. Behold, in all its splendor the entire cosmic universe with its suns, its nebulae and galaxies. Yet they are inanimate. They have no mind, no intelligence. They cannot do what you can do—think, reason, plan, and carry out plans according to private volition and will. The human mind can think, reason, plan, and push those plans into action. It can invent and produce instruments by which it gathers a knowledge of the vast universe. Through radar man has now been able to send a signal to the moon and command it to return. He can control waterfalls and make them serve his needs, cause rivers to run backward, turn the forces of nature to serving the needs of mankind. And now he has learned how to break down the atom, and utilize a power so vast that man is able finally to annihilate all life from the earth.

But there remains one thing no man ever has been or ever will be able to do. He cannot build, produce, or create anything that is more intelligent than himself! A man can take existing materials and out of them build a house. But it requires intelligence and power superior to the house to produce the house. An automobile is almost a living thing, but the intelligence and powers required to invent and produce it are superior to the thing produced. To suggest to you that anything you could invent or bring into being could be superior in intelligence and ability to you and your mind would certainly insult your intelligence!

Now let me ask you, Do you honestly believe that any power or force which is inferior to your mind could have produced you? If you do not believe in God, then you have only the alternative of believing that something less than your intelligence produced you—that dumb, purposeless unintelligence brought into being your intelligence! The only rational possibility is to confess that the very presence of the human mind is proof that the Great First Cause is also the supreme intelligence, infinitely superior to the wisdom of mortal man!

Now take a look at the miracle proof of created things. It matters not whether we study a distant sun through the telescope, or a tiny cell through the microscope, we will find law, design, and purpose pervading every atom in infinite space. The protons and electrons in the smallest atom are just as definitely governed by law as are the greatest suns in distant space. Wherever laws exist, there must of necessity be a lawmaker. Many scientists agree that it is impossible to explain the behavior of nature aside from God.

William Ritter, former director of the Scripps Institution for Biological Research, University of California, says: "Seeing God in the universe is no more difficult than seeing electrons there," while Pasteur, French scientist and father of bacteriology, declared: "Posterity will one day laugh at the sublime foolishness of the materialistic philosophy. The more I study nature the more I stand amazed at the work of the Creator. I pray at work in my laboratory." If I had the very finest railroad watch made, it would not keep perfect time. Once or twice a week I would have to adjust it a second or two. If I want to be sure it is accurate to the second, I set it by the master clock of my city, or any city, which is always found at the Western Union. But even this clock does not keep perfect time. Once or twice a week it must be adjusted a second or two by the master clock of the nation, by telegraph, from the Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C. There at the Naval Observatory is the Master Clock of the U.S.A. But this great Master Clock of the nation is not perfect, either. It, too, must be adjusted and corrected occasionally.

Yes, it is corrected by the Master Clock of the Universe—up in the skies—by astronomers! Up there in the heavens is the great Master Clock that never makes a mistake—is always on time—never off a fraction of a second—the heavenly bodies coursing through the skies!

Now, if I show you my fine factory precisioned 23-jewel railroad watch and tell you that it was not made by any watch company at all, in fact, it was not designed or put together by any watchmaker but that it just sort of happened, would you believe that? The iron ores just brought themselves up out of the ground, refined themselves, formed and shaped themselves into the delicate little cogs and wheels and other pieces. Would one person accept my story that the silicon just came of its own accord out of the earth and turned itself into the glass crystal, or that the gold case just refined itself, shaped itself. Then suppose I asserted that the cogs and wheels and scores of little parts just assembled themselves together in that case, wound themselves up, and started themselves to running and keeping almost perfect time, well, if I should try to tell you anything like that, you would tell me I'm crazy or a fool, would you not?

Certainly! You know that the presence of that watch is positive proof of the existence of a watchmaker who thought it all out, planned it, put it together, and started it running.

But then you look up into the great vast sky at that Master Clock of the universe, which never misses a second, the perfect watch by which we must constantly set all our imperfect man-made watches, and you tell me, "That all just happened? There was no Great Watchmaker! No master mind thought out and planned that complicated universe, brought it into being, set each star, sun and planet in its own precise place, and finally started the countless heavenly bodies speeding through space, each in its prescribed orbit." Do you tell me that it just fashioned itself, put itself together, wound itself up, and started itself running? There was no Intelligence, no planning, no creation, no God!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Questions and Answers - Part 4

Listen to the audio version Now!

For several days now we have been answering the Bible questions which our listeners have been sending in, and even though we deal with a variety of subjects, these broadcasts are proving to be very interesting and informative.

Our first question today has to do with the length of a Bible day. Here it is: Will you please explain further about the way a day is reckoned in the scripture?

This is an interesting question which we have referred to from time to time without, perhaps, giving enough Biblical evidence. In the first chapter of Genesis we read that the evening and morning constitute a day. We read there, "The evening and the morning were the first day, ...the evening and the morning were the second day, ...and third day," etc. Notice that the evening introduces the dark part of the day and the morning introduces the light part of the day. Practically speaking, of course, twelve hours of darkness and twelve hours of light make up a twenty-four-hour day. All through the Old and New Testaments we find the day begins at sunset and ends at sunset. That is quite different, of course, from our midnight-to-midnight reckoning, which is the Roman way that came in much, much later, after the days of the New Testament. To put it another way, then, a day begins at evening and ends at evening. That is why in Genesis it says, "The evening and the morning were the first day."

In Leviticus 23:27, 28, speaking of the Day of Atonement, it says, "Also on the tenth day of this seventh month there shall be a day of atonement: ...and ye shall do no work in that same day." Now, let's look at this particular day that has been mentioned in the Bible and find out how it is measured according to the Scripture. That day, as do all the other days, had to have a starting time and an ending time; so in verse 32 we read: "It shall be unto you a sabbath of rest, ...in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even, shall ye celebrate your sabbath." "Even" means "evening," of course.

This is talking about that same Day of Atonement that was to come on the tenth day of the seventh month. But please notice this—they were to celebrate the tenth day of the month, and that day began on the ninth day at "even." The ninth day lasted until the evening and then it was no longer the ninth day, but the beginning of the tenth day. Then when the sun set the next evening, that tenth day was gone, and the eleventh day began. So when they were going to keep the tenth day, it says they began on the ninth day at even. Now, having proven that a day begins at evening and ends at evening, let's prove that evening is introduced by the going down of the sun. In Joshua 10:26, 27 we read this: "They were hanging upon the trees until the evening. And it came to pass, at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees." This clearly proves that evening comes at the going down of the sun, and then, of course, it is the beginning of another day.

In Psalm 104:23 we find these words: "Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labour until the evening." Now that certainly doesn't mean until midnight, does it? But it does mean until the close of day. In various parts of the United States this word "evening" is used in many different ways, but we are interested in the way the Bible uses it; and according to the Scripture, the evening comes at sunset. Now we are ready to go to the writers of the New Testament and we will prove that the death of our Lord never had anything to do with the changing of the beginning or the ending of the day. In Mark 1:32 we read this: "And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils." That day was the Sabbath, as you will find in verse 21, and the Jews objected to the people coming to be healed on the Sabbath. That explains why they waited until the sun had set. It was then the first day of the week, for the Sabbath was past.

Luke was a Gentile who didn't recognize the Roman time of midnight to midnight, but rather, the divinely-inspired beginning and ending of the day just as we find it in the

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Scriptures. Especially in his writing do we have the record of the beginning and ending of the first day of the week. On the afternoon of the first day of the week, the day of the resurrection, two of the disciples of Jesus were walking to Emmaus. Here is what we read in Luke 24:15, 16: "And Jesus himself drew near, and went with them. But their eyes were holden that they should not know him." Then in verses 28 and 29: "And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further. But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent." This proves that the day would be spent when evening came on at sunset, and after evening it would no longer be the first day of the week. He didn't say, "for it's toward midnight and the day is far spent"; he didn't say at all that the day would end at midnight, but at evening; and if it were spent at evening, it was gone, and the second day of the week began. Perhaps this is enough Scripture to show you just how the Bible considers a day. Unfortunately, back during the Dark Ages this new, pagan system of reckoning from midnight to midnight was introduced and we have continued to follow that way. But remember when reading your Bible and considering days in the Scripture, it is always evening-to-evening or sunset-to-sunset.

Our next question is a very interesting one, also, and it brings us back to the subject of diet once again. Here it is: Do you think it is a sin to eat too much?

I'm convinced that four things are killing the American people—too much food, bad food, wrong combinations of food, and then worry and anxiety that stems from lack of faith. Notice this text of the wise man in Proverbs 23:21: "For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty." Here in this verse the wise man yokes the glutton, the man who eats too much, with the drunkard. Another verse written by the wise man says that a person puts a knife to his throat when he overeats, or when he becomes a glutton.

Perhaps that is quite sufficient to answer the question of our listener, but you know, friends, the psalmist says that a man is wonderfully and fearfully made. Man has never made a machine with a motor that would run 969 years like the heart of Methuselah did. The human body is the only machine that will repair itself if given the proper cooperation. How much does the average individual know about his own body and how to take care of it? Millions of Americans are almost literally digging their graves with their teeth. Doesn't it seem strange to you that the average parent knows more about the physical needs of the chickens in the pen or the dog in the house than he does about the needs of his own children? The average man knows more about his automobile than he knows about the physical needs of his own child. Why is there such an incredible amount of ignorance concerning the way to take care of this sacred body temple? The Bible assures us that the human body is sacred and has been created for a holy purpose. It is to be taken care of, preserved and maintained according to the rules laid down in the Bible. The trouble is that most Americans simply follow their appetites in matters of eating and drinking. Very few human beings are willing to exercise a measure of self-control and self-denial when it comes to the indulgence of the appetite.

Every one of us has been born with a depraved appetite. We can't help ourselves on that point. It is a part of human nature, and that is the reason a baby will eat dirt, trash, roaches, pins, tacks, almost anything that he can get his hands on. But when we get to the age of accountability and responsibility, we should be able to curb and control our appetite and our physical craving so that we conform to the rules and standards and regulations of God.

I know some people are always saying that it doesn't make any difference how they take care of themselves. They feel their body is their own and they can take care of it as they please. That really doesn't make much sense when you analyze it. To me, it would be just as foolish for you to be flying with a pilot friend over the Rocky Mountains and look down at the gauge on the panel and say, "Well, it looks like you are about out of oil or gas, but it doesn't make a good deal of difference, I suppose." The fact is, it would scare you to death! And then if that pilot landed at the airport and told the mechanic to put some coal oil into the high-compression engine and some used oil into the crankcase, how far would you want to ride with that pilot after that? There is a manual that goes with this body of ours, just like there is a guidance manual for the airplane. If God tells you to burn 100 aviation octane, don't try to get by with 80; and if He tells you to be careful about over-indulging the body with rich foods and not being gluttonous, then you had better pay attention to that, also. The man who puts salt water in the radiator or sand in the crankcase is a fool, but not any bigger fool than the man who puts alcohol, dirt, or too much rich food into his human system.

And by the way, if you haven't sent for the Information Folder entitled, "You Wouldn't Do This," be sure to send for it right away. It describes the program of heaven for keeping your body fit and strong. I'm sure you can see how foolish it is for a man to drive into a service station and ask for the best permanent antifreeze to put in his radiator and then go next door and get a bottle of liquor and put it in his human system to enter the delicate lining of his stomach, to pass through the bloodstream into the liver, to begin cirrhosis of the liver and paralysis of the brain. Yet thousands and thousands of people are doing this very thing. Millions of them are doing it, in fact. They seem to have no concept whatever of how to take care of the delicately balanced body that can be so easily destroyed. Why can't we return to the simple things that God gives, friends?

Even though man has despoiled the ground and polluted the air, I'm still sure that man can have a good, large measure of health. The food situation is sort of like the gospel. It has been glamorized, but at the same time it has been refined and de-lified. It looks good, tastes good, and lasts long without spoiling, and the American people are sort of like a little bird when the mama bird comes home. He just throws his mouth wide open and apparently it doesn't make any difference whether a beetle or a bumblebee goes down his throat. The cookstove is a murderer in most homes; and after our foods are poisoned, cooked, killed, fried, baked, boiled, mashed, hashed, and seasoned, we don't get much of the original good that was in them when they were harvested. So, in answer to your question—indeed, gluttony is a sin which goes right along with the sin of the drunkard.

Jesus was undoubtedly referring to this same evil when He spoke of the antediluvian world. He said, "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the coming of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they were given in marriage," etc. Luke 17:26, 27. Jesus was certainly not speaking about the ordinary pursuits of those activities. He was talking about the perversion of them and how the eating and drinking had been turned into an occasion of sin and gluttony. And by the way, you will recall that it was the indulgence of appetite which introduced sin into the human family the first time. By giving way on this point of physical indulgence and appetite, Adam and Eve forfeited their rulership of this world. When Jesus came to wrest the world back from the hands of Satan, He overcame on this same point of appetite. It is very interesting to see how Jesus, the second Adam, came and won the victory that had been lost because of the failure of the first Adam. This is exactly the way the Bible pictures it. It has well been said that the man who can control his appetite will also be able to control every other appetite of his nature.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Questions and Answers - Part 7

Listen to the audio version Now!

We continue our series on questions and answers today on the Amazing Facts' broadcast. Our listeners have been writing in a great deal during this past month and asking some very interesting questions about certain texts of the Bible. We are trying to answer all of them. We are working just as many as possible into these special broadcasts dealing entirely with questions and answers.

Here is a question that has come to us about the age of the earth and the evolutionary theory. Now we have had a great deal to say about this on the broadcast and this listener wants to know how can we be sure that the days of creation week were not long periods of time, perhaps even a thousand or more years. Well, this is certainly a good question because there are multitudes of people and many scientific authorities who actually believe that those days of creation week were long geological periods of time. Now, there are a number of reasons why it could not be. We will deal with a few of them very briefly in answering this question.

First of all, the Hebrew word for day is "yom". Throughout the Bible, when this word "yom" is used in relation to any specific number such as first, second, or third, it always has reference to a literal solar day. In other words, "yom" is never used with a numerical designation anywhere else in the Bible except in reference to a twenty-four-hour day; therefore, it seems reasonable to assume that it is so used in dealing with the first, second, and third days of creation also. In the second place, according to the Bible account, every day of that first week was made up of darkness and light and evening and morning. So what ever length of day that might have been, it was composed of half darkness and half light. I'm sure that we can all agree on that. Now if we suppose that a day was a long geological period or even one thousand years in length, it would mean that five hundred years would be light and five hundred years would be darkened. Immediately we can see how impossible it would have been for any living vegetation to survive such a long period of darkness. There would have been absolutely nothing left alive at the end of creation week.

Now the third reason we know that these were not longer periods and irregular solar days because the grasses, herbs, and trees were created on the third day and the insects on the fifth day. All of us are acquainted with the fact that the bees and insects are absolutely necessary for the process of pollination which reproduce the flowers and the grass. Had those days of creation been long periods of time, none of the flowers could have possibly survived until the bees were created on the fifth day. Alright now, I believe that is easy for us to understand. There had to be a very close continuity here between the creation of the insects and the creation of the flowers. In the fourth place, Adam was created on the sixth day and lived through the rest of that day and the seventh day also of that first week. Now had those days been long periods of time, Adam would have been many thousands of years old before he died, yet we are plainly told in the Bible that he was only 930 years of age when he died. Thus, we see that to be consistent with the Bible record, we assume that those days were actual literal solar days of time just as we know them now. In fact, there is no reason to believe that they were any longer in length.

One other point that we are noting as we are passing along and that is concerning the Sabbath Day. In Genesis 2:1-3 we read, "Thus the heavens and the earth were finished and all the host of them and on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made." Later in Exodus 20, God actually included the Sabbath commandment as one of the Ten Commandments. He commanded man to keep the sabbath day holy; "six days shalt thou labour and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God." Then He goes on to tell why it's the sabbath of the Lord. "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day and hallowed it." It would have been completely inconsistent for God to command man to keep every seventh day—every literal seventh day in honor of the creation week if that work had not been accomplished in six literal days. There would have been no meaning at all in resting every seventh day if the work of creation had been accomplished over long geological periods. The reason God commanded man to keep every seventh day was to remember that God had created everything in six days. Friends, these five or six strong reasons are quite enough to convince us that the making of this world and its creatures was completed in the first seven days of time.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Alright, here is the next question. "Do you not believe that science and the Bible agree? Why then can you not accept the scientific facts of evolution?"

Well friends, I do accept all scientific facts and believe that they do agree perfectly with the Bible. It is the misinterpretation of those facts which creates the problem with evolution. The evolutionary scientist ascribed all of the order of our universe to a blind operation of unintelligent force, just as though I should put all the parts of a fine wrist watch into a box and then shake them up and just keep on shaking them until finally they come together and form a beautiful, perfectly operating watch. Now you and I know that that could never happen, of course. Everyone knows that a watch will not go together without a plan and without the use of energy intelligently directed. Even though all the parts are available and you could just shake it and go on shaking it for a year, for a hundred years, and a thousand years, and even a million years and still you wouldn't get a watch put together by itself.

Take the revolutions of the earth around the sun. If the sun were a little heavier and the earth were traveling no faster than it is now, the earth would be pulled into an elliptical orbit which would bring it so close to the sun that all life on this earth would be extinguished. Essentially the same thing would result if the velocity of the earth were decreased. As it is now the earth is traveling at the rate of about 18 1/2 miles a second. If it were slowed down to 14 miles a second, we would be pulled in so close to the sun as to annihilate life. On the other hand, if the velocity were increased to 26 miles a second, the earth would go off into space away from the sun and never return. Strange isn't it that our earth should develop just the right velocity to compensate for the sun's pull on the earth, and yet keep us at the right distance so that life continues. Of course, that might have been accidental, friends, but do you think so?

However, almost the same thing is true with respect to the moon which is circling the earth. It maintains an orbit which keeps it the proper distance from the earth. Strange that two accidental happenings should be that closely related, isn't it? Now a series of accidents begins to look like a master plan, but a master plan would involve a planner, of course, and so that means, friends, there has to be a God. A supreme being that regulates and controls all of these tremendous things of nature.

Now, one of the important concepts of physical chemistry is that of entropy. You may not understand what that means, friends, but it is a word which actually describes the degree of disorder in a system. One of the principles states that the entropy of a system tends to increase. To use a simple example, if you have a poem set up in type and you shake the type, you get a more disorganized arrangement and not a more sublime poem. You can understand that, of course. In order to get less entropy and a more orderly arrangement it is necessary to use intelligent force directed into making something better and more organized. Now if the solar system is disturbed, it will not make a better arrangement, not of itself, but a more disorderly one.

But I hear somebody say, "Well, time has been limited; listen, anything can happen if time is given to be a factor." Well, try shaking a board with a fount of type until the type spells out all of Longfellow's poem of "Hiawatha", for example. Time is no factor, my friends. Just keep on trying, but entropy increases with time. In other words, disorganization increases. Spelling out the poem would be a decrease in entropy and contrary to all scientific principle. This poem is simple compared with the complexities of nature or of the human body. If it can't happen with the poem, how could it happen that the universe is so well organized? What happened to all the unworkable combinations?

What about the complex relationships in our body? Take the case of clotting of the blood. If a person's blood does not clot, he has very little chance of survival. Suppose that at some time or other, man or his predecessor if we accept evolution, had no blood clotting mechanism. A minor wound, of course, would cause a man to bleed to death. However, the blood clotting mechanism is a very complex one and if one step is missing, the blood will not clot. It is very, very complicated. The liver has to produce certain substances and they synthesize with other substances so that the little platelets of the blood begin to congeal and form blood clotting. Now friends, how did the liver know that it was supposed to produce these different substances to prepare for an emergency it had never experienced before? Let's assume there was a man back there who needed this wonderful process of blood clotting. Maybe this was a process of evolution and the blood needed to begin clotting so that man could survive. Well now, how did the liver know that it should start producing these substances that would cause the blood to clot? Suppose these blood platelets should rupture in the arteries and veins and start the clotting reaction? Then what? Provision has been made for this by means of an inhibitor. For every step in the reaction, there is a reactive enzyme which becomes activated and begins to dissolve the clot; leaving the clot in an artery, of course, would cause death.

But how did all this system of counterbalances come about? A human being could hardly develop this complicated system because if it were not present, the individual would bleed to death if he were just slightly wounded and if he were not wounded, the series of reactions would not be necessary. So what I'm saying, my friends, is this, no individual could anticipate the emergency that would end his life and be able to devise such an elaborate means of counteracting it. So the first man who needed to have blood clotting would have simply died because he would have bled to death and there would be no future generations at all and no opportunity for any kind of evolution even.

Well, these are wonderful facts, dear friends, and they show us really that evolution is not a fact at all. There is nothing proven about it. There is nothing scientific about it at all. It has just been assumed and presumed by men who will not accept the plain teaching of God's Word. The Bible is clear in telling us that man was created in the image of God. He was made upright in the very beginning. There was no process of long evolution over a period of millions or billions of years. No integrating form has been found between different families. Every animal falls into a category of a specific family unit and there is no half-way combinations of the animals. They all belong to one or the other. So evolution, my friends, is not as scientific as it appears to be. Some of its most fundamental assumptions are diametrically opposed to the very principles of physical sciences and even of chance. Then why has evolution received such universal acceptance? Well, it is because man has rejected the idea of a creator and has insisted upon finding some other explanation which does not involve a supreme being and an admission of a superior intelligence. But may God help us to take the Bible in its simplicity.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Race to the Stars

Astronomy has actually demonstrated that there are millions of other worlds. There is no guesswork about it. On Mount Wilson there is a hundred-inch telescope. With this hundred-inch telescope, astronomers have actually photographed a hundred million suns with their systems of worlds revolving around them as our sun has its family of planets. On Mount Palomar where there is a two hundred inch telescope, astronomers have discovered that there are over two thousand million suns. Think of it! Each one has a system of worlds revolving around it, just as our sun has Mercury, Venus, Jupiter, Mars, Neptune, Saturn, etc. revolving around it.

The next question is "Are some of these worlds inhabited?" Science does not have any positive answer. The Mariner 9 orbiter shows that there are no canals on Mars. Also, astronomers have taken pictures that indicate that Mars has seasons just like the earth. But look, here is where the Bible is ahead of science. The Bible shows us definitely that some of these other worlds are inhabited.

First, the Bible teaches that there are many worlds aside from this planet called the earth. Let's read Hebrews 1:2. This text speaks about the infinite creative power that our heavenly Father has vested in His own dear Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. "Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds." Did you get that? Does it say "... by whom He made the world?" No! There is an "s" on the end of worlds. It is in the plural. "... by whom He made the worlds." See how plain it is? The Bible teaches that there are many other worlds aside from this planet on which we live.

Now notice what it says in Revelation 12:12: "Therefore, rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea." The people who live on this earth are referred to as the inhabitants of the earth and sea. But the people here are not the only people in God's universe. This text also says, "ye that dwell in the heavens," proving conclusively that some of these other worlds are inhabited. You could ask yourself this: "Why would God, being all wise, fill a universe with millions of worlds and have people on only one of them?" It just doesn't make sense. God hasn't followed that kind of plan.

The Bible students who have studied this closely are convinced that this world is the only world in the universe that has fallen into sin. All these other worlds are perfect. They are sinless. Jesus talked about the shepherd leaving the ninety and nine safe in the fold and going out to seek the lost sheep until He found it. The greater implication of this story is that Jesus, the Good Shepherd, who was by the Father's side and equal to the Father, left the Father and all those other sinless worlds safe and came down from heaven to this sinful world to win this lost sheep back to the Father's fold.

Now I come to the question, "Will man ever be able to visit any of these distant worlds?" Upon the authority of this Book, I'm telling you that no man with his present sinful body is ever going to visit any of the sinless worlds. Why not? God Almighty still rules this universe. A time will come when God says "no further, no further." God is never going to allow sinful man to land on a sinless world somewhere else and contaminate it. Sin is quarantined to this old world. Thank God, some day He'll put an end to sin here.

A second point: The Bible shows that man with his present sinful body cannot go to these sinless worlds until he gets a sinless body. I'm going to show you from the Bible that when Jesus Christ comes the second time those that are true to Him are going to get sinless bodies, immortal bodies. With a sinless body, they could go to a sinless world.

During recent years, as you know, Russia and the United States have placed in orbit a good many man-made moons. These man-made moons travel very fast. They orbit the earth in a little over an hour; they travel at a rate of 17,000 miles per hour, or 300 miles a minute. Now, that is fast, isn't it? Actually, that is a snail's pace, and I mean that literally—300 miles a minute is a snail's pace—compared with the speed with which God's redeemed are going to travel through space after the second coming of Christ.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

You say, "But how do you know it?" Take down two or three texts and you'll know it too. Put down Luke 20:36. Jesus Christ says that at the resurrection day His people will be made equal to the angels. Don't get that wrong! There isn't any text in the Bible which says that human beings ever will be angels. No, Jesus says that the redeemed will be made equal to the angels—equal in that they will have spiritual bodies like the angels have and be able to travel through the air at will like the angels do. Do you know how fast an angel can travel through the air if he wants to? The wonderful thing about angels is that they can appear on earth. They appeared to Abraham. They appeared to Lot. They looked like men. They walked like men. And they ate like men. Yet they were angels.

How fast can an angel travel when he needs to? Put down Ezekiel 1:14. "And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightening." These living creatures are an order of angels; in fact, they are called cherubim. It says that these cherubim ran like lightening. Their speed is compared to lightening because that is the fastest moving thing which men know about. Science has discovered that lightening travels at the incredible speed of 186,000 miles per second, or 11,000,000 miles a minute. Can you comprehend such a speed? No, nobody can comprehend it. At that speed you could go around the world seven times while you winked your eye once.

I'm telling you that angels can, if they need to, travel faster than 11,000,000 miles a minute. They can travel faster than seven times around the earth while you wink your eye. You say that is fantastic; yes, but it is proven by the Bible. It is found in Daniel 9:3-23. In these verses you have the record of a three or four minute prayer, prayed by the prophet Daniel. When Daniel began to pray, God turned to Gabriel, the angel standing next to His throne in the highest heaven. He said, "Gabriel, go down to earth to the side of Daniel and help to answer his prayer." What happened? The three-minute prayer of Daniel is interrupted by Gabriel's appearance at his side. Gabriel said, "Daniel, when you began to pray, God told me to come down here and answer your prayer. And here I am." In about three minutes Gabriel traveled from the throne of God in the highest heaven through all the billions of miles of outer space, the millions of miles of interplanetary space down to this earth in three minutes. To do that he had to travel far faster than lightening; yes, faster than 11,000,000 miles a minute.

Ah, here is a mystery that the human mind cannot penetrate. Yes, this Book is the Book of God and it does bring mysteries that even with all our increase of knowledge we can't comprehend. It simply means this: Angels with a spiritual body have a power to travel that annihilates space. They simply will be at some place billions of miles away and they are there. If you had that power you could sit in your home today and will to be at Cape Town, South Africa, or Manila, in the Philippine Islands, and you'd be there the next minute. Wouldn't it be wonderful to have such power? Look, you're going to have that power. I'm going to show you from the Bible that Jesus Christ will give you that power, if you're true to Him. You're going to be able to travel through space as fast as an angel does now. That means that time and space will be annihilated so far as you are concerned.

The Bible tells us that forty days after our Lord was resurrected He walked out to the Mount of Olives with His disciples. As He walked along, He explained various things pertaining to the Kingdom of God. When He reached a certain place He put His hands out to bless them. They noticed as He put His hands out His feet began to leave the earth. And He went up, higher, higher, and higher until He became just a speck, and they couldn't see Him.

I want you to notice—Jesus Christ, after His resurrection, had a spiritual body that had power to go up at will through the air, through space. In other words, a spiritual body is not bound by the law of gravity. You have a mortal body; you have a natural body. This natural, mortal body is bound to the earth by the laws of gravity, but a spiritual body has another power. When Jesus Christ was resurrected, He had a real body—make no mistake about that. He had hands and feet. (Read the 24th chapter of Luke). It was a real body. And with that spiritual, glorified body He had power to go through space.

When we send a man up, he has to be in a space ship which can withstand heat up to 3,500°F., also intense cold. Look again to the mysteries of God. Christ, with that spiritual, immortal, glorified body could go up through space, unaffected by the intense heat, the intense cold, the weightlessness, or anything else.

Best of all, Christ plans to give you the same power. If you are true to Christ, when He comes He is going to give you power to go right up through the air and through space, to go up just as He did. Do you think that is in the Bible? Put down Phillipians 3:20, 21. Yes, it is in your Bible. Oh, the wonders of this blessed Book. Phillipians 3:20, 21 says: "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour," referring to the time when Christ will come again from heaven. "I will come again," He promised. He'll never fail to keep His promise. Now notice what He is going to do when He comes, "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body." There it is in so many words. When He comes He will change the bodies of those who are true to Him to be like His body—change their bodies from a natural, mortal body into an immortal, spiritual body, like His. When you get a body like Christ has, you'll be able to go up through space, just as He did.

I come now to the question, "Who was the first space traveler?" The first space traveler among men was a man named Enoch. He made a journey through outer space nearly 5,000 years ago. Your Bible will tell you that when Enoch was 365 years old he was out walking one day. He walked with God. He lived close to God. One day God redesigned his body in a minute, in a second, from a natural body to a spiritual body. Then Enoch went up through space to God's home in the highest heaven. He was the first man to make a journey through space. Talk about the Bible being out-of-date and obsolete! Men have never yet caught up with the Bible.

People think this space travel is so new and wonderful. But in the book of Genesis is the account of a space trip made 5,000 years ago, space travel which we can't even do now and never will be able to do. I'm not trying to limit what man can do in space, but I can tell you he'll never acquire the power to go up like Enoch. He'll have to be in a space ship or a vehicle of some kind.

Jesus didn't have to have any of those things. Enoch didn't have to have them either, but he couldn't travel in space until his body was redesigned from a natural body to a spiritual body, from a mortal body to an immortal body. And that is the way you and I will be able to take that trip when Jesus comes the second time.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Star Fields and Space

Talk about atomic power and fantastic force, friends, nothing equals the blazing furnace of the sun which soars above us every day. It is impossible to comprehend the vastness of this power plant which constantly radiates heat, light and power. In one second that sun puts out more energy than the whole human race has consumed throughout its entire history—so says Fred Hoyle in his book on astronomy. Of course, our planet only gets the benefit of two-billionth part of the sun's heat coming down through the atmosphere. For this we should be thankful—even while we shiver through the December snows.

It is estimated that if the sun were covered with ice 50 feet thick, this frozen shell would be melted in just 60 seconds. Where such a terrific, sustained heat comes from is a mystery to even the scientific mind. To accumulate such a mass in the first place is colossal. To kindle a fire to heat such a mass is more so. And to conceive how such a heat is maintained throughout the centuries is completely beyond the range of human understanding.

Those great flames leaping from the sun are mighty scarlet tongues of fire resulting from hydrogen explosions. They blaze and flare as far as 500,000 miles into space. Yes, what we see taking place on the sun is now known to be a mercifully distant counterpart of the man-made hydrogen bomb. Is it any wonder that Jeremiah breathes words of thanksgiving in Lamentations 3:22: "It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed....They are new every morning: Great is thy faithfulness."

You see, if this earth came any nearer to the sun, we would all burn up. If we were any farther away, we would freeze to death. The Psalmist had something interesting to say about the sun in Psalms 19:1-3: "Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun." In other words, there is a place in the heavens where God has put the sun. "Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race. His going forth is from the end of heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof." You know, scientists made fun of that statement for a long time. They said, "Look at the Bible. It is supposed to be true; it is supposed to be scientific and it says the sun travels." They said that the earth traveled but the sun was stationary. But now scientists have found out that David was right and scientists were wrong. It has been only in the last 150 years that they have found that the sun is traveling at the rate of 33 1/2 million miles a year. Now don't be excited about that for if the sun traveling at that terrific speed, headed right for the nearest star, it would take it 180,000 years to reach it.

The sun is shining on this small world 93 million miles away, and giving it a steady flow of heat equal to two trillion horsepower in the form of sunlight. Yet for every single horsepower of energy that is striking our world, two billion such units are missing this planet as they go forth in all directions, to all quarters of the universe. So the total amount of energy given off is two billion times two trillion, or four sextillion, horsepower.

It is now known that the amount of heat this world alone receives in the form of sunlight is as great as could be developed by burning 300,000 tons of coal every minute. And to develop the amount of heat the sun is giving off in all directions in that minute of time, two billion times 300,000, or six hundred trillion, tons of coal would have to be consumed.

It is hard for us to realize the distance of the space in the heavens. It is 240,000 miles to the moon and 93 million miles to the sun. Let us imagine that the sun were hollowed out and place our earth inside the sun, and then the moon could revolve around the earth at a distance of 240,000 miles, without touching the rim of the sun. You could put two sets of earth and moon inside the sun and they would not interfere with each other. Such is the immense magnitude of our own sun. It has a diameter 100 times that of earth.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

There are many scientific statements found in the book of Job. Job was one of the earliest Bible writers, even though the book of Job is nearly in the center of our Bible, yet it was one of the first books. I think of this statement in Job 38: 31, "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?" Think of it! Pleiades is one of the remarkable things in the heavens. We just look up and say, "There are the seven sisters," little realizing the magnitude of that constellation of the Pleiades. Way back there, God said, "Job, can you guide all those—that great mass of stars?" Yet God guides them, such a mass of them, and not one jams into the other. Job, in his faraway day, could not possibly have understood the significance of these questions. Photographs now reveal that there are 250 stars in the Pleiades, all drifting through space in a common direction, bound together and flying like a flock of birds toward a distant goal. And God asked Job if he could bind them together, "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades?" This earth and sun is bad enough, but look up there, could you operate it all without bumping them into each other? There is that mass of stars all moving together in the same direction in the heavens and at the same time all revolving around each other.

In this same verse He says, "Or loose the bands of Orion?" Would it be possible for man to say, "Now, God, you let go of Orion and I'll take care of it for the time being." One of those stars in Orion, called Betelgeuse, is one of the largest stars in the heavens. Now remember, as far as our sun is concerned, you could put two of our earth and moon systems in the sun and they would move about and never touch each other, or the edges of the sun, but how large is Betelgeuse, just one star of Orion? It is 43 million times the size of our sun. No wonder God said, way back there when He was trying to question Job and show him the power of God, "Could you operate Orion one night and keep it traveling on in its course?" As if that were not bad enough, Betelgeuse is hurling itself through space at the rate of 376 miles a second. "Could you keep them going, Job?"

By the way, in comparison to our earth and its 6 foot man, how tall do you think man would have to grow to become proportionate to the size of Betelgeuse? He would be 37 1/2 miles tall. He would stand higher than most planes have ever flown. His forefinger would be 11,000 feet long. The iris of his eyes would be 530 feet wide. And he could easily make himself heard, for in speaking he could open a mouth 8,250 feet wide!

Now please don't tell anyone that I said there are people living on Betelgeuse who are 37 1/2 miles tall. What I am attempting to do is merely illustrate what a giant world it is in comparison to the figures and the sizes which we understand. And remember, Betelgeuse is only one of the stars looking down at us through the constellation of Orion—just one of the billions of stars in the island universe of which we are a part. The vast majesty of it all staggers the human mind. Looking out into God's limitless universe we are bewildered, we are dazed, we are overwhelmed with what we see. Even a glimpse into the shining, speeding distance spotlights the utter littleness of man.

Job is queried again in Job 38:32, "Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his seasons? or canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?" That great sun, shining in the heavens, and the suns around it—could you guide them? If you say there is no God in the heavens, then you take over just Arcturus and see if you could just guide that. Arcturus is traveling 25 times as fast as our sun. Suppose we'd say that we would like to trade off our sun and get Arcturus—you know that is the common thing to do today, when you get tired of one thing, trade it in and get a different one. Arcturus is so great that if God put it in the place of our sun, here in our solar system made up of Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, etc., Mercury would be buried 2 1/2 million miles under Arcturus. The body of Arcturus is so great that it would take all the place of our sun and then would bury the nearest planet 2 1/2 million miles under its coat.

Our system, the Sun, Mercury, Venus, etc., if you measure clear across there, it is over 7,000 million miles in diameter. That is the distance that the planets travel, 7,340 million miles. You say that is a terrible distance. I can't imagine that far. All right—if you would go to the nearest star, how far do you think you would have to travel? 25 billion miles—that far to the nearest star! Our system is so great that it is 7,000 million miles across. But to the nearest star it is 25 billion miles! The stars are suns. We are on a planet, not a sun, not a star. Our planets make up our sun's family and the distance across the family of our sun is 7,000 million miles, and the nearest star is 25 billion miles. It would take you 300,000 years to count that much, counting as fast as you could for that time. If you would take all the cotton that has ever been sewn in the world it would not reach to the nearest star. It takes light, going at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, 4 1/2 years to reach here. Let's say that a man stands here with a flashlight and it will take that light from that flashlight 4 1/2 years to reach the nearest star, yet it could go around the earth 7 times in just one second.

You go out and look at the Pole star, that beautiful North Star that has meant so much to mariners as they have guided their ships at sea by its light. How long do you think that it takes the light from that star to come here to our earth? 45 years! We look at it and say the North Star is quite bright tonight, but that light that we see tonight started from the North Star 45 years ago. The North Star could go out tonight and we would not know it for 45 years.

But how far away is the farthest corner of the universe known to man? That has been measured by astronomical photographs and the farthest point man has been able to photograph is one billion light years away. Now I want to explain that to you just a moment. Here is light; it travels at 186,000 miles every second. When it has been traveling that fast for one year, that is a light-year. Then that farthest point known to man in God's universe is one billion light years away. Oh, friends, when I see some of these things, I say, "How small is man. How insignificant is man in comparison to the other things God has made." If you started out walking to that place, and we'll say you could take one stride as far as from here to the sun—each step would be 93 million miles long—it would take 25,000 billion strides to reach the other side of God's universe, as far as man is concerned. But after you had gone there and taken 25,000 billion strides, then God would say that you have just started, that is just the bare beginning. It is like when you are out on the seashore and you say, "I have seen the Pacific ocean." You have just seen a tiny glimpse of it. Do you know that there is no end to God's universe? I know that is incomprehensible and I don't want to get you thinking about it, but when you have walked that far, it is just a start on a morning walk—it is unfathomable. That is what David says, Psalms 147:4,5, "He telleth the number of the stars; He calleth them all by their names, Great is our Lord, and of great power; His understanding is infinite." I ask you, friends, can mortal man comprehend the magnitude of it all? No, we can't begin to think of such space.

The infinity of space is much like the infinite book of truth and wisdom that we have from God—the Bible. There are continual revelations and thrills brought to view when you start studying it. It talks about the things which are current and relevant, and it is inexhaustible, just like space.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Temple of God

Dr. David Grant, the noted anatomist, was dissecting the human body as he lectured his class of embryo doctors. Pausing in the midst of his dissertation, he said, "Gentlemen, here in this human organism is a complete refutation of what is called atheism. No one can look upon the miraculous construction of this body without acknowledging that some creative power above and beyond human comprehension must have been responsible for it." Some examples will suffice.

(1) The blood in the average person amounts to approximately six quarts. It takes about one minute for a given red cell to make the complete circle. The wear and tear is such that some 12 million new red cells must be manufactured every second!

(2) The heart is the fantastic pump that keeps it moving. It never rests for longer than three-fourths of a second. It is kept beating by an electrical impulse coming from a little node on the wall of the right ventricle. These impulses are carried to the left ventricle by a bridge of nerves. If they cease to function, immediately lower down on the bridge, the nerve fibers begin to carry the impulses at a lesser rate of speed. This is just one example of the many "safety factors" built into the human organism. Dr. Bancroft asks, "Is it a happy accident?"

(3) The inner ear, the cochlea, can be likened to a miniature piano. Whereas the concert grand has 240 strings, covering some 7 1/2 octaves, within this miniature cochlea are found 24,000 strings, and a keyboard of more than 100,000 auditory cells! The range is some 12 octaves, and all this is compressed into an area that is 1/1000th the size of a grand piano! Did this just happen?

(4) The smallest blood vessels are called the capillaries. They are 50 times smaller than a human hair, and it's here that the blood corpuscles pass single file. Seven hundred of these capillaries would fill the shaft of a common pin! Just who made these minute tubes through which 25 trillion corpuscles pass?

No, my friend, we did not just happen. The creation of the human body is a fantastic work of God. No wonder David exclaimed as he considered himself, "I will give thanks to thee, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made: wonderful are thy works, and that my soul knoweth right well. Thine eyes did see mine unformed substances, and in thy book they were all written." Psalm 139:13-16 A.R.V.

And as Dr. Grant looked down at the human body before him, he concluded, "It seems to me that doctors, above all others, should be truly religious men, dealing constantly as they do with this inexplicable miracle." Do you get this exciting picture? God had formed this masterpiece of creation, this very first body. There it was, perfect, but without life. It was then (Genesis 2:7) that this personal, self-existing God "breathed into that still form the breath of life" and things began to happen. The heart started to pump, the lungs expanded with air, the blood began to flow through the veins and arteries, feeling came, the senses came awake, man opened his eyes and beheld his Creator, as the mind quickened! All the interrelated parts of this complex organism began to work, in perfect harmony, under divine law. Therefore, every law that governs the body is of divine origin and it naturally follows that every careless action, every abuse of that body, is a violation of divine law. What a tragedy it would be if there were no laws to govern us. My friends, this is basically what cancer is — when certain cells start to grow, and refuse to be controlled, this is cancer. Eventually they take the life of the individual, unless something can be done to eradicate them before they have progressed too far.

The pagan philosophy was one of "let's eat, drink and be merry, for who knows what's coming tomorrow." Their gods were mere humans with the sinful tendencies of mankind. Their massive banquets with hundreds and hundreds of courses sometimes lasted for months! (Now I know why they laid down while they ate.) In the times of the Ceasars,

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

> More Free Books!

> More Radio Messages!

delicacies were brought from all the world, and when one could eat no more, a trip away from the table prepared one to continue for a time longer. When there were no more thrills or new experiences to try, suicide was considered the honorable way out. But what of us today — are we any better? I see from the United Press that there is a place in the Midwest called "Topper's Key Club" that specializes in "exotic" dishes such as bumblebees in soy sauce, french fried grasshoppers, larks stuffed with goose liver (imported from France) and diamondback rattlesnake meat in supreme sauce (from Texas). If that does not tempt you, they have fried agave worms (from Mexico) and boiled rooster combs with lemon sauce. Further, the owner of this establishment is planning some new palate ticklers such as termite eggs, elk stew, alligator soup, sharkfin soup, and pickled corn silk with garlic, kosher style. Today in man's search for a new thrill, he will try anything.

It was on just such a world of pagan excesses in which each was living for self to the full, that Christianity burst like the full light of the sun. A new concept came, the concept of living for others, "For God so loved the world that He GAVE" (John 3:16). In the person of the Son of God came one who not only lived for others, but died for others as well! He thereby set before mankind an open door to a really new and soul-satisfying experience. He gave them a wonderful choice of sins forgiven, a clear conscience, and an eternity for which to prepare. Paul, the apostle to the pagans, fully recognized the god against which he had to war. (Phillippians 3:19). He drew the contract between those whose "god was their belly," and those who by accepting Christ were lifted onto a mighty platform of thinking in terms of eternal truths.

Never forget this vitally important truth — man was created a complete whole. What affects one part of the body has its effect upon the rest. If the body is sick, the mind is affected. The opposite is also true. Mental depression can bring physical sickness. Therefore, TRUE WORSHIP includes the WHOLE of the man. "And the very God of peace sanctify you WHOLLY; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thessalonians 5:23.

(1) The Spiritual: (2 Timothy 3:16, 17). God places before you a way of spiritual perfection, and to that end the Scriptures are given. They are given to change you, and mold you into His image for you. And yet this is intimately connected with...

(2) The Mental: (Philippians 2:5). "As a man thinketh in his heart" (Proverbs 23:7) is the criterion of what a man really is. Therefore, in the recreation of the image of God in us, "this mind (is to) be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." Most people can see the spiritual and moral aspect of Christianity this far, but it is the third part that surprises them:

(3) The Physical: (1 Corinthians 3:16, 17). God clearly tells you that your body is His temple. He further states that when you properly care for the body, you honor Him, but if you abuse it, "him shall God destroy." One cannot be a true Christian and do anything that will willfully destroy his body or shorten the life God gives us.

The very foundation of this threefold, interrelated way of life is this: Be temperate in all things. And in 1 Corinthians 9:25-27 the apostle Paul clearly states that it is possible to preach to others, and yet be lost oneself because of intemperance! Do you see how important it is?

Let us now take the example of eating. Americans, who seem to think they are the best fed nation in the world, are digging their graves with their teeth. Says Dr. Victor G. Heiser, consultant on public health, "Until recently we did not know that disease could be absolutely proven to be intimately connected with diet, but today I could prescribe a diet for you which you would think not unusual, and predict in advance any one of half a dozen diseases that you might contract as a result. Your diet, what you eat, largely influences the rate at which your organism ages, and consequently, the duration of your life." YOU'RE THE DOCTOR. Since God expects you to extend your life, and thereby your Christian witness, any wrong practice that shortens that life is a violation of the command, "Thou shalt not kill," (Exodus 20:13). Therefore, whatsoever you eat, or drink, or "whatsoever ye do, DO ALL to the glory of God," 1 Corinthians 10:31. God deals in basic principles, and then gives to us the intelligence to apply them. For example:

(1) Alcoholic beverages: "Whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Proverbs 20:1. He tells you clearly that when it is fermented, and "moveth itself" to leave it alone. Proverbs 23:29-32. It is a contributing factor in most of our automobile accidents today. It brings untold misery and suffering to the world. It plays a large part in the crimes that are committed, for it deadens the finer sensibilities of the person, and degrades them. The true Christian will leave it alone, and never forget that when this so-called "Christian nation" licenses its manufacture and sale, that we bring the woe of God upon us.

(Habakkuk 2: 15).

(2) Tobacco: Today the high cost that physical health is suffering because of tobacco is a matter of national alarm. Science has proved its damaging effects beyond all shadow of a doubt. Dr. Raymond Pearl of Johns Hopkins University says, "The heavy smoker pays with 24.6 minutes of life for each cigarette he smokes. The pack-a-day smoker pays with 11.5 hours for each pack he smokes." Listen to Dr. Clarence Lieb, M.D., who for ten years was research director of a leading tobacco company: "Every time you take a drag, you inhale some thirty substances. At least twelve of these are acids and the others include arsenic, alcohol, and ammonia. Tobacco contains as nice a collection of poisons as you will find anywhere in one small package."

One famous lung surgeon made the statement: "If you switched to a filter cigarette to avoid cancer of the lung, you've fooled yourself. The only thing filters do is sell more cigarettes."

A president of the International College of Surgeons says, "I won't treat a patient who smokes or drinks coffee, no matter what his complaint...Fully 90% of my ulcer patients are chain smokers or drink coffee in excessive amounts ... I think tobacco also is a major factor in the tremendous increase of cardiovascular disease." The harm that tobacco is doing to the citizens of the world is impossible to calculate. It has no place in the body temple of any Christian.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

The Challenge of Evolution Listen to the audio version Now!

Back on November 24, 1859, 1,250 copies of Charles Darwin's book THE ORIGIN OF SPECIES were released to the public. They were all sold on the day of issue! Gradually, the influence of this work grew and some tremendous reactions appeared in the Christian world. Some people immediately rejected their traditional belief in Creation, as they had been taught from the Bible. Others tried to harmonize evolution and Creation, and began to propound an evolutionary-Creation idea, while a third group roundly condemned evolution as of the devil, and did all in their power to prohibit the teaching of the whole evolutionary philosophy.

William Jennings Bryan, Counsel for the Prosecution, was one of the latter group. He feuded and fought with evolutionists for years. With his silver tongued oratory and his great popularity, he was three time nominated for the Presidency of the U.S. He gained a great following among fundamentalists.

It was through the efforts of Bryan and others that on January 28, 1925, the state of Tennessee passed this law: "It shall be unlawful for any teacher to teach any theory that denies the story of the divine creation of man as taught in the Bible, and teach instead that man has descended from a lower order of animals."

It was just a few weeks after that John Scopes, a 25-year-old school teacher in Dayton, dropped in at the local milk bar for a soft drink. The owner of the shop, who was also the chairman of the school board, had asked John to call. He sounded very casual as they chatted. Then, suddenly he asked Scopes if he'd mind being prosecuted in a test case to see if the new law forbidding the teaching of evolution, was constitutional. Scopes immediately agreed.

When the Judge tapped his gavill in Dayton, on July 10, 1925, it echoed across America, and ultimately around the world. As for the outcome of the case, suffice it to say that the unscientific lay preacher, Lawyer Bryan, in spite of his gifts of oratory and rhetoric, was no match for the opposition. Foolishly, he took the witness stand, and there wilted beneath the withering cross examination of Clarence Darrow. In spite of the fact that Scopes was convicted, the case for creation and the inspiration of Scriptures was held up to ridicule. For Bryan, it was a tragic anticlimax to a brilliant career, for just a few days after the trial ended, he died in humiliation.

And since that day, the Bible has never ceased to be a laughingstock in the eyes of some. But I wonder what the judgment would be if the trial was reconvened today, and if a scientist could stand in Bryan's place, one with a knowledge of the discoveries of the past four or five decades. If that could happen, the image of the Scriptures would be vastly different.

You know, it is now just over a hundred years since Darwin first published his evolutionary philosophy. More progress has been made in science in that century than in all previous recorded history. Have you wondered if research over these years has tended to substantiate or contradict the original theory of Darwin? Let's look at the answers.

On May 26, 1967, Professor Wilder Smith of Illinois University, asked a similar question. He said: "Does contemporary scientific thought . . . tend to substantiate the Darwinian postulates, or do the discoveries of the past 100 years actually weaken the case of organic evolution?" And then he answered the question in these words: "Several factors call for a severe modification of the Darwinian system, and compel a return to Creationism, as an increasingly valid scientific stance." (Christianity Today, P.4, May 26, 1967).

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

As he, and many others are ably pointing out, recent and current research is verifying the accuracy of the Genesis account of origins. It is telling us that modern man can believe the Bible.

For the interest of the casual listener, let's look at one or two scientific facts, and then, for those whose faith is based on the Bible, let's look at a few texts of Scripture. You know, this could well be an occasion when a believer who has tried to harmonize two incompatible accounts, may be far more embarrassed than a scientist who is trained to accept facts at their face value!

Well first of all, the recent findings of science, and here I must quote scientists for I make no claim to be a specialist in this field. Yet any person with a basic knowledge of science will know of the two laws of thermodynamics. These are universal laws, now established beyond the possibility of any doubt. But this is the significant fact: these two laws were unknown a hundred years ago. They were laws of which Darwin had no knowledge, for they were not found until after his death.

In 1955 the American Scientist published an article entitled: Perspective in Evolution. It said: "The second law of thermodynamics says, that left to itself (that means chance) any isolated system will go toward greater entropy, which also means towards greater randomization" End of quote. Now this is just a law of the universe. If you leave a system, or an organism, to itself to develop by chance, it won't become more organized. It won't develop. Rather, its organization will become more and more random. It will deteriorate. This fact is observable throughout the world.

Now it is true that scientists can't explain this great law any more than they can explain the law of gravity. No one knows why it is true, but its outworking is seen in every part of nature.

As Morris says: "Everything left to itself tends to grow old, and to run down and finally die." (Page 36). You see, although evolution is accepted by many people, it is still only a theory. Never in history has anybody ever observed evolution from kind to kind in action, in spite of claims to that effect. Supposed, yes; but observed, never. And now, with the discovery in recent years of the two laws of thermodynamics, we find the whole concept of evolution is flatly contradicted by known and established laws of the universe.

It makes you think, doesn't it? It makes you wonder what Darwin and his associates might have written if they had lived a hundred years later, and not in the day of scientific infancy. In the evolutionary theory, "chance" is the moulding hand, and "natural selection," is the patient artist. But this in itself raises some very important questions. How did chance and natural selection produce such an orderly and perfectly balanced world of nature?

Atmosphere and moisture are essential to life. If the earth were the size of the moon, gravity would be too small to prevent water and air from escaping into outer space. The air acts like a protective blanket. It shields the earth against high energy radiations. It burns up nearly all the millions of meteorites that daily plunge into the atmosphere.

The continents themselves are remarkable. Without the geography and topography of the earth, little or no land would appear. Could chance have produced what we enjoy? On the average land stands 2800 feet above sea level; but the ocean sinks to an average depth of 13,000 feet.

As you think about the design of the earth you come to the conclusion that someone put it all together. A Master Ecologist shaped it so that a vast variety of life forms could exist. Plants and animals of almost infinite variety inhabit the trenches and slopes of the oceans up through margins of the seas and on to the snow-clad Himalayas.

Henry de Lumly, a geologist, was digging in a cave in southern France. He unearthed simple tools, which excited him very much. He kept digging until he found an almost complete skull. The tools, to him, were evidence of an orderly, thinking mind. He knew an intelligent man had to be involved with the making of those tools.

Wherever we look in nature we see design. Every aspect points to order and planning from the six-sided snowflake to the whirling particles of the atom. From the orbiting planets in the heavens to the blood cells streaming in human arteries, in them all we see intelligence, organization, master planning. These demand a Master Designer. They draw us to the definition of creation in the Bible. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Genesis 1:1.

Well, we have been looking at evolution through the eyes of a scientist, but let's put the problem into a layman's example. The body, as you know, is composed of billions of cells. Now I ask you, would it be possible for each of them to come into existence by chance, and for a lifetime fulfill their appointed roles by natural selection? I don't think we should take this idea of chance and natural selection too glibly. To illustrate: Suppose you have a hundred pieces of a jigsaw puzzle in one heap. If these had to be assembled in a continuous sequence from 1 to a hundred, what would be the chances of picking up the first piece at the first try? Obviously, one in a hundred. And the chance of picking up the second piece in the correct order would be 1 in 99, etc. Now listen, the chances of getting each of these 100 pieces in correct sequence, would be 17, with 152 zeros after it! And if you multiply that kind of problem a million fold, you get some little idea of what impossible chances would be necessary to bring this complex world into existence. To believe that all beauty and design and the intricacy of flora and fauna in this world came into existence by chance, requires faith far beyond reason.

But let me ask you this question. Is there any alternate explanation? I believe there is. You see, it is simple logic to reason that design requires a Designer, that matter calls for Creator, that beauty requires an Artist, that love must be brought into existence by a Lover. And because all these elements are found in the world at large, it is logical to believe that a Master Designer, Artist, Creator, and Lover, must exist, who brought life, possessing all these characteristics, into existence. The things we behold, touch, smell, taste, and hear; the powers of reason and choice that are ours, all demand a consciously designed creation.

Now what does the Bible say? The Bible says "the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is." This is an inspired and reasonable explanation. God made all things in a consciously planned creation. They did not, and could not, come into existence by chance. The Bible says, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." And again, "In six day the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is." Nowhere does it hint or suggest that long periods of time were required to bring our world into existence. Again the Scripture says, "Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them, and on the seventh day God ended His work which He had made." Again the Scripture says, Hebrews 4:3, "The works were finished from the foundation of the world."

The whole Bible makes it very plain that all creation was the work of God and executed and finished at the end of the first six days of this world's history. Creation is over. Today God is not creating, He is preserving, sustaining.

The question of origins is not as insignificant as many think, for what a man believes about beginnings affects to a great degree what he believes concerning destinies and purposes. This is no academic issue, it is a basic issue between man and his God.

If evolution were right, then in the infinite future, man would evolve into a being of such superior intellectual prowess that no problems would be beyond him. We could overlook all the present iniquity as gene deficiency, as environmental or psychological imbalance. Man as some evolving creature could be excused because of his incomplete evolution. But listen, the Bible says we were made in God's image, perfect creatures; then because man rejected God, this world was turned into chaos. Sin is no environmental problem, it is man opposing God. The Bible says degeneration, not evolution, has been taking place since sin entered the world. And for this, there is only one possible solution, it is Christ, the Sinbearer, who can take sinful man, and restore him into the Divine image again.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Three Worlds Listen to the audio version Now!

You know, friends, it is not too hard to become a little callous these days as you keep abreast of world news through Press, Radio and TV. We constantly hear of brutal, barbarous crime, both at home and abroad. Recently a man in Africa was chained to a railway line so both legs would be severed by the next train. He lost his legs but survived the ordeal. However, I am sure the nightmarish experience will haunt him till the end of his days.

Thinking people are frankly disturbed at present trends. The position is desperate in almost every corner of the globe. What will be the end result, if present world trends continue? The answer to this question is seen clearly in the three worlds mentioned in the Holy Scriptures: the world that used to be, the world that is, and the world that soon shall be.

Follow closely. The Bible says, "The world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished." 2 Peter 3:6. This is the first world of which we read in the Scriptures, the world God created, but later destroyed with a flood. The world that used to be! What a privilege it would have been to see that world before it was destroyed.

Daniel Webster was once asked what historical event he would have chosen to observe. Without hesitation he answered, "Creation," and I share his choice. To have seen God call into existence that perfect world would have been a privilege "par excellence." You know, it is very interesting to hear people speculating these days about God's part in creation. In fact, people even debate and deny God's existence. But when you stop to think it through, it is utterly absurd for men to say God doesn't exist. How could they know? A man would have to be omnipresent to make such a statement. He would have to be able to see all parts of the universe simultaneously, otherwise God might be in the very place he can't see. Isn't that so? Because man is not omnipresent, it is sheer nonsense to say God doesn't exist.

And how did the world come into existence? The Bible says, "In the beginning . . . in six days the Lord made heaven and earth." Genesis 1:1 and Exodus 20:11. Those statements are thousands of years old. They are not the theories of men but the statements of the Creator Himself. Well, maybe you are saying, "I can't accept that. It is not scientific." Maybe you are saying you believe the theory of evolution because it's so scientific.

Well, I put it to you that the doctrine of the creation of this world by God is both modern and scientific. Let me illustrate. It was a simple mathematical equation that revealed the secrets and power of the tiny atom. Albert Einstein expressed it this way:  $E = MC^2$ . Now, I am not a scientist. I don't pretend to be. But I do understand that matter has a vast energy content. When scientists came to understand this fact, the atomic age began. Hiroshima and Nagasaki became the smouldering funeral pyres of man's experiment in the deep secrets of the atom.

Now let's think this thing through for a moment. Scientists have learned to set in motion a chain reaction that instantaneously converts matter into energy. For example, an atomic explosion. If man can do all that, then how much more could God, who is not bound by such laws, not subservient to them, have made this world and all that is in it? Yes, the space age, the atomic age has rolled back a little of the veil of secrecy that has shrouded the universe for centuries. It has shown us that the story of the instantaneous creation as recorded in the holy Scriptures is very scientific.

The record of Genesis is not at variance with any known scientific facts. And more important still, the Genesis account is true. God, who made all things in this world over a period of six short days, has told us this through the writings of the prophets. And when the work of creation was finished, God said it was very good, it was perfect. Nothing to Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

mar the beauty. No note of discord. No hint of pain. Adam and Eve lived in a perfect garden, in a perfect world, in a Perfect universe.

Then what went wrong? Well, our first parents enjoyed personal fellowship with God as long as they chose to obey Him. But in the course of time, they chose to disobey, and the harmony, fellowship and beauty was immediately marred. After that, it didn't take long for the deadly virus of sin to devastate their world.

The Scriptures says in Genesis 6, "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that the purposes and desires of his heart were only evil continually." Genesis 6:5. "Only evil continually"—that was the mark of "the world that used to be." So wicked, it had to be destroyed. Oceans of water from above and beneath flooded the world that was, and it perished.

Can you prove that there really was a universal flood? Yes, it can be proven by demonstration. For instance, archaeologists in the Mesopotamian Valley have unearthed a number of tablets, among them tablets of ancient Babylon on which were recorded the Gilgamesh Epic, in which an account of a flood which destroyed the world is recorded; and the account is so parallel in detail after detail that people conclude that they must have been writing about the identical flood that is written about in the Bible—a universal flood. Two hundred and ninety-two races of men at least have a tradition of a great flood which destroyed the world at one time.

How else can it be proved? Certainly through fossil evidence. It is not normal for fossils to be buried. Normally speaking, when creatures die, buzzards come along and pick their carcass, scavengers devour them and some types of animals even devour bones. Then ants come along and clean up what is left, and a few years later there is nothing left of that creature.

There are only two ways in which creatures are buried intact; that is, either in case of volcanic upheaval in which volcanic ash would suddenly bury them, or in the case of a flood in which they would suddenly be buried and covered over with sand and clay.

So, fossil evidence indicates a flood; archaeology indicates it; 2 Peter 3,4 indicate it: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, And saying, Where is the promise of his coming?..."

The people say it seems so strange that Christians would talk about the second coming of Christ because that is contrary to the natural order of things; it is impossible for us to conceive of an inbreaking of God into the natural order that He ordained. And they will say (verse 4) "...for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."

Today the evolutionists and many others speak about "gradualness;" and they speak about slow change in the natural order of things; they will say that all changes in the evolutionary past of mankind can be explained by presently acting causes.

They will say causes that are acting today have always been acting, nothing has ever changed; and they will deny a universal flood, and they will deny the evidence of it. The Scripture says "for this they willingly are ignorant"—these are the scoffers that would come in the last day and deny the second coming of Christ, and they will be willingly ignorant that by the "Word of God the heavens were of old and the earth standing out of the water and in the water and all that then was being overflowed with water perished"—and that is what they will be willingly ignorant of.

If you are willingly ignorant of something, it means there is evidence to prove it, but you tune it out, you don't want to acknowledge it, you refuse to see it.

So over the first world we must write the simple epitaph: The Introduction of Sin Then the Bible describes the second world in these words, "The heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store reserved unto fire." 2 Peter 3:7. The second world is the one in which we live. It began with just eight people: Noah, his wife, their three sons and their wives. Eight righteous, industrious, holy people. A family that loved and served God. Yet time ravished this world, also, as all too quickly men were changed by selfishness, wickedness, disobedience and their neglect of God.

And you know, that is exactly what the Bible predicted would happen two thousand years ago. Listen to the words of Jesus, "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as the days that were before the flood they were eating, and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage until the day that Noe entered into the ark and knew not until the flood came and took them all away. So shall also the coming of the Son of Man be."

The first world saw the introduction of sin, and the second world has just furthered the progress of sin. But listen, here is something infinitely more significant. The most important event in the history of the world that is now, may be summarized in three simple words, Solution to Sin. Jesus Christ came to our world. He lived a life of absolute obedience to His Father's will. He never yielded to the influence of sin. He showed men how to live. He gave to a godless world a picture of His heavenly Father.

Justice demanded that sin be punished by death. The Bible says, "The wages of sin is death," but the Master said, "I will satisfy justice by dying in man's place. In this way I can offer him eternal life." The Bible says, "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." The red stain of Calvary has left its indelible mark on earth. We must say of the second world, it is one in which God revealed the solution to the whole ugly sin question.

The first world was destroyed by flood. This second world will be utterly destroyed by fire. The Scriptures says, "But the day of the Lord shall come as a thief in the night in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, and the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Nevertheless we according to His promises look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." The first world saw the introduction of sin, the second world has seen the solution to sin, and soon there is to be a third world which will witness the eternal eradication of sin, and the restoration of a perfect world.

It is going to be a world where man will enjoy everlasting life, eternal life! It is going to be a world in which this mortal shall put on immortality and God shall wipe away every tear and there shall be no more crying and no more death! It is going to be a world that will be beautiful and wonderful beyond belief!

And, it is just as sure as the Word of God is sure, and the Word of God has never failed! My friends, my plea to you is, "Are you planning for the world to come?" You should be! It is worth so much more than anything this world has to offer. Jesus said that you must learn to think more highly of your life in the world to come than you do of your own life in this present evil world.

God wants you to be in that new and perfect world. He has made every provision for you to be there. If today you will accept the sacrifice of Christ to cancel the debt of your sins, and daily live in harmony with His will, you will be there. By repentance and obedience, you can prepare today for the world of tomorrow.

C.B. Christopher was for many years secretary of the London City Mission. He often recalls that when he was only fifteen years of age he conducted his first gospel service in Southern England. He rehearsed his talk in a field, his pulpit was a haystack; his congregation, a dozen cows; his text, "Repent ye and be converted." Of course the cows paid little attention, but when he finished he was surprised to find on the other side of the haystack a man on his knees praying to God for forgiveness. He said to Christopher, "Tell me more about Jesus." This man was a drunkard and a fighter, yet by faith he accepted the story of redemption and found peace with God. Christopher says, "It was my first soul won to the Lord."

This young preacher didn't see the man behind the haystack as he rehearsed his sermon; and even though we can't see each other, the Holy Spirit can speak to your heart right now, wherever you may be.

Our Lord has told us that whatever we ask, asking in faith and believing, we will receive. Ask Him right now for peace in your own life. Ask Him to help you over that difficult problem.

Just as in the days of Noah, it is a tough world to live in today. There are crimes committed every day all about us. Many people don't care for religious things anymore. They want to please themselves. And no matter what it takes they will do it.

Even with all these things, too many people still find that their happiness doesn't come with "things." Joy and peace is still lacking in their lives. God can supply these things. He is the author of all love and happiness. And He wants to see everyone happy and full of love for each other.

Give God a chance in your life today; tell Him right now that you want to live a better and richer life with His help.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Wonders of the Sky Listen to the audio version Now!

Our subject for today is the study of the wonders of God's created universe. We think of the words of the psalmist: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" Psalm 8:3, 4.

The subject is truly the study of astronomy, or the laws of the heavens. God calls upon us to consider the heavens, when He says in Isaiah 40:26: "Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number: he calleth them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth."

This text tells us that we ought to consider the universe, reverently, as the result of God's creative power. The psalmist also admonishes us to learn to know God better through the study of nature, when he said: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun, Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race. His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof. The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." Psalm 19:1-7.

Let us notice briefly some scientific truths in this great passage of Scripture. First of all, notice what it says about the sun. It declares that the sun moves rapidly, for it speaks of it as a "strong man to run a race." It also indicates that the path of sun motion is circular, for it speaks of the sun's circuit. Now, modern scientific research can confirm that the sun moves very rapidly in a circular path, just as this text states.

Another interesting feature about this text is its statement that the law of the Lord is perfect. This not only refers to God's moral law, but to His physical law as well. Astronomers tell us that one of the marvelous things about the heavens is their perfect precision and observance of natural law. In the movements of the heavenly bodies, not so much variation of timing takes place as a 100,000th of a second in a thousand years. The moon travels on its circular path through the heavens around this earth every 27 days, 7 hours, 43 minutes, and 11 1/2 seconds. There is never any variation from this perfect time cycle. The earth travels around the sun every 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 46 seconds. The earth rotates on its axis every 23 hours, 56 minutes, 4-91/1000 seconds. There is perfect precision to the laws of heavenly motion. "The law of the Lord is perfect."

There are many great truths expressed in the Bible that modern astronomy confirms. We think of the statement made about God in Isaiah 40:22: "It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth." Some versions say the sphere of the earth. When this prophecy was written, most of the world did not know that the earth was round. They thought the world was flat. When Columbus sailed west from Spain many people even then, in 1492, were terrified because they thought the earth was flat and that Columbus and his men would sail right over the edge of it and drop off. Today every schoolboy knows the earth is round, but hundreds of years before modern science found that out, the Bible stated it in unerring terms in Isaiah 40:22.

Let us also notice some remarkable scientific truths found in Job 26:7, 13, 14: "He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

By his spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed the crooked serpent. Lo, these are parts of his ways: but how little a portion is heard of him? But the thunder

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

of his power who can understand?"

We notice, first of all, the truth expressed that the earth hangs upon nothing. Job spoke of the earth as hurtling through space without any visible support. Many of the ancients believed the earth to be supported by a giant or by pillars, but Job expressed a great truth when he spoke of God hanging the earth upon nothing. It was only 150 years ago that Sir Isaac Newton announced the law of gravitation by which all heavenly bodies attract one another and hold each other in space by delicate gravitational balance. This is a truth that was thousands of years in advance of its time.

The last portion of the above passage speaks of this world as being only the parts or edges of God's ways and indicates that there is a great deal more to God's universe than we can understand. This, too, was far in advance of the notions of the ancients. Many ancient peoples believed the earth to be the center of the universe, but this statement says it is only a tiny edge-piece.

Let us notice how true this is. The universe is of vast size, scientists now know. Every star that we see in the sky is a mighty, blazing sun like the sun of the daytime, only so far away that they appear much dimmer than our sun. Our sun, with its nine planets revolving around it, is traveling on a circuitous path through the sky around the center of a great galaxy, of which it is a part. This galaxy is a gigantic group of stars in the shape of a stupendous wheel which is slowly turning in the heavens. There are millions of stars in our galaxy, or starry wheel, or island universe, as it is sometimes called. Our sun, with this earth, is just on the outer edge of this giant wheel. When you look up in the sky and see the Milky Way, you are looking edgewise into this great wheel; and the Milky Way itself is composed of millions of stars in the center and opposite edge of this galaxy from our earth.

Now notice this appalling truth: This giant galaxy, huge as it is, is only a tiny speck in God's universe, for there are thousands of other such galaxies, or island universes, each of which contains countless millions of stars—and we are only on the outskirts of our own galaxy. Do you see how magnificently truthful are the words of Job when he said, "Lo, these are parts of his ways: but how little a portion is heard of him: but the thunder of his power who can understand?" The words truly take on new and greater meaning.

Jeremiah 33:22 states that the host of heaven cannot be numbered any more than the sand of the sea can be measured. Men used to think they could actually number the stars, but today men know that they are utterly innumerable. Each new telescope brings new stars into view that men did not know existed before. And with all the vast view we have of the heavens, it is probable that even now we are scarcely scratching the surface of knowledge concerning the size of the universe. Sir James Jeans, noted astronomer, made the statement, "There are probably as many stars in the sky as there are grains of sand on all the seashores all around the world."

Let us make a quick trip out through the heavens and view some of the wonders of God's universe. First of all, let us go to the sun. The sun is 93,000,000 miles from the earth. If we were to travel by automobile in the direction of the sun, it would take us 177 years, traveling day and night at 60 miles an hour. So we will have to abandon such slow methods of travel and imagine that we can travel on a beam of light. Light travels at the dizzy speed of 186,320 miles per second. so in just eight minutes we could reach the surface of the sun.

We would find that the sun is a gigantic ball of fire, 800,000 miles across. Great flames leap out from the surface of the sun, sometimes reaching out as far as 300,000 miles. These are called solar prominences. There are sometimes spots on the face of the sun that look dark in comparison with the rest of the surface. It is not known exactly what these spots are, but some think that they are storms on the sun's surface. When these spots move across the face of the sun, they sometimes cause great displays of the northern lights here on earth and cause static on the radio. No one knows exactly why, but it is known that this does happen.

The sun is the giant heating plant for the solar system, with its nine planets and their satellites and also thousands of minor planets, called asteroids.

If you desire a view of other stars or giant suns in the sky we will have to abandon our light beam as transportation, because although it travels 186,320 miles per second, that is much too slow for a quick glimpse at the stars.

Perhaps if we could ride on angel wings, we could get around rapidly enough; because in the ninth chapter of Daniel, it tells of how Daniel prayed to God, and an angel came to touch him on the shoulder, saying he had begun his trip from heaven when Daniel started praying only a few minutes before. We don't know just where heaven is, but when we realize that the universe is made of multitudes of millions of stars gathered into enormous galaxies, and that heaven must be the great center of it all, heaven must be a stupendous distance away—some glorious, central planet upon which is God's throne. If an angel could traverse such vast distances in only a few minutes, that would be the only really efficient means of travel.

If we were to go to the very nearest star in the sky, we would find that it is over four light-years away. A light-year is the distance that light travels in a year at its tremendous speed of 186,320 miles per second, and the very nearest star is over four light-years away. That gives us just a bit of an idea of what breath-taking distances there are in the universe.

In Job 38:31, God challenged Job in the long ago with the words, "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?" God indicated there that he had bound up the Pleiades constellation into a group. If we were to travel through space to this group of stars, we would truly find that they are a group moving in the same direction, at the same speed, and composed of the same materials. Dr. Robert J. Trumpler, of the Lick Observatory in California said, "Over 25,000 individual measures of the Pleiades stars are now available and their study led to the important discovery that the whole cluster is moving in a southeasterly direction. The Pleiades stars may thus be compared to a swarm of birds flying together to a distant goal. This leaves no doubt that the Pleiades are not a temporary or accidental conglomeration of stars, but a system in which the stars are bound together by a close kinship." Isn't it marvelous that modern astronomy confirms what God declared so long ago in the book of Job.

In Job 38:32 God said, "Canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?" The fact that God especially mentions guiding Arcturus indicates that it must be more difficult to guide than the average star.

This is an interesting star which is easy to locate in the sky. The handle of the Big Dipper points directly at the star Arcturus. Now, is this star a hard star to guide? Notice what Charles Burkhalter of Chabot Observatory has to say: "This high velocity places Arcturus in that very small class of stars that are apparently a law unto themselves. He is an outsider, a visitor, a stranger within the gates; to speak plainly, Arcturus is a runaway. Newton gives the velocity of a star under control as not more than 25 miles a second, and Arcturus is going 257 miles a second. Therefore, the combined attraction of all the stars we know cannot stop him or even turn him in his path."

Long ago God solemnly stated through the statements He made to Job that Arcturus was a star which especially needed His guidance. Arcturus is a great star which is forty light-years away. The light which we see from this star actually starts toward this earth forty years away and has been traveling 186,320 miles per second night and day for forty years to get here. In 1933 the light from this star was used to react on a photoelectric cell and turn the switch that lit up the Chicago World's Fair. Forty years before, the World's Fair had been held in Chicago in 1893. For sentimental reasons it was announced that the light which would pull the switch for the World's Fair of 1933 was the same light which had left Arcturus on its hurtling ride through space at the time of the 1893 fair.

Traveling through the heavens, we would find giant stars such as Antares and Betelgeuse, which are several hundred times as large as the diameter of our sun. Antares is so huge that it would take approximately five hundred of our suns laid edge to edge just to reach across the face of that mighty star which is 400 million miles in diameter. How marvelous are God's ways and His creation.

Returning to this earth, we decide to make a hurried visit to the solar system and its various planets or worlds. These worlds were created by Christ, as were the stars. We notice in Hebrews 1:1-3: "God, who at sundry times and in diverse manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds." Jesus Christ is said to have made the worlds. The planets are His handiwork.

Nearest to the sun is the smallest of the planets, Mercury, which revolves around the sun every 88 days and perpetually turns the same side towards the sun. Mercury is 38 million miles from the sun.

Farther out is the planet Venus which, next to the moon, is the brightest thing in the sky when it is visible. It is 67 million miles from the sun and seems to have a heavy atmosphere around it that astronomers have observed in their telescopes.

Our earth is next, 93 million miles from the sun.

Still farther out, 145 million miles away from the sun, is the planet Mars. It is much smaller than the earth. Astronomers have observed portions of this planet changing colors with the season, which leads them to believe from their observation, that there must be some form of vegetation life on that planet.

Still farther out, some 660 million miles from the sun, is Jupiter, the largest of the planets. All of the other planets put together would not make as big a planet.

Still farther out is Saturn, 887 million miles from the sun. Saturn, as viewed through powerful telescopes, has beautiful rings around it which may be made up of millions of tiny moonlets, very close together. Saturn is a very large planet.

Beyond Saturn in the distant outposts of the solar system is Uranus, which for many centuries was believed to be the last planet of the solar system. This planet is 1,750,000,000 miles from the sun, a planet much larger than the earth, but less than a fourth the size of Jupiter.

A number of years ago when Sir Isaac Newton announced that the heavenly bodies all have an attraction for one another which is called gravitation, men were eagerly testing Newton's laws. At one time, about one hundred years ago, scientists discovered that the planet Uranus was not traveling quite as it was predicted to travel. They began to reason that perhaps there was a planet farther out in space that was having an attraction on Uranus. Two astronomers calculated the movements of Uranus and figured out where this other planet might be. One of them wrote to a friend who lived hundreds of miles away and told him to train his telescope on a certain spot in the sky on a certain night, and he would find a new planet. Thus the planet Neptune was discovered, which is 2,800,000,000 miles from the sun. Neptune was discovered in 1846 and is about the size of Uranus. It is now known that Neptune has two moons revolving around it. The discovery of these moons was a tremendous astronomical triumph, for it was as if a man in Boston saw a tennis ball in Philadelphia, as far as telescopic magnification is concerned.

For several decades it was thought that Neptune was definitely the farthest outpost of the solar system and that no more planets would be discovered. But early in the twentieth century some doubts arose as to whether this was the case. Finally, as the result of years of search and study, the planet Pluto was discovered at Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Arizona by Clyde Tombaugh in 1930. He discovered this planet through the comparison of telescopic photographic plates. This planet is about 3,600,000,000 miles from the sun. It is about one-half the size of our earth, and it takes it 248 of our years to travel around the sun. That would mean that if it has seasons such as ours, based on its orbit, each season would be nearly 75 years long.

What of these other worlds? Is there life on other worlds in God's universe?

Was it a dream that in those bright dominions

Are other worlds that sing, with lives like mine

Lives that with beating hearts, and broken pinions

Aspire and fall, half mortal, half divine.

A grain of dust among those glittering legions

Am I, I only, touched with joy and tears?

O silver sisters, from your azure regions,

Breathe, once again, your music of the spheres.

-Alfred Noyes-

Let us notice that God's Word teaches in this respect. We read in Isaiah 45:18: "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else."

God is represented in this passage as forming the earth specifically to be inhabited. It is also strongly implied that it would have been in vain had the earth not been inhabited. God does not do vain things. When we consider the vastness of God's great universe and the fact that God's purpose in forming this world was that it might be inhabited, it is utterly inconceivable to believe that there would not be other worlds inhabited also.

There are other passages which teach it in an even stronger way. Let us notice Isaiah 40: 15. Listen to God's words: "Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold He taketh up the isles as a very little thing." All the nations of this world, as big as it seems to us, are only a drop of the bucket to God. That is surely a strong indication that there are other worlds, multitudes of them, that are inhabited.

Reading further on we notice Isaiah 40:17: "All nations before him are as nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity." God's universe is so full of interest and life that in size, this world of ours is considered nothing and less than nothing.

Still further in this same chapter, in Isaiah 40:21, 22, we read: "Have ye not known? have ye not heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning? Have ye not understood from the foundations of the earth? It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers; that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in." This text tells us plainly that the very heavens are spread out as a tent to dwell in, or as a place of life.

A thrilling description of the creation of this world is given in Job 38:4-7, by God Himself: "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding. Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it? Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof; When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" Here it says there was great rejoicing when this world was created. These morning stars referred to are the angels of God, for we see them so referred to in Revelation 1:20. But who are the sons of God—these beings who shouted for joy when this world came into being? In Luke 3:38 when the ancestry of Christ is traced back to creation, it refers to Adam as the son of God. In other words, Adam could look to no other being than God as his Father. Using this same reasoning, these various sons of God referred to in Job 38 must be the first created beings of the many other inhabited worlds in God's universe.

In the first chapter of Genesis, we read that when God created Adam, He gave to Adam the dominion over this world as the son of God for this particular world. But Romans 6:16 tells us that to whom we yield ourselves to obey, his servants we are. Therefore, when Adam and Eve sinned and obeyed Satan, this world fell into the hands of Satan and became his possession. It was forfeited. Jesus called Satan the prince of this world, in John 14:30.

In Job 1:6, 7 the story is told of how there was a great meeting of the sons of God in heaven, and Satan came also. When God asked why he was there, he said he came from the earth. God challenged his right to represent the earth, for God declared there were still some loyal people upon the earth, and Job was named as one. The whole book of Job is the story of how God demonstrated to Satan how great Job's loyalty was to Him.

Isn't it a tragedy to think that Adam, the true, original representative from this world, could not be there when the representatives of the worlds in God's universe came to present themselves before the Lord. He had sinned and had died. He had forfeited this world to Satan, God's enemy. That was the marring discord in that mighty conclave representing all the realms of God. Satan represented this world.

However, God was not content to let Satan continue to be the prince of this world. Although in size this world of ours is only a drop in the bucket, only a tiny spec of cosmic dust on the fringes of the universe, God's love is so great, so sure, that He was not content to let even this one little world remain in the hands of Satan. In Luke 15:4-7, Jesus told the parable of the lost sheep. When he brought them into the fold and counted them, it was discovered that there was one missing. Instead of settling back in ease and rejoicing over the ninety-nine that were safe, the shepherd, through his love of the sheep, went out into the stormy night to find the lost one. He searched in the midst of danger and hardship until he found the lost sheep, and then came home to rejoice greatly. Jesus said, "I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance."

God had a great, full universe that was obedient, but He longed to save this one lost sheep, this one lost world. "God is love." 1 John 4:8. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

Two thousand years ago, Jesus, Son of God, met Satan on the battlefields of this world and defeated him. In John 12:31, 32 Jesus said, "Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

There at the cross Jesus bought this world back from evil and from Satan with the price of his own precious blood. He died to pay the penalty of sin in behalf of the human race and restore to them the dominion over this world that they lost through sin.

Only one act still remains in the great drama of the ages. When Jesus comes again and all evil is fully punished and blotted out, the earth will once again take its place in a re-created state (2 Peter 3:10-13) as an obedient subject and sister world in God's great, harmonious universe. What a day it will be when Jesus bursts the blue of the heavens with all of His glory and His mighty host of angels. Caught upward into that radiant glory-cloud will be all the righteous of all the ages, ready to enter upon life eternal. In the eternal joys of heaven, great and thrilling experiences are in store for them.

"Unfettered by mortality, they wing their tireless flight to worlds afar—worlds that thrilled with sorrow at the spectacle of human woe and rang with songs of gladness at the tidings of a ransomed soul. With unutterable delight, the children of earth enter into the joy and wisdom of the unfallen beings. They share the treasures of knowledge and understanding gained through ages upon ages in contemplation of God's handiwork. With undimmed vision, they gaze upon the glory of the creation—suns and stars and systems, all in their appointed order, circling the throne of Deity." The Great Controversy, p. 677.

I want to be there, don't you?

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

The Catholic Plan - Restrict Religious freedom by using man made laws to force Sunday worship

"John Paul's goal is a geopolitical structure for the society of nations designed and maintained according to the ethical plans and doctrinal outlines of Christianity as taught by the Roman Pontiff as the earthly Vicar of Christ." The Keys of This Blood, Malachi Martin, Page 455

"Therefore, also in the particular circumstances of our own time, Christians will naturally strive to ensure that civil legislation respects their duty to keep Sunday holy." John Paul II, Dies Domini, 67. The Day of Rest, 1998

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Did you know that the commonly used phrase: "When in Rome do as the Roman's do" springs from the centuries old controversy between the true and the false Sabbath?

View History of the True Sabbath in the 4th Century

"The best way to honor Pope John Paul II, truly one of the great men, is to take his teaching seriously; is to listen to his words and put his words and teachings into action here in America. This is a challenge we must accept." President George Bush, Remarks by the President to Cardinals, Bishops and Catholic Leaders, March 21, 2001

On Friday March 26, 2004, John Paul II urged church leaders to "lead men and women from the shadows of moral confusion and ambiguous thinking." he continued his promotion of Sunday worship. "When Sunday loses its fundamental meaning and becomes subordinate to a secular concept of 'weekend' dominated by such things as entertainment and sport, people stay locked within a horizon so narrow that they can no longer see the heavens," View article.

View more quotes from the Roman Catholic Church on the Sabbath.

Back to the other Bible Points

^ Top

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

CROSSING THE THRESHOLD OF HOPE

BY
HIS HOLINESS
JOHN PAUL II

"THE POPE": A SCANDAL AND A MYSTERY

YOUR HOLINESS, MY FIRST QUESTION WILL go right to the point. Therefore, please understand if it is longer than those that follow.

In front of me is a man dressed in the white of ancient custom, with a cross over his chest. This man who is called the Pope (from "father," in Greek) is a mystery in and of himself, a sign of contradiction. He is even considered a challenge or a "scandal" to logic or good sense by many of our contemporaries.

Confronted with the Pope, one must make a choice. The leader of the Catholic Church is defined by the faith as the Vicar of Jesus Christ (and is accepted as such by believers). The Pope is considered the man on earth who represents the Son of God, who "takes the place" of the Second Person of the omnipotent God of the Trinity.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Christian's Secret Listen to the audio version Now!

Today my radio message is going to be a very simple one indeed. There will be no finespun theology, no philosophy, no big words; for, we must try to come to grips with one of the greatest enemies in the Christian life. No thoughtful person can question the fact that for the most part the Christian life as it is generally lived is not entirely a happy life. It should not be that way, of course; the Christian ought to be the happiest person in the world. A keen observer of Christians once said: "You Christians seem to have a religion that makes you miserable. You are like a man with a headache. He doesn't want to get rid of his head, but it hurts him to keep it."

The secret of a happy Christian life is what we are going to study about in our broadcast today. Who cannot remember happier and more victorious days of the past? Why is it that we can always look back and seem to find days of greater victory than in the present? Sometimes we marvel how easy it is to drift away from a position of strength. There was a time, of course, when we never dreamed of defeat.

When we first became Christians we were determined to remain victorious to the very end. But somehow those victories began to slack off, and though we were not satisfied with this experience, it happened anyway. Perhaps we eventually came to be a bit unhappy. Ah yes, we might still believe in Christ and talk of Him and serve Him, but it just doesn't seem to be the very life of the soul.

I'm convinced that thousands of people have found Jesus as a Saviour from the guilt of sin, but they have not found Him as the Saviour from the power of sin. Many, many trials have come since being converted. Perhaps your heart has sunk down into a rut of discouragement. The early victories have grown dim. Finally, you resigned yourself to an alternating experience of victory and defeat, victory and defeat. But is that all we can expect from our religion? Was this what Jesus had in mind when He laid down His life for us? Did He intend to leave us struggling, weary, conscious of defeat? Is there some hidden reserve in the promises of the Bible? What does Romans 8:37 mean? "He will make us more than conquerors."

That certainly doesn't sound like defeat. II Corinthians 2:14 says, "He will cause us always to triumph." It doesn't say sometimes. He can save to the uttermost! There is nothing partial in that description, friends. The fact is that the Bible has declared unequivocally, "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested that He might destroy the works of the devil." I John 3:8.

So settle this one thing in your life now, and settle it for all time. Jesus came to save you in this life from the power of sin. Every verse in the Bible regarding the cross describes the fullness of that victory. There is no hint of only a partial application of power. In Romans 6:1 we read this question: "Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound?" Can we suppose that a holy God who hates sin in a sinner is willing to tolerate it to some degree in Christians? Friends, I believe that when we come to the place where we fear imperfection more than perfection, there will be great hope of us overcoming all sin. The only reason we have not reached out to greater victory is that we are afraid it cannot be done.

Christians are miserable because they are still carrying burdens around with them. Burdens of sin or of care. We must learn somehow to let Jesus bear these burdens for us. It is very hard to surrender completely to Jesus. We seem to prefer to fight rather than to yield to another. We prefer to carry the load rather than to let someone else carry it for us. Self must be put aside entirely. God's gifts are bestowed free of charge. God has a work to do on your soul that you cannot do. The only thing you can do is to surrender. Don't be afraid to do that, friends.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Suppose a patient came to a doctor and asked for some special care, and yet refused to tell all the symptoms of his illness. Suppose he also refused to take any of the remedies prescribed? Perhaps he might follow directions on certain things, but refuse on other things. Would any doctor undertake a case like that? Absolutely not! A doctor wants his patient to submit and obey all instructions. So God must have the whole case. The entire will must be yielded to Him. Some Christians seem afraid of the will of God.

I knew a woman once who was afraid to pray, "Thy will be done." Friends, God loves us and wants to give us the sweetest blessing possible. His will is actually the happiest way that anyone can travel. Yet, many Christians seem to think the Father wants a chance to make them miserable and take away some blessing. They imagine that to hold on to some things in their own will would prevent his unhappiness.

The story is told of a Christian who had endured great trouble. In speaking to another Christian about his trouble, this man concluded, "But it has all been in vain, and there is literally nothing left for me to do now but to trust it to the Lord." The other Christian answered sympathetically, "Alas, has it come to that?"

Friends, don't be afraid of God's will. Suppose you are a mother or a father, and you have an only child who is greatly beloved. Suppose that child should come to you and say, "I have made up my mind to let you have your way in my life. I'll obey you entirely and trust your love to do whatever you think is best for me." As a parent, how would you feel toward that child? Would you say to yourself, "Ah, here is my chance to make Johnny miserable. Now I can compel him to do the hardest and most disagreeable tasks I know, because he has committed himself to obey me." No! You would not say that! You would cover that child with kisses and give him the very best of everything, and make it as easy as possible for him, wouldn't you.

Listen, are you more loving and tender than God? God doesn't want to take anything good away from us at all. The happiest way we can find is God's way and will for us. Some people fear to yield because they fear God might take away their money or possessions. Yet the happiest people I have ever known were those who had surrendered the most to God. So, the first step is to surrender the will. We must lay every burden at His feet and give Him the whole case.

Many Christians are like the man who was walking along the road carrying a heavy load. He was offered a ride in a wagon, and when he sat down he continued to hold his burden on his lap. The driver finally said, "Why don't you put down that bundle and relax?" The rider said, "Oh, it would be too much to ask you to carry my load, I'll carry it myself." So, after surrender comes faith. This is essential in receiving a gift. A friend may give you a great deal, but it's really not yours until you believe it has been given and claim it as your own.

Most folks can believe this about forgiveness, but they somehow can't exercise faith in claiming victory and living the better life. They somehow believe that we are saved by faith but that we must live by works and effort. So they stop receiving and start doing. But in Colossians 2:6 we read this: "As we have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so we are to walk in Him." We receive it by faith, and we walk by faith. The very same faith that received forgiveness and cleansing must now lay hold of power to walk the Christian path. Then we believed in Him as a Saviour from the guilt of sin, now we believe in Him as the Saviour from the power of sin. Then we trusted Him for forgiveness, now we trust Him for righteousness. Then He was our Redeemer, now He is our life.

Nothing becomes really ours until faith claims it experimentally. "According to your faith" is the limit of our receiving anything. It must be a current faith. No faith that looks for future deliverance from the power of sin will ever lead a soul to victory. The enemy delights in this future kind of faith, for he knows it is powerless. We should say, "Jesus saves me now."

There are two steps to take in obtaining this life of rest. First, absolute surrender of the will, and second, absolute faith. We must not fail in these two things. Let's repeat the steps now, simply. You are a child of God, you love the Master, you're sick of the sin that grieves Him and that holds you in bondage. Everything else has failed. Suddenly you realize that Jesus is able and willing, and you begin to trust Him. Faith lays hold of the new power from His life, and then the gate opens wide for you to begin to walk in that new experience. Now you realize that He not only delivers from future punishment but also from present bondage. You realize that He came not only to bear your stripes but also to live your life. We could just as easily have rid ourselves of sin as to accomplish the practical righteousness of living a holy life. Christ must do both for us.

A man was once obliged to descend a deep well by a rope. To his dismay, he came to the end of the rope before his feet touched the bottom. He had no strength left to climb back up, and to drop down into the darkness seemed a certain way to be dashed to pieces. He held on until it was impossible to hold any longer, then had to drop into the blackness. He fell a mere three inches to the solid rock bottom!

Friends, are you afraid to take the step of faith? Does it seem too sudden, like a leap in the dark? Do you not know that the step of faith always "falls on a seeming void but finds a rock beneath"? If you are ever saved, you must take that step. No other path will lead you to life eternal. Do it now, save yourself years of disappointment and grief by moving out in faith and surrender to Christ. You will feel His everlasting arms about you, and He will hold you up and save you now.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Crumbling Authority Listen to the audio version Now!

Late in the 1960s, one of the leading figures in the Civil Rights movement issued this controversial statement: "One has a moral responsibility to disobey unjust laws." But how controversial did this turn out to be? The man who made it was praised by the church leaders of the land and hailed in the American press. Shortly afterward, the highest legal advocate in the United States judiciary gave public expression to a similar statement. Friends, what do we expect to produce by this kind of senseless anarchy? Since when can we elect only to obey the laws we like? Do we take the same attitude toward God's laws? Unfortunately, many do.

Fifty years or more ago it was the common belief that one must obey God to be saved. But it is not at all unusual today for religious people to deny that obedience is an actual condition of salvation. Which of these doctrines is true?

Only a legalist would say that by our own deeds we can gain the favor of God for the forgiveness of sin. That plan would make man his own saviour. On the other hand, if we say that we are free to disregard the commandments of God, we shall be no better for having become Christians than we were before. Sinners will not find anything to recommend that way of life as better than their own. Nor has Jesus given any such example of disobedience. Then what shall we do? Our good behavior cannot save us, and we don't want to live in willful transgression.

Salvation begins where we are—in sin. From that point, it would be folly to offer our own deeds as an atonement for our past lives. We are often tempted to improve our standing with God by "doing better next time." But we cannot offset the guilt of yesterday by doing an equal amount of good today. That would be self-justification. It is human rather than divine, and it rejects the blood of Christ as the only means of grace. Paul indicts that course as a denial of the gospel. "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace." Galatians 5: 4.

Obedience from such a motive is a wrong approach to God. He cannot accept it. And those who see this are quick to quote the words of the apostle, "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin." Romans 3:20. Paul believed that a good law does not acquit a bad man. It is not intended to.

Does Paul mean by this statement that since we cannot earn forgiveness by the good we do, we are free to do as we please? While no soul is saved by obedience, neither can he be saved without it. Obedience testifies to the quality of saving faith. While we are not saved by virtue of our keeping of the commandments, we can certainly be lost forever by willfully breaking them. "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation." Hebrews 10:26, 27.

In the beginning, Lucifer charged God with being unfair and arbitrary in requiring obedience to His commands. Lucifer said, in effect, that creatures cannot be happy when they are restricted by arbitrary laws. "We are all intelligent creatures," he reasoned, "and our ways are as good as yours. You are arbitrary, and no one can keep your laws." He has made the same charge ever since, and he seems to be doing it effectively from some pulpits today. Despite what men say, the Bible says, "This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." 1 John 5:3.

The keeping of the commandments of God will be the issue in the final struggle. The last battle will rage over a people "who keep the commandments of God." Revelation 12:17. Whatever others may say, and however Satan may blind the eyes of men and women about keeping God's commandments, and however much his agents (some claiming to teach in the name of Jesus Christ) may be embittered at those who teach and keep the commandments of God, the Bible says of this people who do keep His commandments, "Here is the patience of the saints: (mark the term) here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." Revelation 14:12.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

The saints are God's people. God says of them, "They are mine, and they keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." Friends, if I read my Bible right, I find that it will indeed take the "faith of Jesus" to keep the commandments in the final stages of the conflict. It does not require much stretch of the imagination to see that. Especially after one listens to bitter haranguing against the ten commandments and those who in simple faith endeavor to keep them.

My friend, will you deny that the commandments of God must be kept when God says, "Here are my saints who keep them?" Can you deny that commandment-keeping has a vital place in God's plan? In the last chapter of the Bible God leaves, as it were, a parting message. He declares, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Revelation 22:14. If God says keeping the commandments gives you a right to the tree of life and a right to enter the gates into the city, dare you deny this and thus charge God with folly?

If God made such a declaration, then as sure as you have a right to those blessings because you keep His commandments, it follows that you will have no right to heaven and the tree of life if you do not keep them.

Mark this well. In God's plan of salvation man is saved only by grace, and salvation is free for the asking. Nothing I can do will purchase salvation. It is the gift of God which I receive by faith. The Bible clearly teaches that. The devil, however, has confused the issue, and his teachers discount the free salvation of Christ until the mention of it becomes a worthless and hollow sound. When a man is saved by the free gift of Christ's grace, he is saved from sin. He is saved from the guilt of sin, he is saved from the power of sin, he is saved from the penalty of sin. But what is sin? The Bible declares it to be "the transgression of the law." 1 John 3:4. What law? The ten commandments, of course. Romans 3:20, Romans 7:7, and James 2:10-12 make it abundantly clear that sin is the transgression of the law which contains the precepts, "Thou shalt not covet," "Thou shalt not kill," and "Thou shalt not commit adultery." The law which contains these precepts is the law of ten commandments; therefore, to transgress the precepts of this law of ten commandments is sin.

The free salvation which we have in Jesus Christ is to be saved, first, from the guilt of past sins. Second, to be saved from the power of sin, so we will live no longer in transgression or disobedience. That is, the free salvation not only releases us from the guilt of sin, but also puts a power and a will in us to enable us to obey, or keep, His commandments. Third, His free salvation by grace cancels the penalty of my sin, for He paid this penalty on the cross. Don't for a moment believe that a free salvation does not require and enable obedience to God's commandments. God's free salvation by grace is given in a transaction which changes the human heart and mind to the extent that whereas man was not subject to the law of God, neither indeed could be before his conversion, afterwards his delight is in the law of God, for Christ writes the law in the heart of man at the time of conversion.

It is a fact that an attempt to keep the law as a means of salvation or as payment on the eternal inheritance is a failure, for then the whole scheme becomes one of works and not of grace, and man could then boast. Works of obedience, however good, can never have a part in saving a man. Right here is where the adversary strikes. "Since we are saved by grace," he says, "all you need to do is to believe. Only believe, and that is the end." No, my friends, a living belief and faith are active. God says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15.

Don't try to keep His commandments in order to obtain salvation. If you love God you will want to keep them, and will delight in pleasing Him by doing so. Obedience is the fruit, the development, of conversion. Whether or not you and I have experienced God's free salvation by the grace of God will be seen in our attitude toward the commandments of God, whether we keep them or not. God's free salvation is not marked in a loud and boisterous profession. Christ foresaw the scheming of the adversary and the fact that his servants would clothe themselves in the garments of righteousness. Therefore He said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." Matthew 5:17. Plain enough language, isn't it? But the next two verses cut as a two-edged sword. Listen to them: "For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.” And in Luke 16:17, “And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail.” Inasmuch as heaven and earth have not passed away, we had better abide by the statement of Jesus, that the law of ten commandments has not passed away.

Friends, in the light of these texts of Scripture, take your own measurements in the sight of God. Your attitude and mine toward the law and the keeping of it (not as a means of salvation but as a results) will be the determining factor in God’s measure of us. He who denies the power of the gospel to enable men to keep the commandments of God after being saved, denies the power and efficacy of Jesus Christ and denies the fundamentals of the gospel of Christ.

Hasn’t Satan messed up and confused the thinking of men, though? This is his aim. He enlists all he can into his crusade against the law—men of the cloth as well as others. His servants often appear as the ministers of righteousness. The Good Book declares, “To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.” Isaiah 8:20. The final conflict is shaping up around the keeping of the commandments of God and around those who keep and teach them. Those who keep and teach God’s commandments are on God’s side in the age-old conflict, while those who knowingly break them and teach men not to keep them are emissaries from the kingdom of darkness and are on Satan’s side, no matter what their religious profession may be.

Friend, on whose side do you stand? If you have not yet decided, make your decision today. Stand on God’s side and victory over sin and its consequences will be yours.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Dead End Roads Listen to the audio version Now!

The day you were born you started down a dead-end road—a road that is long, wide, sometimes exciting, sometimes alluring, but dead-end. It comes to a terminus. When it does, you are through traveling. Forever.

You were meant to travel mentally, physically, and spiritually a road that never ends. Never. And under a plan of development that leads to greater happiness and richer fulfillment, with multiplying capacities to love and enjoy life more. This human race got off this road a long time ago. No one travels it now by nature. The Bible says that it takes a big change to get off the one and onto the other. Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3:3.

"But what does being born twice have to do with roads?" someone asks. It is another figure of speech for changing. You are born once by natural birth, and the second time marks the beginning of a spiritual union with Jesus Christ. It means that you have changed. You have turned around. You have gotten off the highway of death onto the highway of life. It is a big change. It takes place at an exit marked "Calvary."

Somebody objects, "Now you are getting personal. Religion is fine, but I don't want to take it too seriously. I think the way I am going will turn out all right in the end." It is true that it will end—every road does—but where? That is the question that every thoughtful person must ask. It is sheer folly to base hope of eternity on what we think or how we feel. The Bible says, "There is a way that SEEMETH right unto a man but the end thereof are the ways of death." Proverbs 16:25.

Whether we like it or not, there are but two ways to travel. Destiny is not decided by the attractiveness of the entrance or how one enjoys the scenery along the way. It is not determined by how one feels about it. It is what is at the end of the way that counts. "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Matthew 7:13, 14.

"Tell me, then," one asks, "how can I get off the broad way onto the highway of life?" This is the way it works:

First, there must be a conscious recognition that you are traveling the wrong road with its ultimate consequences, and a conviction of heart that you are rebelling against the One who has claim to your life and who has made it possible, through the sacrifice of His life, for you to travel the road to life. This is called repentance in the Bible. "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out . . ." Acts 3:19. Repentance includes genuine sorrow for the wrongs that have been done.

Repentance amounts, in essence, to a change of attitude about sin. The alluring but sinful attractions along the way to destruction lose their appeal. Their luster fades. No longer are they loved. Their true character has been revealed. They are discovered to be false friends and are loathed, loathed by a changed heart and mind that now love to move in harmony with the will of God.

This love for God's way, and hatred of the way of sin, is not something one drums up on his own. The Bible makes it plain that the goodness of God leads to repentance. Romans 2:4. When the human race got off on the wrong road and fell in love with sin, God made it possible to fall right back out of love with it. He said, I will give you hatred for sin. It was the only way fallen man could break with sin, for it is axiomatic that one cannot turn his back on what he loves. Neither can he turn his affections to what he hates. So God gave hatred for sin and implanted love for righteousness. Man found that he could break with sin and live according to God's will. He could control human desires, not by "sitting on the lid" of a sinful nature, but by the power of a mind that hates sin and loves the corresponding virtues.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

It was said of Jesus, "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated lawlessness." Hebrews 1:9, R.S.V. Or, as the New English Bible puts it, "Thou has loved right and hated wrong." This was the secret of His power over sin. Through the power of God man can fall out of love with sin.

Victory over sin is not a mere human accomplishment; it comes as a result of union with Jesus Christ. "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Galatians 2:20.

Power to do right comes by virtue of this union. Jesus made this plain when he said, "Dwell in me, as I in you. No branch can bear fruit by itself, but only if it remains united with the vine; no more can you bear fruit, unless you remain united with me." John 15:4, N.E.B.

Confession follows repentance. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1:9. When man confesses, God forgives, and the union is formed. Man is adopted (to change the figure of speech) into the family of God. He is off the road to death and on the road to life. Jesus takes the blame for all his sins. He died 2,000 years ago to pay the penalty for them. Repentant man then gets credit for all the good that Jesus did, for Jesus is his substitute and sin-bearer. God looks upon him just as though he had never sinned—just as though he had never traveled the road to death.

Is it possible for one to know that he has changed from death to life? Yes! "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God." 1 John 5:13. That we may have assurance is made abundantly clear in the words of Jesus, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." John 5:24.

Someone may be saying, "It's that positive assurance that bothers me. I pray but I don't feel anything. Shouldn't I feel the assurance that you are speaking about?" It is not necessary to feel anything. A sense of assurance lies deeper than the emotions; it resides in the will. It is a question of faith in the Word of God. He says, "I have given you eternal life." I believe Him on the basis of His pronouncement. It does not matter how I feel.

There was a day when I stood before a preacher with a young woman at my side. At a given point in the ceremony he said, "I now pronounce you man and wife." I didn't feel any different. I felt just like I did one minute before. But, friends, I knew I was married! How did I know? By the way I felt? No. My feelings had absolutely nothing to do with it. It was what the preacher SAID that made the difference. Just so you may know, the Bible says, that you have eternal life—that you have passed from death to life.

You may know by the love you have for others. "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 13:34, 35. You may know by the love you have for God. "Every one who believes that Jesus is the Christ is a child of God, and every one who loves the parent loves the child. By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and obey his commandments." 1 John 5:1, 2, R.S.V.

You may know by the love you have for the commandments of God. "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:21, 15. You may know by the love you have for God's Word. "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." Verse 23. The evidence of conversion is love. The evidence of love is witnessed to by a life of loving devotion to the service of God and one's fellowmen.

Let us get one thing clear at this point, however: Man is not saved by good works. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." Ephesians 2:8,9. But when a man is saved through faith in Christ, he will do works of love. "For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love." Galatians 5:6.

A faith that works! This is the winning combination.

Some are afraid to take their stand for Christ for fear they are not strong enough to hold out against temptation. "If I could be certain I would never stumble in my Christian experience, then I would take my stand." This sounds sincere, but it is fatal. No one can boast that he will never make a mistake. There is only One who ever walked the face of the earth without slipping in a single instance and that was the Lord Jesus Christ.

There is wonderful assurance in this passage from Proverbs 24:16: "For a just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again." The emphasis here is not on falling but on getting up. The righteous man does not stay down; he does not excuse himself and say, "Oh, what's the use? It is too hard to be a Christian. I will just give up and take the easy way out." In deep humility and repentance, he arises to go on to the kingdom with the Lord Jesus. This is the secret of victory.

One does not become like Jesus over night. It is a process of growth. Each day, as the Christian communes with the heavenly Father and eats the Bread of Life, he grows more and more like Jesus. His hatred for sin increases; his love for righteousness grows.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Faith that Works Listen to the audio version Now!

We have all heard a great deal about faith and works and how they operate in the Christian experience of an individual. One cannot be a successful Christian without having an abundance of faith and without also having a corresponding supply of works. Now, I must confess that generally speaking the works seem to be more hard to come by. It is not hard to convince people about the truth. The Bible is very logical and the gospel message is most reasonable. But to get people to act on their convictions and to actually obey the truth that they understand is much more difficult. I have always believed that it is better for a person never to hear the truth than to hear it and not do anything about it.

I ran across a statement by a famous psychologist the other day which makes me more sure that I am right in that belief. Here is what this psychologist said: "An emotion not expressed in action operates as a poison in the mental life with a deadly effect upon character." He goes on to say, "We feel deeply moved by a portrayal on the screen, or even by a sermon, but we do nothing about it. In that case, we are worse off than if we had never learned anything about it." He says that the disintegration of character comes about by this kind of action. You see, we get stirred up emotionally and want to do something very much. After all, any emotion usually should bring on a corresponding action. When a person is frightened usually he wants to run, if he is angry sometimes he wants to fight, if he is emotionally disturbed because an animal is in trouble or difficulty he wants to intervene and save the animal. And yet, if he doesn't do it, or is not able to do it, it works as a deadly toxin in the body and even upon the character itself. So you see, friends, obedience is actually necessary for our physical and emotional happiness.

Now obedience is based on faith. Somebody says, "Well, I don't have much faith, that is my problem." Listen, everybody has faith in something or somebody. Some folks put their faith in people, some people put it in science and gadgets, but remember this, the object of our faith determines the kind of faith we have.

Here is a wonderful text of the Bible in Galatians 5:6, "For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love." Oh yes, we must have a faith that works, but it must work by love. Some people have a faith that works by fear. Suppose a car comes up to an intersection, to a big stop sign. The car stops because the driver has faith in that sign, but that faith is based upon fear and the works which follow also. He is afraid that if he drives out into that intersection another car may smack into him or a police might be waiting around the corner and give him a ticket. So it's not from love of the police that he stops, but his faith worketh by fear and he stops.

In April, millions of people go rushing down to the post office to meet the deadline on their tax forms. Why do they do it, friends? Because they have faith in the government and in the law of the government, and so they work to obey that law; but it is a work which is based on fear. Let me tell you something. Those people will get by with just as little as possible. They will not go the second mile at all. They will not do anything extra. They simply try to fulfill the letter of the law to escape the penalty.

Now the faith that worketh by love will always raise the standard and will actually go the second mile. I heard of a mother who had three boys, and it was quite a struggle for her to teach those boys the laws of good grooming. Boys will be boys, and so she sometimes had to use some force even to get them to comb their hair, shine their shoes and keep their clothes tidy. They were always resisting these laws that she was trying to enforce on them. But then one day she noticed something very strange. Her oldest son in his early teens came in and he was all clean from top to bottom. His hair was combed, his shoes were shined and he was spic and span. She couldn't understand it. She waited another day to see if it could possibly be an illusion, but it was the same thing again the next day. Then she found out something. A new family had moved in down the street and there was a girl in that family. Now perhaps the girl had never seen Johnny, but

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Johnny had seen her and it had already made a tremendous difference in his life. He no longer had to be forced to keep clean and tidy. In fact the law of good grooming was now working in his life, and it was based on love instead of fear. He no longer feared his mother's long arm of enforcement, but he was doing it from a much deeper emotion. I am afraid that thousands of people, friends, have a faith that worketh by fear. Too many people have a fire-escape religion. They give only what is required. They will not go beyond the actual letter of the law. Jesus said this is not enough.

Matthew 5:40, 41: "And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." Listen, love gives more than is demanded every time. In every state there is a law requiring the husband to support his family. A man can be put in jail if he doesn't provide for his family. But is that why a good father does it? Is that why you Christian fathers support your families? Of course not! You are hardly conscious of that law. You do it from love.

Yet there are many Christians who simply do what they know should be done because they are afraid of being thrown in the fire at the end. Their works are based upon fear of the law rather than upon love. The ten commandments, by the way, are just a minimum requirement for the Christian. We should go far beyond that, friends. That's why Jesus said: "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery: But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a women to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." Matthew 5:27, 28. He showed that the real Christian would go far beyond the mere requirement of the letter of that law. Love always raises the standard. There is no question of just getting by, there is no quibbling over whether it is right or wrong. It is not "What can I do and still make it into heaven." The question will be, "How much can I do to show my love for Christ?"

A mother had stepped out of her home to go down to the neighbors for a few moments and left her little baby asleep. Suddenly she heard the fire siren. She rushed down to see her home in flames. She ran desperately to her burning home and a fireman was standing in the door. He said, "You can't go in, lady. You will die if you do." She stopped. She obeyed that fireman because of her fear. But then suddenly a higher law began to operate as she remembered that little baby, and she dashed past that fireman into the house to save her child. Love took over, the higher law of love. That is what we need desperately. We need to have a faith that works by love. Not just because we are afraid of the punishment at the end of the road unless we do certain things.

Have you ever seen these long-faced, miserable Christians who are just forcing themselves to do good because they don't want to be burned up? It's an unhappy thing. Too many Christians give a lying impression of their religion. They drag out in the morning as though they are carrying some great heavy load upon their backs. Christians should be the happiest people in the world because love is motivating their service.

A missionary over in India saw a little girl carrying her baby brother on her back. The baby was almost as large as the little girl herself. So the missionary looked down upon the child in sympathy and said, "My, what a burden you have to carry." The little girl looked up perplexed and said, "This is no burden, this is my brother." Ah yes, friends, the service we render to God becomes a joy when we have love. There is a personal emotion involved.

The legless soldier had the same kind of faith that works by love. While he was in the hospital some unthinking person came along and said, "Oh, I'm so sorry you lost your leg." He said, "I didn't lose it, I gave it." That's it, friends. What we do for Christ we do from love. We give it to Him. It's not something that is extracted. It's not something that is forced. We should be joyful and happy just for the privilege of being Christians. Remember this, the object of our faith determines the kind of faith we have. The object of the Christian's faith is Christ. This means then that it ought to be the very best faith and ought to be a faith that works by love.

How does your faith operate? Are you serving God because you love Him? Is that the purpose of your obedience? Obedience from any other motive, dear friend, will be unacceptable.

In the last day some people are going to make their boast of doing their duty and of performing their works. They are going to say, "Lord, didn't we do this and didn't we do that?" You will read it in Matthew 7:22, 23. Jesus will say to them, "I never knew you: depart from me." Why? Because they had no love in their works. Yes, they did things, but they only did them to escape the fire. They only did them because they were afraid not to. God is looking for people who will love Him in His own right, and who will be glad to go the second mile, to engage in any Christian service and not consider it a great sacrifice to do it just because they love Him. May God bless you as you live this kind of Christian life for Him.

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Faith vs Feeling Listen to the audio version Now!

There are some people who sincerely believe that feeling is the test of religious experience, yet some people who have an experience of ecstasy turn right around and break the commandments of God. Friends, it's not how one feels that makes him a christian, but it's what this book of God says, the Bible. God said to Eve long ago, "You are not to eat of that fruit on the Tree of the Knowledge of Good or Evil." Yet Eve did eat it and felt good about it but that didn't make it right, did it? Isaiah 8:20 warns, "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Now that is the real test of truth, not feeling. Yet people go so much on their feelings rather than on the clear Word of God.

The Lord said, "Keep away from the tree," yet Eve took it and felt good, but she came under the sentence of death just the same in spite of how she felt. A good many people are that way today. They feel that they can break the commandments of God. They feel that they are safe, that they are saved, and so go right on breaking the commandments of God. I John 2:4, "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." Now that's a strong statement, isn't it, friends? I didn't say it, it's the Word of God. I would be afraid to call a man a liar but the Bible says, "He that saith I know him and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar." Now God said they would die, but Eve took the fruit, ate it, took some of it to Adam and he ate it. Though they didn't immediately drop dead, nevertheless the seeds of death were planted in Adam and Eve on that day. They were now doomed to eternal death.

God, however, had a wonderful plan to meet just such an emergency. It had been worked out long before man fell. Jesus had said, "I will lay down my life; I will give my life as a ransom if man should fall." In my mind I can picture that day as the awful news reached heaven that man had sinned. Jesus steps before the Father saying, "Father, I will go. I will offer my life in man's stead." So down He comes, down to this world where man has fallen. He enters the Garden of Eden. He's coming with the wonderful news that they do not need to die. He will die in their place. But what does He find? He finds Adam and Eve hiding because they're afraid of Jesus. They're afraid of what He's coming to tell them and that maybe He will take their lives. Oh, how it must have crushed the heart of Jesus to come in with that wonderful pronouncement, ready to pour out His love for them, and to find them afraid and hiding from Him in the Garden. He says, "I didn't come to kill you; I've come to tell you that I will die in your place." He explains the plan and then calls over an animal. The animals were always obedient then. Adam had to take the life of the animal, the first time that an animal had ever died. He now realized what an awful thing sin was, that it resulted in the death of this innocent victim. In type, he has taken the life of Jesus who loves him so much. That's exactly the result of sin, dear friends. We ought to take the lesson of Scripture and realize that sin is an awful, hateful, terrible thing.

The sins that we commit resulted in the death of Jesus. He had to go to the Cross of Calvary to die for those very sins of our own. But Jesus was willing to die in our place. God said that if man sinned, man must die. Why didn't Adam and Eve die that very day? It was because of Jesus Christ. I John 5:11, 12. "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." Satan made his demonstration and revealed the lengths to which sin will go when he had Jesus nailed to the cross. God revealed the length to which love will go when He allowed Himself in the person of Jesus Christ to be nailed on the cross to die for a guilty race. When Jesus died, He defeated Satan and turned the tide. Romans 6:23. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord." I Corinthians 15:22. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Suffering in the world? Yes. Sin? Of course. But Jesus has made provision for it all; there is a way out for every man.

With this background, it's easier to understand why people suffer. There are four reasonable explanations. First, Satan is a troublemaker. He led this planet in rebellion

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

against God, and wars, storms, and disease have followed in the wake. Read the book of Job and you'll see, though men accused God for human suffering, Satan is actually behind it all. Number two, innocent people suffer for the violations of others who break the laws of God. Six million Jews died at the hands of Adolph Eichmann. Millions suffered when one man repudiated the law of God. It's ironic that he said just before he died, "I die believing in God." He said, "I have no time to waste on the Bible." What a tragedy! The Bible is the one book that could have changed his life. If he had believed and loved the Bible and allowed its principles to hold sway in his life, the lives of millions of people might have been spared.

Number three, God sometimes allows suffering so that men will turn to Him for salvation. Sometimes a good person suffers so that he'll learn to place his dependence completely in God. Romans 8:28. Number four, people suffer for their own violations of law. Galatians 6:7. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." A man drinks like a fish and when his liver caves in, he says, God is punishing me." Why, the fact is, friends, he's punishing himself. God operates the universe on principles of actual law. It's for our good that He does it this way. It's only when we violate those laws, that suffering results. There's a law in this world called the Law of Gravity. Have you ever run into that law, friends? Have you ever fallen out of a tree? If you have, you've come in contact with the Law of Gravity. What happens if a man jumps from a high building? Let's say, the Space Needle to make it high enough, the Space Needle that was in the great World's Fair. What happens when a person hits the bottom? He's dead. It doesn't matter how he feels about it. It's the law, it's the Law of Gravity. It's not designed to kill people, of course. If we obey it, we will never get into trouble like that. But if we disobey the Law of Gravity, trouble is the result every time. It doesn't matter if you're good or bad, if you jump from a high building you're headed for death. A good man is just as dead when he hits the bottom as an evil man. If we get out of harmony with the laws of the universe, trouble is the inevitable result.

There's another law that says, Don't hold your head under water too long. Why? Because you'll drown. When I was a boy someone said to me, "Why don't you go stick your head in a rainbarrel three times and pull it out twice." Now that sounds like a lot of fun for a hot day until you think it through. What happens if you pull it out twice? You'll drown, of course. Now that law is not meant to harm us. If we obey, there is safety and life. If we disobey, death is the result. God has fixed laws and we can obey or disobey them but we have to face the consequences on either side. Joshua 24:15 tells us that God has set before us two ways. He gives us the power to choose between them. Isaiah 1:18 says, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."

There is a place for human reason in this matter. God has given us the power of choice. He has made us different from the animals, they have instincts to guide them, but God has given us intelligence and a will so that we can choose that which is right. He gives us intelligence to know what is right. Now God might have chosen some other way to keep people from doing wrong. Take smoking for instance, God could have sent an angel to stand by the side of a man who starts to light up a cigarette. Every time the man strikes the match, the angel could blow it out. That would settle the matter. No one could light their cigarettes. But God doesn't choose to do it that way. He expects us to use our human reason, guided by the Holy Spirit. Science has revealed how harmful and health-destroying the smoking habit is to the human body. Now you can smoke if you want to. God will never strike a cigarette out of your hand but you have to take the consequences.

The same is true with liquor. God could commission an angel to stand beside a man and everytime he starts to take a drink, the angel could slap the bottle out of his hand. People would never drink. But God doesn't choose to do it that way. He gives us intelligence. He warns us, tells us the wrong involved, tells us that no drunkards will inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, shows us the consequences, but we have to choose. Take reading, for example. You don't have to read the Bible. God doesn't make you. You can go down to the drugstore and buy impure books and read them if you want to, but you have to pay the price. You have to pay the consequences of perverted taste and morals that will result. And remember, Ecclesiastes 11:9 reveals there is a reckoning day coming when you'll have to answer for the things you've done.

Friends, God wants us to serve Him because we love Him. He doesn't make us to react automatically. We're not like machines. He's made us with the power of choice so that we can intelligently understand His love for us and respond to His love. As parents we do not wish to have our children obey us automatically. We want them to obey us because they love us. You men out there didn't get your wives by kidnapping them, at least I hope you didn't. God doesn't want us to give automatic obedience. That's why He has given us intelligence. That's why He has given us wills so that we can love Him out of our hearts and serve Him because we love Him.

In summary, we must admit that we're dealing with a mystery. It's idle to speculate on the origin of sin and suffering beyond what God has revealed. There is no complete answer. More important than the how or why, is the fact of sin. Sin is in existence and God has made provision for it. How foolish it would be to neglect to accept God's provision because we can't understand fully all the reasons behind it. Let's say that a man is in a burning building on the sixth floor. The fire department comes with a net. They yell, "Jump into the life net, jump for your life because the building is on fire." The man looks down and says, "Now just a minute. I'm of a technical turn of mind and I'd like to know how the fire got started in the first place." But they say, "Man, don't worry about how the fire got started the building is burning. It's going to fall in. Jump for your life! It's your only chance. Jump, man, jump!" But, no, he stands there and argues with them. "If you could tell me how the fire got started and explain it all to me, then I might be willing to jump out into your life net."

You ask, How foolish and stupid can a man be? And yet God has to listen to this kind of thing all the time. He tells us the world is doomed, that we must make our decision before it is too late, but some argue, "If you can show me where sin got started in the first place, then I'll step out and take my stand for God." Now I'll admit that I can't explain it all. The fact remains that sin is here and God has provided a way out. He has a solution. Don't you think that God who loves us so much that He sent His own Son to die, did the very best that He could do? If God had known any other way in which we might be saved, He would have done it because He loves us so much. No one in all the universe has ever suffered as much as our heavenly Father and his Son, Jesus Christ. And so there it is, friends; it's all laid out before us. The law says, "Here it is. Obey and live. Disobey and die." We can make the decision.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

God's Free Grace Listen to the audio version Now!

One of the marvels of the scientific world is the amazing precision which exists in the realm of nature. Every one of the billions of created worlds in space moves more accurately than the finest timepiece of man. In the beginning when God spoke the heavenly bodies into existence He did not fling them into disorderly, haphazard orbits, to flounder around in the emptiness of space. God created laws to guide them in their orbital flight. These natural laws, energized by the power of God Himself, sustains and guides the myriads of planets in their perfect precision as they follow their divinely appointed paths in the universe. If we were to take God's power away from the universe, these natural laws would cease and cosmic disorder and catastrophe would result.

Then God created man. He did not do it indiscriminately, throwing him into the earth to flounder around the best he could, to discover the best ways in which to live that would bring him the most happiness and joy in life. He created laws to govern man in his relationship to his God and to his fellow man. These divine laws were inscribed in the heart of man in the very beginning before sin entered the world. It was God's divine power in man that enabled him to keep these laws. It was his nature to follow these prescribed laws for his conduct. It is well to notice that there is one major difference between the laws that govern the universe and the laws that govern man. The natural laws of the universe must function. With nature there is no choice. On the other hand man is given a choice: he can accept or reject God's laws for the guiding system in his life.

What are these laws that God established in man? They are the divine principles of conduct laid down in the Ten Commandments recorded in Exodus 20. "Thou shalt have no other gods before me...."

It has been Satan's avowed purpose to destroy the importance of the law of God in the lives of human beings. In the very beginning he endeavored to destroy in Adam and Eve confidence and faith in the law of God as a law which is for the benefit of man. (Genesis 3:1-5.) He insinuated to Eve that God had no right to prescribe the conduct of her life. He said: "Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?" This insinuating question of the devil was designed to raise another one in the mind of Eve as to God's authority over her. Then Satan contradicted the Word of God as to the wages of sin when he said: "Ye shall not surely die." Verse 4. He proceeded to try to show Eve that if she were to break the law of God her life would be more full and more complete.

Now listen friends, Satan has changed his tactics down through the ages of time in his endeavor to destroy man's opportunity for salvation. During the time of ancient Israel he again endeavored to distort the relationship of the law between man and God. "But Israel, which followed after the law of righteousness, hath not attained to the law of righteousness. Wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumblingstone." Romans 9:31,32. Here the devil's emphasis was on law, all law and no grace. He suggested to the children of Israel through this new doctrine that they might earn their salvation by their own efforts, knowing full well that human strength would not enable them to attain to God's standard of righteousness and thus they would be lost. "For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." Romans 10:3. So we discover that the ignorance of the children of Israel regarding the indwelling power of the righteousness of God in them as the only means of attaining to the standard of God's law of righteousness caused them to fall far short of that standard.

Today the pendulum has swung in the other direction. A new device of Satan has come into being. We might call it the doctrine of man's disgrace versus God's grace. It is the doctrine of all grace and no law, suggesting that the ten divine precepts of God's government have been done away and man is no longer under obligation to obey the

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Ten Commandments. What is the relationship of law to grace? That is what we want to study into today. But first let me say that I believe implicitly in the plan of salvation by faith. As the Apostle Paul testified in Ephesians 2:8.9: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast."

The truth of salvation by faith constituted the very foundation of the Protestant Reformation. It was Martin Luther who, while climbing the stairs of the church of Sancta Scala or the church of the holy stairs, in Rome on his hands and knees suddenly received a vision from heaven. The Scriptural words "The just shall live by faith" burned like letters of fire into his soul. However, it is important to note that Martin Luther's belief that salvation comes by faith alone did not destroy his belief in the obligation of man toward his God to keep His Ten Commandments, for he said: "He who pulls down the law, pulls down at the same time the whole framework of human polity and society. If the law be thrust out of the church, there will be no longer anything recognized as sin in the world since the gospel defines and punishes sin only by referring to the law."

It would be well for us to seek the Bible answer to the question of how old the Ten Commandments are. They are eternal being a transcript of the character of God, constituting the foundation of His government. "Sin is the transgression of the law." 1 John 3:4. If the law did not exist at the time of Adam and Eve, then what they did could not have been sin or disobedience to God's commands. "Where no law is, there is no transgression." Romans 4:15

There are some who believe that the law of God, the Ten Commandments, began at the time of Moses when it was given in written form on the tables of stone by God Himself. It is well to remember, however, that God's divine precepts existed before they were put into written form, just as the law of gravity existed before Sir Isaac Newton put it into written form. It was God's purpose that man should observe the Ten Commandments which were inscribed upon his heart and that His divine Spirit would be the motivating power behind the keeping of His law.

Jesus makes it plain that His coming into the world to pay the supreme sacrifice for the sins of men did not in any way cancel their obligation to His law. "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 5:17-19. Surely, as Jesus says, He did not come to destroy His law for it is a transcript of His own divine character.

However, in Colossians 2:14 we read: "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." Some become confused thinking that it is suggested here that the law of God has been nailed to the cross of Jesus. Note that it does not mention the Ten Commandments or the moral precepts of God. It mentions the law contained in the ordinances. This was the ceremonial law that governed the ritual of the sanctuary services of the Jewish nation. This law centered around the sacrificial system, the offering of animal sacrifices, designed by God to help the children of Israel to see that one day the Lamb of God would come and sacrifice His life on the cross for the sins of mankind. These ceremonies prefigured Christ's first advent into the world, and when He did come and met them these laws were nailed to His cross. The Christian is under no obligation whatever to fulfill the requirements of the law contained in ordinances. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days which are a shadow of things to come." We are not to be judged by the law that dealt with meat offerings, drink offerings, and special holydays and new moon and yearly sabbath days. The Apostle James states that we shall be "judged by the law of liberty." James 2:12. In verse 11 he quotes two of the Ten Commandments, indicating which law we shall be judged by.

Thus we see in the Bible two sets of laws. Actually there are more. There is the ceremonial law given to the Jewish people which was temporary in nature. But the ceremonial and civil laws are to be distinguished from the moral law of God, the ten divine precepts as outlined in the Ten Commandments.

Now we might ask the question, What is the function of the law of God? We read the answer in James 1:22-25: "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves. For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word, this man shall be blessed in his deed." The law of God is like a mirror into which we look to see a reflected image of ourselves as we appear before God. It is important to recognize that the law, like the mirror, points out our defects but cannot wash away those defects. The function of the law then is to show us what sin is, but we must turn to the soap and water of the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ to cleanse the stain of sin from our hearts.

The Apostle Paul points out this function of the Ten Commandments when he says: "I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." Romans 7:7.

The question arises, Does grace do away with our obligation to keep the law? "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? . . . For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace. What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid. Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Romans 6:1,2,14-16. One who is under grace, who has accepted the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, receives the strength from heaven that keeps him from sin that "the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled" in him (Romans 8:4).

When one is saved by grace Christ enters into the heart and His law is enshrined within the human soul. Thus the character of Christ becomes the character of man. He is not keeping the law of God as a means to salvation, but rather as the result of salvation that has been effected by the grace of Jesus in his life. Obedience to the law is demonstrated because Jesus is in the heart. As Paul testified, "I delight in the law of God after the inward man." Romans 7:22. As he says in verse 6 we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter." It is therefore not human effort, but the indwelling of divine strength that enables man to attain to the standard of righteousness as revealed in the Ten Commandments.

The doctrine that once we are saved by grace we are no longer under obligation to the law of God proves to be a doctrine of disgrace, that is, man's disgrace, which controverts the doctrine of God's grace. "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." Romans 3:31. "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." I John 2:4.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Grace or Disgrace - Part 3 Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we continue discussing one of the most important subjects in all the world—law and grace. I believe the most important question in the world is found in Matthew 10:16. A rich young man came to Jesus. Looking at Him, he asked, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" I don't know anything more important than that, do you? What can I do to be saved? How can I be sure of having everlasting life? I don't believe there is a more important question for anyone. A banker can ask no other more important question, for he must someday stand before God in the great judgment. He should be crying out, "What must I do to be saved?" To the student in college there is no other question so important to ask. Nothing on the examination paper at the end of the term even begins to mean as much as that one supreme question, What can I do to be saved?

It makes no difference what an individual may be doing in this life, the one supreme question remains, What can I do that I may have eternal life? Remember, student: every one must one day sit for the final examination, and God has already entrusted us with the questions. He has already given us the information necessary that we may one day sit for that great final exam. Isn't that the one important thing in life? How to be sure of eternal life. The young man in Matthew 10:16 asked a very fair question, and Jesus gave him a wonderful answer. It is so clear and simple. Verse 17, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." That's the first point.

Then almost flippantly the young man countered, "Oh, I've done that ever since I was a child. I was brought up that way. Mother was a church member."

"But that's not enough."

"What more, Lord, what more? I've followed the letter of the law!" You see, he didn't recognize his obligation to his neighbor.

The law of God is divided into two parts, half has to do with our connection with God—love the Lord with all thine heart. The other half has to do with our relationship with our fellowmen—love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man did not regard his neighbor as he should. He was avaricious. He was trying to get all he could out of life and didn't recognize his obligation to his fellow man. So Jesus touched him in a very sensitive spot. "Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor." Verse 21. The rich young ruler began to tighten up and his face flushed. But the question of his property disposition was not really the main thing Jesus was after. Some people stop right there, and I've heard a good many preachers making quite a point of selling everything and giving it to the poor. I think it is good to give to the poor, and to give to the church, but I don't believe that is the primary lesson in this story. I believe what follows that is the primary point. "...and come and follow me." Now that is most important.

Whatever it is that stands between you and following Jesus—that's the thing He tells you to get rid of. If it's riches, get rid of them. If it's your social standing, forget about it for your soul's sake. If it's all the clubs you belong to, all the activities, that stand between you and a closer walk with your Saviour, then away with those things! Whatever it is—if your eye offend you, pluck it out; if your hand offend you, cut it off, Do anything necessary in order to be right with God. Let nothing stand between you and following your Saviour.

There are a good many individuals who allow loved ones, friends, or pleasures of the world to stand between them and following Christ. This matter of salvation can be boiled down very simply. If thou wilt enter into life 1) keep the commandments and 2) come and follow me. It's a matter of the two principles standing side by side. They are parallel and have been parallel right down through the ages. Salvation is conditional upon these two points—keeping the commandments of God and following Jesus.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

It is unfortunate that many individuals, even Christians, have the mistaken opinion that salvation through Christ on Calvary applies only to those this side of the Cross. They seem to forget there are two arms to the Cross, one reaching toward the Old Testament and one reaching toward the New. The arms of the Cross extend to the whole wide world. Christ is the Saviour of the whole world, not just the Saviour of the Christians; He is the Saviour of the Jews; of the Gentiles; He is the one Lord of all, for the Bible plainly says, "There is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12.

So then, Jesus is the one and only Saviour of this entire world. Don't forget it. People in Old Testament times had no other Saviour. He alone is the way to eternal life. You can see the larger import of Christ's sacrifice on Calvary in Revelation 13:8 where we're told that Jesus is the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." That, I believe, is a vitally important point. Christ was actually offered. His blood was given as a sacrifice. His life was offered as a guarantee way back at the beginning of the history of this world.

When Adam and Eve sinned, they were doomed to die. In Romans 5:12 we read, "Wherefore as by one man (that is, Adam) sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Let's continue with verse 18, "Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." And in Romans 6:23 we find that "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

What did we inherit through Adam—life or death? Death, of course. It came upon all men through the sin of one. It says, "Death came upon all for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." And, "The wages of sin is death." But thank God that while sin came on all men through Adam, eternal life and justification also came through one, that is, through Jesus Christ on Calvary.

We were all doomed to die. Adam and Eve marred the pattern. God had given them the beautiful world as their home—the Garden of Eden. God intended that they should keep it pure, clean, and undefiled. He warned them of the sophistries of Satan and told them to beware of deceptions, and He cautioned them about the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil.

Oh, but Satan slipped in with his insidious suggestion that God wasn't really particular about little things. Over and over that dangerous attitude has been passed on. We still hear it suggested that such a God of love won't destroy men and women because they have broken just a little commandment. Adam and Eve were deceived on this point by the adversary in the Garden of Eden, and they took of the forbidden fruit, ate it, and the death sentence passed on them. "For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Genesis 2:17. Satan expected that Adam and Eve would be killed that very day. He considered that his plans had really succeeded. Now Adam and Eve must die, and he would be the ruler of this world. It would be his home forever. He had gained it from Adam by deception and now he would be the prince of this world. So Satan thought. Adam was doomed to die. Before nightfall that evening, before the setting of the sun, we can picture the tragic scene in heaven as Jesus, the Son of God, steps before the Father. He pleads, "My Father, let Me bear the curse. Let Me die in Adam's stead." Jesus loved Adam dearly, for He had created him. They were like twin brothers in a sense, for Adam had been made in the likeness of Jesus Christ. He loved him with an everlasting love.

Yes, friends, although it is hard to believe, it is true that Jesus loved Adam more than He loved Himself. I don't know how that could be. He would rather die Himself—even an eternal death—if Adam could only have eternal life. That is real love, isn't it? Love that is willing to die in another's stead, to suffer the curse of eternal death if need be. Christ risked just that in giving His life. He stood before the Father and said, "Father, put the curse of sin upon me. I will bear the sentence of death for Adam. I will die in his stead." Yes, the Lamb was slain from the foundation of the world.

Let's read another text now in 2 Timothy 1:9. "(God) who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." There it is again. Jesus offered His life. The Father accepted His sacrifice. Think you that it was not a great struggle? I tell you, friends, that must have been a terrific struggle when the Father weighed it in the balance; to give up His own Son, to let Him come down to this rebel world, to suffer, to die at last in that ignominious manner. "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

Yes, four thousand years later God was to make good exactly what He promised Adam in the cool of that day in the Garden of Eden. That fateful day Jesus bade His Father good-bye. He came down to this world enshrouded in a dark cloud of sin. He came walking in the Garden as He did so often with Adam. "Adam, Adam, where art thou?" Adam was hiding in the shadows, filled with terror. He thought the hour of death had come, because the death sentence had been pronounced. "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." He thought, "Now I'll have to die." He thought Jesus had come to execute him.

Oh, friends, we have a wonderful Saviour, don't we? He came to save Adam. When Jesus saw Adam standing there in his impurity, He called to an animal. The animal came in obedience to His voice. See Adam as he watches the awful sight as the sacrifice is made and the blood is shed. From the skin of this animal which had done no wrong, clothes are fashioned to cover his own lack. My friends, only then did Adam begin to see how terrible, how fearful, how deadly are the results of sin. "The wages of sin is death." Adam was seeing death for the first time in order that his own nakedness might be covered. In order that Adam might live, someone else must live his life that very day. Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, who is the Lamb slain from the very foundation of this world.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Grace or Disgrace - Part 4 Listen to the audio version Now!

We ended our last broadcast by describing that wonderful scene right outside the Garden of Eden. Of course, it was terrible in some respects. Adam had been driven out of his beautiful garden home, but God came down to tell him a way of escape had been made from the sentence of death now upon him. "The wages of sin is death." Romans 6:23. But God had provided through Christ a means by which he could have his life and beautiful home back again. When God slayed a lamb, Adam saw death for the first time. And in the death of that lamb, he realized the way of escape was symbolized. That lamb represented his Saviour who would come. And the coat of skin taken by God and given to Adam as a covering for his own nakedness, showed that he could be spared and saved by sacrificing the life of that lamb, which represented a coming Saviour. Yes, it is just outside that beautiful Eden home that we find the altar of sacrifice set up. The lamb and the altar stand in the shadow of the cross of Jesus. Every one of those sacrifices in Old Testament times, every one of those meat and drink offerings, the yearly sabbath days, each ritual pointed forward unerringly to Jesus Christ. Even the incense offerings pointed to Christ our Passover, sacrificed for us. Every part of the Old Testament services was a symbol of the coming Redeemer. Though living in the shadow of the cross, those people were saved by the cross—don't forget that, friends. Every time they brought a lamb or a turtledove (even flour if they couldn't afford anything else—God provided a way for the very poorest of them to bring an offering) they accepted the merits of a Saviour, a Redeemer who would come and die in their stead.

Four thousand years after that first animal sacrifice in Eden, Jesus gave His life upon Calvary. When He cried out, "It is finished!," He meant He had paid the price. He had cancelled the debt of all those of Old Testament times. He consummated the sacrifice and paid the price of redemption for all time, for the cross points both directions. Those in the past looked forward, and those in the future would live by faith, believing, and look back to the cross. They looked forward and we look backward, that's the only difference. All are saved by the grace of Jesus, for "There is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12.

I think of the way the apostle Paul puts it in Romans 4. He says, You think that Abraham had something in which to glory, being saved by works. No, no, he says, he was saved by faith. David also. Can he glory that he was saved by his works? No, he also was saved by faith in the righteousness of Christ. Every soul ever saved has been saved through the grace of Jesus. In Revelation 5 the redeemed are pictured standing before the throne of God. Those from Old Testament times and those from New Testament times, all singing glory to Jesus Christ the Lamb, "for by thy blood thou hast redeemed us from every language, from every kindred, from every tongue, and every people." There's another thought, too, in Revelation 15. The redeemed are pictured in that great coronation ceremony of Jesus at the throne of God. They are the redeemed from all ages—Old and New Testament—gathered before the throne singing, first of all, the Song of Moses, and the second half, the Song of the Lamb.

Justice and mercy meet in the cross of Christ. The law and the gospel, obedience and grace. They meet in one in the person of Jesus and His sacrifice. How often I've heard Christians boast that they don't care about the law of God. You see, they are hiding behind Romans 6:14. "For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace." A great many Christians say that since they are saved by grace, they don't have to keep God's commandments at all. Though I mentioned it yesterday and the day before, I want to say it again, friends, so we'll never forget it. Does grace annul the law of God? Does our faith in the saving blood of Jesus cancel out the claims of God's Ten Commandment Law. What does Paul say? Romans 6:1, "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?" The next verse answers, "God forbid." Verse 14 explains, "For sin shall not have dominion over you. . . ." Sin is not our ruler. We are not to be under sin. We are not under the condemnation of the law when we obey God because we have been saved by grace.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Friends, when an individual is saved by grace, he is under greater obligation than ever before to keep the Ten Commandment law of God. As it says in Romans 3:31, "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." We are not licensed to break it just because we've been saved through faith in His grace. The law is firmer than ever in our lives when that has happened. Right here I'd like to stop a moment to find the New Testament definition of sin. We read it the other day in I John 3:4. "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." Now that's very clear. Every sinner has broken the law. Every sinner is under the law. When we sin we are transgressing God's Ten Commandment Law. So there has to be a law, and where there is a law there is bound to be transgression. So Paul asks, Should we sin, or break the law of God, just because we have been saved by grace? Then he answers, Absolutely not. We have no license to do that.

The governor of a state has great power, even the power of life or death. Think of a prisoner sentenced to die. His friends intervene, presenting evidence to the governor. Special factors seem to be involved—contributing factors as to why this man was involved in this particular crime. As the governor reinvestigates the evidence, he feels the man deserves clemency. So he uses his official prerogative as head of the state. Taking his pen, he dips it in the ink and writes, "Pardoned" across those papers that would condemn the man to the electric chair. Then he signs his name, "Governor Smith," or whatever it might be. Now, friends, that condemned man has been saved by grace, not by works or his own goodness. He was doomed to die; and being good, ever so good, in that death cell would never in the world save him. Only in the words and by the grace of that governor was he granted full pardon to be free, no longer under condemnation of the law.

We have all sinned and come short. We are all under the sentence of death. And there is only one way of salvation—that is through Christ. Now, let's get back to the man who was pardoned. He can hardly believe his eyes as he sees the kindness, the stroke of generosity of that governor. Rescued, pardoned, he goes out a free man. You meet him a little later and talk with him. "Well, I understand the governor pardoned you." "He certainly did," comes the answer. "How do you feel about life now that you are pardoned?" "Wonderful, this new freedom of mine! I can break the laws of America all I like. The governor set me free from the law and sentence of death. I am saved by grace." Is that what the governor set him free to do, friends? Did the governor pardon him so that he could go out and become a greater lawbreaker? Paul declares, "God forbid." Shall we that are saved by grace continue lawbreaking? No, indeed, on the contrary, Paul says, "We establish the law." The individual saved by grace, pardoned by the governor, is under greater obligation to keep the law than anyone else because of the special work of grace done for him. Just so, you and I come under greater obligation to keep the law of God because we are saved by grace.

Many individuals seem to picture heaven as divided into two camps—the Old Testament crowd in one place, and the New Testament group in another. I cannot think of heaven as being two different camps, can you, friends? You'd see some over there and query, "I wonder how you folk got here. Would you mind telling me how you got to heaven?" They answer, "We got here by our works. We did this and we did that; we obeyed this commandment and that commandment; we kept all the Ten Commandments on stone and kept them perfectly, so we were saved by our works. Tell us, how did you get here?" "Oh, ours was an entirely different setup. We were saved by love, saved by grace and faith." "You mean you didn't have to keep any of the commandments?" "Oh, no, I should say not. We didn't stoop to keep those old commandments, we were just saved by grace, that's all."

Of course, that's an imaginary conversation, friends, which will never, never take place in heaven. Believe me, everyone there will have been saved by the same formula. They will have entered into life by the same wonderful process. First, Jesus said, Keep the commandments, and then follow Me in every way. Both are necessary and imperative to follow through faithfully until the very end. As we read in James 2:26, "Faith without works is dead." So for an individual to just claim love and love alone without any obedience, is to talk about something that's absolutely useless. Faith without works is dead. That's pretty strong language, isn't it?

In Romans 8:7 we read this. "The carnal mind is at enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." The carnal mind, the sinful mind, finds fault with the commandments of God! It quarrels with the law of God, is at enmity and not subject to obedience at all. So, when you find people who claim to be Christians, yet do not like God's law or His commandments, perhaps it's because they still have a carnal mind, a carnal nature. At least that's what the Bible says. And here's another important point. The law of ordinances—the commandments contained in ordinances—who wrote those? Moses did. Where did he write them? In a book, the Bible says. Never fail to keep that difference in mind, the difference between the Mosaic Law and the Law of the Ten Commandments.

Also, there's another use of the word, "law." It not only applies to the Ten Commandments on tables of stone, but can also apply to the first five books of the Bible, the Pentateuch. Paul tells us clearly that the commandments of ceremonies, ordinances, and rituals were nailed to the cross and came to an end when Jesus died. But not so the Ten Commandment Law of God. You remember John the Baptist preaching by the River Jordan. He kept talking about a coming King and appealing to the people to turn from their sins. That's not a very popular thing to do, incidentally. By and by there came a day when he stopped short in his preaching, pointed, and said, There He is. He is the very one I have been talking about. "Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." The eyes of the world were turned on that Man. The true Lamb of God had come, and all the Old Testament prophecies about lambs and deliverance and salvation had come to pass in the life of this one Person, the Son of God, even Jesus Christ.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Grace or Disgrace - Part 6 Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we come to the sixth and last chapter in our series of studies on law and grace. So far in our broadcast we've found some very wonderful answers to questions. For example, by what standard will men be judged? Will God have a different standard for people in the Old Testament than he does for people in the New? Does He have one standard by which He judges Jews, and another by which He judges Gentiles? There's a lot of confusion, friends, on these very questions and we've found out lots of information so far.

Both the Old and New Testaments agree on what the standard of judgment really is. Ecclesiastes 12:13 and 14 says, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." Now from this, it is very clear that the Old Testament presents the Commandments of God as the standard of judgment. As for the Commandments of God, the prophets knew nothing about anything except the Ten Commandments. Now looking at the New Testament, I'm quoting from James 2:12. "So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." Now what law do you think James is referring to here? Well, friends, the writer doesn't leave us in question for he quotes some of the precepts and these are taken right out of the Ten Commandments directly. Verses 10 and 11: "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all. For he that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law." So there it is. Both Old and New Testaments are agreed that the one great standard of the judgment is the Ten Commandment Law of God.

So whether we be Jew or Gentile, whether we live before Christ or after Christ, we'll be measured in the judgment by the same standard, the Law of God called the Ten Commandments. Thus, it's clear that the one who willfully violates those Ten Commandments cannot expect to enter the Kingdom of Heaven. Now I press this point because the New Testament declares clearly "For whosoever shall keep the whole law and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." James 2:10. This isn't a man's idea at all. Those are the words of the living God and you'll have to face Him in the judgment. So beware how you speak of God's Law, the Ten Commandments, for you'll meet them in the Supreme Court of the Universe when you're called to give an account.

From Revelation 12:17, "And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." Here God is serving notice that anybody who fights God's law is going to be an agent of the great Adversary and is doing his bidding no matter what his profession might be. There are even a lot of preachers today who are fighting and warring against the Ten Commandments. They say they are not necessary today, that they are out-of-date. Paul declares of those laws of the Ten Commandments in Romans 7:12. "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." And then he asks this pointed question, "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." Romans 3:31.

Jesus said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Matthew 5:17 and 18. And then in Luke 16:17, he says, "It is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail." So Jesus confirmed the law. He honored it. And His cruel death on the Cross shows that it could never be abrogated. Man's death and those demands were met by the death of Jesus. He was our substitute. The demands of the Law for our transgressions were met in the sacrifice He made at Calvary.

Isaiah in the Old Testament declares of Jesus, "He shall magnify the law and make it honorable." Isaiah 42:21. And that's the reason Jesus said that not one jot or tittle could pass from it because He came into this world for the express purpose of enlarging on that law and making it more spiritual and binding upon us. Now if you wish to be recorded as one of the least in His sight and in the sight of the angels, then you break even one of those commandments or teach men to do so and you'll be placed on the list. But if you want to be great in His sight, just keep the Commandments and teach men to do them. You have the choice to make. The lowest depths to which a person can descend is to willfully violate and mutilate God's Law and to teach other men to do it. Furthermore, such a one is an enemy of God and of good society, an agent of the great adversary. To teach men to violate even one of God's holy laws is to drive a sword through the heart of Jesus Christ because He said in Psalms 40:8, "I delight to do thy will, oh my God, yea my law is within my heart."

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

The keeping of the law is not a means of salvation. Let's get this very straight and clear, friends. It is the fruit of that salvation which we receive as a gift of His grace through faith. But why slay your Saviour by driving a dagger into His heart because you don't want to keep His commandments? When men fight God's law and His commandment-keeping people, they merely expose themselves and show that they are still carnal, that their hearts have never really been touched by the Spirit of God. Because the New Testament declares, "The carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Romans 7:7. Here are some more words of counsel from the Apostle Paul. "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Galatians 2:20.

Now this important phase of the plan of salvation is very often overlooked. Notice these important Bible truths that were taught by Paul. He said that man is not saved by the death of Christ. The sinner is reconciled to God by the death of Jesus Christ; that is, by the death of Christ the sinner's past sins are all forgiven and blotted out and he is brought into harmony with God. Then the apostle adds the very significant fact that whereas we're reconciled by the death of the Son of God, "we are saved by His life." Now I hope we keep this distinction clearly in mind, friends. Just what does he mean by this difference. Simply this: the death of Christ pays the penalty of my sin if I accept it by faith. Then I'm justified by faith. But the life of Christ also plays a part in my daily life afterwards because He abides within me and gives the power and strength to keep His commandments perfectly. For His death to avail anything for man, Christ had to live a sinless life here in the flesh as a son of man, and of course He did that. Then He comes to live in our hearts a life of obedience also. Thus we're kept from sin and saved for all eternity by Jesus Christ living His daily life of perfect obedience. Now I hope you have that clear, friends. Remember this, we are saved by His life, but we are justified by His death.

Now this daily life of obedience through Christ is a very important part of the Plan of Salvation. In fact, it is proof that salvation is real and that God's Plan really does work. To believe that anybody can be saved while he's living in willful transgression of any of God's commandments, with no thought of what the law requires of him, is to live in a fool's paradise. This way, to the superficial thinker, may seem right but the end thereof are the ways of death, the Bible says. For in the plan of God the sinner is pardoned through faith in that vicarious death on the Cross. In the light of that transaction, God accepts man, for by that means he's reconciled to God. But the transaction is not completed with this. The next step is that the sinner by faith receives Christ into his heart and thereafter Christ lives his life of Obedience in the converted man. How thankful we should be for such a gospel as that!

The writer of the Book of Hebrews, in further explaining the life of the Christian and how it's obtained, refers to a new covenant. In this new covenant he says, God writes His law upon the hearts of man. The Good Book also declares, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Proverbs 23:7. Now how does God write his law on the hearts of man? Remember this. God is not arbitrary. He doesn't write it into an unwilling mind and heart. David, in his prophetic utterance concerning Jesus and what his attitude to the law of God would be, said these words: "Yea, thy law is within my heart." Psalms 40:8. Therefore, if the law of God is within the heart of Christ, when I receive Christ into my heart, that law then is within my heart. Then I'm under the New Covenant. This is what it means to come under the New Covenant of Grace. I receive Christ into my heart and when He is there, my friends, the law is there because He said the law was written into His heart.

Now Isaiah, the gospel prophet, presents Christ in this language. "I will give Him for a light to the Gentiles, for a covenant to the people." Now there it is. Christ is the new covenant and anybody who receives Him into the heart, is under that New Covenant. We can't separate Christ and the Law of God. If the Law of God is in the heart of Jesus, when we receive Him into our hearts, we receive also His law there and by the very nature of this transaction, we become commandment keepers. There's no getting around it. To live in the hope of eternal life and to live in willful disobedience to God's holy law, as I said, is to live in a fool's paradise. The last book in the Bible says, "Blessed are they that do His commandments that they may have right to the tree of life and may enter in through the gates into the City." Revelation 22:14. That's because they've been born again and they are the children of God. Jesus said, "Not everyone who says unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matthew 7:21. Well, what wonderful assurances these are, friends. And so I admonish you today to open up your heart and let Jesus come in because when you receive him, you receive everything. You have everything. You have everything through Christ.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Grace or Disgrace - Parts 1 & 2 Listen to the audio version Now!

The topic today is Law, Grace, or Disgrace. There are some questions I would like to ask as we begin the broadcast today. First, are you living under the law? Are you? Whatever your answer, are you positive? Second, are you living under grace? Again, whatever your answer, are you sure? Third, could it be that you are living under disgrace? There are many, many people in this world who profess to be Christians who profess to be living under grace, but in reality are living under disgrace. Are you certain that you are not living under disgrace?

We've already established in previous broadcasts that God wrote the ten-commandment law with His own finger. Today we come to this important point: The first Bible fact about the law is that SIN IS BREAKING GOD'S LAW. There are hundreds of definitions of sin, but God has His own definition. The scripture is 1 John 3:4. This is what God says: "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." That is God's definition. I want you to note that God did not have time for any of these weak definitions of sin that we hear today: sin is a mistake in judgment, or sin is a personality deficiency, or a plain, human weakness. No! It was left up to this modern and enlightened twentieth century to make up evasive definitions like that. The Bible knows nothing of them. The Bible definition for sin is the transgression or breaking of God's law. So you may be a church member in good and regular standing; you may be a Sabbath School or Sunday School teacher, a deacon, an elder or a preacher; but if you are breaking any one of these Ten Commandments, you are a sinner, because the Bible says sin is breaking the Ten Commandments. You may belong to fifteen churches and have experienced sixteen baptisms, but if you are not keeping the commandments of God, you are still a sinner, on the authority of 1 John 3:4.

The devil, I know, has invented a doctrine, and you have probably heard of it. It is very popular. The doctrine is this: All that is necessary is to become a member of some congregation; it won't be necessary to worry about God's law—you'll be saved anyway. But I would like to remind you that the devil invented that teaching, and it is not in the Bible. The Bible teaches something entirely different.

Another Bible fact about the law: NO ONE HAS EVER BEEN SAVED BY KEEPING THE LAW BECAUSE SALVATION IS THROUGH JESUS ALONE. In Romans 3:20, the Bible says: "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin." Now that is pretty frank, isn't it? Just put it down and remember it forever because God has forever cleared the air on this. "By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified." You cannot be justified or saved or sanctified by keeping the law. It is absolutely impossible. The law only points out sin, "For by the law is the knowledge of sin." We must be saved by the Lord Jesus. He said that is why He came. In Luke 19:10 He says, "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." There is no other hope. There is no other way. The law does not save anyone. In James 1:23-25, our lives are compared to a mirror. This is very important—I hope you will read this passage out of your own Bible. The law is like a mirror. I go to the kitchen or to the bedroom and look into the mirror and that mirror, if I have been working in the yard, may point out some dirt on my face; but that mirror does absolutely nothing about the dirt—not a thing in this world. That mirror is helpless. It is of no value whatsoever when it comes to getting that dirt off. That takes soap and water. But the mirror is necessary because if I do not look in the mirror, I may think that I am clean when I am dirty. It is the same way with the law of God. When we look into the law of God we see spots on the character, but the law of God does absolutely nothing about those spots. It takes the blood of the Lord Jesus. When those things are straightened up and I go back to look, the law shows me there has been a change. It now shows I've been justified. I'll use two or three illustrations here, because this is so important.

Let us take a framing square that a carpenter uses. He takes this square and places it on a board. The square immediately shows that the board is crooked, if it is crooked. The end is not straight and the square shows it, but the square does nothing about it. It takes a saw to do something about it. Then you put the square back on the board and the square shows that everything is all right. The square had nothing to do with making everything all right; it took the saw to do that, but you still had to have the square.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Take a fever thermometer placed under the tongue. In just a few moments the nurse comes back and says, "I'm sorry, you have a fever." Does the fever thermometer do anything about the fever? Not a thing in this world. You can become upset and take the thermometer and break it up and throw it out the window and say, "I've destroyed the thermometer, so I no longer have fever." But that would be very foolish. You would still have fever. Destroying the thermometer wouldn't cure you. It wouldn't make a bit of difference. It takes medicine. So the doctor prescribes medicine, and you take it. After awhile the thermometer is put back under your tongue and shows that the fever is gone. Something has happened. The medicine has conquered the fever.

That's the way it is with the law of God. It is helpless except as a mirror to show me what I lack. Then I must go to the Lord Jesus and that lack must be supplied. Then I can look back into the mirror and see a change has taken place. But, let me warn you, unless you are willing to go to that mirror and take a good, long, careful, prayerful look at yourself, you are very apt to end up thinking you are something that you are not and be lost because of it. That law of God, His mirror, shows us to be what we really are in His sight. The law of God is given so that I can see myself as the great God of Heaven sees me. It is very essential for me to look into this mirror often if I expect to be saved.

Point number three: PEOPLE LIVING UNDER GRACE MUST KEEP GOD'S LAW. It is the common belief today that if I am under grace I can forget all about the law of God. Let us see what the Scripture says in Romans 6: 15: "What then? shall we sin because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid." The strongest language the Bible ever uses is, "God forbid." That means, "Don't ever entertain such a thought as that." So on the authority of Scripture, people who are under grace must keep God's law. Romans 6: 15 is proof positive.

To live under grace just simply means that I was supposed to die (Romans 6:23 "The wages of sin is death," and Romans 3:23: "All have sinned.") but the Lord Jesus came along and said, "No, no, I'll die for him. I want him to live. I want to give him My strength, My unmerited favor or grace and help him to reach that pattern that I gave him in the beginning so that I can take him with my holy, happy people into My kingdom." That's what grace means. Let's illustrate it a little. Suppose a man went downtown and stole a car, and he was caught and taken before the judge. The judge said, "Well, I've thought about this awhile. The law says you shall be punished, but I've decided to let you go—to give you another chance. You are going to go free because of my grace." Now, can this man walk off and say, "Wonderful—I'm under grace from that judge—now I can steal all the cars I want"? Wouldn't that be ridiculous? But that is the way many people feel about the law of God. I submit to you today that a person who is under grace is doubly duty-bound to keep the law of God. He should have died, but God spared him. He ought to be very, very careful about God's requirements. I say this: the person who claims to be living under grace and ignores the law of God is mistaken. He is living under disgrace of the very worst order.

Bible fact number four: LAWBREAKERS ARE THOSE WHO ARE UNDER THE LAW. People have gotten the idea today that if you keep the law you are under the law. That is not what the Bible teaches at all. Let's read the text, in Romans 6: 14: "For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace." Notice what this scripture is saying. This scripture is making it clear that the person who is under the law is under the law because sin has dominion over him. The person who is under grace is under grace, therefore, because sin does not have dominion over him. So the person that is under God's law is the person who is breaking God's law. He is under the condemnation of that law. God's people are not under the law because they are not breaking the law; therefore not under His condemnation, but rather under His grace.

The fifth Bible fact: LOVE FULFILLS THE LAW. I wouldn't dare leave this out because it is mentioned so many times and it is true. Romans 13:10: "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." That is good Scripture and I believe it with all my heart. But the way that love fulfills the law is that it makes the keeping of God's law a pleasure. So many folk have gotten mixed up on this and felt that all that is necessary is to say, "Oh, I love the Lord God, so I don't have to keep His commandments because they are not important." But friends, a simple little illustration will clear that up. Suppose a little girl went to her daddy and said, "Daddy, I love you," and he replied, "That's wonderful, honey, because I love you, too." A little later on Daddy says, "Honey, will you run out to the garage and get my pliers for me?" And she says, "Oh, no. I'm not taking orders from you any more. I'm not keeping your commandments. I love you so much that that's not necessary." How do you suppose I would react to that? How would you react to it? Those are not important questions; the question that counts is, How does God react when a person says, "I love the Lord so much that His old commandments are just no use to me anymore”?

Friends, love fulfills the law because when we love the Lord we want to serve Him. The first four commandments have to do with our duty to God. If we love Him we wouldn't want to swear and take His name in vain. We wouldn't want to steal from Him, hurt Him, offend Him, lie about Him. Would we? No, indeed. And it isn't hard. When you try to keep the commandments rigidly just in your own strength, it is impossible, but when the love of the Lord Jesus comes into your heart with love for Him and love for your fellow men, things are different. When you love someone, things that are otherwise very difficult are very easy. When I hear people speak about the terrible burdens involved in keeping the commandments I just know one thing for sure—they haven't fallen in love with the Lord Jesus yet, because when a person falls in love with Him it is very easy. Notice what Jesus says in 1 John 5:3: "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." Law-keeping is a pleasure if you love Him. That is all there is to it. Love does fulfill the law. It makes it easy. I love my wife, so when I get up in the morning I don't have to worry about the commandments and say, "Well, I hope I don't kill her today, or steal from her." No, indeed; I love her. It is the same thing with our neighbors, if we love them. Love fulfills the law. There is not a worry. It is easy to keep God's law when love is enshrined in the heart.

The sixth Bible fact: NO UNCONVERTED PERSON CAN KEEP GOD'S LAW. Let's read that. In Romans 8:7, notice this very clear, very plain and positive statement: "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." I can't help but remember this text when people say, "No one can keep the law of God." The Bible says here that the carnal mind can't. But it also says, "To be carnally minded is death." (Romans 8:6.) So that is the first point we wish to establish: the unconverted person cannot keep God's law. If he tried, it would do no good. But in John 14:15 Jesus says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." So the saved, converted person will keep His commandments; it will be a joy, because of love.

Now let me read Romans 8:3, 4. This is a beautiful passage. "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Do you see what this verse is saying? People have said the law is weak. It doesn't say that at all. It says, "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh." The flesh was weak; the people were weak. The people could not keep God's law. They tried to do it, but made a terrible blunder. It just didn't work. So what did God say? Did He say, "Let's give up. Let's not fool with men. They're just not going to live like the pattern." No, indeed! He sent His own Son to pay the penalty for them and to arrange for them to have the power to keep His law, so that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled—"by us?" Oh, no—"in us." Yes, the Lord Jesus has to move in, and then it's entirely different.

Let me illustrate it. Suppose I bought a new axe, a great big, heavy-duty axe, and very sharp. Then suppose I found a little two-year-old youngster and said, "Here, take this and cut down that tree." What do you suppose would happen to the tree? Nothing. Anything wrong with the axe? No, I couldn't blame the axe. The axe was all right, but the flesh was weak. So I take that same axe and hand it to a strong, stalwart man and the tree goes down in just a few moments. This is the same thing that God is trying to get across here. The weakness was not with His pattern, the law. No, indeed! It is a perfect pattern. The weakness was in the human heart. And so He sent Jesus. We must have Christ's power. That is what John 1:12 is talking about: "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God."

Seventh Bible fact: COMMANDMENT KEEPERS ARE THE ONLY ONES WHO REALLY LOVE THE LORD AND WHO WILL BE SAVED. Now believe you me, I would not make that statement on my own, but it is in the Book. I would like to read it for you. Let's read 1 John 2:4. Let me say a word about this scripture. This is something I would never say if it were not in the Bible, but apparently God knew there would be some question arising regarding what it meant to serve Him, so He put this in. "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments is a liar, and the truth is not in him." So to know and love the Lord is to keep His commandments. There is no question about it. Revelation 22:14 states: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Now that's pointed, plain, clear, and positive, isn't it? Let me read you something else. It fits in right here. So many times when we talk about commandment-keeping, people say, "Oh, my, the terrible, heavy, burdensome, grievous law." Well, let's see what the Lord says about it in 1 John 5:3, "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." That is God's statement. You can put it down and believe it, because it isn't what I think, or what some religious teacher thinks, or some professor of some university thinks. It is what God thinks. He says, "No, it is not a grievous thing to keep My commandments. Not at all."

The eighth Bible fact: WE WILL ALL BE JUDGED BY THE LAW OF GOD. That is reasonable, isn't it? After all, the law is the pattern by which we were made in the beginning. Christ came to die so that pattern could be restored in us. So it is reasonable to think that we might have to face that law or pattern some day. But there is more than reason involved here. We have the Word of God, in James 2:10, 12: "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all. For he that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law. So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." It specifically says that we are to be judged by the law that says, "Thou shalt not kill" and "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Search the Bible from beginning to end and you will find only one law with these commands—the Ten Commandment law of God. So it is positive that all will be judged by that law.

Don't you see, friend, why Satan is so anxious to do away with the law? If it is put aside and there is no mirror for the people to show them what they lack, then what hope is there when one has to face the law in the judgment? Religious leaders are teaching that God's law has been thrown out or done away with, and men have set up their own standards to replace God's. And here is where men really get into trouble.

A little boy came into the house one day and he said, "Mother, I'm nine feet tall." He was just five years old. She said, "Jimmy, you are not. What is the matter with you?" "Yes," he said, "I really am." And she said, "That's silly, stop talking like that." He said, "Mother, but I am. I made a ruler and I measured myself, and I'm nine feet tall." Sure! Make your own law, and it is easy to live up to it. That is what people do today. The real standard is high, very high. "Higher than the highest human thought can reach is God's ideal for His children. God-likeness is the goal to be reached." So the standard is way up there. And people look up and say, "Oh, my! That's such a long way." There are two things you can do then. You can say, "Lord, bring me up to Thy great law standard, even though it hurts." Or you can say, "Down with the standard. Pull it down to my size." Then when you get the standard low enough, you begin to look pretty good; nine feet tall, you know. We need to get used to living by the pattern God left so that we can face it unafraid in the Judgment Day.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Inflation and Free Gifts Listen to the audio version Now!

Authorities tell us that it now costs $118.30 to buy the same bag of groceries that we could buy 4 years ago for only $100.00. Every month the price of groceries, clothing, shoes, rent, and automobiles edges up just a little bit. By the end of the year it has taken a huge bite out of the family income. Every effort to stop inflation, every effort to turn it in the other direction has failed. Nothing has actually prevented the gradual escalation of living costs in almost every category. Economic committees are still trying to come to grips with the inflation monster. The result: millions of people in the United States living below the government-prescribed subsistence level.

But listen friends, I have some good news for you. I know something that is free, and it is worth more than groceries, or automobiles, or houses; and you will agree with me when I tell you what it is.

There is nothing clearer in the Bible, and it is described in Ephesians 2:8, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." There it is, friends. Salvation is a "gift of God." You can't buy it. You can't earn it. If you get it, you must take it free as God gives it to you in Christ His Son.

Suppose, now, for a moment, that you could work your way to heaven, or that you could pay your way in like you buy a ticket to a baseball game. We would have a heaven full of "boasters." One man would say, "I worked harder to get here than you did." And another man would chime in, "I worked harder to get here than either one of you." A rich man would brag, "I paid a million dollars cold cash for my citizenship." Well, depend on it, friends, God is not going to have that kind of heaven. The Bible says, "Not of works, lest any man should boast." Ephesians 2:9. There will be no boasters and no braggarts in God's Paradise. We all get there on the same basis. We take salvation as a free gift in Christ Jesus, or we don't take it at all.

Listen to Romans 6:23, "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." You can earn "death," but you can't earn salvation. Salvation is the "gift of God through Jesus Christ." There is nothing so wonderful, there is nothing so desirable, and it is free—no work, no pay.

I know you will remember John 3:16. You have probably memorized it sometime. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." It is "believe and be saved," or failing that, to be lost. Please notice how specific the Bible is about this eternal life: "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son." Again, we see that eternal life is a free gift from God, and we see further that it is in His Son. Jesus said when He was here: "I am the way, the truth and the life."

John tells us again, "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." And it is just like that, friends. You have Christ, the Son, and you have life, eternal life. But if you don't have the Son, you don't have life. It is just that simple. Either you do or you don't. Either you have accepted Christ, or you haven't. Either you have been "born again" or you haven't. Life is in Christ—accept Him and you have it. When do you have it? Let Jesus answer that: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." That is "present tense," friends. When you receive Jesus Christ as your Saviour, you have eternal life.

Let me illustrate. Suppose I hold a genuine dollar bill in my hand. I say to you, "If you'll take this dollar bill, I'll give it to you." You hesitate a moment, but convinced that I am sincere, you take it. All right, now, when did the dollar bill become yours? "When you gave it to me," you say. No, when you took it. As long as the dollar was in my hand, it was mine. But the moment you took it, it became yours. That is exactly the way it is

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

with your salvation. God offers you free salvation in His Son, Jesus Christ. When you take Christ, like you took the dollar bill, you have eternal life. How is that? You have the Author of eternal life, you have Christ, so you have eternal life.

The reason we must have a Saviour is that we are all sinners. Romans 3:10, 23 tells us that very thing: "There is none righteous, no, not one....For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." You can search the nations, you can go up and down in the world and from East to West in it, and you will find nothing but sinners. Yes, I know, that is a sorry commentary on the human race, but it is true. That is the reason Jesus came. He came to seek and to save that which was lost.

So you see, friends, the plan of salvation is not incomprehensible or even difficult. You neither work for it or buy it with little or much. It is a "free gift." You simply take it out of God's hand as you took the dollar bill out of mine. Salvation is free to every sinner, but because it is free, does that mean that it costs nothing? You can accept this as a certainty. Your salvation is the most costly thing in the universe of God—not to you, but to God. It cost God His Son, the Prince of heaven. The Father "laid on him the iniquity of us all." He made Christ to be "sin for us."

The most devastating thing that ever came to the human race was Adam's sin in which he plunged mankind into the abyss of sin. The most amazing, the most astonishing, the most phenomenal thing that ever came to the world was the sacrifice of Jesus Christ on Calvary. Angels of God looked over the ramparts of heaven, with hushed song, as their beloved Commander paid the supreme penalty for sin. Inhabitants of other worlds gazed upon the scene in wonderment—almost unbelief. This was without precedent. When, in time, had man's Creator died to become his Redeemer?

Jesus walked the path of obedience. He did not fail or become discouraged. Even when His friends deserted Him and fled, He persevered. In apparent defeat He was wonderfully victorious. Now He is willing, waiting, to share His victory of the cross with you. He will take your sins and give you His righteousness. And listen out there: If you are a bargain hunter, if you like to get the most for your money, try and beat that at the grocery store, or Ford, or General Motors dealer.

What did your salvation cost? To you, the recipient of this wonderful boon, nothing. What did it cost Christ? "He trod the winepress alone." He was deserted, forsaken in that hour. He was separated from His Father and in anguish cried out: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" What did it cost the Father? What would it cost you fathers and mothers if your only, well-beloved son or daughter lay dying, and did die? Well, that is what it cost the heavenly Father.

We have seen what the sinner's salvation cost the Father and the Son. What, now, is the sinner's part? It is to cooperate in your own salvation. It is to give Jesus the supreme lordship of your life. It is to enthrone Him in your heart as Lord and Master. And, believe me, that is what it will take. God can accept nothing less than that, and in view of Calvary, can we give less than that? Jesus made the supreme sacrifice for us, for sinners, for those who hated Him. Is it asking too much for sinners to step completely over the line, to turn their lives over to Him without reserve? Paul is one man who did just that. "I am crucified with Christ," He declared. Previously, Paul had gone all the way in opposition to Christ, persecuting and killing the saints. But after the Damascus Road encounter, it was a different story, it was the other way around. He said: "For me to live is Christ."

And, friends, for any of us to live is Christ. That is to say, "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12. Despite the assertions of some preachers, there are not many roads to heaven. The Father has not provided many Saviours—only one. But listen to me now. That one is completely adequate. "He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." Hebrews 7:25.

The transformed sinner, the redeemed saint must grant Jesus the Lordship over his life. Is this to his advantage? Oh, definitely. Yes, there is present advantage. God wants the very best things to happen to you, but more than that He has an eye upon your eternal welfare. He wants you to live on and on through endless time. In other words, He wants you to have what Jesus paid for on the cross.

"Come unto me," Jesus invites, "all ye that labor and are heavy laden." Have you wondered why there is so much unrest in the world at present? Men and women, the world around, do not have Jesus. They labor, they are heavy laden, but only as they come to Jesus will they have rest. "Take my yoke upon you," the Lord urges. And please listen: You will find no rest unless you do, but you will find rest when you do. You see, it is like this: When you take Jesus' yoke, then He yokes up with you and helps you with the load. Wonderful, isn't it? Now, don't get the idea that this won't work. This is actual. It is real. Jesus will do just that.

Jesus spoke about "denying self," about taking up your cross daily and following Him. He talked about keeping the commandments. You may not like to "deny yourself." You may not like to take up your cross every day. You may not like to obey. But friends, listen to me real carefully. Would your Creator, your Redeemer, Jesus, ask you to do anything that was not for your best present and eternal good? You know that you can trust the hand that was nailed to the cross, you can trust the Son of God who loved you and gave Himself for you.

I have just a little time before I leave you for today, but before I go, let me recapitulate: Your salvation is free to you. It doesn't cost you a penny or a minute at hard labor. In truth, you cannot buy it and you cannot earn it. You must accept it as a gift through Jesus Christ, or do without it. That is the basis upon which God offers His heaven and His eternity. This precludes all boasting.

It is the sick who need a physician, it is the sinner who needs a Saviour. All in the world are sinners, but the merits of the crucified One will suffice to save every person who repents, who turns away from his wrong doing, to righteousness. But because salvation is free, don't imagine that it cost nothing. It cost the best heaven had—God's Son, the Crown Prince of the universe.

You don't work to get your salvation, but you work after you have it. God has a work and witnessing program that will delight and engross you as long as you live. Did not Jesus say: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15.

Remember how you loved your mother at ten. You delighted to bring her the largest tomato out of the garden, the prettiest peach, the nicest apple. Why? Because you loved her, that is why. And that is exactly the way it is with the Lord Jesus. You love Him, He died for you, He is supreme in your life, so you delight to obey Him. And it is never a hardship. It is a pleasure.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Jonah - Part 2

Listen to the audio version Now!

In my last broadcast we followed the tragic footsteps of Jonah's course in running away from God. We learned that Jesus Himself has endorsed the authenticity of the story so often doubted and ridiculed by modern commentators. It did happen, friends. There's no room for doubt on the part of Christians or anyone else. We must either accept the story as true or accuse Jesus of deception. To deny the veracity of Christ is to strike at the heart of the Christian faith. We know He told the truth about Jonah. He was swallowed by a great fish especially prepared by God.

In our last broadcast we learned how Jonah tried to avoid God's orders to preach in the great wicked city of Nineveh. He bought a boat ticket in exactly the opposite direction and tried to run away from God, but a terrible storm arose which threatened to sink the ship at any moment. The heathen crew finally cast lots to find who was guilty of offending the God of the seas. Jonah was designated by the lots, and he confessed his guilt of offending and disobeying God. With prayers for forgiveness, the pagan seamen cast Jonah into the ocean and he plummeted straight down into the black depths of the water. Down, down he sank until suddenly a big black mouth opened up and he went down into the fish and then the fish went down into the bottom of the sea—down, down, down, just as far as he could go. By the way, friends, when he came there he was really down; down in hope, down in the dumps, down in the ship, down into sleep, down in the water, down in the fish, and down into the very bottom of the sea; it was rock bottom.

But you know in spite of all this, God had not forgotten the prophet. To me that's a wonderful thought. God had not forgotten Jonah even after all that Jonah had done. You know, friends, God never forgets you. It doesn't make any difference how far down you've gone. God will not forget. You can't go so far in sin, you can't become so vile, terrible, that God will leave you alone unless you no longer want Him. People often say to me, "I've been so wicked that God wouldn't have me." That's utterly false. The Lord will always have you. His great heart longs for you no matter what you've done, no matter how far down you've gone. And Jonah finally wanted to come back. It's an interesting thing to picture the circumstances that faced Jonah down there. He was in the whale's belly and it was hot, stuffy, and dark, no doubt. Here's a little picture of it in Jonah 2:5, "The waters compassed me about." Yes, I imagine those were digestive juices swirling around him there in the stomach of this great fish. And he also says in verse 5, "The weeds were wrapped about my head." Evidently Mr. Whale had something else for dinner besides Jonah. It was dark. Just picture yourself in that situation for a moment. Maybe it wasn't so wise to run away from God after all.

And so away down there in the bottom of the sea, he began to think. And he did something else brought out in Jonah 2:1. "Then Jonah prayed unto the Lord his God out of the fish's belly." He finally began to look to God, and what did the Lord do? Rebuke him? Refuse to hear him? No, the Lord directed that fish, through God's heavenly radar system, over to the shore and somehow miraculously deposited Jonah upon dry land. Now Chapter 3, verses 1 and 2. "The word of the Lord came unto Jonah the second time, saying, Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee." So the Lord was saying, "Now, Jonah, you've recuperated, I've got a job for you. It's the same job I gave you before, and I want you to preach the same message that I asked you to preach." Friends, listen! It doesn't make a bit of difference who you are or what your background may be, God will never bless you and you will never succeed until you do what God asks you to do. This applies to you and to me and to everybody. That's all there is to it. If you go running off to Tarshish as he did and buy some tickets for far away, you'll never prosper.

So Jonah decided that he would go to Nineveh, He took his journey and walked into that city, a part of a day's journey, and began to preach. "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown." I can imagine people looking at him and saying, "Who is he?" Probably somebody asked, "Have you ever seen him before?" And another said, "No, I don't know

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

who he is." And they thought, I'm sure, "Well, he's just a crackpot of some kind. He'll probably be gone tomorrow. Don't pay any attention to him." But he wasn't gone tomorrow. Tomorrow he said, "You have thirty-nine days and Nineveh shall be overthrown." And people began to say, "Well that's a different message anyway, isn't it? I've never heard anybody talk like that before." And then, "Thirty days and Nineveh will be destroyed." By that time everybody was looking and listening. I can imagine they followed him along and looked him over. More days passed and he was saying, "Alright, friends, twenty-five days and this great city will be overthrown." The inhabitants said, "You'll certainly have to give him credit for this-he's persistent anyway." Again the days passed by and he was saying, "Twenty days!" Some of the people said, "What if he's right? I don't believe he is, but suppose he's right."

A few more days passed and he was saying, "Yet ten days-you have only ten days more-a little over a week." And some of them began to say, "I don't know what you think but I believe him. I'm going to do something about this." And I imagine by the time he was saying, "Five days, four days, three days," they had all made decisions. According to the scripture, from the King on the throne right on down to the beggar on the street, they repented in sackcloth and ashes-the entire city. And so God spared the city. Well, that was probably the greatest revival ever held, bar none. And that was probably the most wonderful experience that ever came to a preacher or evangelist, bar none.

Now let's come to the lesson for us. The devil knows that God's commands, when followed, bring the only true joy and peace and happiness. So he tries to picture God's commandments as impossible. The only way to joy and peace is found in following those orders of God. The devil knows it and so he'll put his lies in force to keep you from doing what God asked you to do. The Lord says "Go to Nineveh, do this, do that," and the devil comes along and says, "Now wait, you don't want to do that yet." And while you wait, he builds that thing bigger and bigger and makes it seem more impossible until you just feel that it can't be done after all. He'll tell you it's too hard, for one thing. After a while you think, "Well, I guess it is too hard, I can't do that." Or, he'll tell you that it won't work. I'm sure he told Jonah that. "Jonah, you're one man. Look at that great metropolis. You'll cover about three streets down there and they'll lock you up in jail and you'll be the laughing stock of the town. It won't work." He's still using those same arguments today, friends. "It won't work. It's not that important."

Well, listen, everything and anything that leads a person away from God is a ticket to Tarshish. Everything that destroys a person's love for eternal life is a ticket to Tarshish. Everything that prevents you from studying this book, the Bible, is a ticket to Tarshish. Every drink of alcoholic beverage, every cigarette, mark it well, friends, is just the same type of thing that Jonah was doing, and it can cost you eternal salvation. Every curse word, every word of profanity, is a ticket to Tarshish. Every bit of pride and vanity is a ticket there. Every minute of delay is a ticket to that ill-famed city of Tarshish. Some of these tickets are dirty and filthy, nasty, and utterly repulsive; others are beautiful, attractive and embellished, but they're all tickets to Tarshish, to disobedience and to destruction. They lead away from God's plan.

Friends, today, if you've gone down, down, down like Jonah did, if you bought a ticket to Tarshish, remember God still loves you just the same. And if you'll come back and say, "Lord, I'm terribly sorry I've made a mess of things. I'm going to take a new stand and do what's right. I'll go where you want me to go. I'll do what you want me to do. I know you'll help me." If you do this, God will receive and bless you. All you have to do is ask. Come back to the path of duty. Come back to that hard job or that hard decision. Come back to Christ so you can be assured of a place in heaven. Friends, today let's get rid of all those tickets to Tarshish.

Now I want to read Jonah 3:1. "And the word of the Lord came unto Jonah the second time, saying," -oh, that's the part I like. To me that's the most beautiful part of this book. "The word of the Lord came unto Jonah the second time." God is giving him another chance. Isn't that wonderful! Here's where the grace of our Lord and Saviour is seen. He always gives us another chance. What would you have said, friends, if a friend had done you like that and wanted to come back? Would you have received him as the Lord did? What did the Lord say? "Huh, you have your gall! Don't come crawling to me now that you've met a crisis and can't find your way out. You wanted to go your way all along, now don't cry to me." Is that what He said? Absolutely not. The Lord said, remember this now, "Surely, Jonah, I will be with you." And the fish headed for shore and Jonah was cast out on dry land and the Lord gave him another chance. "And the word came to him again the second time." You'll have another opportunity, Jonah, to do this wonderful thing for me.

Alright, friend of mine, I'm so grateful that I can tell you that it makes no difference what your problem is or how far you've gone or how weak your faith, God gives you another chance right now. "Well," you say, "I've had another chance and another chance." Maybe you have, maybe you've had a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand of them, that doesn't matter; that's the kind of God we have. He's giving you another one right now. He's saying, "Will you throw away your tickets to Tarshish and get rid of them? You know what I want you to do. Why haven't you done it? Get rid of those tickets. Come on back and I'll help you and we'll do it together." Oh I know we don't actually bodily run away and go down to the bottom of a ship like Jonah did, but I just wonder how many there are running just the same. You know whether God has called you to do something or not. You know whether some decisions have been made and broken between you and God. Just as surely as Jonah was running, you may be running. You may be buying a ticket right now to get away from something that God wants you to do. Maybe the Lord is calling you now to prayer. I wonder how many would be involved if I asked you the question, "Do you have personal private prayer in your home by yourself every day?" Oh, I know the Lord has pled with you if you don't, but what are you going to do about it?

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Law & Grace - Part 1

What is all this talk about the Ten Commandments being abolished? You have heard about it just as I have, I am sure. Perhaps you have even heard a preacher make this statement. It's very common now to see a lot of religious leaders running to get on the bandwagon of this new permissive psychology. It is supposed to be a new approach to the modern mind, you know, and especially to young people. Listen! Nobody can deny that moral principle has been almost entirely set aside by the vast majority of this liberal generation of the twentieth century. If anything, the tide is growing stronger to liberalize the old standards of absolute right and wrong.

One can understand, of course, the frustration of youth counselors, college chaplains and church pastors as they struggle to meet the needs of young teenagers, but have they any right, my friends, to do away with the Commandments of God? Have they found the answer in this new theological move to abandon the Bible definition of sin? The fear of losing the respect of young people is actually leading many religious leaders to do the very thing which will cause the loss of respect on the part of the youth. Do they actually want their parents and pastor to comfort them, (these teenagers), in their course of open transgression against God's holy law? I don't believe it for a moment, friends. Absolutely not! Deep inside their mixed-up hearts, they long for somebody to draw some lines of authority for them. They want to be told what is right and wrong. Too early most of them were thrust into making decisions alone, decisions which had to be based on the emotional appeal of a materialistic society. They weren't really mature enough or practiced enough for choosing for principle's sake.

The blame for this present moral mess must be placed directly on the misguided parents, teachers and preachers who did not teach their youth that there are unchanging laws of decent conduct. The transgression of those laws brings automatic inevitable results, both now and in the hereafter. No one can be completely happy by violating the basic laws of God laid down for human society. And those laws are summarized in the Ten Commandments. The problem becomes more serious when we realize that lawlessness also reaches into the area of religion, and affects millions who would never think of killing or raping. It is probable that the great majority of church members in America today carry few convictions against breaking at least one of the Ten Commandments. A very insidious doctrine has been developed in both Catholic and Protestant theology which has tended to minimize the authority of God's great moral law. It has led many to look lightly upon transgression, and has made sin to appear unobjectionable. In fact, sin has lost its horror for multitudes and has become an acceptable mode of life for both youth and adults. Witness the current trends in lifestyle which support this view. How many young men and women are living together without benefit of marriage! Yet they do not believe such living arrangements should be designated as sin. A large portion of shoplifters are professing Christians, and most of those who belong to churches believe that there is no sin whatsoever involved in violating the seventh-day Sabbath of the fourth commandment.

Oh, listen to me, we need to understand what God's attitude is towards sin. Do you know what the Bible definition of sin is? Let's read it now in 1 John 3:4, "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." Now I don't care what the young people want to call it, and you can put all kinds of new labels on immorality that you want to put on it, but God says it's sin, S-I-N, and it always will be. Now let's ask, which law is this talking about? It says, "sin is the transgression of the law." Let's go back to Romans 7:7 where Paul tells us just which law is involved.

"What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." Notice, Paul is quoting right out of the Ten Commandments and he said it's the breaking of this law that constitutes sin. He said he wouldn't know what sin was except the Ten Commandment law had spoken. So the purpose of the law then is to point out sin.

Let's understand something very clearly, friends. There is no pardoning grace to save us in the tables of the law. It can't take away our sins or pardon our iniquities. Its work is to condemn and point out transgression. It's like a mirror that shows us if our face is

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

dirty, but it can't take away the spots. In fact, the Bible actually does call the law a mirror, or a looking glass, in James 1:23: "For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed."

So when we look into God's law and see our sin, we must turn aside to the foot of the cross to be cleansed. The law points us to Jesus. Here we find abundant grace freely bestowed without price or money. Don't let anybody ever tell you, friends, that there is salvation by works. It just can't be. In fact, in Romans 3:20 we read this, "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin." There it is. So no matter how well we might work to obey God and produce these good works and good fruits, it will never, never save us. It will never justify us. There's only one way to be justified before God and that is to come and accept His pardoning grace as a free gift. We can't buy it. We're not worthy of it. We'll never deserve it. It's something He gives and we must accept. It's free. We'll never earn it by works.

Now, Jesus came into this world for just one purpose, as revealed in Matthew 1:21: "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins." Now notice, it doesn't say to save them in their sins but from their sins. And sin is the transgression of the law, we read it a moment ago. And which law was it? Well, of course, the Ten Commandments. So Jesus actually came to save us from breaking the Ten Commandments. He didn't come to take the Commandments away and abolish them by any means. Now I realize there's a strange teaching abroad in the world today that Jesus actually came to fulfill the law, and then people try to make that word "fulfill" mean to "destroy" or "abolish," but that isn't so. He did not come to destroy the law. The Bible says not one jot or tittle of that law would be done away with. If there had been any other way of justifying man and saving man, instead of sending Jesus to this world, God would have certainly done it that way. If He could have taken away the law and saved men by that method, God would have done that rather than give up His Son, Jesus, to die that terrible death upon the cross. No, the law could never be changed. "By the law is the knowledge of sin" and "where there is no law, there is no transgression." Paul tells us that in his book of Romans. So we have the Ten Commandments then to show us that there is sin. It reveals sin to us. Then Jesus came to take away that sin. It was the only way it could be done, by the free gift of His grace, by the offering of His own life. But that law stands there, friends, and it always will, demanding death, and the wages of sin is death. Somebody had to die for sin. Either you had to die or Jesus had to die to take your place. The fact that He did take your place and He did die proves that the law could not be changed. It couldn't be displaced at all. It stood there. The demands of it had to be wrought out upon somebody. Since it wasn't wrought out upon you through death, it was wrought out upon Jesus in His death. The wages of sin could never be changed.

Now no one should try to keep the law, of course, in order to be saved. But rather, we keep the law because we are saved. Don't misunderstand me here. We must obey the commandments, those Ten Commandments, if we are going to live the life of a true Christian. But we do not do it for the purpose of being justified, but because we have been justified and saved. Notice how David puts it in Psalm 119:146, "I cried unto thee; save me, and I shall keep thy testimonies." So you see obedience and good works follow salvation. We let Jesus in. He cleanseth the life. He forgives us. We love Him so much then that we will do anything for Him. In fact, we are glad to obey Him—to keep all His commandments. So these good works of obedience will simply always follow a genuine "grace-saved" individual if they have been truly converted. It's a spontaneous result of receiving Christ into the heart. But again I tell you, friends, that we are not justified by works; it's only by trusting in Jesus Christ. Let me try to illustrate how impossible it would be for anybody to be saved by works. For example, let's say that a man has been found guilty of stealing. He has been put in prison and finally he's sentenced to ten years in jail. Now can that man be justified by works? The answer is yes, he can. He can serve his time. He can serve out his years and then be perfectly justified in the sight of the law. He could walk out of that prison a free man with no guilt attached to him anymore. He's no longer under condemnation. He has finished his sentence, worked it out, and now he's free. Freely justified by works.

Now suppose a man is found guilty of murder and he is sentenced to 50 years in prison. Can he be justified by works? Yes, he can. He can serve that time. He can fulfill his sentence of 50 years and then he's also free. He could go out without any condemnation. No policeman can lay a hand on him. He has been justified by his works. But now let me put it this way. Suppose a man who has murdered is found guilty and sentenced to death. Can any amount of work justify that man in the eyes of the law? Absolutely not. He could work for 50 years. He could work for 100 years, were it possible, and still the law would not be satisfied. The law says "the wages of sin is death." Now this helps us to understand our relationship to Christ and God and to His law. We are also under the sentence of death. We have broken the law. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. And so because we are under the sentence of death, we cannot possibly work out our sentence by serving ten years or fifty or a hundred years. If so, of course, we might be able to justify ourselves and win our freedom and our justification that way. But no, because the sentence is death, we could work the rest of our life and it would never change our standing before God as far as our justification is concerned. In order to get out from under this condemnation, there's just one thing to do. We must open the heart to Jesus and let Him in freely to pardon and forgive us. It is a gift of God's love and grace.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Law & Grace - Part 2

The newspapers are teeming today with the latest reports of last night's list of muggings, robberies and assaults which took place on the streets of our beautiful once-safe city. Friends, isn't it amazing what has happened in our supposedly enlightened, advanced society? It's actually dangerous to walk down the street in broad daylight in certain sections of some cities.

What has happened anyway? Where did the old standards begin to break down? Friends, the trouble is that God's law is being downgraded. Even preachers are talking and acting as if the Ten Commandments are no longer necessary—as though they were written for another generation. I've heard people saying this, and even preachers sometimes say it—Oh, we're not under the law any more, we're under grace; so we don't have to worry about those old-fashioned laws of the Ten Commandments. They feel somehow that Christ fulfilled the law for them and then left them free to do whatever they want to without condemnation. Some consider that the Old Testament was the dispensation of law and the New Testament the dispensation of grace, and so they don't want anything to do with any commandments. What a mistake that is! Didn't they have grace in the Old Testament? What do you think? Is heaven going to be divided between those who were saved in the Old Testament law and those saved in the New by grace? My friends, no one ever has been or ever will be saved, except by grace. Every Old Testament character who reaches the kingdom of God will be there only because he accepted the undeserved grace of Christ. In Genesis 6:8, we are told, "But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord." In Genesis 19:19, Lot also partook of God's grace. It's the universal channel by which men are accepted into heaven.

Now, it is true that love is the fulfilling of the law. But this doesn't mean that we're not amenable to God for keeping the law. Jesus said in Mark 12:29-31 that there were two great commandments: "And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." But is there anything new in these two commandments, after all? The fact is that Jesus was quoting from Deuteronomy 6:2-5, and it was only new in the sense that the Jews had forgotten it.

Christ summarized the Ten Commandments in the two great principles of love, but He did not cancel the Ten Commandments by so doing. He said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," and "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Matthew 22:37-40. And you'll find every one of the Ten Commandments hanging on those two laws. If we love God with our whole heart, we'll keep the first four commandments which have to do with our relationship to God; and if we love our neighbor as ourself, we'll keep the last six because that describes our relation to our fellowman. Without the motive of love, none of them can be kept. Therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law.

Now, let's look at a text in Romans 6:14, which has been used by so many to excuse transgression: "For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace." Now friends, I believe that text with all my heart. But too many have not really understood the kernel of what it says. They've not read far enough, in fact. We need to go on to the next verse in order fully to understand what it means. Notice Romans 6:15, "What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid." Paul says, "No, we should never sin." And what is sin? We discovered the definition of sin in 1 John 3:4, "... sin is the transgression of the law." So Paul asks, "Shall we break the law or sin because we're not under the law, but under grace?" He answers, "No, absolutely not. God forbid."

What does it mean to be under the law? And what does it mean to be under grace? In Romans 3:19 we're told, "Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God." Notice, that "under the law" means to be guilty before God, or condemned by the law. In other words, it means that we're breaking the law. Now, this is why Christians are not under it, friends. We ought not to be breaking it. No Christian should be lying, stealing, committing adultery, etc. Therefore, Paul says that a Christian is not under the law—he's not under its condemnation. Romans 3:31 reads, "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." After we've been pardoned by grace through the merits of Jesus and through our faith reaching out for that grace, then we are to be established in keeping the law. It is to be even stronger upon us because of what Jesus did for us. Our love for Him will flow out freely and we will do the things that the law requires because of what He has done for us so freely.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

So let's not ever forget the true purpose of the law. It points us to Christ as the Saviour from sin. It can't save us. There's no cleansing power in the Ten Commandments, and there's no justification by works. It is freely given to us through Jesus. But when we've received His pardoning grace, then we are going to be obedient to the law. Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15. So we walk in obedience to His commandments not in order to be saved, but because we are saved. And as long as we remain in Christ, the law can't touch us or condemn us, but the moment we depart from Him we need the law to show us our sin and turn us back to Jesus for cleansing. So, friends, that law of God is needed as a continuous watchdog to remind us of sin. We can never discard it as of no further use. The law points out sin; the gospel saves from sin. The law is the will of God; the gospel is the power to do the will of God—they go hand in hand. Law and grace are never opposed to each other, but are the wedded twins of the Bible. In Revelation 14:12 we find them together in one verse: "Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." Notice that the commandments are there. Law is there, and the faith of Jesus is there, too. They go together.

But someone may say, But I thought works were not necessary in the Christian life. Well, it seems that word "works" has been misunderstood by many. After all, it simply means "obedience." It's the natural, after-effect of salvation upon the heart and life. As Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." How else can we prove our love except by willing obedience to the teachings of Christ? If my child professes great love for me and does not obey my commandments, I may have serious doubts of his love. Love is manifested in works of obedience. Notice 1 John 2:4: "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." Now these are very strong words, but no one can deny that profession is not enough for salvation. "... faith without works is dead," James says in chapter 2:26. Jesus said, in Matthew 7:21: "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Under the new covenant, the law is written into the heart, and the crowning motive of love constrains obedience to every commandment of Christ.

Now, let's read one text which really seals this point in Romans 8:3, 4: "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh,"—let's pause right here. What was it the law could not do because of its being weak or because of our being weak in the flesh? We couldn't keep it, could we, in our own strength? So the law couldn't save us because we weren't able to obey it. So because we couldn't keep it, "God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." So, because we couldn't keep the law, God sent Jesus here, who did keep it perfectly. Then Jesus comes into the heart and lives out His perfect life of obedience in order that we might have the strength to obey it also.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Looking to Jesus Listen to the audio version Now!

Much has been written in sports magazines about the amazing athletes who have bested the four-minute mile. For years it was the tempting carrot that led Olympic runners to keep on pacing and practicing for that coveted victory. Every runner wanted to be the first to break that magic four-minute world record. Now it has happened of course, not once, but several times. The old speed and endurance records are being shattered quite regularly now as the marathoners aim for still greater achievements.

Did you know friends, that the Bible has quite a bit to say about people who are running races for prizes? Listen to this text in Hebrews 12:1, "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." You will notice here that Paul calls this earthly life a race. Every human being is engaged in a tremendous contest to win a prize which fadeth not away, the crown of eternal life. In running this race, or living this life, Paul suggests that there are many weights and sins which hinder and impede the progress on the course. Listen, nobody can run successfully while carrying a heavy weight or burden. But before we read further, let's find out who these witnesses are who compass us about, and who inspire us in running this race.

The text began, "wherefore seeing we also are compassed about." That "wherefore" means that something has gone before and so we just move back to the preceding chapter to find out who the witnesses are. And there in Hebrews 11, we find God's great honor roll of faith. You should take the time to read it in its entirety, friends. The names of great men and women who prevailed and won the championship as far as God was concerned. Their names are sometimes small, but they were people of gigantic faith. But the interesting thing is that all of them had weights to get rid of. Now, those weights consisted of habits, weaknesses, and sins. But in spite of those weights, they finally rose above them by faith, and rid themselves of those things which held them back in their spiritual progress. Listen, friend of mine, the eleventh chapter of Hebrews was written just so you may have hope and courage today. These people who prevailed with God were men of like passions as we are. They were not perfect by any means, and most of them faced a more hostile environment than we will ever have to combat.

As we read about these various heroes of God, will you please notice that they all excelled through faith. We could spend hours of time talking about this matter of winning the victory by faith, but let's read verse 5 concerning Enoch, the overcomer. "By faith, Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God." Most people today think about Enoch as a long bearded old man, but the fact is that when he fought some of his fiercest battles he was just a youth. It was no easier for Enoch than it is for those living today. It was a struggle, of course! Life is never easy when we live it on the higher levels. We learn surrender and spiritual communion only through titanic struggles of the will. What an encouragement it should be for us to see how Enoch witnesses to a life of victory. He gained such an experience that he was finally translated without tasting death—the first among ten to be taken to those heavenly realms without dying.

Go on down that list and you will discover the name of Abraham, the father of the faithful. He also developed his religious experience a step at a time. He made many mistakes. He even told some lies. You will find them recorded in the Bible, but he learned by those past experiences. He overcame the sins as they appeared until finally he was completely sanctified.

Moses is another man whose name appears in that honor roll of faith. We remember him as a person of great anger and vengeance. He slew an Egyptian once in a moment of uncontrolled temper. Now here is a witness for the most hopeless of men. How often

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

we've seen those who repented of their wicked tempers and sought to gain the victory in this area. Moses bears witness today that it's possible for such a person to become the meekest man in all the world. Friends, isn't that encouraging for you? There is hope for the violent, the angry, the wrathful. Why are these things recorded? So that we might take courage and realize that there is victory also for us.

We continue reading in this honor chapter in the Bible and we come to verses 30 and 31: "By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days. By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them that believed not, when she had received the spies with peace." Now friends, here is something that is almost unbelievable. It's the example of a wicked woman, completely abandoned to her scarlet life in that wicked city of Jericho. How can she witness and encourage us today? Why is she included in this cloud of witnesses spoken of by Paul in Hebrews 11? Well my friends, if Rahab can gain the victory and be saved anybody can do the same thing. Just try to picture her abandonment to evil as she lived out her life in that city of Jericho. But then word came to her of the Israelites coming across the Jordan River. She heard about the miraculous parting of the water. Some people doubted, but Rahab believed. She yielded her mind and heart to the belief that this was the true God of all the world, the God of Israel. Do you think it was hard for Rahab? Of course it was. More than you and I will ever know. But she perceived the true God. She leaned toward Him, and He saved her. When those walls fell she was spared. Her name will be found among the progenitors of Jesus Christ Himself. She was an ancestor of the Messiah because of her faith. The Bible says here that she obtained a good report. In fact, we read on down in verse 39, "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith. ..." This means then that Rahab will be saved along with Abraham and Moses and all of the others.

Here are a few more listed in verse 32, "And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets: Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions," and so forth. Now friends, you can very well recognize that these were not perfect men by any means. Some of them, like David, actually murdered and committed adultery. Some like Samson were illicit and worldly. But, the beautiful fact remains that every single one finally overcame their sins. They repented sincerely and turned away from their sins, gaining a complete victory by the power and grace of God. That's the encouraging part so far as we are concerned.

Notice some of the deeds that these people did: "Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weaknesses were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection: And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment: They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented." Now have you heard of anybody in this modern day having to suffer like that? Why friends, these people had more weights and obstacles to overcome than we have. It was not a simple easy process by which they were sanctified at last.

Now notice verses 39 and 40, "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." This tells us that the only reason they are pictured, is so that we can see ourselves. They're not going to be saved without a lot of us being right there at the same time to be saved with them. Perhaps your weight is the very same one that some of those people shared. If so, you can cast it off by the same strength and power that they appropriated. By faith they overcame; so can you. Perhaps they were much weaker than you are today, but by reaching out to take hold of God's strong arm they gained the victory. Moses had a temper that was practically uncontrollable. Is that your weight today? By submitting to God you can become the meekest of individuals.

Samson loved worldliness, yet finally he obtained a good report through faith. Rahab was married to sin and still she was lifted up to the very family of Christ. David was lustful and wicked, but he was made over again so that he became a man after God's own heart. Listen, now we come to the beautiful part of the story. How is purity brought out of impurity? How did these people obtain their good report? Read it in Hebrews 12: 2: "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." There is the answer, friends. This is how the victory was gained. By looking to Jesus we can overcome. These men and women are mighty witnesses of what it is possible to accomplish through Him, but Jesus is the power to actually get it done.

Listen, do you think a man can look at Jesus and continue to be vengeful? To cherish impure thoughts? To swell with pride and vanity? Of course not. It makes a man perfect when he keeps looking to Christ. Yes, we're all running a race, Paul says, along with Abraham, Moses, Joseph, David and many others. We're striving for the victory in the race for eternal life. The weights are all the same, for us and for them. They must be cast off in the same manner that they cast them aside. The greatest race of all was run by Jesus before us. From the manger to the grave and then to the throne above, He led the way for us by showing how to live a life of complete victory. By looking to Jesus we may also gain that same victory.

In verse 2, we read some of the most astonishing words: "Looking unto Jesus ... who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Friends, can you imagine what joy there could be in the experience of Calvary? For a long time I didn't understand what this verse meant. How could it have been a joy for Jesus to endure that cross and the shame and everything else involved with it? Well, this plainly tells us that it was for the joy that was set before Him. That joy was to open up the gates of the New Jerusalem for us. The thing which brought Him down to this earth to endure the cross and despise the shame was the joy of seeing you saved. What love is involved here! He was not content to merely deal with angels. He came down to live with fallen man and to run the loneliest race that has ever been run. There was no stumbling with Him. Poor, friendless, forsaken, finally cruelly crucified, He ran the race for you and for me. Would you learn to be perfect, friend? Then look to Jesus.

Verse 3 goes on to say, "For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin." Ah, listen, it says to consider what Jesus did in winning the race before us. Then we should take courage and by that same power press on to overcome ourselves. But the trouble is that many have not resisted unto blood.

You know friends, it's not easy to fight against these habits and dispositions of the soul. It's much easier to just yield to our bad temper than to resist it. It's much easier to go along with all the fleshly habits instead of trying to curb them. The secret is found right here in this verse, "they have not resisted unto blood." Many are not willing to pay the price of winning the victory over self.

How much time does the average Christian spend in praying and weeping over his sins? How much faith goes into that striving too? Paul doesn't tell us very much in his brief account of it here in Hebrews 11. He doesn't tell us how many hours David spent weeping and praying over his transgressions. But, friends, you can be sure of at least one thing, every single one of these individuals contained in God's great honor roll of faith were men and women who prevailed through much prayer and agonizing application of will.

Even in the experience of Jesus we have only a few words of description concerning that anguish and suffering. Many of them resisted unto blood even as Jesus did. Ah, friends are you willing to lay aside the weights today and go through to victory, looking to Him as the only One who can give you that strength and power? Will you get in earnest today in running this race? The victory is in sight. The cross is near. We must hold fast and press on courageously and faithfully in the race, because the end is just ahead. May God help you to put away all the extra baggage and let nothing hold you back of weights and sins. Run with patience the race that is set before you and win the prize of eternal life.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Plan of Salvation

One of the greatest natural gifts that a man possesses is the power of choice. The justice of God is revealed in His creation of every individual as a free moral agent. Man was made with this power of choosing, either the good or the bad, to obey or disobey. Unfortunately, mankind in the beginning chose to disobey and the result was that the penalty of transgression fell upon the whole human family. What was that penalty? It was the sentence of death.

Listen, when Adam and Eve disobeyed God, the entire plan of heaven seemed to be frustrated. The human race had placed itself on the side of the enemy. In great love God had formed our first parents intending for them to inhabit this earth and exercise dominion over every creature. Now that holy pair had exercised the free will which was placed in them and disobeyed the express command of God. They did it, not in ignorance, but with full knowledge of the consequences. God had plainly said, "If ye eat, ye shall surely die." I want you to consider something wonderful right here. God could have washed His hands of the whole affair as soon as man sinned. He had done what He could to safeguard them. He made the test light, He warned them of the result. He had made the claims of His law clear, "The wages of sin is death." Romans 6:23. Now His responsibility ends. He can leave them to the natural consequences of sin and let them die. That would be justice.

But friends, God has a higher characteristic than justice—God is love. He loved man so deeply that He could not bear to see him die. You and I cannot understand that kind of love. We are talking about God, not man. You will not understand what God did. I don't understand it, because His love is too broad and wide and deep. I think I know what we would have done. After all, God had power to create a thousand new worlds and people them with perfect inhabitants. We would have simply wiped them all out of existence and started over again. God didn't do that because He loved us. But what could He do? Three things opened up before Him that He could do. First, He could let man die in his sin and pay the price for transgression. Second, He could destroy the law which had been broken, and thus abolish the penalty, ("Where there is no law there is no transgression," you know). Third, He could provide a Divine substitute to die in man's stead. John 3:16, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

That's what God did. He could not have abolished that law. Actually, His holy law was a reflection of His own character. Somewhere back in the eternity of the past, a covenant was made between the Father and the Son. The creation of mortal beings would make the possibility of sin a reality. The plan of salvation was not, could not have been an afterthought with God. The agreement was reached long before the actual emergency arose. Jesus offered Himself as a Divine substitute to pay the price for sin. Ah, here is a thought so great that we could ponder over it for a life-time without exhausting it.

The Son of God offered Himself. He volunteered! Philippians 2:5-8 says: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."

Do not minimize that condescension, friends. After all, who was this Creator? John 1:1, 3, 14 tells us that Christ was the Creator. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. ... All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us. ..."

These verses tell us plainly that Christ was the active agent by whom the worlds were framed. He need not bow to anyone, He upheld the universe. His hand had hung the billions of stars in space. Glorious angels prostrated before Him and sang, "Holy, holy, holy." Then suddenly into that calm and peaceful picture of an orderly universe, one note of discord appeared. One tiny speck of a world rebelled against God. One world so tiny

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

that it could almost be lost among the systems nearby; it became a renegade. Other worlds moved at His bidding, but this one alone resisted. But God was not satisfied with a hundred billion worlds that obeyed His voice, He longed to save that one lost world from perishing, and so the plan of redemption went into effect.

One who had sat on the throne, the One who had controlled the planets in their courses suddenly appeared in the manger of Bethlehem. Ah, it was the greatest night this earth ever saw. Angels sang together over the plains of Judea. What a night it was for the sin-shackled race who had waited for this deliverance. But what brought the Son of God down to the stable of Judea? Did He know what He was doing? Did He understand that the people would beat Him and hate Him? Did He know about the lonely nights and the weary days?

Romans 5:8, "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Ah, yes, He saw the entire path that was laid out before Him when He left the throne. He understood the demon spirit that possessed this world. He knew there would be no one to stand with Him through that bitter experience of Gethsemane. But He came anyway. He came because He loved us—He loved you and He loved me. He was not just interested in one world, but even in one individual.

Suppose you had been the only soul in need of redemption. Christ would have died for you alone. Isaiah 53:5: "But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." Friends, you and I cannot measure the power of that love which constrained Jesus to live and suffer for thirty-three and a half years on this sinful earth. We do not have time to mention the seemingly unbearable provocations which wore on Him. His whole life was spent in errands of mercy. He traversed the hills and the valleys, healing, raising the dead, comforting the poor and preaching the gospel. His mission was to seek and to save that which was lost. Whole villages were left without a trace of disease. His presence caused devils to flee, sickness to vanish. The sinful and selfish became pure and humble. Oh, I wish we had time to dwell on that wonderful life in more detail. But we must hurry quickly over the years and consider the crowning climax of His ministry among men.

Almost everyone knows that Jesus died on the cross. But few understand the real cause of His death. Listen friends, Jesus did not die the death of another martyr, He did not die because of the nails in His hands, the spear in His side, or the thorns on His head. His life was crushed out by the weight of the sin of the world. Jesus actually died of a broken heart. The physical suffering was not to be compared with the awful anguish of separation from His Father.

First Peter 2:24, "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed." Imagine, if you can, the indescribable suffering of that experience. Jesus had never sinned in His life, though He was tempted in all points as you and I. There was no sin in Him, but He took upon Him the sins of others and entered into the dark experience of separation from God. He endured the death which every sinner should have tasted, in order that a way of escape could be made for all. Because the wages of sin was death, only death could satisfy the claims of that broken law.

Because He died in our stead, we can accept His death as our very own, and God will also consider that the price has been paid for us, and the law satisfied in its claims upon us.

Some might well raise the question, "How could one innocent man take the place of a world of guilty men in meeting the requirements of the death sentence?" I answer, no man could have done it, except one. Doubtless angels would have been glad to take Jesus' place, but He alone could make atonement. Here's the reason for this: Atonement you see, is the readjustment of jarred relations between two persons or parties. In the case under consideration the two parties were God and man—God, the wronged and man, the wronger. All that justice requires is an adequate expiation of the offense, and that could be accomplished by just letting the offender die. That would be justice. But if that doesn't happen, then the offended one must be willing to forgive the one who committed the wrong. This is no longer justice, but mercy.

Suppose I cancel a debt. I lose the amount. If I forgive a blow, I consent to the injury it caused me. If I pardon an insult, I suffer silently the pain it causes my heart. Listen, justice says, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth"—that which a man inflicted, that he suffers. But forgiveness is the very opposite of this. Forgiveness cancels all injury at its own expense. In other words, the innocent must agree to suffer in place of the guilty if there is to be atonement. For forgiveness not only forgoes the penalty, which could legally be exacted, but also agrees to suffer any injuries which the wrong caused.

Let's try to illustrate it this way. If a murdered man could forgive his murderer from the grave, he would be, in effect, consenting to his own death, unavenged, so that the murderer might be exempt from punishment. Every act of forgiveness is an act of substitution. The one sinned against substitutes himself as a bearer of the consequences of sin, which act relieves the guilty person.

Now let's apply this to the atonement, friends. Christ was the one sinned against. He may bear the awful consequences of the guilt and thus acquire power to forgive. His incarnation was essential so that He could enter the experience of death. What Christ did of His own accord pays the penalty, satisfies the law, delivers the transgressor, all because of the exhaustive penalty borne by Christ. He is free to forgive because He bore the full consequences of sin. If it is morally wrong for the innocent to suffer in place of the guilty, then all forgiveness is forever impossible and morally wrong. But who will say it is wrong to forgive who has known the joy of being forgiven?

Oh, the love of God for us, as it has been revealed in the wonderful plan of salvation! Friends, have you accepted Jesus as your Saviour? Have you taken advantage of that great plan of salvation which brought Jesus down to die in your place? Open your hearts now and receive Him. What a wonderful Saviour we have!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Prodigal Son - Part 1

Listen to the audio version Now!

Jesus had the ability to tell a beautiful story and this is one of the most beautiful that He told. A certain man had two sons, and the younger of them (the more inexperienced) said to the father, "give me the portion of goods that falleth to me." Luke 15:12. The father knew that it wasn't best for him. The young man shouldn't have gotten the inheritance until the old man died. The father didn't have to give it to him, but if he refused the young man would complain, "My father is not sympathetic, he is hard, he is unkind, he doesn't understand the problems that a young man faces these days." So the father divided to the son the inheritance that he would normally have received when the father died. The young man began to plan what he was going to do with his money. "And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country." Verse 13. I want you to notice that little expression, "into a far country." He wanted to get away from his father. As long as he was in his father's house, there was still a tug on his heart strings to do that which was right. He couldn't bear to hurt his old dad. He didn't enjoy slipping out to the dances on Saturday night and out to the show houses, because he saw that look of sadness register on the old man's face. So he decided that the thing to do was to get away from the father's house, go into a far country where no one would know him. He could have a good time, he could let down and see what the world was like.

He had always wanted to do that. He had read about the world in the novels that he had hidden away in his bedroom under the mattress. He was so excited about it. He thought, "I will go into a far country and no one will know me. I will not hurt father's reputation. No one will know what I am doing. They can just take my name off the church books and I will live exactly as I please."

I think of the father and how it affected him as the son was enthusiastically laying his plans to go into the far country. I will tell you friends, while the boy was excited and enthusiastic about going to the far country, it brought untold anguish to the old father's heart just thinking of that hour when the son would be leaving him, and he might never see his boy again.

The day finally came. I have tried many times to picture in my imagination the hour of separation. The father tried everything he could to kindly, persuasively, dissuade him from the course of action that he had decided to take. He tried to get the boy to stay, but he did not try to force him. The son was of age and the father knew that he could not do that. Still, the poor old father is hoping in anguish that somehow, somehow, the boy will decide to stay at home. The boy is to leave with the caravan in the late afternoon. I suppose we can never understand fully what a parent goes through until we have experienced separation ourselves. Nothing is quite so sad as when the children leave.

The old man's voice is choked with tears as he throws his arms around the boy, perhaps for the last time. I can hear him say, "Remember, son, if things go bad, if things go wrong, remember, son, if I am still alive and you want to come home, there will always be a welcome for you here. The door will always be open." The son pulls away. There is a strange tug at his heart strings and he knows that he ought to stay. He knows that this may kill the old man, but youth has to have its own way. A young man has to have a good time. So he makes his way up the little trail, over the hill, and then down and is lost-perhaps forever. I can see that father as he turns toward the home. He tries to putter around with a few things, but nothing seems the same. At last the supper hour comes, but he just toys with his food. Nothing tastes good. The worship hour comes. They have always gathered the servants with the family. The father reads from the scrolls of the prophets. He keeps looking over there at the empty chair, even worship doesn't seem right. They kneel and the father prays for his boy.

I have also tried to live over, in my imagination, the journey the son was making to the far country. I can imagine that first night, the caravan stops out there in the clear desert

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

- ➤ More Free Books!
- ➤ More Radio Messages!

air. The stars are coming out now. They have had their supper and it is time for him to go to bed. He throws a little pallet on the sand. He looks up into the sky and the stars seem so close they seem like diamonds. He says to himself, "This is the freest that I have ever felt, it is wonderful even better than I thought." He thinks, "I wonder if I ought to kneel and pray before I go to bed tonight?" But then, "Why should I do that?" It is to get away from his father's prayers that he is going to the far country. He throws himself down on his pallet and soon is fast asleep. Day after day they travel.

At last the boy reaches the far country, and the record says, he wasted "his substance with riotous living." He led a fast, fast life, that prodigal. I suppose he had the fastest hot-rod chariot in town. He spent his money freely and had a host of friends. It is surprising how many friends you can have when you have a lot of money. He was surprised how friendly the young people of the town were. Why, after just a few minutes, after they have just been introduced, they are calling him by his first name. They are just wonderful. "I never realized that it was this way. I never realized that the girls would be so friendly and easy," he says to himself, "It is even better than I expected." I am not going to stand here and tell you that there isn't pleasure in sin. You know it, and I know it. The Bible says there is pleasure in sin. But it hastens to add that it is short-lived, it only lasts for a season. So it was with this boy. Before he could realize it, faster and faster down the toboggan slide of sin he went. At last he began to be in want, the record says. As soon as his money is gone, his friends leave. He discovers that they weren't his friends at all. All those young men whom he thought were so wonderful-their love isn't like the father's love. Those girls that used to flirt with him and he thought were so beautiful and wonderful-their love doesn't last like a father's love. This world that he thought so wonderful seems to collapse-it bursts like a balloon.

Out of money, he begins to look for a job. He tramps the streets. His shoes are worn, his clothes dirty, he is hungry, but he can't find anything to do to make a little money. There are signs up in all the little shops, "No help wanted." There is a famine in the country, the Bible reveals. He says to himself, "I think I will go out into the country. I am just a country boy. Perhaps I can get a job on a farm somewhere." At last, he tramps down a dusty road, he sees a sign, "Hog tender wanted." The Bible says, "And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine." He never realized that he would sink that low. In fancy I see him sitting out there all by himself, with no one but the hogs. His eyes are sunken, his cheeks are hollow, his lips parched. He is hungry, but all he can see are those smelly hogs crunching away on the husks.

As he sits there thinking, he sees his father's face. He thinks of his father's home, his mother and her good home cooking. How wonderful it would be to be home. He thinks of the open door and the thought startles him. Why hadn't he thought of it before? His father had said, "If things get hard, if things go wrong, just come home. As long as I am living, there will always be a welcome. The door will always be open."

He thinks of how he has wronged his old dad. The sense of his sin sweeps over his soul and he begins to weep. He thinks to himself, "Oh, how different home was." He thinks of the servants. Dad was always so kind to the servants. He thinks how wonderful it would be even to be a servant for his father.

"Say, why not do this! Dad used to have hired servants. Some of them worked by the day and others stayed on year after year-they were permanently employed. Why don't I do this: Why don't I go home to my father and say, 'Dad, I know that I don't deserve anything, I have no right to be called your son. I flubbed my chance, I squandered my living, I have ruined my reputation. I don't deserve anything, but Dad, can't I be one of your servants? Better yet, Dad, can't I be one of your permanent employees? I don't ever expect to eat at your table, but can't I take my place with the servants? I will never expect to be your son again!'" He begins to think of what he is going to say when he goes home to see his dad again.

I often wish that I had a moving picture of the moment he came to that decision-when he decided, "I will arise and go to my father." That's a wonderful decision to make. No greater decision could ever be made in this world than that. I am so glad that he made it, aren't you? Another thing for which I am glad is that he didn't decide to stay there on the job a little longer to eke out a living in order to get fixed up before going home. It would have been a disgrace for him to go home to his father like that, but I am glad that he didn't decide to stick on the same old job until he got things straightened around and could clean himself up before going home to the father. Just as he was, he started home.

He is in a hurry. He takes the shortest, most direct route across the desert, wondering, of course, if father will still be living. Finally he comes to the fork of the hill, from the top of which he will be able to look down and see the father's house. He just plans to go around the back to the servants quarters. He never expects to eat from the father's table again. Just as the sun is setting in the west, he makes his way up over the hill and looks down toward the father's house.

I would like to have us think for a few moments of the father. Years have passed by and, oh, what a toll they have taken on this poor old frame. Night after night he goes out, after the chores are over, after supper, after worship has ended. He makes his way, slowly, quietly on his staff as he goes out to the old stone bench under the tree-there where he had last said good-bye to his son. All the neighbors around are saying, "The old man won't last long. He is just grieving his heart out after the boy. It isn't worth it. Why doesn't he forget it."

But, oh, friends, a father's love can never forget. So out there he goes each evening. He turns and looks up over the ridge just hoping against hope that someday, somehow, his boy will return-that he will see him coming back over that ridge where he last saw him. But as the sun sets he has to make his way back. One evening when supper is over, chores are done, worship is over, he makes his way out there to the stone bench. He sits there, leaning his head against his staff and communes with God. He is praying for his boy, and oh, how he longs in his heart to see his son again.

Dusk is coming on and the only thing that he can do is just to go back to the house. He must go to bed and try to get a little rest while he waits for another day. This evening he stands out there just ready to go back to the house, but before he goes, he can't help from looking back up over the trail. He says to himself, "Oh, if my boy, my boy would only come back." But there ... as he is looking ... he sees something coming up over the trail, up over the little ridge. Why, it looks just like his son-it is his son! Those eyes that cannot see like they used to see can still see the son. He lets out a shout of joy, drops his staff, and the Bible says that while the son was yet a great way off he ran. He began to run and the boy heard the shout and he began to run. They meet in a loving embrace.

The son realizes that he has no right to be called a son and begins that little speech through tear dimmed eyes, "Dad, I am no more worthy to be called thy son, I've squandered my living. ..." He tries to get it out, but the father won't let him. The father cries out, "Oh, this my boy that was lost is found." And what is more wonderful still, he takes his own outer cloak and wraps it around those filthy rags so that no one can see what his son is wearing. Together they start towards the house. The father is so anxious to share the good news with everyone. "Oh, this my boy was lost and is found." Oh, dear friends, such is the Father's love for you and me.

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Riches of Grace Listen to the audio version Now!

I read recently of a business executive who made contact with people daily through interviews in his office. This man demanded from the company a long office with his desk located at the very end of the room. As people came in to talk with him, he looked them over and sized them up mentally before beginning the interview. As they walked across the room and took their seat he had already judged them and made his decision. We do so quickly judge and classify people by their looks, their walks and their attitudes.

Today, we want to think about the looks of Jesus. After all He sees the same people we do. But what does He think of them? How does He judge individuals? I am thankful to say that He doesn't do it as we do it. In Ephesians, Paul writes that Christ does things "according to the riches of His grace" or His glory. My friends, the riches of Christ can change things around considerably. God looks upon the heart and not merely the outward appearances. In 1 Corinthians 1:27, we read: "But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." That text is so true friends. Just think about the men whom God has used to shape the world. I don't understand why He selected His disciples as He did. He passed by the great scholars of His time and went down to the seashore to find fishermen. I don't understand how He could have seen any promise at all in those humble men who were chosen to be His disciples. After all, His message was to be a world-wide message. It was to reach men in all languages of the earth. Why didn't He select those who were scholars in the Greek and Hebrew languages and who were linguistically inclined. He passed them by to call men from the very lowest levels of society.

I can imagine one morning in the little fishing village of Bethsaida, the fishermen had come back from their nightly toil and were engaged in the work of mending nets. Among those who toiled that morning was a hard-headed, brawny individual who never dreamed that he was living in the day that would change his entire life. Perhaps he was humming some village folk song that day as he mended his nets, not realizing that something would happen that day which would bring his name to the lips of millions of people. He was just an obscure fisherman when Jesus passed by and looked at him. But what did Christ see that day? Not the man that Peter was, but the man he might become by the grace of God. He saw the real fisherman underneath who would stand up to thunder forth the gospel and bring thousands to the cross of Christ. He saw not the smelly nets of the crude seaman, but looked at what He saw underneath. Others were repulsed by this diamond in the rough. But Jesus saw the possibilities of development in the life of this impulsive fisherman. By the way, my friends, that's the reason a lot of us are not still dragging the old smelly nets of sin about with us. Jesus passed by and saw us and loved us. He saw us not as we were. He saw us not as others saw us, but the glorious possibilities of what we might become. Oh, the riches of His grace.

I wish we could know the full story of Peter. First of all, I wonder why he was so willing to follow immediately. There must have been something strangely irresistible about the Galilean who called him to be a disciple. When He said "Follow Me," Peter gladly laid down his expensive nets and equipment to become an itinerant disciple of Christ. Then the months and the years passed by as Peter's life was shaped up into a masterpiece of character. It took a long time because this man was arrogant and impulsive. I'm reminded of the time Michelangelo walked down the streets of Rome and saw a piece of cracked marble lying in a corner. It had been thrown away by some erstwhile sculptor, but Michelangelo looked at it and saw something in that cold stone. He called for assistants who hauled it into his studio. He began to work upon it with chisel and mallet. Deeper and deeper into the night he continued his work. Week after week, month after month. Finally, his statue was finished...a statue of Moses. That masterpiece stood for many years in the Basilica of St. Peter's Cathedral in Rome. Many people believe that it is the most perfect piece of sculpture that has ever been produced. It lacks only life itself.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Well, that is what Jesus saw in Peter as He saw him that day in Bethsaida. It took a lot of pounding, a lot of hammering, to remove all of the selfishness, the pride, and the vainglory. It took blows, for example, like the night of the Transfiguration, like the night when He saw Jesus walk upon the sea, and like the denial by the fireside. But slowly Christ carved a masterpiece out of the rough material of the big fisherman.

Friends, I'm glad Jesus saw me one day when He came looking for me. Aren't you happy that He did not pass you by? He could see something promising, something beautiful, even in the most ugly. When God wanted to shake the world, what did He look for, and whom did He choose? Well, he took a black-eyed Gypsy boy in England. He took a shoe salesman in Chicago by the name of Moody. In His own day, beside Peter, He selected Sons of Thunder to be His disciples. These two men, James and John, were very angry, vengeful fellows. They became angry at the drop of a hat, and yet, Jesus called them to be His disciples. They had been given a nickname, Sons of Thunder, because of their terrible wrath. My friends, Christ knew what He was doing that day. Other people might have laughed about it, but Jesus saw what grace could accomplish in the lives of those men.

Then there is the time Jesus looked in the Bowery of wicked New York City. Amidst all the vice and corruption, amidst the drunken derelicts of the street, Jesus saw one who was a bit worse than most of the others. He saw a drunken piece of humanity there in the gutter, and He said, "Follow Me." Sam Hadley got up from that gutter and answered the call of the Saviour and became one of the great preachers of his time. Hundreds, yes, thousands were led to the cross through the preaching of that man who had been raised up from the most hopeless position. No one believed it possible, but it happened. That's why I like to preach about the grace of God, it is free! And it is for all to enjoy. God has taken the worse and made the best out of it.

You know, grace is really the power of God. The miracle working power! It is not a theory or a dream. It is not a dead hope. It takes power to hew a stone block into the image of a man, but it takes even more power to form a man into the image of Christ. In 1 Corinthians 15:10 we read these words of Paul: "But by the grace of God I am what I am: and His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me." Paul seemed to appreciate God's grace more than any other person who wrote in the Scriptures. Jesus looked one day and saw that man rushing up to Damascus with orders to kill the saints. What did He see when He saw Paul on his way to Damascus? Did He see the religious fanatic? The Pharisee bigot? Ah, no, friends, He saw an apostle of love and power. He saw what would happen to Paul after the encounter on the road to that Syrian city. From the moment of his conversion, Paul was never the same. If ever I've seen a man who knew how to be thankful for salvation, that man was Paul. Later on he was shipwrecked, imprisoned—but no matter, he was still faithful and courageous. Why? Because he had tasted of the grace of God.

Suppose you should ask Paul about that grace? What is it? What does it do? I believe Paul would answer, "It was power. Power that opened my eyes when I was blinded by that heavenly light, power that caused me to lead thousands to the cross of Jesus, power that floated a ship in a storm, that opened prison doors, that neutralized the poison of a deadly snake." Yes, Paul had talked to God. And God had said to him, "My grace is sufficient for thee." Was it truly sufficient friends? Follow it through right down to the very end. Paul never waned or wavered—he was preaching grace the day he died—when he stood before the cruel Roman Emperor, Nero. The very last words he uttered according to the Scriptures was a plea for others to accept that grace. Yes, my friends, that grace of God is the only thing that can hold a man in the face of death. A man cannot die for a shallow hope or theory, but Paul counted it joy to lay down his life for Jesus. The miracle-working power of God had made him over. The grace of God had saved him and kept him.

Yes, when Jesus looks at a man it means something—that man is likely never to be the same again. Paul was never the same, neither was Nathaniel who was under the fig tree, neither was Zaccheus after Jesus looked up at him in the sycamore tree. Salvation came home with that rich man that day. Just the day before Jesus had passed by that same street and looked down in the gutter and saw a poor blind wretch who needed help. He met that man's need. The next day He passes by and looks up and sees a rich man in a tree. He was able to meet his need also. Listen, friends, Christ can meet your need and mine, whatever it might be. Whatever your problem may be, Jesus is a friend who can help.

Yes, Peter was never the same after Jesus looked at him by Galilee. But another time Christ looked at Peter. For many days Jesus had been telling His disciples about the terrible trial that awaited Him in Jerusalem. He told them, for instance, that all men would forsake Him. Peter declared that he never would. In fact, he said, "Though all others should forsake you, Lord, I will never leave you." Of course, Jesus knew better. He said, "Peter, before the cock crows thrice you will deny me three times." But Peter was in a fighting mood when the mob came to take the master in the early morning. So he stepped forward with drawn sword and whacked off the ear of the servant of the high priest. Yes, that day there was more of Peter and less of Christ than there had been before. Then they led the Saviour off to the judgment hall of Pilate. Peter followed fearfully at a great distance. But finally he came up and stood before the fire in the courtyard of the judgment hall. He stood there wondering about the proceedings inside. A little maid passed by and said, "You're one of His disciples." Peter denied it. A second time he was accused and denied—a third time, and his lips gave way to cursing and swearing in his vehement denial. Just at that moment a door opened and Christ looked out from the hall upon the face of His disciple before the fire, and just then the crowing of the cock was heard. Peter realized instantly what he had done. His heart was broken. He saw the look of love and pity upon the face of Jesus. He went out of that courtyard to fall weeping in the garden of Gethsemane.

Have you ever wondered why Peter did that terrible thing? How could he take such words upon his lips in denying his Lord? I've often wondered just why he did it. He loved Jesus so very much, and yet he did it. But friends, listen, don't you love Him also? I love Him too. But haven't you asked yourself that question over and over again, "Why did I do that, why did I say this?" Yes, we so often do the things that we should not do.

But then it's Easter morning, the break of day. Mary Magdalene has gone to the garden to weep for her Lord. She came in the early grey hours of the first day of the week to anoint him who had delivered her from so much darkness. The glory of God had broken into her life because of the loving ministry of Jesus. But when she came, she found the tomb empty. There was no body of her Lord to be found. She was weeping her heart out, when she heard a familiar voice speak to her from the darkness. Yes, Jesus revealed Himself to her there. Then the angels appeared and said, "He is risen, He is not here." Were sweeter words ever spoken, friends? The angels said, "Go your way, tell His disciples and Peter, that He goeth before you into Galilee." "And Peter"—Why did the angel specify Peter in particular after all he had done in denying His Lord?

Then Mary rushes down the street, seeking the upper room where the disciples were gathered for fear of the Jews. Weeping with joy, she climbs the stairs and bursts in upon the disciples and cries out to the disciples, "I've seen the Lord." Can't you see their amazement? "You've seen Jesus?" "Yes!" And then the story tumbles out, the story of the angels and the empty tomb. She says, "Jesus wants to see you. I've seen Him. He is risen, and He wants to meet you in Galilee." New faith springs up in the hearts of the disciples, but then perhaps Mary looks around for Peter. I'm just wondering, friends, if he might not have been way over in the corner at the end of the room with his head down in his hands. I can imagine someone saying, "Yes, Peter is down there. He's so crushed and broken because of what took place on Friday." Then Mary is rushing down to him and she cries out to him and says, "Peter, come, the Lord is risen, He wants to meet us in Galilee." Can't you just imagine the big fisherman looking up with eyes red from weeping, and saying, "No, no, Jesus will never want to see me again." Yes, there is pain. There is anguish of spirit. But then Mary answers, "Peter, you were the only one named. The angels said, 'Tell the disciples and Peter to come and meet him there.'" Can't you see Peter's eyes opening wider and wider with wonder? The very breath of heaven seems to come over his face. He asks, "Are you sure? Are you sure they called my name?"

Then I can see Peter running—running to join the others as they made their way to the country to meet Jesus. Yes, Peter was restored, forgiven. He understood now that look of Jesus in the courtyard. It meant that he was forgiven. Dear friends, let this sink into your hearts. Christ forgave Peter because he loved him so. He will forgive you because He loves you also. Rich or poor, Christian or non-Christian, He is able to meet your needs. There is grace aplenty with God to solve every problem—to heal every wound—to bring comfort and strength in every trial. The highest place you can find is at the foot of the cross, and there's grace enough for you, for me.

^ Top

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Saved by Grace - Part 1 Listen to the audio version Now!

In the early days of the 1849 gold rush in California, an Eastern miner went West seeking his fortune in gold. Soon he "struck it right," and immediately sent for his wife and eight-year-old son. Accordingly, his wife and little boy set sail from New York for San Francisco, which in those days meant sailing around the southern tip of South America. All went well until they neared Cape Horn, when a fearful gale arose. The vessel was unable to weather the storm, and the passengers were ordered to the lifeboats. For some reason the mother and lad were detained below, but came rushing to the deck just as the last lifeboat was to leave. But there was room in that boat for just one person. That mother did not hesitate. Quickly she pressed her boy to her bosom for one parting kiss; and then dropping him into the place of safety said, "My boy, when you see Father, tell him Mother died for you," and she went down with the ship. How wonderful is genuine mother love! And yet how feebly it illustrates God's love and grace for us. For Christ died for us; not when we were His loving Children, but when we were enemies. Romans 5:10.

All who enter the kingdom of Heaven will be there because they were "saved by grace." "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men ... ." Titus 2:11-14. It is the grace of God that brings salvation. Salvation is brought to man by God; it is never the result of man's own doings. And it is brought to all men who will receive it—brought by the grace of God. God has one plan of salvation for the whole human race. John 3:16. Divine love is the same in Old Testament times as in New testament times. Grace is love in action for the salvation of sinful man. There is only one Redeemer for all ages, "for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12.

Some people think that before Calvary men were saved by keeping the law of God and the law of Moses; and that since Calvary, men are saved by grace. But if that were true, we would have a divided heaven. Some would be praising themselves for their righteousness and obedience which entitled them to heaven, and other would be singing the praises of the Lamb upon the throne. No, my friends, there will be no divided heaven. All in God's kingdom will have but one reason for being there; that reason will be "Saved by Grace!" ... Both patriarch and apostle will join in singing the great Oratorio of victory, the song of Moses and the Lamb. Revelation 15:3.

There never was a time in human history when man could save himself independent of Christ. It was the prophet Jeremiah who wrote in Old Testament times those words: "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil." Jeremiah 13:23. In Jeremiah's day the hope of man was "Christ our righteousness." Jeremiah 23:6.

In Hebrews 2:9 we read that by the grace of God, Christ tasted death for every man. And indeed, how else could man be saved; for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God, and the wages of sin is death, and only as Christ has paid that death penalty for us can we find salvation. It is a mistaken idea to assume that the merits of Christ are available to mankind only since Calvary. The Apostle John distinctly states that Jesus is "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." And Paul tells us in Romans 5:20 that "where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." Therefore, as soon as sin appeared grace was there. The Bible clearly reveals that Christ's life and sacrifice were guaranteed to the sinner four thousand years before Calvary, and the men and women who lived before Calvary were saved on the basis of that guarantee. Grace was no after-thought in the plan of God. It was the original provision of heaven to meet the emergency of sin. Let us consider a few of the lives of the Old Testament characters who found salvation through Christ before Calvary.

Immediately after the fall, the hope of eternal life hung on Christ. This is abundantly clear from the scriptural record regarding the sacrifice of Abel. According to Hebrews 11:4, "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain by which he obtained witness that he was righteous ... ." Thus it is clear that Abel was justified by faith. We learn from Genesis 4:4 that Abel sacrificed of the firstlings of his flock. His was a blood sacrifice—a type of the great atonement that would be provided by the Lamb of God. Abel recognized that his life was forfeited because of a life of sin but was spared by grace because of the virtue of the innocent victim that died in his stead, and by that sacrifice he looked forward to Calvary; and the first martyr for the cause of righteousness was a Christian by virtue of his living faith in the promised Lamb of God.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

In Genesis 6:8 we read, "But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord." Truly it is a wonderful thing to know that back in the antediluvian world the grace of God appeared to man. Noah found grace and understood the doctrine of righteousness by faith and preached it to others, for in Hebrews 11:7 we learn that Noah "became heir of the righteousness which is by faith."

After the flood the same plan of salvation was in operation, proving again that God has only one plan of salvation for the whole human race. Of Abraham it is written, "Even as Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness Paul distinctly states that God revealed the gospel unto Abraham. Galatians 3:6-9 and Genesis 15:6. Now it is true that Abraham kept the commandments of God, for we read in Genesis 26:5 what God himself said about Abraham's obedience. "Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws." But Abraham was not justified because he kept the commandments; he was justified by faith. But the attitude towards God's commandments of all who are truly justified by faith in Jesus Christ is that of obedience. See also Hebrews 11:8. Thus the Christian experience of Abraham may be described by that scriptural phrase, "the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus." He is declared to be the father of the faithful, and all who are Christ's are justified by faith even as he was, and by the grace of God they keep the commandments of God.

After the great sin of Israel in turning from the living God and worshipping the golden calf and thus breaking the commandments of God, we find Moses pleading with the Lord for the salvation of Israel. What was the basis of Moses' plea? Did he contend that on the basis of human merit and obedience to the commands of God that God was obliged to redeem Israel? Oh no! Moses' plea was a plea for Grace. You may read this thrilling story in Exodus 33:12-17. Notice how he pled for God's presence to go with them on the basis of the promise of God that Israel had found grace in God's sight. Four times in this one plea Moses argues on the basis of grace and that God would make it known that he and his people had found grace in the sight of the Lord. And what was the Lord's response to Moses' earnest plea? "And the Lord said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken; for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name." Exodus 33:17.

It is evident that Moses understood the doctrine of grace and that he knew that his only plea for salvation was on the basis of grace. Moreover, it is also clear that Moses and any in Israel who were saved, were saved by grace, for God Himself distinctly said to Moses, "thou hast found grace in My sight;" and I prefer to believe that God told the truth. And when the Lord proclaimed His name before Moses at the time when He rewrote the ten commandments with His own finger, He declared Himself to be a God of grace. Exodus 34:4-9. Thus God declared the giving of the law. The fact that the law had been broken did not abolish grace. Law and grace are not enemies. Grace provided the only means by which sinful man could be made obedient to the wondrous principles of righteousness. Three times the Lord declared to Moses that He was a God of grace, and God proclaims His grace anew today to you and to me when He writes the principles of His Holy Law upon the fleshly tables of our hearts. II Corinthians 3:3. No one can read Exodus 33, 34 without recognizing that it was the grace of God that provided salvation in those days before Calvary.

So often we hear it said that the Jewish people of old were saved by keeping the commandments of God while the Gentiles since Calvary are saved by grace. But God Himself has stated the contrary.

"Thus saith the Lord, the people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest." Jeremiah 31:2. My friend, Israel was not saved by keeping the law. It is true that God asked them to keep His commandments, but they were not to do this to earn heaven, for that was impossible. But by the grace of God they were to obey as proof of the fact that they had been saved by grace. Dear friends, let us never forget this "thus saith the Lord" which reads that Israel "found grace in the wilderness." In fact, the very formula for blessing the children of Israel which God told Moses to have Aaron the priest use has in it a statement regarding the grace of God. "The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee, and keep thee: The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace." Numbers 6:24-26.

In David's day men and women understood the doctrine of salvation by faith. Listen to these words of Paul in Romans 4:6-8. "Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works, Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin." From the characters already considered, it is evident that the Old Testament believers were justified by faith. The reason and ground for their justification was not the keeping of the law nor their own personal righteousness any more than it is today, but in every case we discover that in the lives of these men and women who were justified by faith there was an attitude of obedience to the commands of the Eternal. All the prophets of old understood this great truth, and in making their most touching appeals to the people they called the attention of sinners to the grace of God. Listen to Isaiah's appeal: "He will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it, he will answer thee." Isaiah 30:19. Numerous other references might be used to show that salvation by grace was a doctrine eloquently expounded by the prophets of Old Testament times.

^ Tops / m / t / w / t / f / sTell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Saved by Grace - Part 2 Listen to the audio version Now!

In yesterdays broadcast we began a thrilling search for God's way of salvation in both Old and New Testament. Contrary to popular opinion we discovered that men and women have always been justified in exactly the same way. The grace of God was revealed to Abel and Moses and Abraham—all the way back to the gates of the Garden of Eden. Through faith in the promised Redeemer those patriarchs were justified and saved from their sins.

Now today we are brought to the New Testament, and it's explanation of how various individuals were justified after Christ was crucified. First let's look at the life of our Blessed Lord. Please notice that ever in His life, law and grace were beautifully blended together.

In John 1:14 it is said of Christ: "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (And we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." Truly he was "full of grace and truth." Remembering that it was written by the psalmist of old, "thy law is the truth," Psalm 119:142, we see that in the person of Christ the marvelous grace of God was united with the righteousness of the law of truth. When we think of that matchless life, and of Calvary the masterpiece of eternity, where God's grace was freely bestowed, we are led to exclaim in the words of the old hymn: "Marvelous grace of our loving Lord, Grace that exceeds our sin and our guilt; Yonder on Calvary's mount outpoured, There where the blood of the lamb was spilt." Truly the grace of God is "grace that will pardon and cleanse within;" marvelous grace that is "greater than all our sin."

Every Christian believes that all the apostles taught salvation through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, but not all have been aware that the apostle Paul taught that salvation by grace came upon all men for justification just the same as the sin of Adam brought condemnation upon all men. In other words, grace reaches back to the gates of Eden as well as forward to the close of probation. Please read Paul's remarks in Romans 5:17-21. This wonderful passage is summed up with the statement: "That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord." Romans 5:21. Wherever sin has been found in the lives of men, and that includes all men, there grace has also been provided. There never has been in all human history a single, solitary individual who was saved in any other way but by grace.

The apostle Jude wrote of a coming apostasy that would bring in erroneous teaching regarding the grace of God. After the death of the apostles, the church compromised with the philosophies of paganism, and it wasn't long before erroneous teachings appeared about justification by faith and salvation by grace. These men were working even in Jude's day, as we learn from the 3rd and 4th verses of his epistle. "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ." The apostle said that ungodly men would come in and turn "the grace of our God into lasciviousness." That word lasciviousness implies a license for sin, but God's grace is no license to transgress His law. It is no excuse for iniquity, no substitute for obedience, no permit for impiety, nor does it divorce the Christian from keeping the commandments of God. It is only by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ that Christians combine in their lives justification by faith and obedience to the will of God. The merciful, forgiving, regenerating power of God to redeem sinners is provided solely through the merits of Christ and on the basis of His atonement.

Two false theories regarding grace have led many astray. One is the theory of the antinomian, which turns the grace of God into lasciviousness and teaches that a man justified by faith and under grace needs no longer to obey the law of God. The other is

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

the doctrine of legalism, that teaches that a man obeys the law of God and because he does so is justified by works and is entitled to heaven on the basis of his own merit. Both of these doctrines are equally destructive of the truth of the saving power of God's grace. One saved by grace is both justified by faith and under grace is brought into harmony with the commands of God's law. Surely the will of God as expressed in His law could not be objectionable to a Christian. If these commands bother anyone, it must be because he wants to run contrary to them. We can see why a thief or an adulterer or a liar or a murderer would want to abrogate God's law or change it; but I cannot understand why a Christian would want to do so. This is why we can't comprehend some of the recent pronouncements by the council of churches actually approving civil disobedience. It would hardly seem possible that a clergyman, would want to violate any one of the ten precepts, and surely if he does not want to violate them he would not teach men not to observe them. But they not only encourage the breaking of man's law of government but also the ten commandment law of God. God does not save any man by grace who intends to go right out again and transgress His laws, for in Hebrews 10:26-29 we learn that if a man sins willfully against a knowledge of truth, he does "despite unto the spirit of grace."

In Revelation 12:17 there is a wonderful prophecy of the remnant church of God which will return to the standard adhered to by the early apostolic church who were taught by the Lord in person. The prophecy reveals the attitude toward the commandments of God of those saved by Grace in these last days. It reads thus: "And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." It is clear from these expressions that the remnant (or last) church will return to the true Bible teaching regarding the grace of God and will shun the errors of both legalism and antinomianism. They will teach justification by faith, not by works. They will adhere to the scriptural teaching of what it means to be under grace. And they will keep both the faith of Jesus and the commandments of God.

Salvation by grace does not erase a single precept of God's Holy Law, nor lower the standard of righteousness required by that law. Paul forever settles any misunderstanding in this matter of the relation of justification by faith to the law of God in these words: "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." Romans 3:31.

Physical healing does not put an end to the law of health. Nor does the spiritual healing provided by the grace of God abrogate the law of righteousness. Under the New Covenant relationship, the children of God by grace have the law of God written in their hearts. This is Christ's own promise to the redeemed. Hebrews 10:16.

Jesus declared the law of God was written upon His heart. Psalm 40:7, 8. And anyone who tramples on the law of God tramples on the righteousness of Christ. By His death on Calvary the Lord Jesus proved that God's law could not be trifled with. Even if sin were pardoned it could not be put away without an atoning sacrifice. Even if sin were pardoned it could not be put away without an atoning sacrifice. When Jesus bore upon Himself our transgressions of the Divine law, He paid the penalty of death. When God smites His own Son to pay the penalty of transgression we know that the law of God can not be set aside. Truly as that intrepid preacher Charles Spurgeon has said: "The law is in the gospel not only vindicated by the sacrifice of Christ, but it is honored by the word of the Spirit of God upon the hearts of men." II Corinthians 3:3.

Let us look at a few definitions of 'under Grace' as given by the apostle Paul in Romans 6:1, 2. We read: "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, (Continue to transgress God's law) may abound? God forbid. How shall we, then are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" From this passage we learn that one who is under grace is described as being "dead to sin." Again in verses 14 and 15 we read: "For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace. What then? Shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid." Here it is abundantly clear that a Christian who is living under grace is freed from the dominion of sin. What is the Bible definition for sin? "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." I John 3:4. Taking the Bible definition for sin, we learn that the transgression of the law will not have dominion over one who is under grace. Grace, then, brings freedom from transgressing God's law. The fact that all are saved by grace does not dispense with God's law any more now since the cross than it did before the cross. The law never did save anyone. It cannot justify the transgressor, but it does reveal his transgressions. Romans 3:20.

Under grace God's children are being made free from sin. Romans 6:18, 22. Let us remember, then, the great question about grace and law that the apostle asks and its answer. He says: "Shall we sin or transgress the law because we are not under the law but under grace?" And he answers: "God forbid." Therefore, under grace God forbids willful transgression of His law. Is it not indeed a thrilling thought that the grace of the Lord Jesus is sufficient to change loveless, lawbreaking enemies of God into loving, law-abiding friends of God? The reason grace was necessary was because the law had been broken.

Truly the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, and the beauty of the plan of salvation by grace is summed up by the apostle Paul in these wonderful words: "Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference: For grace through he redemption that is in Christ Jesus." Romans 3: 22, 24. Mark those words no difference. Paul here clearly teaches that there is no difference in the way men were saved before Calvary and since Calvary. In fact, Paul's doctrines of "no difference" puts all mankind on the same level. Salvation is by the way of Calvary regardless of when a believer lived. On three points there is no difference between those who lived before Calvary and those who lived since. There is no difference in that—

1. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Romans 3:23.
2. None can be justified by the law, for all the world is "guilty before God, therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight." Romans 3: 19, 20.
3. All who are justified are justified freely by the grace of God. Romans 3: 24. For "the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ" is "upon all them that believe; For there is no difference." Romans 3:22.

So if anyone tells you that before Calvary men were justified by their own works, you turn to the writings of Holy Writ and read the declarations of Christ Himself, how that men were saved by grace. The diversity of times never changes God's grace. Peter himself in one of his stirring sermons once used these words: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10:43.

Yes, friend, all the prophets of the Bible declare how through His name by faith through the grace of God there is found remission of sins. And when you, by God's grace, reach the Glory Land and you step up to Abel and say, "Abel, tell me, how were you saved way back there at the very gate of Eden?" Abel will reply, "Why I was saved by grace." And if you ask Abraham and Moses and David the same question you will get the same answer. And suppose you find one of the Jewish race and ask him, "Tell me, back there in the wilderness when you were on that journey from Egypt to Canaan, how were you saved?" And the same answer will be given. "I was saved by grace." Everyone will be able to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. Every soul will rejoice in this same wondrous fact that Jesus "Paid it all, all to Him I owe." Yes, friend, insofar as the plan of salvation is concerned, there is no difference. God deals with all men on the same basis. All have sinned and all need the righteousness of God, and this righteousness which God has provided "is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe, for there is no difference."

My friend, has the grace of God availed for you? Has it brought you into harmony with the will of God? Has it given you victory over the dominion of sin in your life?

"Marvelous, infinite, matchless grace,

Freely bestowed on all who believe;

You that are longing to see His face,

Will you this moment His grace receive?"

Some years ago it is said, there lived a slave in Southern Africa. He was told by some friends, that America was the land of the free and that the Stars and Stripes was the flag of the country where slavery was no longer allowed; and that if he were ever able to find refuge under that flag he would be a free man. One day while working in the fields, he saw anchored in the harbor not far away, a great vessel; and from its masthead flew the Stars and Stripes. His heart thrilled at the sight, and with very little hesitation he decided that he would make a dash for freedom. As quickly as he could he watched for an opportune moment, and then sped away toward the harbor.

He had gone considerable distance before the slave masters were aware of his escape. They made pursuit, but by this time the slave had; lunged into the water and with all his might was swimming toward the vessel. As he came closer the captain on the bridge looked down, spotted him, and guessed what was happening. He ordered a boat and picked him up just as his strength was about to fail. They brought him on deck, and there he lay, well-nigh exhausted, beneath the Stars and Stripes, and about this time the slave master approached in his little boat and said to the captain, "That is our slave you have up there, and we demand his return."

The captain replied, "don't you know that all under the flag of America are free? This man is no longer your slave. You turn back to shore or I'll order a shot put through the stern of your boat."

And so, friends, we who have been laboring in the fields of sin are offered freedom on board the good ship of God's grace. For its masthead flows the banner of Calvary on which are inscribed the words, "The commandments of God and the faith of Jesus."

Oh friend, by faith won't you plunge in now and seek for that refuge, and the great Captain of your salvation will be so happy to take you in? And saved by grace you will find here and now freedom from the dominion of sin; and hereafter, eternal life in the world of righteousness.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Soul in Conflict Listen to the audio version Now!

Night had fallen in Jerusalem. The aged priest in the temple and his youthful assistant had retired for the night. As they lay sleeping, a voice called Samuel, the young man who was helping the old priest. Samuel, being an obedient servant, arose from his place of slumber and went immediately to the side of the priest, Eli. "Here am I," said the young man, but the priest was surprised for he hadn't called the lad. When this thing happened the third time, Eli realized that the call must surely be the voice of God talking to Samuel and he instructed him to go back and lie down again, but he added these words: "If the voice shall call again, you answer and say, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'" So again Samuel went back to his bed and for the fourth time that same voice spoke to him. This time Samuel responded as he had been instructed. He said, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." The voice of God had spoken to Samuel.

Friends, this is the story of God's call to Samuel to be a prophet and spiritual leader in the time when Israel desperately needed divine leadership. It was a time of spiritual decline in Israel. The political and social conditions of the time demanded some real leadership and God would call His people through this humble lad and his voice would be heard guiding the affairs of his people.

Today in a world of turmoil and strife the spiritual conditions of mankind are at their lowest ebb. God's voice is still calling men everywhere to respond to His will. There are at work this very moment strange almost mysterious powers working on the minds of men. Voices, although unheard with the natural ear, are constantly calling for the attention of man. The souls of man are in constant conflict. The Bible tells us there are but two powers in the world. Paul speaks of these two powers clearly in Romans 6:16. We're told that whichever voice we listen to, whichever power we serve, will be the voice that directs us and the power that controls our lives. Perhaps today, you find your own soul in conflict. Perhaps you have a problem that seems too difficult to solve. Perhaps in your heart right now there's a deep longing for a better way of life-you deeply desire to serve God but somehow you find it well nigh impossible. Possibly some habit in life has entwined itself around your soul and life so deeply that you just find it impossible to make that break with sin. You have a deep desire for a better way of life. Your intentions are the very best but you somehow fail on every hand in this constant struggle to be free. Is there no help, no hope for you at all? Can you ever be free? Turn in your Bible and read Romans 7:15-25 if you want to know the story of another man who was struggling to be free. Paul speaks and in essence he says this: I find that my soul is in conflict. The very things that I know to be good and right and which I want to do and follow are the very things I fail to do. I also find the things I hate, to be the very things I find myself doing so often. "Oh, wretched man that I am," Paul cried out.

Thus, we see that the apostle Paul also found his soul in conflict and faced the very same problem that we face every day. Now Paul is speaking here of that same struggle and conflict that you and I need to learn how to deal with and cope with. There is a voice of God speaking and then there's the voice of Satan calling us. Since man is by nature a sinner, he finds it much easier to listen to and follow that voice of Satan than he does the voice of God. Little by little he finds that by following the way of Satan he becomes a slave to the devil and to his way. And now with the voice of God revealing to him a better way of life, he's constantly trying to free himself from the domination of that evil power. The struggle for the supremacy in the heart and life of man has begun. In Romans 7:25 we read that Paul finally found peace and freedom for his soul through the Lord Jesus Christ who set him free. Paul realized that while there was nothing good in him, yet Jesus had set him free from sin and from the power of that evil over his life. Now herein we find the answer to our soul's struggle.

We come to Christ by faith. We confess our sins to Him. We determine to walk fully in His way. But almost before we've taken the first step in this new way of life, we find ourselves falling back into that old former way. The voice of God has called us and we've responded, but the voice of Satan is there also calling us, and wooing us, and by our very natures we seem to find it easier to incline toward him. It seems that victory through Christ is just about impossible as far as we're concerned. Alright, what are we going to do about this situation, friends?

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

We get up in the morning and start out with every good desire and resolution. We say, "Today, I'm not going to sin. I'm going to practice very hard at being a Christian," but almost before we realize it, we've sinned again. Some old habit of life from the old human nature has risen up and we've fallen back again into defeat. Day after day goes by just like this one and soon we get the feeling that there really isn't much use in trying. We've tried so hard and failed so miserably that there's just really not much hope for us-why not just give up and forget it all? Haven't you felt that way? Of course, that's the natural human feeling.

You know, I'm reminded of the legend once told that illustrates this condition of life so beautifully. The legend says that there was once a wolf who lived on the side of a mountain. Every morning he observed a shepherd in the valley below as he brought his flock out to graze-his flock of sheep. Now the wolf would watch all this with fascination as the shepherd took care of those sheep and their every need. The shepherd led them to the very best grass; he guided them to the best water; when the sun was high and hot, he led them to the shade; at night he made sure the sheep had a warm safe place to sleep. Finally the wolf decided that he would like to become a sheep. He'd like to have the shepherd take care of his needs also, but the question came up, how could he become a sheep? How could he ever get to the place where he could be enough like the sheep to have the shepherd take care of him. Now the only way he could think of was to just work hard at it. He'd just have to practice doing the things the sheep did, so that he could qualify to be one of them.

So the legend tells how he worked diligently at the task. Day after day he worked faithfully, earnestly, and carefully; he tried so fully to do everything just as he saw the sheep doing it. Now I'm sure that if somebody happened along and would have asked the wolf how he was coming along at his task of becoming a sheep, we might have heard him answer this way, "Well, I'm just doing the very best I can. I'm working so very hard at it." But listen, friends, that wolf could never become a sheep even if he practiced night and day for all his life. If by some means he could have been granted a hundred years-even a thousand years of life he would have been no closer to becoming a sheep by practicing at the end of his life than he was the day he started. It would take a miracle from God to make a wolf into a sheep. We all agree to that. Well, that brings to mind the words of Jeremiah-Jeremiah 13:23. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil." I also remember the words of Jesus found in Matthew 7:18. "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."

Now Paul has this to say in Romans 8:5-9 and this has a lot to do with the subject under discussion. "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Note how beautifully this explains the difference between our two natures and the reason for this terrible internal struggle that's taking place in every human heart. We're taught in the Bible that through the sin of our first parents, Adam and Eve's, we've inherited their sinful natures.

We're also taught that not only do we inherit their sinful natures but their penalty of sin as well which is death. In Exodus 20:5 we learn that the weakness and sinfulness of men are passed down through their succeeding generations thus we're sinners by choice. We've all sinned. Having been born in the flesh, we naturally and easily fall prey to the things of the flesh, things that are quite contrary to the Word of God and the things of God. But while we're following the natural ways of our heart which are leading us further and further into sin, the voice of God speaks to us. We feel the pleadings of the Holy Spirit and we have a desire to come to him and become a christian and be a member of the family of Christ. We come to realize the full truth of Paul's statements in 1 Corinthians 15:22, 47. The family of Adam is by birth and choice a family of sinners. As such they're all headed towards eternal death-the wages of sin is death. If we remain in this family, living according to that which comes easily and naturally for us, we know that our lot will be death. And we also know that those who come into the family of Christ will be made alive again. No longer guided by the natural worldly powers, the children of God through Christ Jesus will be directed by heavenly influences.

But what is perhaps even more joyous is the truth that all who are in the family of Christ will have the assurance that a place in heaven waits for them when Jesus comes again.

Thus, it's very important that we somehow get out of this family of Adam, this lost and dying family, this family of sin, and get into the family of Christ, the family of life. Our eternal destiny depends upon which family we remain a member of. But how can we do it, friends? Here's where our soul finds a conflict, but there's no need of this conflict any longer. God has made ample provision that our soul be set free. The conflict is already over. Here is the simple secret of the freedom of the soul from conflict. Paul calls this process by which we leave the family of sin and come into the family of Christ an adoption. This is one of the finest texts in the Bible, Romans 8:13. It says that we are adopted into the family of Christ and we become a joint heir with Jesus, all the glories and blessings that belong to Him. This is the very heart, the very secret of success in christian living. We begin to look like the adopted Father, even our Lord Jesus Christ and our Saviour. By nature we're sinners but we're taken into His family and we begin to look like the family into which we've been adopted. We begin to look like the children of God. How wonderful this is!

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Space Age and Death Listen to the audio version Now!

Can the space age conquer death? Will scientists succeed in creating life in their laboratory test tubes.

No one will deny the fact that this modern age of scientific discovery has seen many things accomplished which were thought by earlier generations to be impossible. Diseases which have brought premature death to multitudes have been brought under control and are scarcely heard of today. Our increase of scientific knowledge has brought about a tremendous decrease in infant mortality. Skilled physicians successfully transplant body organs and tissues, even human hearts, thus extending the life span of men and women who otherwise would have died. God created us to live and not to die. Why then, should the space age not conquer death and extend mankind's life expectancy indefinitely into the future?

According to the Bible, sickness, sorrow, and death are the results of sin. God's plan is to make an end of sin and then sickness, sorrow, and death will be no more. If it were possible for man to conquer death without conquering sin, there would still be sorrow and heartache. As long as the problem of sin remains there will be immorality, broken homes, and broken hearts. Some of these things are worse than death itself. God plans to make an end of sin. It is not His plan that sinners shall live forever. This is demonstrated by the fact that after Adam's sin he was separated from the tree of life which perpetuated life. "And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever: Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken." Genesis 3:22, 23.

Actually the problem is sin. Nearly six thousand years of experiment has demonstrated man's inability to deal with the problem of sin, apart from Christ. History proves that health and prosperity do not necessarily produce morality. "But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you ... ." Isaiah 59:2.

This is the problem. And the word "iniquity" means sin. Sin is the problem. It is sin, or iniquity, that comes in between God and humanity. "The wages of sin is death." Romans 6:23. The result of sin is death. Death is the result of sin, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Turning now, once again, to the writings of Isaiah. Isaiah is spoken of as the gospel prophet. Although his book is found back in the Old Testament scriptures, it just radiates with the hope of the gospel. Isaiah seems to have had in a very special sense a vision of the Lord and this vision of the Lord he has clearly passed on to us through his sacred writings. Isaiah 65:17, 19: "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind ... and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying."

What a wonderful thing it is to know that there is a time coming when there will be no longer the voice of weeping, no more crying, no more sorrow, and no more death. It isn't that way today. Many of you have seen Arlington National Cemetery back there in Virginia. You have seen the acres of crosses reminding us of the reality of death. It is estimated that since the beginning of human life upon our planet somewhere in the neighborhood of 140 billion men, women, and children have lived and died upon this earth. Just think of it, scattered somewhere upon the face of the globe are the remains of 140 billion men and women like you and me who have lived in different generations, men and women who have lived and loved, and have known the emotions that you and I know. Men and women who have known joy and sorrow, heartache and heartbreak. Men and women who have lived and toiled and died. Some with hope and some without hope.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Certainly such a roster demands some answer to the question of death, some answer to what God is ultimately going to do about the problem of death. Here is part of God's answer: "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth ... ." John 5:28, 29. Sometimes, you know, we are just staggered by the awfulness of death, especially when it comes close, especially when it reaches right into the family circle. Then it becomes real. It is easy to brush it aside when it is outside the family. It is easy to just shrug our shoulders and say it is unpleasant to think about it. We don't even want to talk about it. But when it comes right into the family, our very hearts demand an answer.

Jesus says there is going to be a resurrection. Everyone who sleeps in the dust is going to come forth. There will be two classes in the resurrection. Of course, we decide, here in this life in which of those two classes we shall be.

Make no mistake about it, the Bible defines death as an enemy. Sometimes preachers try to gloss it over. We try to rationalize, theorize, and explain that death is often a blessing, and I suppose that in some instances it is, but basically, the Bible says death is an enemy. It wasn't a part of God's original plan. God created us to live and not to die. Death is a consequence of sin. When sin entered into this world it brought with it consequences: pain, suffering, heartache, crying, sickness, and ultimately death.

Thank God for that empty tomb outside Jerusalem. That tomb which for nineteen centuries has been empty. The very thought of this tomb reminds us of the words of Jesus in the book of Revelation: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore," and then Jesus added these words: He said, "And I have the keys of hell (in this case it means the grave) and of death." Revelation 1:18. This is one of the most comforting promises in all the Bible, and it comes right from the lips of Jesus. He said, "I have the keys of the grave and of death."

Many a time I have stood by a sorrowing family and offered these words of comfort to those who mourn. And what a comfort it is to know that though the loved one has been snatched out of the family circle and taken away, One whom we know and can trust says, "I have the key, I have the key to the grave and of death." Some day in God's own good time the Lord will turn the key and those that sleep in the dust of the earth will come forth. That is what Jesus said. "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice." John 5:28

Notice the words of Paul as he wrote to the church at Corinth. "For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain ... ." I Corinthians 15:16, 17. You see, in the teachings of Paul, this whole matter of man coming forth from the grave is tied right in with the resurrection of Christ. Paul said that Christ's resurrection is our assurance of a resurrection. He says that apart from this, our faith is vain. "Then they also which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished." But thank God, this is not the case, because Christ did rise from the tomb, and because of this we shall live also if we put our trust in Him. It is a matter of choice, like everything else in Christianity, it is a matter of choice, and you must make the decision.

Some people say, "It is no use talking about death and what lies beyond the grave. We don't know anything about it." But we do know something about it. The apostle Paul says, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." I Thessalonians 4:13.

Paul says, I don't want you as Christians to be left in ignorance and without hope concerning those who are sleeping the sleep of death, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." I Thessalonians 4:16.

Another wonderful promise of the resurrection, the dead in Christ shall rise, and they shall rise first. The prophet Micah pictures Christ as the tower of the flock. "And thou, O tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion ... ." Micah 4:8. The first dominion is the dominion that was given to Adam back there in the very beginning; the dominion that Adam lost because of sin. This same dominion is going to be restored through Jesus, the One who towers head and shoulders above all who have ever lived upon this planet. I think this is a wonderful promise, the promise that the first dominion that was lost by Adam's sin is going to be restored through Christ's righteousness. Then will be fulfilled the promise that came from the lips of Jesus who said, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." Matthew 5:5.

If men of science learned how to create life, it wouldn't be the meek who would inherit the earth, it would be the strong and the mighty. But the Bible says it is the meek who are going to inherit the earth. Not those who are always trying to elbow their way around, making advantages for themselves at the expense of others, but those who believe in honesty and brotherhood, those who are willing to live by the noble principles of this Book.

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." II Peter 3:13. Not a new planet but this same planet made new. Made like it was in the beginning. The restoration of the first dominion. God gave this promise to Abraham almost four thousand years ago. That is when Abraham lived. It was a long time ago. God spoke to Abraham one night and said, Look up at the stars in the heaven, look at the grains of sand on the seashore. Then God said to Abraham, Your descendants are going to be as numerous as the stars of the heavens, as countless as the sand on the seashore.

Paul in the book of Romans, referring to this same promise, said, "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world ... ." Romans 4:13. This was the promise that God made to Abraham, that he and his descendants should inherit the earth. How do we tie this in with the text that says, The meek shall inherit the earth? Before we leave this text, let us read it again, "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Romans 4:13.

This gives us a clue that the realization of this promise depends upon our faith in Christ. Even though the promise was given way back there in Old Testament times some two thousand years before Jesus Christ was born into this world of ours, yet the promise hinged upon faith in Christ. The writer of Hebrews, in the New Testament, says that Abraham looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Hebrews 11:10. Abraham looked forward to a place in the heavenly city described way over in the book of Revelation. Revelations 21:2.

Now you might say, Well, if the promise is on the basis of faith, we don't need to worry about the laws of God. We don't need to worry about the commandments; but I think that might be a rash conclusion to come to, because the Bible also reminds us that Abraham had great respect for the commandments of God. That is one reason that God chose Abraham to be a leader of his people, "Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws." Genesis 26:5.

Abraham knew that salvation was on the basis of faith, but Abraham didn't use this faith as an excuse for disregarding the law of God. No, God said, "Abraham kept my commandments and my laws."

Galatians 3:29 says, "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." In other words, all those who accept Christ as their Saviour are counted as the spiritual descendants of Abraham. Abraham was a man of faith who believed in God and by faith he accepted the promised Messiah who was to come. As we exercise this same principle of faith, we are counted as the spiritual descendants of Abraham and thus heirs according to the promise that God made to Abraham.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Suicide

Listen to the audio version Now!

The tenth leading cause of death in the United States is suicide, and among teen-agers from 15 to 19 it is the second leading cause of death. These statistics are based upon the official record. It is estimated that almost twice that figure would be closer to the truth. And at least four times as many have attempted suicide without succeeding.

According to a leading psychologist, suicide is the second largest cause of death among college students, and they have a suicide rate 50 percent higher than for the country as a whole. One student takes his own life every one and a half hours somewhere in the U. S.

There are some interesting and alarming facts about this burgeoning problem of self-destruction. It's downright terrifying to think that our world is in such a mess that life has become unbearable for so many. It's not the ignorant, uneducated class who are making up the statistics either. In Los Angeles County alone at least one medical doctor kills himself every month. Women try suicide three times more often than men, but three times as many men die. And strange as it may seem 500 children or adolescents die every year by their own hand. The way things are looking right now one out of every hundred Americans who die this year will be a suicide.

While we're thinking of so many student suicides, let's ask the question as to why so many bright young people on the threshold of life, choose to lay it down instead of take it up. Most of them leave notes behind, and if you could gather all of these notes together and paste them on one page you would read the story of the short-comings of our society. Many students sit at the feet of those who do not believe in God. Some teachers profess belief in God but the majority these days do not. Students get to studying into philosophy and psychology, and they lose all idea of a God. They build up the theory that in themselves they are complete; that there is no limit to which they may develop. Then some begin to look at themselves and begin to feel an inferiority complex. Perhaps they conclude that they are not as capable as others, and suddenly they are gone. The godless teachers have taken away the idea of God. They have destroyed faith in a hereafter; they mock at any hope of a life beyond. Then, since there is nothing left to look forward to, many students just decide to end it all.

Suicide is infectious. You might say that it is contagious. Many times the suicide chart shows that if one individual ends his own life, many others may do likewise, following his example. A professor in one of the universities took his life; in a very little time after, six of his students had followed him in committing suicide.

There is a text that I want to read in Exodus 20:13. "Thou shalt not kill." There is the commandment, Thou shalt not kill. Now please do not draw any conclusions on today's subject until it is all finished. But right here in the beginning of our study I want to state that an individual who intentionally takes his own life has broken the commandment of God, but we are trying to determine if a suicide can be saved. We see the suicide lying there, and I turn to God's Word and find that he lies there condemned and apparently without hope. That suicide is held up to scorn because he has broken the commandment which says, "Thou shalt not kill." We point the finger of scorn because the suicide broke that one commandment. Yet how many, thought of as perfectly respectable, may break any other of the nine commandments, and people think nothing of it. I think it is fair that we look at this subject today in that light.

What is the attitude of the public on this subject of suicide? I was reading today from one writer who feels that a man's life is his own and that he has a right to end it if and when he cares to; it is nobody's business. If he finds that there is no more pleasure in this life, he has a right to terminate life, this man teaches. I say if a man is just a beast, if he lives just to satisfy hunger, thirst, or passion, then that attitude is all right. If we are living an animal existence, then it is as all right to end that life as it is to turn off a light or a motor. But let us remember that God said, "Let us make man in our image." Paul says, "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price." And again, "No man liveth unto himself." We are weak and defiled from centuries of degeneration, yet we are above the brute creation. We draw our life from heaven, made in the image of God. God gave us life, and only God has the right to take that life away.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Another writer says, "If there is a God he has no right to interfere with suicide for if there is a God, (and this man doesn't believe that there is) that God is immortal and so can't commit suicide. Not being able to die and being all-powerful, it is impossible for Him to sympathize with us in this life, therefore God has no right to interfere, if man chooses to end his own life."

I find the answer in the Bible. When he says that God can't die; that he can't suffer with us, he has laid himself open to condemnation from the Bible. For One of the three Members of the Godhead came down to this earth and gave His life! That should silence that accusation forever. Jesus said, "I lay down my life. No one can take it from Me, but I lay it down of Myself." Friends, I want you to remember that Jesus went right down through the trials of this life and packed into thirty-three short years all the agonies and temptations that most people suffer in three score and ten. So I say the heart of God, Whom we worship, is sympathetic. He sees and feels with the hearts of those who are contemplating suicide. Jesus' great heart of love yearns over the pitiful individual who, in despair decides to end it all.

Now, why do people take their own lives? I want to make this statement: The sin of suicide, taking one's life over there at the end of the trail, that is not the primary sin, but the primary sin is this building up of sin which leads up to the final step. In other words, a person starts back there, earlier in life, battling and struggling, and then he finally gives up; he loses hope and off he goes from a high bridge or out of some window; his life is ended. It is a life marked by lack of faith in God that finally terminates in suicide. It seems so horrible to us the act of suicide, but to God it is what leads up to it that is the primary sin. Murder of self is just the climax of hopeless doubt. How could a man end his own life if he believes this wonderful assurance, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." Romans 8:28.

One thing which is a major cause of a suicide is love. A young man falls in love with some young lady, and places every trust in her, then she falls in love with someone else and marries him. The young man takes poison to end his heart ache. Many lovers have said, before suicide, "There is nothing left for me to live for!" Where do I find their counterpart in the Bible? I find it in Genesis chapter 3. After God had created man, he said, "It is not good for man to live alone." He created Eve to be a companion to Adam. Then Eve took of the forbidden fruit—you know the story—she was condemned to die. She brought the fruit over to Adam and said, "Adam, it is wonderful. I wish you would try it. I feel so good, I am beginning to be as wise as a God." Oh, friends, when Adam saw what had happened, he was overwhelmed with grief. He had not tasted of sin. He said, "Here is Eve, my loved one, my darling companion. My whole life is wrapped up in her, and here she has gone into sin, and God said she would have to die. I'll eat the fruit and die with her—I can't live on alone!" And Adam committed spiritual suicide that he might die with her. If he had remained true in that time of test, God could have supplied another companion for him, and could have wiped away all of that sorrow. Take courage, for Jesus is able to supply the needs of your poor bleeding heart! He is able to fill that aching void in your bosom. The time is coming when God will wipe away all tears from your eyes and there will be no more sorrow. Hold on a little longer—"Have faith, dear friend, in God."

There is another cause of many suicides. I picked up a paper one day and read that a bank in a certain city had gone on the rocks. A few days later I picked up the paper again and found that the president was found dead in his room, a revolver by his side. I read another article telling of the number who committed suicide as a result of the stock markets crashing. So few are willing to sacrifice for God, but I find that many, many people offer their lives as a willing sacrifice for money. It is a terrible thing to think that money can wrap itself around a man's heart until he will die if he can't have it. If men would look more at the sign of the cross and less at the sign of the dollar, there would be far fewer suicides. Follow the suicide record as it goes higher and higher. As the stock market goes down, the suicide graph goes up. It shows that people have placed a value of this life in terms of dollars and cents. They have lost sight of eternal rewards and heaven's sure promises.

Suicide is taking a toll even from among those who are God's children, I want to read you a text found in I Corinthians 3:17, "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." Now there is a strong statement. We pick a man out and use him as a suicide example. He destroys his life with a bullet or a poison pill. But over here are a whole host of people who are committing suicide. They are doing things which they know are shortening their lives, and they defend themselves, "Isn't that my own business? Is it any body else's business what I do?" It is God's business. One man ends his own life in five seconds. Another ends his over a period of five or ten years, with something else. Many a so-called Christian, by evil habits, is guilty of committing gradual suicide on the installment plan.

There is another reason why some commit suicide—cherished sin. Sin has some so thoroughly tangled up in a net; they try to get out, but the harder they try, the worse things seem to get; they feel themselves in a hopeless condition. I think of a man in the Bible. It is King Saul. He was humble in the beginning of his reign. At first he was willing to do what God told. Later he came to something he didn't care to do, and detoured around that. Again he came to a place where he didn't want to do what God said, and he sidetracked around that. You read the record of Saul. After trying to dicker with God, he came to the place where he could say, "Oh God isn't so particular after all. I know I shouldn't have done what I did, but what else could I do? After all, God isn't so particular." So Saul tried to cover up his sins by saying God isn't particular. God finally refused to talk with him. Finally Saul came to the place where he decided there was nothing he could do to get out of his troubles. He saw his son, Jonathan slain in battle, so when he could bare it no longer, Saul threw himself upon his own spear and killed himself—committed suicide. He had thought that little sins didn't make any difference. That is one of the devil's best traps. So many say, "Do you think it makes any difference? Would God be so particular about little things?" The individual becomes so entangled in sin, he feels there is no way out. Suicide seems the easiest escape.

I want to read Matthew 27:3-5, "Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders. Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? See thou to that. And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself." Judas was a Christian, he had been baptized. Judas had cast out devils and healed the sick; he had every mark of being a Christian.

But my friends, Judas had allowed his thinking to go wrong. He tried to do something different from what God had planned. And that is the way that we so often do. Judas had not spent one penny of that fatal money. He came back hoping to deliver the Son of God. He didn't think that Jesus would allow himself to be captured, condemned, and crucified. When Judas realized what was actually taking place, he rushed out of that place and threw his body down from that tree, suspended by a rope. The next day as they were going out to Calvary they saw that tragic sight—one of the twelve lying at the foot of that tree, a suicide! How that must have hushed the crowd. Oh how many are betraying our Saviour today? Cherished sin with its strangling hold, led Judas to a suicide's grave.

But can a suicide be saved? I can only draw this conclusion as I read my Bible: If a man's mind has come to the place where his mind is out of order, but his life is otherwise right with God, God will not hold him accountable. God holds us accountable only for what we know we are doing. Here is a text for you to take home with you, "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." James 4:17. I take comfort in the fact that there are some who do not realize what they are doing. They go to a suicide's death unintentionally. I thank God that I am not to judge. I find hope in that today.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Two Laws - Part 2

In our last broadcast, we introduced the question of the two laws spoken of in the Bible. Multitudes of Christians have been perplexed about the Old Testament requirements of salvation in comparison to the New Testament plan. So far we have learned that the means of being saved was exactly the same in both Old and New Testaments. All are saved by grace through faith.

"Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin."—so wrote the Apostle Paul, and so understood the generations from Adam and Eve on down. The shed blood which saves is that of Christ the Lamb of God who died on the cross almost 2,000 years ago. We look back to that event in faith, accepting His death in our behalf.

But those who lived before Jesus died had to look forward in faith to that event. They had to exercise faith in the fact that it would take place; we exercise faith in the fact that it did take place.

In order to show their faith they were given a law requiring the sacrifice of a lamb. The lamb represented Christ, and by killing the animal they were showing faith in His death for them. During all those long centuries, the people could only see Christ through the symbol of the lamb which they sacrificed each time they sinned. They were saved by their faith in a promise.

After 4,000 years of promise, it finally came to pass: "When the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law ...". Galatians 4: 4.

Thus it was, also, that John the Baptist stopped short in his preaching one day when he saw Jesus and exclaimed: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." John 1: 29.

So it was when Jesus died upon the cross He, with a loud voice, cried, "It is finished." What was finished? Why that long period of ceremonies and rituals that had been in effect since the first day of sin had at last all come to an end. As Jesus died on the cross, God by a supernatural display of power tore the veil of the temple in two. The temple service on this earth was forever ended.

"Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices...which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation." Hebrews 9: 9, 10.

"Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross;...Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ." Colossians 2: 14, 16, 17 (Italics supplied).

All the sacrificing of animals, all the new moon and yearly feasts which were called ceremonial sabbaths came to an end, for their whole purpose was to point forward to Christ. When Christ finally came and died on the cross, then all the ceremonial precepts of the law of Moses died with Him. Men will agree to this, but here is where the majority make a mistake. They try to nail the whole of God's Ten Commandments to the cross along with all the ceremonies and ordinances of the law of Moses. This cannot be done. The Ten Commandments stand separate and distinct as God's everlasting principles of righteousness. They must not be confused with the ceremonial law. These great principles of the Ten Commandments were not added because of transgression. They were here before sin.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Go down through the list of the Ten Commandments and you cannot conceive of a time when a single one of them did not exist. Neither did they end when Jesus died on the cross. There never has been a moment in all the history of the world when it was proper and right to worship other gods; make graven images, take God's name in vain, break the Sabbath, dishonor parents, kill, steal, commit adultery, lie, covet, etc. There never has been a time; there never will be. Even in eternity, in the new earth these principles will abide. Will they not?

Can you think of a time over the horizon of eternity when it may become all right to worship other gods, take God's name in vain, kill, steal, lie, or commit adultery? Of course not! Those principles of right are everlasting. They never had a beginning. They were not added because of transgression. They will never have an ending. They will not cease to be right when we get into the new earth. They are as eternal as God Himself!

Even the Sabbath, the fourth commandment of the Decalogue will be obeyed in heaven. Did you know that? Let me read it to you: "For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain. And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord." Isaiah 66:22, 23.

Why will the redeemed meet from one new moon to another? Why, I read over in Revelation 22:2 that the tree of life has twelve kinds of fruit, and it yields its fruit every month. Of course, the redeemed will come from one new moon to another, or from one month to another to partake of the fruit of the tree of life. More than that, it says that every Sabbath they will come before God in special worship. It is too bad that men have the antipathy toward the Sabbath that they do. It was made by God to be a blessing to man. It was put in the heart of His Decalogue which He wrote Himself with His own finger. It was honored by Jesus when He was upon the earth. And on the authority of the Word of God, it is going to be kept by the redeemed in the New Earth when sin and the marks of sin are forever removed.

But someone says, "Didn't God give the Ten Commandments to the Jews?" Yes, He did. He spoke those Ten Commandments Himself from the top of Mt. Sinai in the hearing of some two million Jews. And He delivered the tables of stone to Moses, the leader of the Jewish nation. But that doesn't mean that it was the Creator's will that only the Jews should refrain from worshipping idols, committing adultery, lying, stealing, etc. Of course not! That is and always has been God's will for all mankind. He gave those commandments to the Jews because they comprised His church. They were in turn then to go out and teach those principles to the other nations. They failed, just like a lot of professed Christians fail today.

Ministers of the Gospel who ought to be warning judgment-bound men about the need of obeying God are openly proclaiming that men can break these commandments of God and still get to heaven! And men today use as the basis for their arguments texts in Galatians and Colossians where Paul speaks of the law being done away. But he speaks just as plainly of the law being established in Christ. Now, either Paul was speaking of two different laws or he was hopelessly confused in his theology. But Paul was not confused. Neither was the Holy Spirit confused when He moved Paul to write those affirmations. It is men today who are confused when they try to abolish God's holy commandments by nailing them to the cross with the ceremonial laws of Moses. There is where the confusion lies.

In Deuteronomy 5 God lists the Ten Commandments as they are given earlier in Exodus 20. Then at the conclusion, He says: "These words (the commandments) the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire... And he added no more. And he wrote them in two tables of stone ... ." Deuteronomy 5:22 (Italics supplied).

There were Ten Commandments—no more, no less—written on tables of stone. The workmanship and writing was done by God Himself. "And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables." Exodus 32:16.

Now, I think we ought to settle it right here that God knows how to count to ten. He is the great Numberer. He keeps track of the untold millions of worlds, and when He gives Ten Commandments and then says, "That's all, I have added no more." I think we ought to believe Him. How does it come that men will add to those Ten Commandments all the scores and scores of precepts and ordinances and ceremonies as given in the law of Moses? To do so is to give the lie to God. He said He added nothing to the Ten, and we would do well to believe Him.

Why do men work so hard to destroy the Ten Commandments by nailing them to the cross? I'll tell you why! It is because they think God made a mistake in including with His commandments a decree for men to keep the Sabbath. Because they don't like that Sabbath, they are willing to nail the whole Ten Commandments to the cross along with the ceremonial law and then endeavor to bring back the nine they want in order to get rid of the one they don't want!

Strange situation indeed! Think of it! Man lost his home in the beginning and his relationship with God because of disobeying a commandment of God. Has God changed? Does He look upon disobedience with more tolerance today than He did in the beginning? Hardly! He warns us about that. "I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Malachi 3:6. With Him there "is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." James 1:17.

How, then, do you think the Almighty looks upon this action of puny man, who with boldness and perfect freedom takes God's holy commandments and shuttles them around to suit his own whims and fancies—nails them to the cross, keeps the ones he wants and throws out the one he doesn't want! It is bad enough for men to do it, but for ministers of the Gospel to get into the sacred desk and teach other men to do it is a thousand times worse. Jesus said: "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 5:19.

"Least," do you realize what "least" means? It means that in the Day of Judgment there won't be anybody in all the human race lower in the estimation of God than the religious teacher who has instructed men and women that they can break any one of His holy commandments. That man in the judgment will be adjudged more guilty than the thieves and harlots and the murderers whom we consider outcasts today.

Someone says, "Didn't Jesus come to change things and to put us under grace?" Jesus did come to change things. But we had better have it clear what the things are that He came to change. Not the everlasting of right as embodied in the Ten Commandments. It was rather the ceremonial laws of sacrifices and ordinances that were added because of transgression and that pointed forward to Christ. But when the Christ toward whom they pointed had come and completed His work, that temporary law was no longer needed. It came to an end. He nailed it to His cross. But the moral precepts of the Ten Commandments were not changed one iota by the death of Jesus upon the cross.

Now, what does it mean to be put under grace? We here in the New Testament are saved by grace. But we have already learned that the people of the Old Testament were also saved by grace. Now what is grace? Grace is simply the gospel of salvation. Paul said in speaking of the hardships that he knew were before him: "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." Acts 20:24.

There it is! What is grace? It is the Gospel. What is the Gospel? It is the good news of salvation. It is the fulfillment of the promise made in the Garden of Eden—God taking the place of man and suffering the full penalty for the transgression of His holy law. That was what Jesus did. He was God revealed in human flesh. And He suffered in all respects the condemnation of the damned in order that we might be free.

But, friends, please don't make the mistake of thinking that because Jesus suffered the penalty of our transgression that He therefore abolished God's holy principles of right and freed us from having to obey God or keep His commandments.

On the contrary, Jesus came into the world to establish the law. He said Himself that He had not come to do away with the law but to fulfill, to obey, to live out its requirements in a way that no man had ever been able to do. Matthew 5:17. Isaiah said that He would magnify the law and make it honorable. Isaiah 42:21. What does it mean to magnify the law and make it honorable? It certainly doesn't mean to destroy or do away with it. It means just the opposite. It means the requirements of God's holy law would be made more plain to our understanding. They would be enlarged and magnified and made understandable by the spotless life of Christ, the Son of God.

^ Top

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Two Laws - Part 3

A strange objection is often raised by people who don't like to hear the Ten Commandments mentioned or preached about. They ask, "Why preach the law when nobody can be saved by obeying it? Furthermore, man is humanly unable to keep the Ten Commandments anyway. Since Christ came," they say, "we are saved by grace, and therefore, the law ought to be just forgotten and put aside and men ought not to be preaching about it as much as they are."

Two facts should be made clear at the very beginning today. The first is that when we preach regarding the importance of God's moral law, we are not claiming at all that anybody can be saved by keeping the law. The second fact is this: The objection could just as well be raised against the law in relation to the days before Christ as to the Christian era. Certainly men were no more morally able to keep God's holy law in the centuries before Christ than they are in the years after Christ, nor could they in those earlier centuries hope to obtain salvation through the law, for God has only one way of saving men and He has had that from the days of Adam right on down through the sacrifice of Christ. So then, if this objection really proves anything against the law today, it proves it against the law for every century. In other words, there would be no useful place for God's law at all in the whole history of the world. This is the length that people are driven to, my friends, when they try to do away with the Ten Commandments.

Now, we agree with the objector that no one can be saved by keeping the law and that man is humanly unable to keep it. But, we do not agree with the conclusion he would have us draw from these facts. What would we say to the man who would argue that one should never look into a mirror because you can't make yourself beautiful by looking into it? Well, we would say that it is not the business of a mirror to make people beautiful, that no one ever made such claims for a mirror. The function of the mirror is to provide us with the means of knowing whether we look as we ought to. And when we have discovered how we look, then we can take appropriate means for remedying the imperfections. And so it is with the law of God. The law was never intended to make man holy or pure or beautiful. Its task is not that of saving man from his sins and imperfections but providing him with a means of discovering just what his condition is. When he gazes at that law with mind quickened by the convicting Spirit of God, he sees immediately where his moral defects are, even as he discovers from gazing into the mirror where the physical defects are in his body. And when men see their spiritual defects, when they become conscious of their uncleanness, then they are in a frame of mind to listen to a message that offers cleansing from their defilement. In other words, only when a man realizes that he is a sinner is he ready to listen to the gospel which is the good news of salvation from sin. "For by the law is the knowledge of sin." Romans 3:20.

But after we have the knowledge, friends, it is only the grace of Jesus Christ that cleanses us from the sin. The commandments, of course, are beautiful as written out on the tables of stone, but they are infinitely more beautiful as they are lived out in the life of Jesus. He is the only one who kept them perfectly. In fact, you look at His life and it is God-like. Why? Because the principles of the Ten Commandments were lived out perfectly and without blemish in His life. No wonder God the Father said, "Thou art my beloved Son. In thee I am well pleased." Luke 3:22. Friends, if we could only stand before God as righteous as Jesus was, wouldn't that be wonderful! If only God could say to us, "You are my beloved son. I am well pleased with you." Do you know, friends, that is exactly what is required of us. In order to walk into the kingdom of God, we have to show a life that is without blemish from the cradle to the grave—not one single sin must appear on the records against us. Not one. You say, "Well, how can that be? Who can be saved, then?" Friends, nobody can be saved outside of Christ but here the great genius of the gospel comes into play. Jesus said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Matthew 11:28. "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." John 6:37

When we cast ourselves upon Him, He removes our unrighteousness and gives us in its

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

place the perfect robe of His own pure righteousness, and thus, we stand as righteous as Jesus in the sight of God. It is not done because of any inherent goodness on our part; it is rather because of the goodness of the Saviour, because we have a God-given Saviour, and He provides a God-given passport to heaven. All our sins are placed upon Him. All of Jesus' righteousness has been placed upon us and we are justified, saved by grace.

So the apostle Paul said, "Sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace." Romans 6:14. No longer am I under condemnation. I am freed from condemnation through the grace of Christ, and to me, now, the law is dead for it no longer condemns me. But am I free now to go out and break its precepts just because Jesus has taken me out from under its condemnation? No. Let's try to illustrate this with a story. There is a law in the city where I live that forbids preachers from breaking plate glass windows down on Main Street. But here I am desperately in need of a suit. Walking down Main Street late one night, I find a store window with a suit just to my liking. So I take out a glass cutter from my pocket (strange tool for a preacher to have along, of course) and cut a tremendous hole in that plate glass window and take out the suit. And it is just exactly the one I want, but as I walk down the street, I feel a heavy hand on my shoulder and there stands a policeman. He has been watching the whole thing. Of course, I am marched off to jail.

As I stand before the judge, I have no defense for I have been caught with the evidence. The judge expresses himself that it is too bad for a preacher to fall from grace that badly. But there I am, guilty as sin, and he has no choice but to levy a fine on me. Now, the fine is too much for me to pay so I am sentenced to a term in jail. The whole story, of course, comes out in the newspaper and Brother Jones, a fellow pastor, learns about it. He feels sorry for me, and he comes down to talk with the judge. He is assured that if my fine is paid, I can go free. So being a rich man in his own right, Pastor Jones pays my fine. I don't know how much the fine is, but I imagine they levy a pretty heavy fine on preachers who break plate glass windows and steal suits. But Pastor Jones pays the fine, and all of a sudden, somebody comes into the jail and announces, "All right, preacher, you are free now; you can go out." So I walk out of there, and I see Pastor Jones waiting for me. I feel so very grateful to him and very, very humble about the whole thing, too. I can hardly believe it is true, and so I ask Brother Jones, "Am I really free now to go and walk down the street?" He says, "Absolutely. You are free. You can leave the jail. You can go out on the street again."

Well, isn't that wonderful. The law that had been grinding me down and restricting me of my freedom now has no hold on me. It is just as though it doesn't exist. It is dead to me. Why? Because its demands upon me have been paid, and I am freed. Therefore, since the law is dead to me, and I am no longer under its condemnation, why not play that it doesn't exist, and the first plate glass window I approach I will smash it and steal another suit. Could I get away with that, friend? "Why, no!" you say. "That law is dead to you until you break it, but when you break it, you are back under its condemnation again." And that is exactly right.

Now, why should it be difficult for us to understand what Paul means when he said: "You are not under the law but under grace." He is not saying that we are free to go out and break the law. He is simply stating that the condemnation of the law no longer rests upon us. We are free in Christ and now we stand justified before God in the same light as though we had never sinned. But now that He has freed us, could it be possible to construe our freedom to mean that we can go out and break His commandments at will? Oh, friends, we are now under a double obligation. Not only because it was so in the beginning, but also because He came all the way from heaven to suffer in order to deliver us. With Jesus enthroned within the life, it will be a delight to obey Him and keep His commandments. This is why we read in 1 John 5:2, 3: "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." And it is not part of the law that God wants to write in the heart, but all of it. The law, either as written out in print or in the life of Jesus, embodies perfection. The breaking of any part of it destroys that perfection, thus James says in James 2:10: "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

I like the illustration that D. L. Moody gave in likening the Ten Commandments to a chain of ten links. How many links do you have to cut before the chain comes apart? Of course, only one. Well, we break the commandments of God, and we are down under its condemnation until the Saviour frees us from its condemnation. He doesn't free us to go out and continue to break the law. He said to that woman taken in adultery and who had been brought to Him for judgment, "I do not condemn you. Go and sin no more." In other words, He said, "I forgive you. You are now under grace. But don't continue in your commandment breaking. Sin no more."

You know, there was a rebellion in the Austrian army. A whole regiment rebelled against the Emperor. The rebellion was quelled, but then they had the problem of what to do with the guilty regiment. They didn't want to exterminate a whole regiment of trained soldiers, and yet, they couldn't let the crime go unpunished either. So the decree was passed down that every tenth man of that regiment would be shot. The rebellious regiment was lined up and they began to count off—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10—and the tenth man was taken out of line to be shot, and another tenth, and another, and another.

Well, there was a father and a son in the same regiment. The son looking down the line counted quickly ahead of the officers and saw that his father was one of the tenth men in that line. He thought of his mother and brothers and sisters back home. The young man himself was not married. There was no one depending on him. Quickly he made his decision. He stepped over behind his father. He pushed him aside, stepped into his place and was counted as the tenth man and was taken off to die. Friends, you and I are in death row. The condemnation of God's law was upon us, but Jesus, taking pity, came down from heaven, took our place and died for our sins. Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

What Must I Do? - Part 1 Listen to the audio version Now!

There are a lot of questions that may seem important to you, but the question we are going to discuss today is the MOST IMPORTANT IN ALL OF THE WORLD. And you want to know what it is? That is why you are listening today. It doesn't matter whether you are a farmer or a banker, a housewife or a teacher, a store keeper or a plumber, young or old, this should still be the most important question in your whole life. And you must know the answer. For if you do not know the answer, life is all in vain.

What is this most vital question? We find in Matthew 19:16 that a very rich young man came to Jesus and asked this question, "Good Master, what good thing must I do, that I may have eternal life?" Do you know any more important question than this? What can I do to be saved? How can I BE SURE that I can have everlasting life? I am sure there is no more important question that can be asked in all this world. Everyone listening must some day stand before God in the judgment, and so we should all seek the answer to this question.

This young man asked Jesus, "What can I do?" and that was a very fair question. The wonderful thing about it is that the answer Jesus gave was very, very clear and very, very simple. First, in Matthew 19:17, Jesus told him: "... If thou wilt enter into life, KEEP THE COMMANDMENTS." That is the first point. Then almost flippantly, the young man countered, "Oh, I've done that ever since I was a child; I was brought up that way. Mother was a member of the church."

But that apparently was not enough. So the young man asked, "... WHAT LACK I YET?" He had followed the letter of the law, so he could not figure out what else he could possibly do. He didn't recognize his obligation to his neighbor. The law of God is divided into two parts; half of it has to do with our connection with God, "LOVE THE LORD THY GOD," and the other half of the law has to do with our relationship to our fellow men, "THOU SHALT LOVE THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF."

Now this rich young ruler had not come to regard his neighbor as he should, so the Lord tested him on a very touchy point. He was avaricious; he was trying to get all that he could out of life and did not recognize his obligation to his fellow men. In Matthew 19:21, Jesus said, "... If thou wilt be perfect, GO AND SELL that thou hast, and give it to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven. ..." Jesus had touched a very sensitive spot. And the young man's face began to flush.

But the question of his property disposition is not the main thing. Some people stop right there. I have heard a good many preachers making quite a point of the fact that Jesus wants us to go and sell what we have and give it to the poor or to the church. I think it is good to give to the poor, and I approve of giving all we can to the church. But I don't think that is the primary lesson that Jesus meant to teach us.

I think that what Jesus said next in Matthew 19:21 is the most important advice that Jesus gave the young man, "... AND COME AND FOLLOW ME." This is the principal thought. Whatever it is that stands between you and following Jesus, that is the thing that He says to get rid of. If it is riches, get rid of it. If it is your social standing, for your soul's sake, forget it. If it is all the clubs you belong to, all the activities that stand between you and a closer personal walk with your Saviour, then away with them.

In Matthew 5:29,30 Jesus emphasized this, "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out. ... And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off. ..." Anything in order to be right with God! Let nothing stand between you and following your Saviour. There are a good many individuals that allow this or that to stand between them and Jesus. Maybe it is a loved one, or a friend or opposition, or the pleasures of this world. Whatever it is, do not let it any longer stand between you and your God.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Jesus condensed the matter into a simple formula: Come and follow me. And, then, don't forget this: Keep the commandments.

It is unfortunate that there are so many individuals, especially Christians, who have the mistaken opinion that salvation through Christ on Calvary applies only to those this side of the cross. They seem to forget that there are two arms to the cross, one reaching toward the Old Testament and one reaching toward the New Testament. The arms of the cross extend to the whole wide world. Christ is the Saviour of the entire world. Christ is the Saviour of the Christians, but He is also the Saviour of the Jew and of the Gentile.

In Acts 4:12 the Good Book plainly tells us that Jesus is the one and only Lord and Saviour of all, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Don't forget that. Jesus Christ is the only Saviour of this entire world. The people in Old Testament times had no other Saviour. Jesus Christ and Jesus Christ alone is the way to eternal life. It is not keeping the law that would give eternal life to the young ruler, although that was important. He must come and follow the Saviour.

In Revelation 13:8 it is plain that Jesus was the Saviour since the very creation of man, for it says, ". . . THE LAMB SLAIN FROM THE FOUNDATION OF THE WORLD." Here you see the larger import of Christ's sacrifice on Calvary. This is a very, very vital, and very, very important point. Jesus was actually offered, His blood was given as a sacrifice. His life was given as a guarantee back there in the very beginning of the history of this world of ours.

God had intended that Adam and Eve should keep the Garden of Eden pure, clean and undefiled. In Romans 5:18, we are told, "Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." What did we inherit through Adam, LIFE OR DEATH? Death! But thank God that while condemnation came through the sin of one, justification also came through Christ Jesus on Calvary.

Not one of us is free from the blight of sin for in Romans 3:23 we read, "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." And in Romans 6:23 it says, "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." "The wages of sin is death." That is exactly what the Bible says. But it also says that eternal life and justification came through ONE, and that one is Jesus, our Saviour. Remember, it came as a gift, we cannot earn it.

God cautioned Adam and Eve about the tree of knowledge of good and evil. But Satan slipped in with his most insidious suggestions that God is not particular about little things. Over and over and over again that dangerous attitude has been passed on from generation to generation that a God of love will not destroy men and women when they break just little commandments. Right there in the Garden, Adam and Eve found out that God is particular about little things for they took of the fruit and ate of it and were immediately denied access to the tree of life. Man possessed immortality until he sinned.

In Genesis 2:16 God commands, ". . . In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Satan said in Genesis 3:4, "And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die." Now who told the truth? Satan knew that God was telling the truth. In fact, Satan expected that Adam and Eve would be killed that very day. He thought that he had succeeded, now that Adam and Eve had sinned and must die. Now he would be ruler of this world. It would be his home forever. He had gained it from Adam by his deception, and now he would be the prince of this world. But before nightfall that evening, before the setting of the sun, we see the tragic picture of Jesus in heaven, as He, the Son of God, steps before the Father. He pleads, "My Father, let me bear the curse. Let me die in Adam's stead." Jesus loved Adam dearly for He had created him. They were like twin brothers, for Adam had been made in the likeness of Jesus Christ. Jesus loved him with an everlasting love. Jesus loved Adam more than He loved Himself. He was willing to come down and die that Adam might have eternal life.

Now let us read another text found in 2 Timothy 1:9. "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus BEFORE THE WORLD BEGAN." When was grace given? Before the world began. Grace was given us, not according to our works, but according to his purpose, given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. Grace, then, came through Jesus in the Old Testament times, right back there in Eden.

Jesus offered His life, and the Father accepted that sacrifice. Do you think the Father gave up His Son without a struggle? In John 3:16 we are told of God's decision, "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." I tell you, friends, that must have been a terrific struggle when the Father weighed it in the balance, "Shall I give my Son to die?" God says he will forgive all who have fought against Him and despised the work of grace, if they will only repent and accept His Son Jesus Christ.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Biblical Myths - Part 2

Listen to the audio version Now!

On today's broadcast, and for the next few days, we want to examine some very common Biblical myths. Now, don't get the wrong idea, friends. Let me state without reservations that the Amazing Facts broadcast stands firmly on the platform of the inspiration and accuracy of the Bible. We have no sympathy whatever with the modernist school that tries to explain away God's clear instructions by calling them myths.

No, the type of myths we want to explore today are myths that man has made up, false teachings that claim support from the Scriptures. Frequently we get letters asking about these very topics. While all letters to Amazing Facts are answered personally, we like to answer publicly on the radio some questions that are often asked. Many, many of our listeners have asked if Christmas trees are not condemned in the Bible. Some believe it is a sin to have a tree on the basis of Jeremiah 10:1-6. Now friends, let me make this very clear. I have no defense to make for the observing of pagan days, and there is absolutely no doubt but that December 25 is based upon the ancient pagan worship of the sun god. I do not believe that we can attach any religious sanctity to the day we call Christmas. On the other hand, I believe we must be very careful not to twist the Word of God to mean something that it doesn't really mean. Let's look at the text in question. "Hear ye the word which the Lord speaketh unto you, O house of Israel: Thus saith the Lord, Learn not the way of the heathen and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them. For the customs of the people are vain: for one cutteth a tree out of the forest, the work of the hands of the workman with the axe. They deck it with silver and with gold; they fasten it with nails and with hammers, that it move not. They are upright as the palm tree, but speak not; they must needs be borne because they cannot go. Be not afraid of them; for they cannot do evil, neither also is it in them to do good. Forasmuch as there is none like unto thee, O Lord, thou art great and thy name is great in might."

This text has been used as condemnation of Christmas trees, and a casual reading sounds as though the writer had the modern Christmas decorations in mind. But the context of the chapter places a completely new meaning upon the words. Jeremiah is describing the ways of the heathen in cutting a tree from the forest and carving an idol which is worshipped as a god. In verse 14 he speaks of the "graven image" as a false god: "there is no breath in them." "The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth" are contrasted with the creative power of the true God in verses 10-12. After cutting the tree and shaping it with the axe, Jeremiah says that it is decorated and fastened with nails (verse 3,4) where it remains, dumb and unheeding. It cannot speak or walk. Verse 5. To worship the "stock" of a tree is "brutish and foolish." Verse 8. Even though it is covered with silver plate and delicate clothing, it remains a "doctrine of vanities." Verses 8,9.

Our next problem involves a doctrine held by many thousands of sincere Christians, but it has no basis in the Scripture. It is the doctrine of eternal torment, that God will torture the wicked for all eternity. According to this teaching, they will suffer forever in a hell that is under the control of Satan himself.

One of the texts that we are often asked to explain is Mark 9:43,44. "And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter into life maimed than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." In this verse, "hell" is translated from the Greek word "Gehenna" which is another name for the Valley of Hinnon just outside the walls of Jerusalem. There the refuse and bodies of animals were cast into an ever-smoldering fire to be consumed. What might escape from the flames was constantly being destroyed by maggots which fed on the dead bodies. Gehenna symbolized a place of total destruction. Jesus taught in this verse that the fires of hell could not be quenched or put out by anyone. Isaiah said, "they shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame." Isaiah. 47:14. Yet he hastened to say in the same verse, "there shall not be a coal to warm at nor a fire to sit before it." So the unquenchable fire will go out after it has consumed the wicked as stubble." Jeremiah 17:24 says that Jerusalem burned with unquenchable fire, but it was totally destroyed as recorded in 1 Chronicles 36:19-21.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

The flames and worms of Gehenna represented the total annihilation and obliteration of sin and sinners. Earlier apostasy and idol worship in the Valley of Hinnon and God's judgments on Israel as a consequence, marked it as a symbol of punishment and judgment. God warned that it would become the "valley of slaughter" where the carcasses of this people shall be meat for the fowls of heaven." Jeremiah 7:31-34. With the fires of Gehenna burning before their eyes, Jesus could not have spoken a more graphic word to the Pharisees to describe the final total destruction of sinners.

Those who cite this text to support their doctrine of the natural immortality of the soul are thrown into a real dilemma. Why? Because the fire and worms are working, not upon disembodied souls but BODIES. According to Jesus those who are cast into that lake of fire will go in bodily form, and this text confirms that truth. The verses before and after this text speak of the hands, feet and bodies of those who suffer the Gehenna fire. In Matthew 5:30 Christ said, "The whole body" would be cast into hell. In Isaiah 66:24 the same Gehenna picture of hell is presented with the unquenchable flame and the destroying worms. But in this case "carcasses" is used, revealing the fact that the fire consumes dead bodies not disembodied souls. Speaking of the enemies of the Lord, Isaiah says, "the worm shall eat them like wool," Isaiah 51:8—a picture of being put out of existence.

On the same topic is the experience of King Saul of Israel with the witch of Endor. It is found in 1 Samuel 28:7-20. The story is briefly this: Saul was worried about the outcome of an upcoming battle with the Philistines. He asked God to reveal the outcome to him, but Saul, by his sins had separated himself from God and God would not answer him. That point is important to remember, friends. When God wouldn't answer him, Saul went to a spiritualist medium. But God had previously directed Saul to rid the country of all such mediums. So the witch of Endor conjured up an apparition. Let's pick up the story in verse 14: "And he said unto her, what form is he of? And she said, an old man cometh up; and he is covered with a mantle. And Saul perceived that it was Samuel, and he stooped with his face to the ground, and bowed himself." This spiritualistic seance has been cited as evidence for life after death. But here are points to the contrary.

1. God had departed from Saul and would not communicate with him. Verse 15.
2. Samuel was supposedly "brought up." Other expressions "ascending out of the earth," "Cometh up," and "Bring... up." Is this where the righteous dead are—down in the earth? Not according to those who believe in the immortal soul.
3. "Samuel" is described as "an old man covered with a mantle." Is this the way immortal souls appear? And where did the soul get the body? They are supposed to be disembodied. Was there a resurrection? Did God at the beck and call of the witch, raise up Samuel? If not, can Satan raise the dead?
4. The apparition of Samuel told Saul, "Tomorrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me." Saul committed suicide on the battlefield the next day. Where did Samuel dwell if the wicked Saul was to go to the same place?
5. The record never says that Saul saw Samuel. He received his information second hand from the witch, and only concluded it was Samuel from her description. The truth is that the devil deceived the dissolute old woman, and she deceived Saul. It was nothing more than a devil-generated seance.
6. The enormity of Saul's sin is revealed in these words: "So Saul died...for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to inquire of it; and inquired not of the Lord: therefore he slew him." 1 Chronicles 10:13,14.

Here is an interesting question that we get often in our mail—did Jesus do away with the Ten Commandments by fulfilling them? Surprisingly enough there seem to be thousands of Christians who are completely misinformed on this subject of law and grace. They believe somehow that God's grace annulled His law, and therefore, we don't have to keep the Ten Commandments anymore. By some strange twist of reasoning, they feel that Jesus kept the law for us so that we don't have to do it. Here is what Christ said about it. "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy but to fulfill."

It is quite evident from the opening words of this text that Christ was reading the minds of His critics who were accusing Him of doing away with the law. He said, "THINK NOT that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets...but to fulfill." Instead of abolishing it, He was actually doing the opposite. The word "fulfill" means literally "to fill; to make full." The same word is used in Matthew 3:15 where Jesus spoke concerning His baptism, "suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." There is no idea in the word which signifies "to bring to an end" or "to abolish". The law and prophets included not just the Ten Commandments, but all the Old Testament writings. Christ fulfilled those Scriptures, just as He fulfilled all righteousness at His baptism, by obedience to them. Paul used the word in Colossians 1:25, "wherefore I am made a minister...to fulfill the word of God." This does not mean to bring the word of God to an end, but rather to fully carry it out in obedience. In Romans 8:4 the sense is clearly revealed by the same word used in this sentence: "That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." Even those who seek to abolish the law must admit that the righteousness of those who walk after the Spirit is not "fulfilled" by being abolished. Yet this is the same word used in Matthew 5:17 to "fulfill" the law.

Finally, Paul gives a classic example of the word "fulfill" in Galatians 6:2. "Bear ye one anothers burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." Not one Christian believes that the law of Christ has been abolished. Neither should any Christian feel that the "law and the prophets" have been abolished. Romans 13:8-10 tells how to fulfill the law of the Ten Commandments by obedience to it.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Biblical Myths - Part 4

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we are going to explode one of the most common myths that church members are hung up on, and it is one of the most serious misconceptions, also. It is serious because it relates to the authority of God's great moral law of the Ten Commandments. Have you ever heard somebody say that all the Ten Commandments are repeated in the New Testament except one? I suppose there are hundreds of thousands of Christians who have been taught this fallacy by their religious leaders. And do you know which commandment they claim to be left out of the New Testament? You guessed it—the fourth commandment—the one about the Sabbath of the Lord.

Friends, I am going to read a text right now which proves that all ten of the commandments were just as binding in the New Testament as they had been in the Old. All of those great moral laws are equally valid and have been right down through the centuries. God did not write small, little local rules when He penned the Ten Commandments on tables of stone. He was putting down the great eternal principles of life for all mankind, and He wrote them upon imperishable tables of stone. But let's get to that text now which shows that one could never be eliminated from the ten. James 2:10-12 says, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all; for he that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law. So speak ye and so do as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."

Friends, please notice that this whole law James is talking about is the Ten Commandments. He quotes two of them to make sure we understand that point. Now the whole of ten is ten, isn't it? And if we break any one of the ten, we become transgressors or sinners. In fact, James even adds the vital information that everyone will be judged at last by that Ten Commandment law of God. That law is like a chain with ten links, and if we break one link, we have broken the chain.

With that truth before us, how could we believe that any one of those ten could be left out in the New Testament? James was a New Testament writer. Did he disagree with other writers of the same Bible? No indeed. The truth is that all ten of the commandments are repeated, in one form or another, in the New Testament. Paul indicated his belief that it would be sin to break that great moral law of the Ten Commandments. In Romans 7:7 he said, "What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin but by the law. For I had not known lust except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." does this reveal any tiny intimation that Paul looked lightly upon that law, or that he felt any of them could be broken? There is not a trace of any such heresy in any of Paul's writings. He consistently upheld the law of God as the great schoolmaster which gives a knowledge of sin and which leads us to Christ for forgiveness.

So much for the law as a whole; and there is no controversy over the law except for that fourth commandment which talks about the seventh day Sabbath. Is it upheld in the New Testament? First look at Christ's teaching on the perpetuity of the Sabbath. In Matthew 24:15-20 Jesus was describing the destruction of Jerusalem which would take place in 70 A.D. It was still 40 years in the future, but Christ gave this counsel to His disciples about that terrible occasion: "But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath day." Did you get that, friends? Christ told His disciples to pray for 40 years that the Romans would not besiege Jerusalem on the Sabbath. Now, if the Sabbath had been changed or cancelled, why would Jesus tell His followers to pray about it 40 years after He went back to Heaven. Does that sound as though the fourth commandment was not carried over into the New Testament?

Now I want to read another text about the Sabbath that has been largely overlooked, and which completely shatters the myth about it being left out of the New Testament. It is found in Hebrews 4:1-9. But before reading it, I want us to look at three other texts in the Old Testament which will help us to understand it better. First, let's read Ezekiel 20: 15,16,23,24, "Yet also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into a land I had given them flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands; because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: for their heart went after their idols. I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries; because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and their eyes were after their fathers' idols."

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Now friends, what I want you to see here is why God destroyed the children of Israel in the wilderness. One of the reasons that some of them were destroyed in the wilderness and were dispersed throughout the countries was because they broke the Sabbath Jesus made. Later, we are going to notice that the Apostle Paul, in the New Testament, also mentions the reason they were destroyed in the wilderness.

Now let's turn to the book of Jeremiah and notice the reason that there is no king on David's throne today, and why Jerusalem was destroyed by fire. In Jeremiah 17: 24,25 and 27 we read this: "And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the Lord, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the Sabbath day, to do no work therein; then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain forever." Now we can see that this was lack of faith, wasn't it? If they had continued to do what the Lord had told them in keeping the Sabbath holy, there would always have been someone on David's throne and the city would have remained forever. In other words, by their actions they said, "How can I make a living and keep the Sabbath?"

There were three things they were guilty of that God will not tolerate: 1) A lack of faith - "How can I make a living and keep the Sabbath?" 2) Unbelief in what God said would happen if they broke the Sabbath. 3) Willful disobedience in breaking the command that says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." In a moment we will see that Paul brings this out in the New Testament.

Now let's find out why Jerusalem was destroyed by fire, in verse 27. "But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the Sabbath day, and not bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the Sabbath day, then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched." Friends, this prophecy was fulfilled twice—once in the days of Jeremiah, and the second time forty years after Jesus went back to Heaven when the Romans came and took Jerusalem and burned it with fire and took the gold down to Rome. This was the reason Jesus said, "Pray that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath day." Matthew 24: 20. The disciples prayed this prayer for forty years.

Now with this little background we will read the New Testament verses which are so often overlooked, and we will be able to understand them. I will begin reading Hebrews 3: 17, and you will immediately see that Paul is talking about the verses in Ezekiel that we have just read; and the reason the Israelites were destroyed in the wilderness. "But with whom was he grieved forty years? Was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcasses fell in the wilderness?" Verse 17. Please notice here that they were destroyed in the wilderness because they sinned! 1 John 3: 4 states that "sin is the transgression of the law." We read in Ezekiel that this happened to them because they broke the Sabbath Jesus made.

Now, should I be afraid today if I break the Sabbath? Read the answer in Hebrews 4: 1,2. "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Notice it says, "Let us..." It is talking of Christians in the New Testament times, and Paul included himself. And he was a born-again Christian. Further, we notice that Paul states the gospel was preached unto us as well as unto them.

Paul states it was lack of faith that caused them not to keep the Sabbath. Let me ask you something, friends. Was Paul talking about the seventh-day Sabbath? Read the answer in verse 4, "For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, and God did rest the seventh day from all his works." No one can be confused there. Paul said he was talking about the rest of the Sabbath on the seventh day of the week. He quoted right from the fourth commandment to establish the point.

Now I have another question, "Does the Sabbath remain for us to keep today?" That is one of the most important questions we could ask. And here is Paul's answer in verse 9. Please get every word of this: "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God."

Please notice that by the word "rest" in your Bible you have a little number. It refers you to the margin. What does it say in the margin of your Bible? It says, "keeping of a sabbath." In the actual Greek text the word "sabbatismos" is used, and it means literally "sabbath-keeping". So translated directly into the English, the verse reads, "There remains Sabbath keeping for the people of God." And the next verse explains further: "For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his."

Now let's see how simple we can make it. What day did God rest from His work? The last part of the fourth verse said, "God did rest the seventh day from all his work." So if I enter into His rest, I am going to keep the seventh day just as God did. And verse 11 urges us to do that very thing. "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." Again we notice he said, "Let us" thus including you and me with himself. Let us enter into THAT rest. What rest was he talking about? He had already mentioned the seventh day Sabbath rest, so he is telling us to enter that rest—the seventh day rest.

Furthermore, he says, "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall." Whether I am a Jew or a Gentile, if I don't enter into that rest, I will fall. And he continues, "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall, after the same example of unbelief." The Jewish people were destroyed in the wilderness because they broke the Sabbath, it was because of their unbelief, or lack of faith. Notice by the word unbelief there is a little number, and it refers you to the original reading: in other words, what that word was in the original Greek. What does the margin of your Bible say? It says, "disobedience." So, supplying this word, the verse would read, "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of disobedience." What is disobedience? Disobedience is going against a direct command. So here is a direct command to keep which day? Notice verse 4: "The seventh day."

Here we see three things that God will not tolerate: 1) Lack of faith. Hebrews 4:1,2. 2) Unbelief and 3) Disobedience. Hebrews 4:11. So God says if I have a lack of faith, or I don't believe what He says, or I am disobedient in regarding the keeping of the Sabbath, the same thing will happen to me that happened to the Jewish people in Old Testament times.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Bigger Barns Listen to the audio version Now!

Suppose that as Abraham Lincoln was finishing his Second Inaugural address and had just reached the lofty paragraph beginning, "With malice toward none, and charity for all," some persistent and rude office-seekers had interrupted him loudly demanding to be appointed to a position. Or, suppose that someone would interrupt an impressive sermon to a large congregation by clamoring for the deacons to show him to a better seat.

Well, with such situations in mind, we can realize the untimeliness, and the rudeness, of the man who interrupted a sermon of Jesus one day to demand that his brother be made to share the inheritance with him. Jesus had been speaking of the Holy Spirit, the sin against the Holy Spirit, and of the importance of faith in God. It was a discourse of rare beauty on trust. Jesus had just assured His disciples of the sure presence of God's Spirit with them.

There was one man in that congregation who obviously did not have his mind on the sermon. He was thinking rather of his own grievance. He felt himself defrauded and disinherited, and he was contesting his father's will. So as he listened to Jesus, the Divine Son of God, who spoke as never man spake, this man could think only of how he could use Christ for his own financial gain. "And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me." Jesus had become somewhat used to interruptions, and it was not easy for anyone to throw Him off the track or entangle Him. So, refusing to pronounce on the justice of the claim or even to listen to it, He passed quickly to put His finger on the deeper evil from which the man was suffering—covetousness. "Take heed," He said, "and beware of covetousness for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Then Christ proceeded to enforce that appeal with the telling of a story which very convincingly portrayed the supreme folly into which covetousness brings men. This was the circumstance that prompted the telling.

"And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou has provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God." Luke 12:16-21.

I would like to suggest that this man made four big mistakes which made him the fool that he was.

One. He was mistaken as to the true source of his wealth and prosperity. This man had received everything from God. The sun had been permitted to shine upon his land, for its rays fall on the just and the unjust. The showers of heaven descended on the evil and on the good. The Lord had caused his wheat to flourish, and the man's fields brought forth a bumper crop. His barns were bulging and full to overflowing, and he had no place to put the surplus of his harvest. But does he think of God, from whom all blessings flow? No, he can think of almost no one but himself. It is interesting to note that in these 46 Greek words the rich man referred to himself twelve times. The personal pronoun "I" occurs six times, and the words "my" or "thine" addressed to himself, are used six times. His very language showed him to be self-centered, selfish, egotistical—it was "My fruits, my goods, and my barns." Instead of gratitude, his success brought pride. Instead of faith in God, he put his confidence in things.

Now the Scriptures, and the Lord of Scripture, have a special title for such a self-sufficient individual. You will find it here in Psalms 14. "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God." If you had asked that rich farmer, "Do you believe there is a God?" He would doubtlessly have said, "I certainly do!" He might have given many reasons why he so believed, but all of his reasons would have been from his mind. When it came to his feelings, his heart, his actions, he had left God out. He lived as if there were no God, no heaven, no hereafter—as if everything he possessed were his own, and he owed nothing to God or man.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

A very penetrating poem was written some years ago in which an old man, crowned with honors nobly earned, is pictured as asking a fair-haired youth what end in life he sought. The boy answered by stating his plans for his education; then he would be a lawyer; then he would be famous; then he would be rich; then he would retire as an honored sage, and pass the evenings of an honored life. But the old man gravely shook his head and said, "And when you have done all this, what then?" He said, "And then...and then..." And the boy ceased to speak. His eyes, abashed, fell downward to the sod. A silent tear dropped on each blooming cheek. The old man pointed silently to God and then laid his hand upon the drooping head. "Remember, there is a place beyond," he said. The young man was suddenly reminded that he had been planning his life, his success, his future, without God; but unlike the foolish farmer in our story, he saw in time the folly and emptiness of such a life. It is possible to believe in God in the head and with the mind, but to deny Him and forget Him in the heart and in the life.

Someone has suggested that the best index to a man's life, character, and thoughts of God may be found in looking at the stubs of his old check books. For what does he spend his money? Where does he bestow his goods? To whom does he give his money? Is God remembered in the monthly budget? Does God receive recognition through the giving of the tithes to Him? May I offer that question this morning as one of the practical acid tests as to just how cognizant we are of God as the source of our income and prosperity?

It isn't that God needs our tithes and our offerings. He could get along without them. "Our Father is rich in houses and lands. He holdeth the wealth of the world in His hands." As the Psalmist says, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." "Yes, the silver and gold is all mine saith the Lord." God doesn't need our money. He has asked for it because we need to give it. We need to give it and return the tithe for the good and enlargement of these selfish hearts of ours. We need to do this as a reminder to ourselves that all our blessings come from that Divine Source and that "It is he who giveth thee power to get wealth."

Two. Now, the second mistake this foolish rich man was made as to the true purpose and use of his wealth and superfluity. I say this because of two statements he made that gave him away and revealed his purely selfish motives. First of all, he "layeth up treasure for himself." Instead of a sense of obligation to his fellowmen, he thought only of his own pleasure and needs. He did not realize that God had made him a steward of his goods that he might help the needy. "Treasure for himself." The gospel of Christ is designed to take men's thoughts away from self and direct them upward toward God and outward toward their fellowmen.

Christ was not against the rich man, He was not opposed to his wealth, but He was concerned that the rich man understand the true purpose of wealth. (This concern was revealed when He told the rich young ruler to go and share his wealth with the poor and the needy.)

A recent editorial comment of a religious journal was entitled "What If...?" It began by asking the question, "Have you ever given much thought to the place of your birth?" It went on to say that if you were born into the world today, your chance of being born in this wonderful and prosperous land of America would be only one in twenty. Your chance of being born into a Christian home would be one in four. If you were born in Asia, your chance of surviving more than a year after birth would likewise be only one in four. If you were born into a family in Asia or Africa, your chance of learning to read would also be one in four. The odds are overwhelming that you would be sick all of your life from one or more diseases; intestinal parasites, tuberculosis, or malaria. You would probably work the land, have most of your harvest confiscated. You would be hungry much of the time, and in a year of famine would depend on grass, roots, or tree bark for food. This is the kind of life the vast majority who are being born today face.

The world in the time of this rich, but foolish, farmer was no better. There was poverty, and there was suffering and hunger. Yet he says, "I have not room where to bestow my goods." No room! We are assured that the situation of the poor hungry orphan, the widow, the suffering, and the afflicted was brought to this man's attention. There were many places where his goods might have been bestowed. But heedless and oblivious of the cries of the needy all about him, he said to his servants, "All right men, let's build some bigger barns."

Something fine and wholesome had died within this man long before that fateful night when his life was required. For to give is to live; to refuse to give is to die spiritually. This is a law of life that we can no more ignore than we can ignore the law of gravitation. Why is the Dead Sea dead? It is always getting, but never giving. That is deadly to a sea, but it is even more deadly to a human soul.

Three. The third mistake made by this foolish man in Christ's story was made as to the true way of being merry. Talking to himself one day he said, congratulating himself, "Oh, soul, thou has much goods laid up, take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." But merriness and happiness are not to be found alone in leisure, and eating, and drinking. The soul cannot live on corn, and wheat, and wine, and bread, and potatoes, and the fruit of the field. "Man cannot live by bread alone." The body may subsist on this kind of diet, but not the soul. "A man's life, a man's happiness," said Jesus in His introductory statement to this parable, "consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

Four. Now the fourth mistake our foolish friend made was as to the tenure of his life. "I have," he said, "much goods laid up for many years." He thought he would be around many years, but he had only one day left. The Divine decree was, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee."

It was Roger Williams who said, "The great certainty of life, is death. This in turn is surrounded by three uncertainties; the time; the place; and the manner." To these questions we do not have the answers. "The clock of life is wound but once. No man has the power to tell just when the hands will stop—at a late or early hour." It can be said in the truest sense that we are all living on borrowed time.

I ask you today, my friends, what are you doing with that portion of time which God has loaned to you? Are we living for Christ, and planning and building for today and tomorrow in the perspective of eternity?

When the final summons comes, and we have finished our earthly course, the questions God will ask will not be: How secure was his job? How much real estate did he own? How big was his bank account? But, was he faithful, was he true?

As wise and faithful stewards, therefore, of the time, and life, and means God has entrusted to us; let us so number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom and bring honor to Christ with all that we have and with all that we are.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Broken Promises - Part 1

Listen to the audio version Now!

Some of the strangest and wildest opinions have been held, and are still being held, concerning the subject of the Ten Commandments. One would think that only the worst type of violent criminal could complain against the law that God wrote with His own hand. Surely the rules of God would be rules of love, and His people would be delighted with them. Only the rebellious and disobedient would want to nullify them. Yes, that's the way it ought to be, friends, but unfortunately it just hasn't worked out that way. The truth is that not only Christians have tried to do away with the rules of God, but theologians and preachers have led the way in seeking to cancel the great moral law of God.

Today we're going to try to find out why. Why have entire denominations taken the position that these laws are now out-of-date and no longer apply to modern society? Especially are we interested in that question when we remember that more promises in the Bible revolve around obedience than any other subject. Over and over God talked to the people and promised to bless them IF - IF - IF - always if they would obey His law. And repeatedly the people promised that they would do it, and would accept the conditions laid down by God. In the Bible we call these oral agreements between God and His people, covenants, and they form a very important part of the sacred record of the Scriptures.

There were a number of covenants made, but Bible students are concerned mostly with the Old Covenant and the New Covenant. Here's what we're told about these two covenants in Hebrews 8:7; "For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Then in verse 10 we read, "In that he saith, a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away."

All right, this much is clear: one agreement that God made with the people was to be annulled—that was called the Old Covenant. But another agreement took the place of it—the New Covenant. Now, we inquire, what was wrong with the one that waxed old and disappeared, and how did the new one differ from the old?

The Old Covenant was an agreement between God and Israel. God promised to bless Israel upon condition of obedience to Him. Exodus 19:5,6. The Ten Commandments were the basis of the covenant. The agreement was made "concerning all these words of the law." Exodus 24:8.

God wanted to write the Ten Commandments on the heart in the Old Covenant but the people said, no, we can do it ourselves! They relied on their own works instead of letting God do it with the power of the Holy Spirit.

The weakness of the Old Covenant lay in the fact that it was dependent upon the promises of the people. "All that the Lord hath spoken we will do." Exodus 19:8. The faultiness of the Old Covenant did not lie in the commandments over which it was made, nor in God's part of the agreement, but in the human element. "For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a New Covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. . . For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; And I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." Hebrews 8: 8,10.

There it is, friends; that is the New Covenant. It is just that plain.

It is just that plain. Under the New Covenant God does that which men tried and failed to do under the Old Covenant. In other words, God makes the promises instead of the people. They could not keep their promises to obey because they were weak in the flesh,

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

and God's commandments are holy. So they fell short under the Old Covenant. Under the New, God promises to live in their hearts and provide the strength and miracle grace to obey.

Paul gives a perfect example of these covenants in Galatians 4:21-24. He says, "Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a freewoman. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar."

When we understand this allegory—this story of Abraham and his two sons used here to illustrate a point—we will be off to a good start in understanding the two covenants. Those of you who are familiar with Abraham's experience will know what I mean.

God told Abraham and his wife, Sarah, that they would have a son. They both felt that Sarah was too old to become a mother. With his wife's consent, Abraham had a son by Hagar, a servant woman. Abraham and Sarah had good intentions. They were trying to work out the right thing, that they should have a son, but in the wrong way. The Old Covenant likewise was trying to do the right thing—obey God's laws—but in the wrong way.

God did for them what was impossible without His help. He gave them a son in their old age. It was the same thing that they had tried to do in ways of their own devising—ways that God could not accept. God showed them that human strength and human works can never obey the spiritual laws of God. But the miracle powers of God worked in Sarah to produce a son. Even so the miracle grace and power of God spiritualizes the Christian so that he can obey the law of God.

The New Covenant was a "better" covenant, not because of better laws, but because of better promises. In the place of human promises the New Covenant has God's promises. Under the New Covenant it is not the works of the flesh, but "Christ in you, the hope of glory." Colossians 1:27.

The Old Covenant was by works. The New Covenant is by faith in the promises of God. But the New Covenant does not do away with the Commandments. Rather, it makes it possible for us to keep them through Christ dwelling in our hearts. Paul forever settles this question: "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." Romans 3:31.

Some who have not made a thorough study of the matter have felt that the law was the Old Covenant. Then they reason that because the Old Covenant has been done away with, therefore the law has been done away with also. The error of this line of reasoning becomes apparent if we put the words "Old Covenant" in Romans 3:31 in place of the word "law." It would then read—"Do we then make void the Old Covenant through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the Old Covenant." This, of course, is absurd. You can't void and establish at the same time. No, the Old Covenant was not the Ten Commandments. But it was the agreement between God and the people concerning keeping those commandments.

Going back to the experience of Abraham and Sarah, we find that it required a supernatural act of God to bring the child of promise into being. Just so, because the flesh is weak, man cannot attain to the righteousness of the law in his own strength. All attempts on the Old Covenant basis of "we will do" will produce only children of bondage. But when the heart is yielded to God, when the Holy Spirit writes the law in the tables of the heart, then, by the working of God's power, "the righteousness of the law" is "fulfilled in us." Romans 8:3,4.

Ishmael, the son of the bondwoman, represents those who are born after the flesh and are "not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Romans 8:7. They try to do the right thing in the wrong way and they fail. Isaac represents those who are born after the Spirit, in whom the righteousness of the law is being fulfilled. So it is the commandment breakers who are the children of bondage. Only the commandment keepers are truly free. Do you see? The commandment keepers are free from the finger of the law that condemns them for their sin. For when you keep the commandments there is no condemnation for those in Christ Jesus. Jesus has paid for your sins and you love Him and keep His commandments. Those under the curse or condemnation of the law are the commandment breakers. They are under the curse because the law condemns them for their sins because they are unwilling to keep God's law.

In closing let me give you a simple illustration that will help you to remember the difference between these two covenants.

A man asks me to build a house for him. He gives me the plans and specifications. There are ten specifications having to do with the number of rooms, size of rooms, type of materials, etc. When the job is finished, he will give me the sum of $100,000.

When the house is finished, I call the man and ask for my $100,000. He comes over to look at the house and finds that I have not followed the specifications regarding the size of the rooms. I keep reminding him that it is pretty good otherwise, but he keeps harping on the specifications. This annoys me, so I say, let's burn the specifications and then every thing will be all right.

That is just what people say about the Ten Commandments, God's specifications. Let's throw them away and then everything will be all right. Everybody is breaking them anyway. But the trouble is not with the law, but with the people. The Bible says, "For finding fault with them. . ." (the people). Hebrews 8:8. God was all right, and His Commandments were all right, but the people were all wrong.

Now getting back to our illustration: under the New Covenant the owner says, I am the master builder. We will start all over again, but this time I will stand right by you and see to it that every specification is carried out. We will work together and when the job is finished according to specifications you will get your $100,000 as we originally agreed.

You see, the new arrangement doesn't change the specifications. It doesn't change God. It does change us. It is the most wonderful thing in all the world how Christ can come into the heart and transform the life.

Before the Old Covenant came into being the New Covenant existed and was understood. But the promise goes back to the foundation of the world, for Christ is the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Revelation 13:8.

There is no salvation in an Old Covenant experience by works. It is only in a New Covenant experience of faith in Jesus that we have salvation, whether Old or New Testament times.

The Old Testament heroes of whom we read in Hebrews 11 found a New Covenant experience in Old Testament times. Paul tells us in Romans 4 that Abraham found this New Covenant experience of being justified by faith. He lived two thousand years before Christ died on Calvary. This goes to show that apart from Christ there is no salvation in Old Testament time or New. "For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins." Hebrews 10:4.

These sacrifices had virtue only as the sinner, by bringing a lamb for a sin offering, demonstrated his faith in God's promises to some day send a Saviour who would be "brought as a lamb to the slaughter." One who would be "wounded for our transgressions," and "bruised for our iniquities." Isaiah 53.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Broken Promises - Part 2

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today I'm going to continue our subject of law and grace, and especially in relation to the two covenants of the Bible. In our last broadcast we noted that this is a greatly misunderstood doctrine of both Old and New Testaments. Probably the greatest distortion of truth has resulted from the idea that the Ten Commandment law was the Old Covenant and that it has now been done away with. Friends, this just simply isn't true. The facts are that the Old Covenant was an agreement between God and His people regarding the keeping of the Ten Commandments. You read that very specifically in the Bible. Now here is the proof that the law was not the Old Covenant.

According to the eighth chapter of Hebrews, the Old Covenant waxed old and vanished away. It also had poor promises in it, and it was described as faulty. Who can believe that this describes the Ten Commandments? Nowhere are they called faulty—in fact, the Bible says, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." Neither has anyone ever been able to point out a poor promise in the decalogue. And Paul clearly declares that the Ten Commandment law is established by faith. It has not vanished away in any sense of the word.

Briefly stated, the Old Covenant was the agreement of the people at Mt. Sinai to keep the law of God in their own strength and through their own efforts. That agreement was faulty because those poor promises of the people were almost immediately broken, rupturing the covenant. In Hebrews 8 God said He would make a new covenant based upon better promises, and then, He proceeded to make the promises which formed the basis of that new agreement. Those promises involved Christ living in the heart, regenerating and empowering the individual to obey the Ten Commandments through love. Now we shall go on to consider another phase of the two covenants that has often been misunderstood, that is, the ordinances or ceremonies connected with the covenants. These were added because of sin.

"Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary... which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience: which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation." Hebrews 9:1,9,10.

The Bible is perfectly plain on the fact that the ceremonies of the Old Covenant would remain in force only until the time of reformation—when Jesus died. Other passages make it plain that the time of reformation spoken of here was the time when the New Covenant was ratified. Thus we read in Colossians 2:14-17: "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross:... Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."

What does Paul say was blotted out at the cross? Those things which were a shadow of things to come. The types and symbols which pointed forward to Christ, the Lamb of God. This included the offering of lambs, the meat offerings and drink offerings, which were a part of the ordinances, not the Ten Commandments. There is not even a suggestion in the above passage that any of the Ten Commandments were blotted out at the cross. The sabbath days and holy days affected were only those 6 yearly feast sabbaths:

1. Yearly Feast Sabbath of Passover, Leviticus 23:5
2. Yearly Feast Sabbath of Unleavened Bread, Leviticus 23:6

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

3. Yearly Feast Sabbath of Pentecost, Leviticus 23:20
4. Yearly Feast Sabbath of Trumpets, Leviticus 23:24
5. Yearly Feast Sabbath of Atonement, Leviticus 23:27
6. Yearly Feast Sabbath of Tabernacles, Leviticus 23:34

These yearly feast sabbaths with their meat and drink offerings were the ones "which were shadows of things to come." The Sabbath of the Ten Commandments is not a type or a shadow. It was given to man in the Garden of Eden before Adam sinned, before there were types and shadows. The types and shadows were added after man sinned.

The things that were blotted out were "against us." 1 John 3:4. The Ten Commandments were given for our good to tell us what sin is.

One of the ordinances of the Old Covenant was circumcision. But under the New Covenant "circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing: obedience to God's Commandments is everything." 1 Corinthians 7:19(Weymouth).

That word obedience is to some people a most hated word. They want to tell you what God has to say about grace and forgiveness, but never do they reveal that God has quite a bit to say about obedience also. Obedience, of course, isn't the means of justification, but it is an evidence of justification and salvation. To get a full picture of the subject let us read what Paul has to say. He explains in Romans 8:3,4, that it is the very purpose of the New Covenant to bring us into harmony with God's law. Now do you see why the keeping of the Commandments of God is everything under the New Covenant? Paul also says in Romans that we know God's will as we are instructed out of the law. Romans 2:18 "And knowest His will, and approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law." So the man who wants to do away with the Ten Commandments doesn't want to know God's will. But remember the law never saves. Only the grace of Jesus saves. The purpose of the law is to tell us right from wrong. To reveal God's will to us.

"For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the Law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Friend, if you truly have this New Covenant experience, the righteousness of the law, which includes honoring the entire Ten Commandments, will be seen in your life. It is Christ living out a life of obedience to His Father's commandments in you.

If you do not have this experience at this moment, won't you surrender to the control of God's Spirit without further delay? Let the Master Potter mold you and make you after His will. He can only do this as you surrender fully to His will, as you are waiting, yielded and still. This is the New Covenant experience.

So far you have clearly seen that both the Old Covenant and the New Covenant were made concerning God's Ten Commandment law. The Old Covenant also included certain rites and ceremonies which were declared to be only temporary. These ceremonies and not the Ten Commandments were blotted out at the cross. The New Testament reveals three new ordinances which were added under the New Covenant in the place of those ceremonies which came to an end at the cross. The new ordinances are:

1. The Lord's Supper - Matthew 26:26-28
2. Baptism - John 3:5; Matthew 28:19,20
3. Ordinance of Humility - John 13:4-17

All three of these ordinances were instituted before Christ's death. The Bible clearly explains that that is the only way they could get into the New Covenant. They must be instituted before His death. "For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament (or covenant) is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth." Hebrews 9:16,17.

No one would have the right to have added baptism or the Lord's Supper to the New Covenant after Christ's death. He must include it in His will before His death. The same is true of our weekly day of rest. If Jesus had any intention of ordaining a new day of rest for the new covenant, this would have to have been done before His death in order to be valid. Inspiration sets forth this principle so clearly that none need misunderstand: "Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto." Galatians 3: 15. If it were not for this provision men would be forever tampering with the will of Christ. Surely, as it is, men have tried to make changes in His will. But the Bible says, no, all that was settled and recorded before the Saviour's death.

It is impossible, according to the scripture, for Sunday to be the Sabbath of the New Covenant because it came three days too late, three days after Christ's will was sealed by His death.

Sometimes people have asked why Christ instituted the Lord's Supper before His body was actually broken. Jesus told the reason in Matthew 26:28. He said, "For this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Notice that term "New Testament"—that is exactly the same as "New Covenant." Jesus had to introduce the Lord's Supper before He died in order to get it under the New Covenant. After the testament was confirmed by His death, nothing could be added to it or taken away. No man's Will can be tampered with after his death. Christ wanted the bread and wine to be in the New Covenant, also the Ordinance of Humility or foot washing, but listen, Sunday-keeping came in much later—long after the resurrection—and it could not possibly be added to the New Covenant which had been closed and ratified by the shedding of Christ's blood.

One fine Christian lady said, "I keep Sunday because that is the day Jesus finished it all." But it doesn't say that in the Bible. It says in John 19:30, "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said It is finished: and He bowed His head, and gave up the ghost." The Bible says it was finished on Friday the day of the crucifixion, not on Sunday the day of the resurrection.

You see, the burden of Jesus' heart was the sins of the world He must die for. The agony that came to His heart in Gethsemane and on Calvary's cross was from the sins of the world. Jesus did not concern Himself with the resurrection morning. He knew He had power to lay His life down and to take it up again. "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." John 10:17,18, "I lay down my life, that I might take it again." So the resurrection morning didn't bother Jesus. What bothered Him most was dying for the sins of the world and that was finished on Friday. After that He knew He would be resurrected, ascend to heaven, sit on the right hand of the Father, intercede for our sins, and come again for the redeemed. And if I were to choose another Sabbath, I would probably choose Friday, the day Jesus died for my sins. But no, I have no right to be choosing Sabbaths. God already had given us a perfect Sabbath. It was in the world before sin was. And God had no reason to change His perfect Sabbath of the fourth Commandment which says the seventh day, Saturday, is "the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." Exodus 20:8-11.

After His death Christ's followers continued keeping the "Sabbath day according to the Commandment."

Isn't that amazing and wonderful, friends? that the Bible is so clear on this subject of Christ's will? And listen, you are the beneficiary of that last will and testament of Christ. All the promises of His covenant are for you, and by them you are an instant millionaire. As soon as you accept Jesus as your Saviour, He also becomes your elder brother, and you are named in His will to receive all the exhaustless wealth and blessings of the New Covenant promises. That woman who inherited a million dollars will have nothing in comparison, and she only had a year to live. You have millions of years to live in the perfect happiness of Christ's own dwelling place.

^ Top

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Christ's Covenant Listen to the audio version Now!

The story is told in Matthew 19:16-22 about a certain man that came to Jesus with a very important question. "Good Master," he asked, "What good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" The story reveals that this man had been taught the requirements of God in his home. From a youth he had been following the commandments of God. Yet, within his heart, there was a desire to do more.

Then Jesus answered him and said, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." There are many people who feel that we ought not talk about the commandments. They feel that this is merely some legal form, impossible to keep, and only intended for the Jewish people of the Old Testament. Some feel that the people of the Old Testament were to be saved by keeping the commandments or by works; and those of the New Testament, since the death of Christ, are kept by the grace of God. Many people see no relationship between God's law and God's grace.

The truth of the matter, however, is simply that we cannot get away from either God's law or God's grace. In Titus 2:11 we read that the grace of God has appeared unto all men. If we are to be saved in the kingdom of heaven, we must have a proper relationship of God's law and His grace in our lives.

There are those who feel that when Jesus came to this earth He made certain changes in His law and in the requirements of men to be saved. In Matthew 5:17-18 we read Jesus' own words concerning His law. Listen: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Jesus said very clearly that He came not to destroy the law but to fulfill it.

Exactly what did Jesus mean when He said He had come to fulfill the law? Did He imply that by His coming, He would put an end to it? Now I am so glad, friend, that it is not left up to me or to anyone to interpret what Jesus said or meant. The Bible clearly and unmistakably interprets what Jesus said. The Bible clearly and unmistakably interprets what Jesus meant. In Romans 13:10 we read that love is the fulfilling of the law.

When Jesus came into the world to bear His message to men, He found a nation of people who professed to keep the law. Like the man in our opening story, they had professed to keep the law from their youth up. But in an attempt to keep God's Ten Commandments, they had lost sight of the true spirit. They had become very narrow and legalistic. They interpreted the words of the law in its very narrowest sense.

The sixth commandment says, "Thou shall not kill." The people of Jesus' day felt that so long as they did not actually kill a man, they had kept this commandment fully. But Jesus had come to fulfill the commandment; He had come to reveal the keeping of the commandments. Thus Jesus said, "I say unto you that if a man hates his brother, he is a murderer."

The people of Jesus' day were bigoted and selfish. They carried hatred of other peoples and thought nothing of it. But now, the Author of Love was in their midst, and in His life, the commandments were to be made principles of love to guide the entire life of man in love to God and love to his fellow men.

On one occasion, a lawyer came to Jesus and asked Him which was the greatest commandment in the law of God. Jesus answered Him by saying that all ten were the greatest; not one was more important, not one less important. Jesus pointed out to this lawyer that the commandments were based on love. The first four speak in respect to our love to our God, and the last six deal with our love to our fellow men. Read this conversation between Christ and the lawyer in Matthew 22:35-40.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Isaiah, who is often called the gospel prophet of the Old Testament, wrote that when Jesus would come, He would magnify the law of God and make it honorable. Read Isaiah 42:21. Christ's entire life was a magnification of the principles of God. Thus the life of Christ was the fulfillment of God's will in man.

If I were to take a magnifying glass and look at a beautiful flower, that would not change the flower in the least. It would reveal, however, more of the detail and that, friend, is exactly what Jesus accomplished in His life here on earth. He came to reveal the details of God's law. Man had thought of God's law in terms of its apparent meaning only. Jesus filled it with meaning, with detail, with purpose, with the love of God.

But there are some who feel the Bible teaches that when Christ died, He abolished the law of God. I should like to call your attention to the two texts, often quoted, which cause some to feel that the death of Christ brought an end to the commandments of God.

The first text is found in Ephesians 2:15 and the other in Colossians 2:14-17. The first one says that when Christ died, He abolished the commandment contained in ordinances. The second text says that Christ nailed the handwriting of ordinances to His cross, blotting them out and taking them out of the way. Let us examine these texts carefully and find out exactly what Christ abolished and blotted out when He died.

The Bible speaks clearly about two covenants. Paul, writing in Hebrews 8:7-8, says that the first one was filled with certain faults. Therefore, God must make a new covenant with His people. What was wrong with the first one? What is the new one and when did it begin?

You may recall that when Adam and Eve sinned in the Garden of Eden, the Lord God made for them coats of skin to clothe them. See Genesis 3:21. Thus, the Lord took the life of some animal, perhaps a lamb, and out of it made a robe, a clothing for Adam and Eve. Why did God do this? Not alone to clothe them, but because sin had come into the human race, and the wages of sin is death. Adam and Eve must now see the results, experience the wages of sin. The Bible says that without the shedding of blood, there is no remission or forgiveness from sin.

Thus it was that in the Garden of Eden the Lord inaugurated the first blood sacrifice as a covering for the sins of Adam and Eve. Thus began a long line of blood sacrifices. God had made a covenant, as it were, with man. Even though man had sinned, he could, by the bringing of some blood offering, make atonement for his sins. And the covenant God had made promised that if man would bring the blood offering, God would keep His part of that covenant by forgiving man from his sin. This was known as the old covenant.

Down through the ages of the Old Testament, we find how the faithful men brought their offerings of blood before God. Abel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, each in turn built altars and on them sacrificed the lives of innocent animals as a fulfillment of the provisions of the old covenant.

Eventually God organized the children of Israel into a nation. Their express purpose and mission was to reveal the full message of God to the world. God placed them at the crossroads of the world in the land of Caanan where the travelers of the nations would have to cross through their land with their commerce. Thus through Israel was to come the knowledge of the Messiah.

God not only gave Israel the responsibility of teaching that the Messiah was to come, but the living and the teaching of His ten commandments was charged to them. In the very intricate system of worship which He outlined for them, they were constantly to be aware of the love of the Messiah.

You may recall that the system of worship consisted of the offering of animals on the altar, the sprinkling of the blood in the tabernacle, and the observance of seven special feast days throughout the year. On these special days, special meats were eaten, special food was consumed, and special offerings were made. On all other days of the year, daily services and daily sacrifices were observed in and about the tabernacle. This, too, was all a part of the old covenant.

In Hebrews 8:7 Paul says that this system observed so fully in the Old Testament had faults. The question comes then naturally: Why should God give a system of worship and services to the Jewish people if He knew it was not without fault? Then when we read in Hebrews 10:4 that the blood of the animals did not take away any sin, we continue to question. But, friend, the answer is simple. Every service performed, every animal sacrificed, every drop of blood sprinkled in the tabernacle, every special meat or drink offering taken was a means of pointing out the true Messiah to come. These things were all but shadows of the cross; all pointing the way to Christ.

That is what Paul meant when he wrote Hebrews 8:7, 8 and said that if the first or old covenant had been perfect, there would have been no need of the second or new covenant. If man could have his sins forgiven fully and completely by bringing an animal or observing some feast day, there would be no need whatsoever of Christ ever coming and dying. His death would be in vain and utterly useless if the death of some animal or the observance of some special day would do just as well. But do you see, the animal and the special feast days were mere shadows of the true Messiah, mere figures of the true Saviour, the only Saviour.

Jesus' death on the cross then became a fulfillment of every animal slain from Eden to the cross. Through the days of Abel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the children of Israel, doubtless millions of animals had been sacrificed. Now, on Calvary, Jesus became the one true Lamb that was the fulfillment of all. If we could have had every animal ever slain in faith in one place and at one time to somehow be able to sacrifice them all, they would not have taken one sin away. But Jesus, by His death, in one great act of love atoned for every sin ever confessed to Him.

That is why Paul says Christ nailed something to the cross and abolished something in His flesh when He died. Please turn to Colossians 2:14-17 again. Paul says that Christ having defeated Satan, and thus spoiling principalities openly, made a show of Satan before men and the universe, then blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us. Please read verses 16 and 17 very carefully for they tell us exactly what Christ blotted out. They say that He blotted out all of the shadows of things to come. The ordinances that had to do with the blood offerings, the meat and drink offerings, the seven special feast days, the entire old covenant system were all blotted out the moment Jesus died.

With the death of Christ, the old covenant came to an end. A new covenant must now be given to men. No longer were men to bring an animal or blood sacrifice or observe the special feasts of the old covenant. To do so would be a denial of Christ.

We read of this new covenant with men in Hebrews 10:16-17. Please turn and read these verses carefully. The new covenant is not some new law nor even a change in the law of God, but it is the law of God written in the heart and in the mind.

You see, friend, here is the wonderful truth of the covenant which Christ makes only with Christians. Christ died to pay the penalty of sin. He lived to provide the power over sin in the life. When we come to Him and accept of His life and death in our behalf, He forgives us our past sins. But He does not stop there. He replaces our old life with His new life. He does not merely take the past and then leave us a spiritual vacuum. In the place of the life of sin, He writes His laws, His character into our minds and into our hearts. By His law we are directed in our love to our God and to our fellow man. The law of God becomes our standard of living. It is more than creed or form. It is the direction of the life.

Friend, this is Christ's covenant with Christians. It is made only with those whose sins are confessed and thus forgiven. The old life is buried with the Saviour who died and was buried to purchase our redemption. The new life is motivated by His indwelling power, directed by His commandments.

Jesus said, "If ye love Me, keep My commandments." We then keep His commandments not to be saved but as an evidence that all are saved through the blood of Christ and that He has given us a new life and a new heart.

The Psalmist said in Psalms 51:10: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Paul said in 2 Corinthians 5:17, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. . . ."

Have you made your covenant with Christ? Is His law in your heart now? "Blessed are they that do His commandments that they may have right to . . . enter in through the gates into the city." Revelation 22:14.

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Covetousness

A long time ago I read about a millionaire in France who was a miser. In order to make sure of his wealth, he dug a cave in his wine-cellar so large and deep that he could go down into it with a ladder. The entrance had a door with a spring lock. After a time he was missing. Search was made, but they could find no trace of him. At last his house was sold, and the purchaser discovered this door in the cellar. He opened it, went down, and found the miser lying dead on the ground, in the midst of his riches. The door must have shut accidentally after him, and he perished miserably.

In the twelfth chapter of Luke, Jesus lifted two danger signals. "Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy. ... Take heed and beware of covetousness." Luke 12:1, 15. One of the greatest dupes the devil has in the world is the covetous man, "for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

I believe this sin is much stronger now than ever before in the world's history. We are not in the habit of condemning it as a sin. In his Epistle to the Thessalonians, Paul speaks of "the cloke of covetousness." Covetous men use it as a cloke, and call it prudence and foresight. Who ever heard it confessed as a sin? Many persons have confessed to me that they have been evil-doers; but never have I heard a man confess that he was guilty of this sin. The Bible does not tell of one man who ever recovered from it; and in all my experience I do not recall many who have been able to shake it off after it had fastened on them. A covetous man or woman generally remains covetous to the very end.

We may say that covetous desire plunged the human race into sin. We can trace the river back from age to age until we get to its rise in Eden. When Eve saw that forbidden fruit was good for food and that it was desirable to the eyes, she partook of it, and Adam with her. They were not satisfied with all that God had showered upon them, but coveted the wisdom of gods which Satan deceitfully told them might be obtained by eating the fruit. She saw — she desired — then she took! Three steps from innocence to sin.

It would be absurd for such a law as this to be placed upon any human statute book. It could never be enforced. The officers of the law would be powerless to detect infractions. The outward conduct may be regulated; but the thoughts and intents of a man are beyond the reach of human law.

But God can see behind outward actions. He can read the thoughts of the heart. Our innermost life, invisible to mortal eye, is laid bare before Him. We cannot deceive Him by external conformity. He is able to detect the least transgression and shortcoming, so that no man can shirk detection. God cannot be imposed upon by the cleanness of the outside of the cup and the platter.

Surely we have here another proof that the Ten Commandments are not of human origin, but must be Divine.

This commandment, then, did not, even on the surface, confine itself to visible actions as did the preceding commandments. Even before Christ came, men had a commandment that went beneath public conduct and touched the very springs of action. It directly prohibited — not the wrong act, but the wicked desires that prompted the act. It forebade the evil thought, the unlawful wish. It sought to prevent — not only sin, but the desire to sin. In God's sight it is as wicked to set covetous eyes, as it is to lay thieving hands, upon anything that is not ours.

And why? Because if the evil desire can be controlled, there will be no outbreak in conduct. Desires have been called "actions in the egg." The desire in the heart is the first step in the series that ends in action. Kill the evil desire, and you successfully avoid the ill results that would follow upon its hatching and development. Prevention is better than

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

> More Free Books!

> More Radio Messages!

cure.

We must not limit covetousness to the matter of money. The commandment is not thus limited; it reads, "Thou shalt not covet ... anything ... ." That word "anything" is what will condemn us. Though we do not join in the race for wealth, have we not sometimes a hungry longing for our neighbor's goodly lands, easy circumstances, comfortable surroundings? Have we not had the desire to increase our possessions or to change our lot in accordance with what we see in others? If so, we are guilty of having broken this law.

Let us examine a few of the Bible passages that bear down on this sin, and see what are God's thoughts about it.

"Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

Notice that the covetous are named between thieves and drunkards. We lock up thieves, and have no mercy on them. We loathe drunkards, and consider them great sinners against the law of God as well as the law of the land. Yet there is far more said in the Bible against covetousness than against either stealing or drunkenness.

Covetousness and stealing are almost like Siamese twins — they go together so often. In fact, we might add lying, and make them triplets. "The covetous person is a thief in the shell. The thief is a covetous person out of the shell. Let a covetous person see something that he desires very much; let an opportunity of taking it be offered; how very soon he will break through the shell and come out in his true character as a thief." The Greek word translated "covetousness" means an inordinate desire of getting. When the Gauls tasted the sweet wines of Italy, they asked where they came from, and never rested until they had overrun Italy.

"For this ye know, that no whoremonger, no unclean person, nor covetous man who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and God." There we have the same truth repeated: but notice that covetousness is called idolatry. The covetous man worships Mammon, not God.

"Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness: and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens."

Is it not extraordinary that Jethro, the man of the desert, should have given this advice to Moses? How did he learn to beware of covetousness? We honor men today if they are wealthy and covetous. We elect them to office in church and state. We often say that they will make better treasurers just because we know them to be covetous. But in God's sight, a covetous man is as vile and black as any thief or drunkard. David said: "The wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the Lord abhorreth." I am afraid that many who profess to have put away wickedness also speak well of the covetous.

"He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them: and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes? The sleep of a laboring man is sweet, whether he eat little or much: but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep. There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt."

Is not that true? Is the covetous man ever satisfied with his possessions? Are they not vanity? Does he have peace of mind? Do not selfish riches always bring hurt?

"They that will be (that is, desire to be) rich, fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition."

The Bible speaks of the deceitfulness of two things, "the deceitfulness of sin" and "the deceitfulness of riches." Riches are like a mirage in the desert, which has all the appearance of satisfying, and lures on the traveller with the promise of water and shade; but he only wastes his strength in the effort to reach it. So riches never satisfy: the pursuit of them always turns out a snare.

Lot coveted the rich plains of Sodom—and what did he gain? After twenty years spent in that wicked city, he had to escape for his life, leaving all his wealth behind him.

What did the thirty pieces of silver do for Judas? Were they not a snare?

Think of Balaam. He is generally regarded as a false prophet: but I do not find that any of his prophecies that are recorded are not true — they have been literally fulfilled. Up to a certain point his character shone magnificently; but the devil finally overcame him by the bait of covetousness. He stepped over a heavenly crown for the riches and honors that Balak promised him. He went to perdition backwards. His face was set toward God, but he backed into hell. He wanted to die the death of the righteous; but he did not live the life of the righteous. It is sad to see so many who know God miss everything for riches.

Then consider the case of Gehazi. Here is another man who was drowned in destruction and perdition by covetousness. He got more out of Naaman than he asked for; but he also got Naaman's leprosy. Think how he forfeited the friendship of his master Elisha, the man of God! So today lifelong friends are separated by this accursed desire. Homes are broken up. Men are willing to sell out peace and happiness for the sake of a few dollars.

Did not David fall into foolish and hurtful lusts? He saw Bathsheba, Uriah's wife, and she was "very beautiful to look upon"; and David became a murderer and an adulterer. The guilty longing hurled him into the deepest pit of sin. He had to reap bitterly as he had sowed.

I heard of a wealthy German out West, who owned a lumber mill. He was worth nearly two million dollars, but his covetousness was so great that he once worked as a common laborer, carrying railroad ties all day. It was the cause of his death.

"And Achan answered Joshua, and said, 'Indeed, I have sinned against the Lord God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done: When I saw among the spoils of goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.' "

He saw — he coveted— he took — he hid! The covetous eye was what led Achan up to the wicked deed that brought sorrow and defeat upon the camp of Israel. We know the terrible punishment that was meted out to Achan. God seems to have set danger-signals at the threshold of each new age. It is remarkable how soon the first outbreaks of covetousness occurred. Think of Eve in Eden; Achan, just after Israel had entered the Promised Land; Ananias and Sapphira in the early Christian Church.

"For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

The Revised Version translated it — "a root of all kinds of evil." This tenth commandment has therefore been aptly called a "root-extractor," because it would tear up and destroy this root. Deep down in our corrupt nature it has spread. No one but God can rid us of it.

Matthew tells us that the deceitfulness of riches chokes the Word of God: like the Mississippi River, which chokes up its mouth by the amount of soil it carries down. Is it not true of many businessmen today? They are so engrossed with their affairs that they have no time for religion. They lose sight of their soul and its eternal welfare in their desire to amass wealth. They do not even hesitate to sell their souls to the devil. How many a man says, "We must make money, and if God's law stands in the way, brush it aside."

The word "lucre" occurs five times in the New Testament, and each time it is called "filthy lucre." "A root of all kinds of evil." Yes; because what will not men be guilty of when prompted by the desire to be rich? Greed for gold leads men to commit violence and murder, to cheat and deceive and steal. It turns the heart of stone, devoid of all natural affection.

^ Top

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Five Ways - Part 1 Listen to the audio version Now!

The Pure Food and Drug laws of America are designed to protect us from deception in what we buy. There are other laws against deceptive packaging and labeling. Millions of dollars have been wasted through lack of knowledge concerning products sold in our stores and markets.

But friends, there's a much greater point of deception than all these combined, and the loss will be infinitely greater than dollars and cents. The Bible makes it very clear that many people who believe that they are saved will actually be lost. "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." It is sad to read that many will find themselves lost while thinking that they are saved.

What does it mean to be saved? What does it mean to be lost? How long does it take to be saved? These are some of the questions that we are going to answer from the Bible today.

Since our first parents sinned each succeeding generation has inherited a tendency to sin. The natural man sins as easily as water runs down hill. Since our nature tends toward sin, what we need is a new nature. We get our human nature by birth; we get the new nature by being born again. "Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." John 3:3, 7. There isn't any other way to get into the kingdom of God except to be born into it.

Have you been born again? This is one way to tell if you are saved or lost. You say, How can I tell whether or not I have been born again? If you have been born again, you will have a new nature; your nature will be changed. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." II Corinthians 5:17. When you are born again you are a new creature. Your likes and dislikes change. Your appetite changes.

I have in my library a book entitled Lambs Among Wolves. It is a wonderful book. It attempts to help individuals to see how desperately hopeless it is to try to be something that you are not. This book likens Christians to lambs. They have a meek, peaceful nature. Those who are not converted are likened to wolves. The writer pictures a wolf who wants to be a lamb. And so he gets a sheep skin and puts it around himself and he joins himself to a flock of sheep. He imitates their actions. He associates with the sheep. He goes where the sheep go. He tries to eat what the sheep eat, but he doesn't like it. He just doesn't feel at ease or at home among the sheep, because while outwardly he tries to act like a sheep inside he is still a ravening wolf. Every chance he gets he sneaks away from the flock of sheep and finds some dead carcass and delights in feeding on the things a wolf normally feeds on. What a demonstration this is of folks who attempt to save themselves by making themselves conform to what they believe is the pattern of a good Christian. But it is going about it backwards. There is only one way that a wolf could become a lamb; and that would be for God to recreate the wolf and make it a lamb. We cannot change our natures, but God can if we will let Him. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil." Jeremiah 13:23. We cannot cleanse ourselves from sin, but God can cleanse us. "For though thou wash thee with mitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God." Jeremiah 2:22.

You can't make yourself be born. Birth is a matter of surrender. Conversion, or the new birth, is the result of faith. It is a matter of surrendering ourselves completely to the will of God. This is what it means to really believe. It is something far deeper than just standing up and saying, I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is wonderful to make a public confession of faith, but it is something even more wonderful to live that profession

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

day by day. Words are cheap. Actions speak louder than words. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Ephesians 2:8-10.

I have talked to many a man and many a woman who has said, "Pastor, if I could only have faith; if I could only believe." We are saved by grace through faith. There is a wonderful truth in this verse that I find many people have missed. This verse tells us that the very faith through which we are saved is a gift from God. It is not something that we must manufacture; it is a gift from God. Do you see? If you are just willing to receive this saving faith, God is willing and waiting to give it to you. Then all you need to do is to exercise the faith that God gives you. Do you feel that you don't have faith? Just accept faith as a gift from God and then begin exercising it just as though you did have it, and then you will find that you do have it. Give it a try. Put this principle into practice. It can virtually transform your life. It is a transforming principle. Where does faith come from? It comes from God and from His Word. The Bible says, "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Romans 10:17. You will notice that my sermons are very, very simple. As a matter of fact, often people say, "You don't preach at all, you are just teaching." Have you noticed that in much modern preaching preachers seem to get away from the Bible? In our broadcast we are determined to turn the tide and get back to the Bible. And it is tremendous. It builds faith. It is something you can experience in your own life. You keep listening and feeding on the Word of God, and you will find that your faith will grow. But not only that; you will find that you will be stronger to meet temptation. You will find that you will be happier. It isn't a temporary lift. It is something that can become a permanent part of your every day experience.

The Bible sounds a sober warning here in Jeremiah 17:9 where it says, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" I include this text because some people say, "I can just feel whether I am saved or lost. I have the witness. I know it's real. I can feel it." Remember friend, the devil can work on our feelings. The devil can make you feel good if it serves his purpose. You can't depend on your feelings apart from the Word of God. The Bible says, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." Deceitful! The devil would deceive us, and make us feel secure when we are in danger. "Every way of a man is right in his own eyes: but the Lord pondereth the hearts." Proverbs 21:2. We always try to justify our course of actions. It is human nature.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16. What does it really mean to believe? Do you know, the Bible says that even the devils believe? The New Testament says that. James 2:19: "Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble." When they come face to face with the truth of God, the devils believe and tremble. But they are not going to be saved. Why? They believe, but they don't obey. That is the difference. Do you really believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour? Have you been born again? Have you accepted Jesus into your life? Is it such a real experience that it motivates obedience? This is our first test. This is the difference between a saving faith and a mere hollow profession.

Jesus gives us the second test that I am going to submit to you today. Jesus says, "If you love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15. In other words, if you really love the Lord, you will keep His commandments. Do you keep the commandments of God? Jesus said, "If you love me, keep my commandments." Oh, but you say, I understand the commandments of God were just for people back in the Old Testament. Let's go now to Revelation. Let's go as far into the New Testament as we can. Revelation 14:12 describes the saved of the earth as the saints of God. It says, "Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." Your Bible says that right down in the end of time the saints of God are going to be men and women who, by the grace of Jesus Christ, keep the commandments of God and have the faith of Jesus. The Bible doesn't separate the commandments of God from the faith of Jesus. It brings them together into beautiful harmony. When this harmony is found in the life, you have a real Christian. Paul saw it that way. Notice what Paul says in Romans 3:31. I think these words forever settle any question on the relationship of faith to the commandments of God. Paul says, "Do we then make void the law through faith?" What does it mean to make void? It means to cancel out; to do away with it. In other words, Paul says, Do we cancel out the law when we have faith in Christ? He answers his own question so that nobody could possibly misunderstand. He says, "God forbid: yea, we establish the law."

When we go back to the very beginning, we find that it was Satan who wanted to trample on the commandments of God. It was the devil who told Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden, "You don't have to keep the commandments of God. Did God say that you would die if you ate the fruit of that tree? Go ahead and eat it. You won't die, God isn't that particular." We hear some of these same sentiments expressed even in professedly Christian circles in our day. Let me give you a test that will protect you from deception. Whenever a religious teacher makes light of the commandments of God, remember that it was the devil in the beginning who did that same thing. A teacher of Bible truth who really upholds the teachings of the Bible will always respect the commandments of God. You remember that. That is a safe test to go by.

But you know, some people rebel. They say, "I don't want to consent to the law of God. I don't want to have to keep all those Ten Commandments." How is God going to get His Ten Commandments into our minds? Is He going to do it by force? Is He going to do it some night while we are asleep? No, I don't think so. God doesn't work that way. God is going to get His law into our minds as we study the Bible. That is why the Bible says, "Study to show thyself approved unto God ... . Search the scriptures ... . Seek, and ye shall find." That is the very reason why the devil wants to keep people so absorbed in other things that they will neglect the Bible. Consequently, God's law doesn't get into their minds. They don't understand what it is to have God's law written on the heart.

Already we have found two tests that you can employ to know whether you are saved or lost. First, you must be born again. Second, if you really believe, you will keep the commandments of God. You will delight to obey because Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15. Now we're going to leave the study for today, and tomorrow we'll continue with other evidences of salvation. We'll take up the third and fourth ways of telling if you are saved. Don't miss it.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

God is Particular - Part 1

Listen to the audio version Now!

Many, many times people have said to me "I don't think it makes any difference what a person believes, as long as he is earnest about it." Perhaps you have heard this same statement. These folk believe that God is really not particular as long as we are zealous in what we do. They say it is the spirit that counts, and if we are doing it with all our hearts, God will accept it. We are going to answer the question today,—Is God really particular? Does He mean precisely what He says? Or, may I vary His commandments a bit to fit my own convenience and situation?

We are going to talk about some of the stories of the scripture today. Some people skip over these narratives of the Bible, and seem to think that they are interesting, but not very important. Mark this down, friend, these stories are more than just interesting tales. They contain eternal lessons which will continue to speak to us as long as the world stands. In Romans 15, verse 4, we read this: "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." Put with that a text in 1 Corinthians 10:11: "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." In other words, these stories were given to guide us until the very end of time. If you want to know how to find the way into God's kingdom, just study the experiences of God's people in ancient times. We disregard these lessons at the peril of our own eternal life.

The first story I'd like to talk about is found in Genesis 2—it's not new to anyone, I'm sure. The story of Adam and Eve and their downfall is quite well known by the average Christian. You remember that God placed our perfect parents in that lovely ideal setting of the Garden of Eden. They were surrounded by beauties indescribable. God said to them, "Now, look it over. This is to be your home. All the pleasures of the garden will be yours for eternity if you will just obey me." But in the very midst of the garden, God placed one tree which was set apart. God pointed this out to Adam and Eve and said, "Don't bother that tree, it is set aside, you must leave it alone." There was no question in the minds of Adam and Eve concerning the commandment of God. But, friends, the fact is that Adam and Eve disobeyed God and actually did eat of the tree which was forbidden. Many people say, "Well, I can't understand why God did such a thing anyway. Why did He place it right out in the open in the very midst of the garden,—why didn't God put an electric fence around the tree, or something by which to discourage Adam and Eve from taking of that tree?" Others have been known to say, "Well, I can't understand why God would forbid the tree anyway. He certainly didn't need to reserve anything for Himself. He didn't need the fruit of the tree."

Friends, let's see if we can find the answers to these questions today. God will only accept the service of love. Religion is not a fire escape. We must choose to obey God because of our love for Him, or else we will be serving in vain. God must have some way of knowing why we serve Him. Our very judgement will take place on this basis. God is going to look into the motives of the mind and heart and we shall be saved or lost according to our motive in serving God. So Adam and Eve had to be tested. God wanted to make them immortal. He wanted to give them that beautiful home for all time to come. But before doing so, He had to know that their love was true and deep. The test of their love was the tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. God said, "If you love me, don't touch this tree. If you ever lose your love and confidence in me, then just eat of this tree and I will understand."

Please notice, friends, that the test came over something that had been set aside by God. God said leave it alone. He didn't elaborate, He didn't say why; there was no apparent reason as far as Adam and Eve were concerned. God seemed to be saying, "Just trust me and obey without asking the reasons why."

Let's bring this lesson closer home to us today. We perhaps are saying, "Well, I would not have eaten of the tree. I would not have disobeyed God." But I wonder, friend about

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

that. I submit that we have exactly the same test facing us in this modern age. How are we passing the test? God says to us, "Everything which comes into your hands may be used as your own, except one-tenth. Your tithe is sacred and must be set aside for me." Now notice friends, it's not one tree this time, but one-tenth. God says, "That one-tenth is mine. You must not touch it. You must not use it." Now if I disregard this commandment I am repeating the sin of Adam, and I will be doubly guilty because I have his example before me as well as the direct commandment of God concerning my own case. There is no reason at all to leave that money alone, except that God said it is holy; it is His. This is the very same circumstance that we find with the forbidden tree in the garden of Eden.

Then again God may say to me, "Look at the days of the week. You can have all of them except one." You know, of course, that the Bible says the seventh is hallowed, it is set aside for a holy purpose. So God says "Keep your feet off the Sabbath. Don't use it for yourself at all. It is set aside for me." Now that same test was given to Adam and Eve. There's not a particle of difference in the commands that God gave them concerning the tree and the command He gives us concerning the Sabbath. Today we might look for some human reason as to why that one day should be reserved for God. I've heard people questioning about this very thing. Since the seventh day seems to appear just like the other days of the week, they will not recognize it's sanctity. One day seems to be as good as another day for rest and worship. Adam and Eve might have said the very same thing. Their line of reasoning could have been similar. That one tree in the midst of the garden certainly did not look any different from the other trees, and it's fruit was probably just as good to the taste. The difference lay in the commandment of God to leave it alone. And today, the difference is, God says, "Remember the Sabbath day—the seventh day—to keep it holy." Both tests concern something which was set aside by God, and which man was told to leave alone.

Friends, how do we measure up in this thing? Finally, you remember, Adam and Eve had to face God over eating that fruit. Every soul will face God over the two tests that have been mentioned today, exactly as Adam and Eve had to face Him. This is a serious matter. If we ever enter Heaven it will be because we love Him so dearly that we will not touch what He commands us to leave alone. You mark this down carefully friends, God is very particular about things which He has set aside. The story of Adam and Eve proves it without the shadow of a doubt.

We go farther into the Bible in Chapter 4 of Genesis and find another story concerning two brothers. Cain and Abel were the two sons of Adam and Eve. Have you ever tried to picture the angel driving our parents out of the garden of Eden? It must have been a fearful thing for them to stand outside looking back into that beautiful place where they had lived for so long. Soon after leaving their garden home they saw the first leaf fall from the tree and die. They must have looked at each other in dismay. Then maybe the flowers began to wither and wilt about them; and the first beast growled at them. I can imagine they looked at one another with tears rolling down their cheeks and said, "What have we done? Is there no hope for us, after making this terrible mistake?"

Then I can picture the Lord Jesus coming into the garden to meet our first parents in the cool of the day. He brought a promise of deliverance, a promise of a Saviour who would appear in this world. Hope was brought into their hearts again through Jesus, who was to be the sacrifice for their sin. God told them to take a lamb, the very best lamb that could be found in the flock, and kill it. "As the blood flows," God said, "Remember, this represents my son's blood. That lamb is Jesus who will come to atone for your sins. There is atonement in the shedding of blood." Then I picture Adam and Eve as they went over to the flock, and with trembling hands chose one of the animals as a sacrifice. The Bible tells us that Adam had actually named those animals. He knew them individually and loved each one. But now, he has to take one and slay it with his own hand. Until this day there had been no death, no killing of any kind. But now he picks up one of the lambs which he knew by name. He built an altar and placed that innocent lamb upon it and stood there trembling by the side. Perhaps the family was standing around—Eve on one side; Cain and Abel on the other. Then in a terrible moment of horror he took the life of that innocent little white lamb. As the blood spurted, he must have said, "Boys, our sin caused death. Sin is a terrible thing. There is no hope for us, except through the Son of God who will come and die for us. Let this remind you that Jesus will someday come and pay the price for our transgressions."

Adam's boys were trained in the ways of the altar, the ways of sacrifice and worship. But the older they got the more they developed ideas of their own. One day they each built an altar upon which to worship God and offer their sacrifice. Abel, the herdsman, took a lamb without spot or blemish, killed it, and on his knees prayed, "Lord, this represents Jesus, I offer it to you earnestly, with faith in the blood of Christ to cleanse and save me." Maybe Cain was watching off to the side, and he thought "This is good, I think I shall bring an offering also and pray to God." But Cain was a farmer. He thought, "I don't have a lamb, so I'll just bring the best I have. It really makes no difference. This will be good enough. God will accept it. I'll bring fruit and vegetables." According to the Bible, he brought the fruit of the ground and placed it upon the altar. Perhaps he brought something like pumpkins, strawberries or peaches.

Did the Lord meet him and say, "This is fine, I know that you brought the best you have, and I will be glad to accept it." No indeed! God said, "I cannot accept it." Why? Now don't get the idea that God rejected it because Cain brought a little dried up lemon or some poor specimen out of the garden. He brought the very best of his produce—the kind that would have won first prize at any county fair. That's not the reason God rejected it, but rather because God had said, "Bring a lamb." Cain thought that it made no difference, so he brought a substitute.

Now what do we learn from this story? Just one thing friends: your best efforts at worship are wasted unless that worship is according to the way God says to worship. You can't read the story and get anything else out of it. Cain was right there at the altar with his fruit, but it did no good. God would not accept it. His worship was completely rejected. Another thing we learn is this: be a person ever so earnest about worshipping on Sunday, Sunday worship brings into the presence of God an offering of fruit that cannot be accepted. This is too plain to miss, friends. God has said to remember the seventh day to keep it holy, and He will not accept a substitute or counterfeit offering as we come before Him to worship. Our worship is wasted unless that worship is according to His command. I could be ever so earnest and zealous and think that it makes no difference, but if I see the Sabbath in God's Word, and then bring Sunday as my day of worship to God, that will be fruit in His sight and cannot be acceptable. It's not what you think or I think that counts, it's what God's Word commands. In Isaiah 8:20 we are told to check ourselves by the law and the testimony: "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

God is Particular - Part 2

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we continue to study into that interesting question, "Is God Particular?" Yesterday we reviewed some very fascinating stories from the Bible which indicate that God means exactly what He says, and that we cannot accommodate His commandments to meet our convenience. Some people think that sincerity is quite enough, that if we really are earnest and zealous in what we do, God will accept it regardless of anything else. But the stories of the Bible indicate just the opposite. We learned from the story of Cain and Abel, and the story of Adam and Eve before them, that the results of disobedience in the smallest detail can be more than tragic. When they refused to do things exactly as God commanded some terrible results came on this world.

Now we move on to another story in Leviticus 10. It's a story of two preacher's boys whom God killed. Ah, this comes pretty close to home friends, because I'm a preacher, and I have two boys too. I've read this story many times. The preacher was Aaron, of course, and his sons were Nadab and Abihu. What happened to those boys anyway? Those youngsters stayed around the temple of God a great deal. They were brought up in evangelistic meetings in the church, and around holy things, with the Bible and prayer in their ears all the time. They were associated with the sacred things of God so much that they became common in their sight. It was when these things began to be taken for granted as common things that the fatal mistake was made.

Every time we open the Bible, friends, we should pray, "Let this Book always be holy to me. Help me to revere it and hold it in very solemn awe." But those boys forgot that. Being reared around the church and having become ministers themselves like their father, they had grown accustomed to these things and no longer looked upon them as being holy. They did not have that solemn sense of reverence as God had demanded.

The Lord had given certain commandments about the sacrifices in the temple services. He said, "Use holy fire on the altar. Always use that which was started by God Himself. Never bring any common fire into that place." You see friends, God had lighted that fire, and this was the only acceptable way for them to worship. It was the only way for them to worship. It was the only way for them to offer sacrifices. Aaron had told the boys about this commandment of God. They were without excuse. They understood it perfectly well. There was no reason for them to ever transgress that commandment. But one day, when Aaron was not around, the boys needed a fire for their sacrifice. One of them said, "Well, I don't think it makes any difference really—how could it make any difference? Fire is fire, and one kind burns just as well as the other kind." And so those boys took "strange" fire and entered into the holy place of the temple with it. When they walked in before God they were smitten and died on the spot.

Aaron must have heard something unusual taking place in there, maybe he heard the sound of their bodies falling, and he came racing into the temple shouting for his sons. When he saw what had happened to them, he began to weep over the death of his sons. But God said to him, "Aaron, stop that! Don't shed one tear. They have profaned holy things. You must not weep for them at all. It will set a wrong example for the people." You read the story for yourself there in Leviticus 10. It's a tragic thing friends, a terrible circumstance, but it certainly teaches us something. It teaches us that God means exactly what He says. We can learn a great deal from this story. It was written for our admonition.

I've heard people say, "Well, what difference does it make about baptism? Water is water. Whether it is sprinkled on the head or whether we're immersed in it altogether, if we're sincere God will accept us with just any kind of baptism." Oh, listen friends, it does make all the difference in the world, because it is the difference between obedience and disobedience. It may look small to us, but God doesn't measure sin by the amount of it or by the proportion of it. It's a matter of basic loyalty and love. That's what's involved in obeying God or not. One baptism only is the true baptism if you read the Bible. All the others really are like offering strange fire to God. One is sacred, and the others are common. One is from God; the others are from man. The Lord has made this thing clear so that we need have no question at all in our minds about it.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

But then people say also, "A day is a day. Any day is holy if we're sincere in our worship." But friends, is it really? When God made the Sabbath He chose the seventh day, blessed it, made it sacred, hallowed it and then commanded man to observe it. He set it apart and sanctified it for a holy use. It was to be used for worship. If I change that or choose some other day, I'm offering a man-made fire to God, because I'm not carrying out His commandment as He gave it to me.

I say that God had a reason for choosing the seventh day, for putting His blessing on it, and writing the commandment right in the heart of the Ten Commandment law. When He wrote it with His own finger on those imperishable tables of stone, God knew what He was doing, and He meant every word that He wrote. God cannot change, not in the least. Mark this well friends, my worship is dangerous unless I do it as God says. Those boys' experience proved it back there. You pray over this story and read it again for yourself and you'll get the plain truth of it as you study it in more detail.

Now we go further, to the story of Saul. He was a brilliant leader of Israel—a great genius, in fact, according to the Bible records. The Lord had chosen him to be king over Israel. But later he said to himself, "I can do this thing alone." One day the prophet said, "The Lord wants you to go and destroy the Amalekites. You must not bring a thing back, everything must be completely destroyed. Do you understand?" Yes, Saul understood alright. Those people had committed the unpardonable sin, and they were to be destroyed from the earth. Well, Saul received the commandment and went forth into battle. After winning a tremendous victory under the blessing of God, Saul saw a beautiful flock of sheep and some cattle up on the hillside. They were so much fatter and nicer than any which he had seen in Israel that he began to toy with the idea of sparing them for sacrifices in the Sanctuary. Finally he yielded to the idea, and brought them back on his return from battle.

Samuel, in the meantime, had been suffering a great deal over this disobedient act of Saul. God had revealed it to him in a vision. In 1 Samuel 15:11 we read that Samuel cried to the Lord all night long over that thing. What a man of God he must have been! He understood the transgression of this leader of Israel, and he wept about it all night long, as he waited for him to come back from the battle. Early in the morning Samuel went out to meet Saul and immediately he heard the sound of bleating sheep and lambs. He said, "What meaneth this bleating of sheep? Didn't you understand what God said, that you were to bring nothing back?" Saul began to rationalize. He said, "Yes, but we've just saved this for God, and not for ourselves. We're going to offer these as sacrifices on the altar. We saw that these sheep were so much nicer than we had and we wanted to give the very best to God, so we brought this little flock of sheep to offer them as a sacrifice to God for the great victory He gave us."

What did Samuel say, friends? Did he say, "This is good. I hadn't thought about that, Saul. Since you brought it for a sacred use, God will surely accept it." Is that what Samuel said? Absolutely not! This is what he said: "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice. Saul the most important thing in this world is to do just what God tells you to do, nothing more, nothing less. Your kingdom is taken from you, you're a lost man." That is what Samuel said to Saul, and right then and there the Holy Spirit walked away from that man, and he was a lost soul. Soon after that, in fact, he committed suicide out on the battlefield of Gilboa. His sanctimonious language did not save him from awful results of transgression. Notice, when Samuel met him, the first words of Saul to him were these, "Blessed be the name of the Lord." You see what heavenly language that sounded like. One could be led to think that Saul was a good man. But he was trying to cover up a disobedient act by all of this high sounding talk and praise and pious language, as though he loved God very much.

Listen, the Bible says that if we do not obey Him, we are actually lying. "He that sayeth I know Him and keepeth not His commandment is a liar and the truth is not in him." 1 John 2:4. So this man Saul really didn't love the Lord as he should or he would not have committed this act of disobedience. It didn't seem to be very terrible, and to Saul it was a small matter. But friends, disobedience is disobedience. Sin is sin. There are no degrees. God doesn't measure sin by the amount.

The lesson here is so clear for us. Conscience is not a safe guide—not even for a man who has been chosen by God. A person may have an evil conscience, a defiled conscience, or a darkened conscience—all of these are Bible expressions. Our only safety must be in the Word of God. We cannot accept any other guiding influence in making decisions. There is no excuse good enough for disobeying God. If there had been any excuse at all, Saul certainly would have had it, wouldn't he? Don't you think so? He was bringing those things back to offer to God as sacrifice. But God said, No, I don't want them, even for that. I want obedience. Obedience is better than sacrifice, it's the biggest and best offering you can ever give to me." After all, friends, the Bible says, "To whomsoever ye yield yourself servants to obey, his servants ye are to whomsoever ye obey." Romans 6:16. Saul had given his worship actually to someone else because he gave his obedience to someone other than God. He had made a god out of self.

Well, another important thing that this brings to mind is John 13. Jesus commands us to wash one another's feet. I wonder if you've ever read that chapter, friends? It's the last scene in the upper room before Jesus was crucified. There Christ got down and began to wash His disciples feet, and then He told them that He was setting an example for them and that they should do the same to one another. I've heard people say, "Well, I can't see that this is necessary today." Friends, it doesn't matter what we see, or what seems to be right or wrong. It's what the Bible says that makes something right or wrong.

By the way, you'll find just as strong and plain commands about the washing of feet as you will about the breaking of bread. Yet the churches have gotten away from it. Christians have gotten away from it, even though it is right there in plain language. Take the time to read it specifically in John 13. You'll see that there's no way to get around it. Friends, if we love Him there'll be no questioning. There'll be no quibbling. You will say, "Alright, I'll obey. I'll do what He wants me to do." This is the lesson to be learned from these stories we've considered today. May God bless you as you look into these things with much earnest prayer.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

God is Particular - Part 3 Listen to the audio version Now!

We've been talking for two days now about the importance of obeying God and doing exactly what He asks us to do. We've learned already that God means just what He says. We can't take His commandments and interpret or apply them to our own lives according to our own convenience. Some people are doing this. In fact, this is the great modern method of doing it. Young people today have taken this so-called "freedom" and misused it terribly. They seem to think that they don't have to worry about the commandments of God. They can apply them in their own way, which usually means that they leave themselves open to disobey. But that's not right friends. There are many stories in the Bible which prove exactly the opposite. We've heard some of them already and we're going to have some more in today's broadcast. But before getting into the Bible story, let me tell you a little modern story of something that happened more recently.

A man was going away for a journey. He left his builder-son in charge of a project which had recently been planned. Blueprints had been drawn for a beautiful new home on a choice location. The father gave the blueprints to his son and asked him to complete the project while he was gone on this trip. He said, "Be sure to make it according to the exact specifications of these plans." Well, the son, being an expert builder, followed the plans his father had left, and soon the beautiful home was a reality. It was completed. Sometime later the father returned and made a tour with his son through the new building. Everything seemed to be acceptable and according to the plans until they came to the barn, which had also been a part of the building plan. The father noticed that the well was not near the barn as the plans had required. So he asked the son, "Where is the well?" The son said, "Oh, it's right over there by the house. I realized, of course, that the architects had made a mistake in drawing the plans by putting the well by the barn, so I put it back there where it belonged near the house."

Nothing else was said right then, and soon they were seated in the house after the tour of inspection. Then the father spoke again, "Son, I'm very sorry that you've not followed my desires and plans in the least bit of this building project." The son objected, "Father I have followed. I followed exactly what you said except in just that one thing of the well, and that was obviously a mistake." The father said, "No, son, I deliberately put the well near the barn as a test. You followed my plans only as far as they fitted in with your ideas. But when you came to one thing that you didn't like you changed it and made it the way you wanted it to be. So you were not following me in the least bit in those plans. You were doing what you wanted to do, and as long as your ideas fitted in with mine you were willing to follow, but when there was the least change, you chose your own way instead of mine."

Friends, that's something to think about, isn't it? That's the way it is with too many Christian people today. They serve the Lord as long as it is convenient —as long as it fits in with their own plans—but when God's way conflicts with their own desires, they often choose to go their own way instead of following God. This is why people say that it is not necessary to do certain things that are included in the commandments of God. What a blessing it is to just take God at His word, and not quibble about the wording of His commandments.

Now let's go on to a Bible story that makes this truth even more clear, simple and understandable. This story is found in 2 Samuel 5, and several verses are involved in this chapter. This is the story of Uzzah, which has been so often misunderstood. I wonder if any of you have heard of a boy in modern times by the name of Uzzah? I don't believe that anyone has. I don't believe that there is a modern day youth by the name of Uzzah. Now what's the reason for this? Because Uzzah was slain by the Lord. Let's look at what happened in verses 6 and 7 of 2 Samuel 5 and I'll just give a little background of the story briefly.

The ark of God had been taken captive by the enemy of Israel. Now the ark, you

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

remember was this box which contained the ten commandments. It had been taken away by the Philistines into their own country after a terrible battle. They thought that it was some god of Israel, so they put it right in their own temple beside their heathen dieties. But they found out that this didn't work, because it brought all their gods tumbling down in a broken heap. Then some terrible disease and sickness broke out on all of them. By this time they were really frightened. They said, "Let's send it back home. We'll be killed if we keep this god of the Jews among us." So they made a beautiful new ox cart, yoked some oxen to it, and took it right across the border of Israel.

Well, it stayed there for a little while, and then afterward David decided to bring it back to the temple in Jerusalem. So a great delegation was sent out to bring back the ark of God to its proper place. They found it on this ox cart, so they decided to leave it there. They just brought their own oxen and harnessed them up to the cart and started pulling it along. Now friends, this is not the way God commanded them to move the ark at all. He had told them it was to be carried by the priests on their shoulders. Special places were prepared for it so that they could put poles through and then transport it by carrying it on the shoulders of the priests. No one but the tribe of Levi was allowed to touch this holy container of the ten commandments. All others had been warned to stay clear of it and not even come near where they could possibly touch it.

So the journey was started. For a while this new modern method of transportation seemed to work fine, but suddenly they came upon a rough spot in the road. The cart was jostled, and apparently the ark was going to fall from its place. Walking nearby was a man of the people by the name of Uzzah. Now this man was not a priest. But he was walking close enough to the ark to see that it was about to fall, so impulsively he reached out and touched the ark as though to steady it. And instantly he fell dead on the spot. He was slain under the judgment hand of God.

Now friends, what do we learn from this experience today? We learn that there is no emergency that can excuse sin. Many people are struggling over decisions to obey God. They think that God is not particular, that He doesn't mean what He says. God does mean it! We have a perfect illustration of it right here with this man Uzzah. He disobeyed God and no matter what his intentions were, it was still disobedience and the judgment of God came upon him.

I repeat that people are struggling today about whether to keep the Sabbath, whether to pay tithe, whether to be baptized. Listen friends, certain things have been set aside as holy—for God. And God says don't touch them. There is the Sabbath; God says it is holy. There is the tithe also which is holy, and God sets it aside. He says, "You must not use it for yourself." Oh, there are many, many other things in the Bible that we could mention just as well. But friends, if God sets it aside and tells us to leave it alone we do well to remember. The ark was also holy and had been set aside. And when Uzzah forgot, and touched that sacred thing that was God's, he lost his life. We can lose our lives too—our eternal lives—by disobedience.

This also proves another wonderful truth. We are only held accountable for what we know. Those heathen people were not punished with death because they touched the ark. Did you notice that? Because they didn't know any better, they didn't understand the commandment of God. They just gave it preferred treatment, because they had a lot of reverence for it, but they still touched it and nothing happened. But as soon as it crossed the border into the land where people did know, God required more of them. The very first touch of disobedience brought death. In James 4:17, we read: "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." So to the Israelites this constituted a sin which brought immediate judgment and death. For the heathen people who didn't know that commandment it didn't bring death when they touched it. God means exactly what He says when we have His word. There is no confusion. There is no contradiction. A person may say, "I see, and just as soon as a way clears up I am going to obey God." O no, God doesn't work like that. We walk by faith and not by sight. If we see clearly His requirement then we shouldn't wait for any kind of feeling. We ought to obey instantly without any further question.

People who plan to obey God at some future time are making a deadly mistake. Many say, "Well, when I get caught up a little bit financially, I'll begin to pay my tithe and I'll begin to keep the Sabbath also." By this means and by this argument we tie God's hands, as far as His blessing on us is concerned. Do you know why? Because the devil hears that prayer, and he'll keep us in debt the rest of our lives so that we'll never feel free to obey God. Other People say, "Well, my wife (or husband) holds me back, and if they ever become a Christian, I'll become one too." In that case we're actually challenging Satan to work mightily to keep those loved ones outside of Christ.

Yes, there are some solemn warnings in the Bible for us. Have you ever heard somebody say, "Oh, I'll keep the Sabbath if my boss will just let me have that day off." Don't you realize that Satan will see to it that the boss will never let you off on that day. It's got to be by faith. You have to step out without even seeing how it's going to work. Nothing will clear up until you move forward in faith. By just waiting and lingering and hesitating, the road will always seem to be impossible to pass.

Do you remember Israel at the Red Sea? It was flood stage. I can imagine logs and trees sweeping along. Across on the other side was the land for which they had been waiting for forty years. I can imagine the people saying, "Well, how are we going to get over there. We can't swim. We'll never be able to cross this raging river." But the Lord had an answer. He said, "Go forward!" "Walk out into the water." Now friends, let's be honest. As I thought this thing over, I surely would not want to be that first man in line, would you? Oh, I would want to be far back in that procession somewhere. But somebody was on the front who really believed God. I am thankful there was a man who did, and he simply moved forward and started walking right into the water. And when he came to the edge and put his foot down, it splashed and the water separated—just rolled back and revealed a plain dry path all the way through the sea. From this we understand how faith works. Will you go forward in obedience to God's command?

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Grace or Disgrace - Part 5 Listen to the audio version Now!

For several days now we have been dealing with the Law of God in its relationship to the grace of God. We considered the strange idea that some Christians have that the Ten Commandments do not apply to "born again" believers. I would like to continue this subject today. I have heard some people say that the Ten Commandments were for the Jews, surely not for us. Well, friends, if they do apply only to the Jews and not to Christians, then will it be all right for us to break those Commandments? To lie, steal, etc.? Is that possible?

Let us examine the records of the New Testament. In John 14:15 Jesus says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Obviously, it must be love that inspires us to do it, because only through love will it mean anything. For it says in James 2:10, now please get this, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Did you know that was in the Bible? There it is, "he is guilty of all." Then it goes on to quote directly from the Ten Commandments about adultery, killing, and so on. It is no use to keep nine of them and leave one of them undone, friends.

Then it says the condemnation of death comes upon us if we break His commandments. There are many individuals who will break one of the Ten and say, "Well, I think this one is different, God won't expect so much of me under my particular circumstances." Let me repeat that breaking one breaks the law, and makes us transgressors in the eyes of heaven. Moody illustrated it well when he said, "The commandments are just like a chain with ten links."

Imagine now that I am working out over a precipice carving on some project such as the great stone faces in the Black Hills of the Dakotas. I am working in a very dangerous position on a platform hanging out over a cliff, suspended from a chain of ten links. I am chiseling away when all of a sudden I hear a sound at the top. I look up and see my friend sawing away on the chain. I call out, "What are you doing?" He calls back down, "Oh, go ahead with your work. Never mind me." "But what are you doing?" I insist. "Go ahead with your work, keep on chiseling," he answers. "But," I say, "my platform is hanging on this chain. What are you doing to it?" "Oh, go on with your work. I'm just cutting out one of the links, not all of them."

Listen, my friends, if he cuts out one of those links, it's fatal! My platform is suspended from that chain and if he cuts one of the links, where will I go? Down, of course. When an individual breaks one of the Ten Commandments, where will he go? Down, of course. Well, Moody says God's law is like ten links in a chain—if we break one we are guilty of all. It is the same as if we have broken them all. That point is very vital to understand. They are all God's concept of a perfect man written out on tables of stone.

Have you noticed what God promises to do under the New Covenant? I have heard a good many individuals talking about this New Covenant. It is a wonderful arrangement, but it seems they don't quite grasp all that is involved in it. For in Hebrews 8:10 we read, "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." Did you ever notice what the apostle Paul says in 2 Corinthians 3:3? "Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God: not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart."

Now, friends, who wrote the tables of stone? Yes, God did, of course. We found that out in a previous study here on our broadcast. Who wants to write the law in your heart? God does. Through whom? Through His Holy Spirit. That is what He says He will do under the new covenant. So it is the same law, once on tables of stone, but now transferred and transcribed on the fleshly tables of the heart. How many of the commandments does He want to write on your heart? All ten, of course, and yet many people say, "Lord, you can just write nine, or eight, but not all ten of them, please."

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Have you noticed that people these days are always looking for special discounts? Everybody is looking for a bargain. Some churches even advertise, "Come to us and we will give you a bargain—10% off on the Ten Commandments."

I ask you, my friend, will that stand in the day of judgment? Suppose some churches, even great churches, make it easy by saying that you don't need to keep all ten. If you keep nine you will pass in the judgment day. I ask you, is that sufficient? Has any church the right to discount the commandments of God 10%? How dare we imagine or presume that we are on the high road to heaven when we knowingly break one of God's commandments. It is not a matter of whether I feel saved or not, or whether the church says I am all right; it is a matter of what God says.

Revelation 22:14 says, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." I would be afraid to come up to those gates and say, "Lord, I want to enter in." And God says, "Have you been keeping my commandments?" I would be afraid, dear friends, unless I had been keeping all of them here in this life.

Somebody else says, "The Lord has heard my prayers, I have had wonderful experiences of prayer." Just remember Proverbs 28:9. It is a fearful text; in fact, I don't even like to quote it. I want to read it so that you will not say that Brother Crews said anything like this. It is what God said. "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be an abomination." And I think of another text in I John 3:22, which stresses the positive side. "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight."

So you see, the blessings of heaven are conditional upon obedience. Paul says some very good things about the law of God. In Romans 7:12, "Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." Isn't that marvelous? And he says in the 7th verse, "I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." You see, if there were no law you couldn't sin, for where no law is there is no transgression (Romans 4:15). So when people tell you that the law was abolished at the cross, that's the same as saying that since the cross there has been no sin. I have seen one or two sinners, haven't you, friends? There has been sin since the cross. Sin is the transgression of the law. There is the test—the commandments. And the commandments are holy, just, and good. Ah, I think we ought to keep the law of God if it is holy, just, and good!

Let's examine those Ten Commandments for a moment. How many of you at some time in your life learned the Ten Commandments by heart? But now how many people are doing that? How many children have learned those commandments? You don't even see them hanging up in front of churches anymore. At one time, even Sunday School children had to memorize them, but you don't see that any more.

The first four commandments tell about our obligation to God—have no other gods, no idols, don't take His name in vain, and keep His Sabbath holy. The last six have to do with my neighbor—honor father and mother, don't steal, kill, lie, or commit adultery, and don't covet. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God . . . and thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

I want to ask you a question now. Is it not just as wrong to break one part of that law as the other part? You know, there are people in this world who don't mind a bit breaking God's holy Sabbath (that has to do with duty to God), but they think it is awful to steal chickens from their neighbor. Let me give you another illustration, for this is very, very vital. What about the individual that does steal chickens? We have had people in the listening audience, I'm sure, who have stolen or have even killed someone. But suppose an individual makes his living by stealing chickens—he tells us that he supports his family that way. Then one day he hears a sermon on the Ten Commandments. I go to visit that man and say to him, "Brother, have you thought of keeping the commandments of God?"

He says, "Well, I'm really giving thought to it."

"Are you keeping God's commandments now?" I ask.

"Oh, yes," he states, "all except just one."

"Which one?"

"Well," he admits, "Thou shalt not steal."

"You steal?"

"Yes, I support my family by stealing chickens."

"Well, don't you think you ought to give this up?" I suggest.

He replies, "I have thought about it, and if I get a better job, I am going to do that very thing. I will give that up if the Lord will help me get another job somewhere. Of course, I'll have to keep up my chicken stealing until then, because a man who doesn't support his family is worse than a heathen."

So that man keeps on stealing chickens until the Lord helps him get a better job. What do you think of a man like that? Well, I say this: God isn't going to bless a man very much who deliberately keeps on disobeying and transgressing the law after he knows it is wrong to do that.

Somebody says, "But I have been breaking God's commandments for forty years. That's all the more reason that an individual ought to change quickly and make up as much as he can for all that disobedience of the past. Don't forget what it says in Hebrews 10:26,27. "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries." This is a solemn text indeed. If we sin willfully, after we have received the knowledge of the truth, when we keep on breaking God's commandments after the light comes to us, then Jesus' blood will no longer atone for our sins. There is no sacrifice in all God's universe to cover known, deliberate transgression. There's only one way for us to be saved, and that is to come back to the fount of blood, to Jesus Christ, climb up Calvary's hill, bow before the cross and have past sins washed away.

Well, friends, that's a wonderful story for us to close with today—having our sins forgiven by the grace of Jesus. Of course, we don't earn it by all these works of the law we have been talking about. Forgiveness comes to us freely as a gift of God's love and through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. But after we are saved by grace we should keep the commandments of God to show how much we love Him.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

I Have a Question - Part 1 Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we are going to answer some more questions that have come to our attention here at the Amazing Facts headquarters. Many of our listeners have been sending in serious Bible questions and we've also been meeting many of these same questions in holding evangelistic crusades and radio rallies. I am sure that they may be questions you have entertained in your own mind at some time or other. So today we will start another series of answering those questions as far as we can from God's word.

It's simply amazing how many times we can find a direct statement of the Bible to satisfy the doubts and queries that may arise in human hearts. If you'd like to send in one of your own personal Bible questions, we want to encourage you to do so. From time to time we will be inserting these question-and-answer broadcasts in the series of topics that are presented daily on our network of stations.

Here's our first question today: What do you think is the cause for so much emotional and mental trouble in the world today?

Friends, this is a question that is being raised by multitudes of people all over the world in this troubled age. There is no question but what emotional mental problems are on the tremendous upsurge in every part of the world. The psychiatrists offices are filled with people trying to get appointments, trying to understand their own frustrations and mixed-up feelings. Recently I read that young people and children are being treated for emotional difficulties on a scale never before known in this country. The special committee appointed by the mayor of New York City looked into the educational problems of the one million public school children of that great metropolis. They came back with the report that over half of the public school children in New York needed specialized attention because of emotional disorders. Christianity Today magazine some time ago reported that over 4,000 students of the University of Colorado sought psychiatric help during the year. This was roughly 1/3 of the entire student body. Now, friends, these facts bring into focus the tremendous problem which faces our modern world in trying to keep sane and balanced. The question is, What has happened to trigger these terrible emotional disorders?

First of all, I would say the awful upheaval in moral standards has precipitated the large part of it. All the demands for freedom and more rights on the part of young people has not been for the strength and stability of their moral character. In fact, there is no doubt but what a lot of deterioration and dissolution of character has taken place under the impact of the relativism and secular humanism so widely advocated today. When are we ever going to understand that unlimited freedom and license to break all moral restriction is going to bring only unhappiness to young men and women. Long, long ago the wisest man who ever lived found out by experimentation that there is no peace in the influence of fleshly pleasure. Solomon had more of the material things of this world than any of our modern-day millionaires, yet he finally conceded that the only thing worth while was to serve God and keep His commandments.

Our whole society is given over to a kind of orgiastic abandonment in which drugs, alcohol, demonic entertainments and illicit sex form the staple of many people's social diet. Others vicariously participate in such immorality by watching it portrayed daily on the television screen.

Instead of increasing their enjoyment by these activities, people are only heightening their despair by destroying their power to cope with the demands and tensions of life. Suicides, especially among the young, are on the rise. A general sense of the meaninglessness of this life pervades all ranks of society. A deep, sneering cynicism has settled in among the general populace, more and more of whom are joining in a kind of frenzied dance of death to celebrate the demise of civilization.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Having turned away from the light and guidance of God's word, mankind has lost all sense of purpose and direction. No new system of morality or psychological school of thought is able to fill the spiritual vacuum or stem the tide of moral pollution. Mindless revolt against all restraints and values has been the result.

A very interesting article appeared in the U.S. News and World Report news magazine during the miniskirt craze. In an interview with Malcom Muggridge of England who is very well known for his caustic observations about English life, he was asked whether the younger generation was in a state of revolt against the old values. His answer was, "Not in the least, I think it's sheer degeneracy. I don't think those kids are rebelling at anything, they are just degenerate. It's the antics of an exhausted stock."

Well, that's a new way of expressing it, friends, and the psychologists have steered far away from calling it this outright true title. It just might be, though, that we ought to designate this rebellion as sin and disobedience to God's commandments. A text of the Bible seems to fit in very beautifully right at this point in Isaiah 57:20, 21: "But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." When we come right down to it, a violated conscience is one of the greatest causes of emotional fear and instability. One who has an assured sense of right-doing is seldom afflicted by the teen-age fears and insecurities which mark the 20th Century. Jesus had another way of describing it in Luke 21:26, He said, "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken."

We've been reading a great deal about strange signs and sights in the skies, the unidentified flying objects of our age have caused many to be terrified of the unknown. Friends, you can be sure of one thing, we cannot predict what one day will bring forth. If a man has no faith or confidence in a higher power, he will likely be filled with terror at the prospects of tomorrow. The tensions and uncertainties of life without faith in God has created an unreasonable and unprecedented atmosphere of terrified expectancy. Add to that the speeding up of our way of living and you have an additional cause for fear.

According to a recent experiment, freeway drivers undergo more nervous strain than an astronaut in orbit. A man who had driven on a freeway for three years and seemed outwardly calm reached a heartbeat of 111 from his normal 79 as he entered heavy freeway traffic, applied the brakes or had another driver cut in front of him. Another driver's heartbeat reached 115. Astronauts Glen and Carpenter had heartbeats of from 80 to 90 and from 60 to 94 during most of their first flights. At the critical re-entry time, Glen's heart reached 134 but Carpenter's only 104, which was even less than the freeway drivers. This all seems to indicate that modern man needs to slow down considerably and take more time for his own thoughts and meditations. Certainly he needs to take more time for God and his spiritual interests. Through prayer and Bible study and calm reliance upon the strength of God, much of the emotional fear could be entirely eliminated. The need for psychiatry would drop to a marginal minimum. Crime would be tremendously reduced, divorce and home problems would be greatly reduced. Perhaps these things will answer your question in part at least.

The next question comes from a listener in the Baltimore area. "What do you think about all the giveaway government projects to support those who won't work?"

Friends, let me make it clear that I am not a political speaker or commentator. I'm concerned only with the Bible and its message for our age. There are plenty of voices being raised in both condemnation and defense of what our government is doing with your tax money and mine.

The Bible does have a lot to say about the blessing and benefits of hard work. This is a definite part of good religion, and I make no apologies for recommending it. Any project which discourages initiative and makes laziness and unemployment more profitable than employment is nothing but a curse. The Proverbs offer an abundance of wisdom on this subject. A few examples to consider are: "He becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand: but the hand of the diligent maketh rich." "The soul of the sluggard desireth and hath nothing: but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat. In all labor there is profit..." "He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread..." Proverbs 10:4; 13:4; 14:23; 12:11.

There is a legitimate place for society to assist those who because of illness, age, or debility cannot help themselves, but welfare programs that support able-bodied idlers who refuse to work are only aiding in the demoralization and breakdown of our society. We are admonished in the New Testament that "if any would not work, neither should he eat." 2 Thessalonians 3:10.

I personally feel that modern young people desperately need to learn the benefits of effort, self-reliance and hard work. Our founding fathers made little use of the word "security". Their conversations were sprinkled with such words as "courage," "conquest" and "determination". Come drought or flood they stuck it out or bailed out. They didn't appeal to some government agency. They rolled up their sleeves and went to work.

When God made the oyster, he gave it real security. He gave it a hard shell for protection and all it has to do when hungry is to open it. But when God made the eagle, He gave it great wings and told it to build its own nest. And the eagle did—on the highest mountains where the enemy would not molest eaglets. For food, it flies through rain, sleet and storm. I'm glad the eagle, and not the oyster, is the symbol of America.

The parable is told of a man who died and found himself in a region of fabulous abundance. His slightest wish was instantly granted by the many servants. At last he became bored, asked for some work to do, some problem to solve. His host informed him that he was living in a region where there were no problems and no work to do. "What!" he cried. "No problems? No work? I wish I'd gone to hell instead of coming here!" The host replied, "Where do you think you are?"

Thank God for work!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

I Have a Question - Part 4 Listen to the audio version Now!

Our broadcast today will be concerned with more sincere Bible questions that have come to us from our faithful listeners. We do so appreciate the many letters that have come in from you and also the questions you've sent to be answered on the broadcast. For several days we've been involved in this series of question and answer programs. In this way we're able to deal with subjects that might be of particular interest to individual listeners. And here's our first question today.

Don't you believe that the Holy Spirit leads individual christians? I believe I've been baptised with the Holy Ghost and that He will show me what is right and wrong.

Now this question raises a very interesting point that we should discuss for awhile today. There's absolutely no question, of course but that a Christian is guided and directed by the Holy Spirit. At least, he should be under the direction of that power from above at all times. The Bible describes the work and mission of the Holy Spirit in very specific terms; for example, in John 14:26 we read this: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." Again, in John 16:13, "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth." And then again in John 16:7: "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment."

Now, please notice that in all these texts the work of the Holy Spirit is primarily to guide, teach, and convict of sin. As long as we allow that Spirit of God to guide us into the things Jesus taught, to be convicted of our sins, we're in safe paths; but let's never forget that the Spirit will not guide anybody contrary to what the Word of God teaches. The final judge of all truth must be the written Word of God and not our feelings or impressions. In other words, the conscience is not always a safe guide. The Scriptures say "there is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof are the ways of death." The Bible, in fact, speaks of a "darkened conscience" and an "evil conscience" and a "seared conscience". As long as the mind and conscience are educated by the Word of God, there'll be harmony, of course, but unless the Word and the individual are operating in perfect obedience and harmony, there can really be a problem here. Too many people are moved by vague impulses and impressions and estatic feelings. Just remember this: Satan can use feeling in accomplishing his purpose, especially if we don't stick closely to the revealed Word of God. I've often had people tell me, "Well, I just feel that it's alright for me to do this or do that." Well now, friends, it doesn't matter how you feel. It's what the Bible says that really counts.

The Bible also says in 1 John 2:4: "He that saith I know him and keepeth not His commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him." This means that true believers will not follow their feelings which may be contrary to the Word of God, but will obey the law and the Word above everything else. Jesus said, "Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." You see, there is a work that needs to be done by those who believe. The works prove the faith. "Faith without works is dead," James tells us. So in answer to the question, I would say that one can surely pray for and expect the Holy Spirit to lead him in the Christian path, but just be sure that the mind and heart and life has been illuminated by the Word of God first of all and that you're following the Word above everything else. If there should be any conflict between the Word and the feelings you experience, just be sure you take the Bible in every case.

Alright, now, we move on to the next question which has to do with the Law of Moses.

Is it not true that Moses' law of the Ten Commandments was nailed to the cross and is

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

therefore no longer applicable for Christians living today?

Friends, I want it to be absolutely clear that the moral law contained in the Ten Commandments was never abolished. That's not the law of Moses. You see, that's the law of God. It's true that some ordinances came to an end at the Cross, but let's be careful to identify those ordinances correctly. In Ephesians 2:15 we read this: "Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace." Again, we read in Colossians 2:14—"Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." Now these two verses clearly reveal that a certain law came to an end when Jesus died. It says that the ordinances were blotted out, nailed to the cross, abolished at the time of Jesus' death on Calvary. But, my friends, is this the Ten Commandment law? Absolutely not. The great moral law of the universe has never been referred to as ordinances. Colossians 2:16 goes on to describe that law which was done away with. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ." Now certainly there is nothing in the Ten Commandments about meat offerings or drink offerings or new moons, is there?

Somebody might say, "Well, what about those shadowy sabbath days mentioned in the text?" Well, friends, this is not talking about the seventh-day Sabbath of the Ten Commandments. There was nothing shadowy about that original Sabbath which Christ made before sin ever came into the world. Shadows and ceremonies appeared as the result of sin and pointed forward to the deliverance which would come through Christ, so this text could not be referring to the seventh-day Sabbath. But were there some other sabbath days besides the seventh-day Sabbath? Yes, indeed. In fact, turn to Leviticus 23 and you will find four Jewish festivals referred to as sabbaths even though they fell on different days of the week every year; for example, in verse 24: "Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, In the seventh month, in the first day of the month, shall ye have a sabbath, a memorial of blowing of trumpets, an holy convocation." Now this festival came on a set date every year and was called a yearly sabbath or an ordinance. It was a shadow or type of the coming of Christ as a saviour.

In verses 27, 32, and 34, other yearly sabbaths are brought to view in which people were to rest. Verses 37 and 38 sums it up this way: "These are the feasts of the Lord, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord, a burnt offering, and a meat offering, a sacrifice, and drink offerings, every thing upon his day: beside the sabbaths of the Lord." Now please notice, friends, how the yearly shadowy Sabbath days were clearly distinguished from the seventh-day Sabbath of the Lord. They were included in the ceremonial law of Moses but the Lord's sabbath day was in the heart of His Ten Commandment moral law. There's great confusion unless these two codes of law are recognized and forever kept separate.

Just remember that man had the least to do with the Ten Commandments than with any other part of the Bible. God spoke that law directly to the people and they heard it with their ears. Exodus 20:22 tells us: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have talked with you from heaven." And then Deuteronomy 4:12, 13—"And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only Ye heard a voice. And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone." Now after speaking the Ten Commandments, God wrote them with His own fingers on the tables of stone. Then Moses was commanded to put those tablets inside the Ark of the Covenant.

Now, on the other hand, think of the law of ordinances for a moment. They were rules which concerned the sacrificial offerings, circumcision and typical feasts pointing forward to Christ. God did not speak these things directly to the people. He gave them to Moses to deliver to them. God did not write them at all. Moses wrote them. They were not engraven on stone but written in a book and that book was not placed inside the Ark but it was placed in pockets in the sides of that Ark. Notice this text now in Deuteronomy 31:24-26. "And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished, that Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying, Take this book of the law, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee." Now you notice that Moses wrote it; he wrote it in a book; and it was placed in the side. Furthermore, the Law of God is eternal, according to Psalms 111:7, 8, but the ordinances were to be blotted out and abolished as Colossians 2:14 makes very clear.

Perhaps the best distinction could be made by asking a few questions. The day before Jesus died, a man conscious of guilt was under obligation to bring a sin offering as an expression of faith that God would send His Son to die as a substitute. This was the only way that man could be forgiven his sin. It would have been a sin for the man to refuse to show his faith in that way. But was it a sin for the man to refuse to bring that offering on the day following Jesus' death? Of course not, because the blood of Christ had been shed and no one needed to shed the blood of sacrifices anymore because the true Lamb had come. But let me ask you this was it a sin to break the Ten Commandments the day before Jesus died? Yes, indeed, it was just as wrong to steal or break any of those commandments the day after He died as it was the day before. Then we must admit that the two laws were different. They were not on an equal basis after Jesus died. This fact is recognized by practically all churches in their official dogmas and creeds.

It's not some new, strange teaching that we're presenting here in answer to this question. You'll find in the Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England a distinction made between the law of ordinances and the Ten Commandment Law. You'll find John Wesley making that distinction; Martin Luther making it; and Billy Graham in a recent answer in his syndicated column, also gave the same distinction between the law of commandments contained in ordinances and the Ten Commandment law.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Is Conscience Safe? Listen to the audio version Now!

Today I wish to ask you a question. Is your conscience, that inner voice which speaks to you, a guide that is safe to follow? What of the man who feels that what is right and what is wrong can be determined by how his inner self feels about it? Some time ago the newspaper carried the account of a Puerto Rican in New York who purchased a ticket for a visit to his island home, went out and boarded the plane, and found himself in Gander, Newfoundland, the first stop of the flight to Europe. He was "sure" that he was on the right plane, but Pan American had to return him to New York, and get him on the right plane before he reached his destination. Again I ask, is your conscience a safe guide? Listen to God's Word and you will find the answer: "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." Proverbs 16:25.

It is crystal clear that I cannot depend on conscience alone, and in view of this fact, God has a very special message for us. He invites you to "Seek ... the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near." Isaiah 55:6. Apparently there is coming a time when it will be too late, and He will not be found. "Let the wicked forsake his way" he continues, "and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord ... for he will abundantly pardon." Verse 7. Here, and only here, will we really find the right way, for He continues, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." Verses 8, 9.

The hardest man in the world for God to reach is not the hardened sinner, but it is the man who feels he is just as good as the next fellow. He measures himself by his neighbor, he compares himself with the other man, and in self-righteousness decides there is nothing more that he needs. Such self-deception is the most dangerous, for it blinds him to his true condition. It is only as he compares himself with the perfect Christ that his own need becomes apparent! Never forget, Jesus is your pattern. It is the Master alone, that we are to measure ourselves by, and only then will our need of change become crystal clear to us.

How true is the need, and clear the invitation of the Master, "Consider your ways." Haggai 1:5. He has told us that our ways are widely different from His ways, and just how different they are will become apparent as we proceed.

The Lord says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2:15. The way of the world, the natural inclination of the heart is to compromise, to go with the crowd, to drift along through life. But there is a vital reason why we must not place our affections on the things of the world. Listen as God continues, "And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." Verse 17. It is obedience that counts with God. It is only the obedient who will "abide forever."

Verbal professions of loyalty to God are not enough. In fact, they mean nothing unless they are backed up with obedience to Him. I have heard many say, "I am saved" or "I accepted Christ" and if they had not told you, you would not have known it!

"Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Romans 6:16. Far too many who claim to follow the Master are disobedient to Him. It is not the one who claims Him as Master that will be saved, "but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matthew 7:21. A miracle performed in the name of Jesus, unless accompanied by obedience is a work of iniquity for it leads to deception. Always be ready when truth is brought to you, to examine and then follow it. God cleanses from defilement, He will not condone sin in any way, shape or form! It is here that the nominal Christian loses the point of the gospel, it is the "power of God unto salvation" not merely the "whitewash" of the old life. It must be a new experience in Christ Jesus

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

with a complete change in actions.

Therefore, all need to make a careful study of the revealed will of God. We must learn that His high standards are for us, that we might follow them. Never forget, Jesus did not, I repeat, did not come to save sinners. He came to make saints out of them and then save them! He became the "author of eternal salvation" only "unto all them that obey him." Hebrews 5:9. He will never save the willful disobedient. Therefore, to know His will is of prime importance. There are three sources where His standards for us are clearly shown. Let us notice them together.

1. The pattern of Christ. His life is a safe pattern to follow. We can with confidence, walk as He walked. He shows you how to keep the Sabbath to the glory of God. His ministrations to others, and interest in them should be our attitude to others. His patience, His kindness is an example to us. "He that saith, he (Jesus) abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." 1 John 2:6.

2. The divine Law of God. Here is God's great mirror that reflects His perfect character. "The law of the Lord is perfect" said the Psalmist. Psalm 19:7. "I had not known sin, but by the law" said Paul. Romans 7:7. It defines what sin is for us, and the violation of any of its precepts is sin (James 2:10-12). To ignore any one of its precepts, is to ignore light and truth.

3. The Holy Word of God. Within the confines of your Bible is to be found a powerhouse of resources. There is power there to completely change your life-if you let it. "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever." 1 Peter 1:23. A study of these sources will reveal His will for you.

One cannot walk with Jesus without having his life changed. He it is who takes you from the lower (your own way) to the upper (His own way) and puts you on the highway to eternal life and happiness. He it is who will show you a way of self-denial, and self-abnegation, a way of true humility. Then it is the proud heart becomes less sensitive. (Psalm 119:165).

Within the Bible you will find broad principles to walk by, and God gives you the intelligence to apply those principles. Ask yourself how your practice fits into this statement, "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Corinthians 10:31. The Bible does not say, "Thou shalt not smoke." They did not acquire this habit until more recent times, but it does say, "Thou shalt not kill," and whether death is by degrees or instantaneous, it is still sin!

Never forget this text, underline it, memorize it, make it verily a part of your life! Use it to measure, to weigh, to check everything you allow to pass into your mind! Listen, "... whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, ... pure ... lovely ... of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Philippians 4:8.

Here is your yardstick for the books you read, the music you hear, the recreation you follow, the places you go, the TV programs you watch, the radio programs you listen to! Ask yourself, is it true? That book, is it a novel, a fabrication of some fertile brain? Is it honest, is it of good report, uplifting? Take the movie screen today, to find that which is true is like hunting for a needle in a haystack. The Spectator of Boston calls it "... a menace to the growing population ... aims its products at those of low tastes. ..." The moral fiber of Americans is revealed today by what they fill their minds with, and it is not a pretty picture. God clearly states what will be the end of those who "make" fiction and those who "love" it. They will be outside of the Holy City (Revelation 22:15) for God only deals with the true and lovely. Take music today. It either appeals to the higher or the lower nature. It either draws you heavenward or down to the sensual. "Wherefore come out ... and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing." 2 Corinthians 6:17.

God's plan is not to "whitewash" your sins, not to cover them with a cloak of righteousness. "And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed" for this is the power of the gospel that is available to you. Romans 12:2. He changes our actions, our words, our likes and our dislikes, yes, He even tells you that you cannot dress as you please! The child of God will dress as God pleases. "Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; But let it be the hidden man of the heart." 1 Peter 3:3, 4. Dressing for display, for show is foreign to the gospel of Christ, and the reason is obvious. The Christian is in this world to attract attention to the Master, not to himself. Far too many who claim to be Christians dress to attract attention to self, and others cannot even get a glimpse of the Master. Outward display is foreign to the principles of the gospel. "In like manner also, that woman adorn themselves in modest apparel, ... not with broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array." 1 Timothy 2:9. Even the lowly pearl, what then of the most flashing jewels? In Revelation 21 and 22, God tells us where the gold and jewels belong, but for His children today, He tells us that we are to dress with dignity and modesty, that our consecrated lives might draw others to our Master, not to ourselves. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away ... ." 2 Corinthians 5:17.

The thrilling thing is that everything about us is to be new! It changes us completely, and why should that not be so? Remember our opening text, "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." Isaiah 55:9. He lifts us to a completely new plane of living! Now I ask again, is your conscience a safe guide? It wasn't before, but now it is, for like a clock, it has been set in harmony with the Bible, and it has been wound by the Holy Spirit! Now it speaks to us with the ring of truth, for it is in tune with the Master.

My friend, let him show you His ways, for time has just about run its course. Don't put it off, for it could well mean your eternal destiny. Jesus never comes to save the willful sinner! He says, "... if we walk in the light ... the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:7.

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Laws of Health - Part 1

The defiance of authority which marks our violent age has become the subject of much study by the experts. No one seems to understand how or why it has happened. And no one has any idea what to do to stop it.

Racial riots erupting into senseless pillage and arson have become common occurrences in the large cities of America. Once upon a time, we read about such things taking place in the capital cities of backward countries or less civilized nations. We chided the undisciplined mobs of Africa and India for using violent, emotional methods to overrule the more democratic processes. We'll never be able to do it again—not after the shameful activities which have taken place in some of our once-safe city streets. Front-page pictures have shown looting bands carrying out merchandise from wrecked stores while police stood by without lifting a hand.

Certain writers and some political leaders have been defensive of those who make a mockery of our laws. A few have declared that it is justified by the circumstances. The Vice President of the United States was reported to have said that he could lead a pretty good demonstration himself if he were in the place of some citizens.

Are we free to choose the laws which seem good for us to keep and refuse to keep others which we dislike? The new mixed-up generation seems to be demanding freedom even to ignore the law of the land, while God's Ten Commandments have been cast aside as too restrictive and narrow. Anything which inhibits individual desires is considered an enemy.

How did the truth ever become so perverted? How did the devil manage to sell this bill of goods to our young people? Worse still, how did many national leaders get hooked by this dangerous philosophy? Are laws made for our protection, or our restriction? Do they take away our freedom, or give us more freedom?

God has not made one law which does not in some way contribute to the happiness of His creatures. But Satan has been telling men that God's laws are unjust and that men will be happier if they do not obey them. He made Eve believe it, and sin is the result. He has made the world believe it, and preachers are teaching that God's law has been abolished.

If only men could see that God's laws are not prison walls which keep them from having liberty, but only walls around that which is harmful.

I think of it in this way: We go to the zoo where there is a big, ferocious lion that has just lately been captured. He is a beautiful fellow and we would like to pet him, but they have put him in a huge iron cage. Now wouldn't it be foolish to say, "What right have they to put up this iron fence? Don't they know this is a free country, and I have a right to do as I please? Don't they know this takes away my liberty?" Does it? Why no, the iron fence around that savage beast insures your liberty and makes it possible for you to live safely.

Satan is a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour, but God's laws have him caged in. Every law is an iron bar which keeps Satan away. God has placed His laws not around us, but around the thing which would harm us.

Deuteronomy 10:12, 13 reads: "And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, To keep the commandments of the Lord, and his statutes, which I command thee this day for thy good?"

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Does it take away my liberty that God has a law which says, "Thou shalt not kill"? No. If that law were obeyed, it would insure me the right to live in a land where my life is safe from those who might kill me. Does it take away my liberty that God has a law which says "Thou shalt not steal"? No. The purpose of that commandment is to give me liberty to own property with no fear of its being molested. Had men obeyed that command, we wouldn't need locks, or vaults, or guns.

I have heard some say that all law came to an end at the cross. How foolish such a statement seems to one who will stop for just one moment of serious thought. Jesus came to magnify the law, Isaiah said (Isaiah 42:21); not to abolish the iron cage that holds the lion of sin, but to make it stronger.

When God made the world, He set in motion certain physical laws, such as the law of gravity. We sometimes say "Everything that goes up must come down." Why? Because gravity pulls everything toward the earth's center. Has that law been abolished? No. If a man jumps off a building, he winds up with a broken neck. But some may say, "This law is against me. If it were not for it, I could go flying through the air. God isn't fair. And I thought you said all God's laws were for our good." Yes, if it were not for the law of gravity, every one of us could go sailing through the air, but I wonder how we would get back to earth. If we didn't have the law of gravity, we would have to use safety belts to hold us in our seats. We might even fall off the earth and bump our heads against the moon. It is silly to talk of physical laws being abolished so long as God's creation stands. Yes, and it is just as silly to talk of moral laws being abolished so long as God hates sin.

Exodus 15:26 tells us, "If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of these diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the Lord that healeth thee."

God didn't want His people to be sick, so He gave certain laws to govern their health. If they are obeyed, they form a cage around stomach trouble, heart trouble, and every form of disease. Why is there so much sickness today? Men have thought that God's health laws were a barrier to their liberty, so they have abolished the cage which held the lion. Therefore, there is not one in a hundred of us who lives as long as he could live. How many people can you think of who in the past year have died of old age? Not very many, I assure you.

Now let's read Hosea 4:6: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children."

Yes, God says, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge of my laws." But someone says, "Isn't it my own business what I eat or drink?" Not if you are a Christian.

Then in 1 Corinthians 10:31 we find the statement, "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." God says that we should eat and drink to His glory. And He has been careful to tell us how we should eat so that we can glorify Him.

Isaiah 55:2: "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness." But someone says, "I thought Paul said that nothing is unclean of itself."

In Romans 14:14, Paul does say, "I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean."

You will notice that Paul is talking about foods offered to idols. Paul says an idol of wood or stone cannot make anything unclean. But by this statement, did Paul mean that everything is good to eat? Some people try to make it include everything. I have heard of some people who think that the best thing in the world is to take young mice before their eyes are open, while they are still too young to have hair, and dip them in honey and swallow them while they are still kicking. But I don't think Paul meant that. I don't think Paul meant that toadstools would make a very good dish to eat, or buzzard meat. God is the One who made us, so He should know what is good for us to eat. Let us go back to creation and see what He gave man to eat.

In Genesis 1:29-31, God said, "Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat. And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so. And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day."

In the beginning there was not even one animal which ate the flesh of another. God gave to man in the beginning a strictly vegetarian diet. Man was not permitted to eat flesh until Noah and his sons came out of the ark and found vegetation destroyed.

In Leviticus 11 we find a list of those things which man might eat and those which he was not to eat. But some will say to me that this was a part of the old law that has been abolished—it doesn't have anything to do with us now—it's all right for man to eat those things now.

So I look down the list and I notice that it mentions buzzards, snakes, mice, and rats. Are they good to eat? Would you come to dinner if I told you we were serving roast buzzard with pickled rattlesnake? Why not? Everything is good to eat, isn't it? You say, "Why, that stuff is abominable!" That is what God says, too.

If you go down that list which God mentions in Leviticus 11, you will find that there are a number of things which most people eat today. One is the swine, another the rabbit, and third, the opossum. In fact, just notice the guidelines laid down by God Himself in this matter of eating:

1. All animals which do not have a split hoof and chew cud.
2. All fish and water creatures that do not have both fins and scales. (nearly all fish are clean).
3. All birds of prey, carrion eaters, and fish eaters.
4. Most "creeping things" are also unclean.

These chapters make it clear that most animals, birds, and water creatures that men ordinarily eat are clean. There are, however, some very notable exceptions. According to God's rules, the following are unclean and are not to be eaten: The hog, the squirrel, the rabbit, the catfish, lamprey eel, lobsters, clams, crabs, shrimp, (in fact, all seafood) and frogs.

God didn't just decide to say that certain animals were unfit for food. When He told Noah to take the animals into the ark, He commanded that the clean animals be taken in by sevens and the unclean by twos. Only clean animals were allowed for sacrifice. By taking seven, it gave some for food and some for sacrifice. And the only purpose of taking any of the unclean was to preserve the species. If Noah had had roast pig just once, we wouldn't have any hogs today. Yes, hogs are called unclean in Leviticus 11 and Deuteronomy 14, along with certain other animals. Read it. You'll find those animals to be forbidden as food.

Someone says, "Why did God make the swine, then? I thought God said everything He made was good. Why did He make the buzzard?" It is a scavenger, isn't it? It cleans up dead carcasses and filth. That is just what the swine is—a scavenger—and he does a good job.

We throw out the garbage, and the mice and rats get their part of it; the snake comes along and gets the mice; Mr. Hog comes along and gets the snake; and then man gets the hog. Too bad he wasted the garbage in the first place!

The flesh of swine also has in it a little worm called trichina. And this little worm, when it gets into the muscular system of man, causes the terrible disease known as trichinosis. You say, "Well, there must be a lot of people who have it, because many people eat swine's flesh." You don't have to take my word for it. The American Medical Association Journal presents the results of a study made of the trichina infestation of cities in the United States. The amazing results are cited in the Journal of March 18, 1939: "One would conclude that there are presumably the following percentages of trichina infestation in other American cities; Washington, D.C., 24.6%; Minneapolis and Rochester, 31.5%; San Francisco, 43%; and Boston, 49.7%; an average of 37% infestation of the urban population for U.S. There is no way, of course, of estimating the resulting social or economic loss; but the estimated 48,000,000 cases of trichinosis in the United States is far from being a national asset."

In closing, let me read 1 John 3:2, 3: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." The Gospel is a power to purify people and prepare them to be as Jesus was. Our bodies now must be clean and undefiled for the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit. And soon we shall associate with angels in heaven, where none of these destructive things will be found. True temperance is the total abstinence from things that are harmful and the moderate use of things that are good. God does not take any good things away from us, but He wants us to be healthy. He asks us today to give up the harmful, habit-forming food and drink in order to be like Him when He comes.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Questions and Answers - Part 2

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we continue the series of special Questions and Answers broadcast on the Amazing Facts' program. Many of you have sent in your sincere Bible questions. Now we come to the first question that we shall deal with today. It has to do with the cigarette question. We are always interested in the reaction of the listeners to anything concerning diet and health. I suppose more than anything else this touches the individual pride of a person. Millions of people feel that it is simply no one else's business how they care for their body, or how they treat themselves. So here is the question:

"Does the Bible give any indication that smoking cigarettes is a sin?"

Friends, ever since the government report on smoking and health was published, the controversy over cigarette smoking has been hotly debated. Many church leaders cautiously entered the arena for the first time. Sad to say, many preachers had never said a word about the issue until the government forced their hand. Even sadder, many religious leaders were addicts themselves to this body and soul destroying nicotine master. I'm glad to tell you that the Bible has always clearly classified smoking as a fleshly lust that wars against the soul.

Notice this text in 1 Corinthians 6:19, 20. "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." Now, this is a divine principle of scripture that very few people understand properly. God says we don't even belong to ourselves. Our bodies are His by creation and then doubly His by redemption. No one has a right to treat his body as he pleases. It is to be the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit—a temple wherein God Himself will live and reign from the human heart. Put with that the text 1 Corinthians 8:16, 17. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." This speaks in such positive language that no one should be confused. God says that anyone who deliberately defiles or destroys the body temple will be destroyed in turn himself. This places the issue in the moral category entirely. No one can argue now that it is not a moral issue. God says it is life or death, people who destroy themselves shall be destroyed. Suicide, of course, has always been looked upon as a sin. And in this case it is simply slow suicide on the installment plan. With all the scientific evidence now available that cigarettes actually do shorten the life, it becomes a sin for people to contaminate their body and actually shorten their life and destroy themselves by this narcotic indulgence.

The strength of the addiction to nicotine is very well evidenced by the increasing numbers who are taking up with the habit. Of course, millions have laid it aside since they learned of the causative factors of cancer. But millions more continue to smoke and even increasing the number of cigarettes smoked. Many people have expressed themselves that they would rather die than to give up their tobacco habit. Surely this is an amazing thing. The angels of God must look down in astonishment as they behold the sight of mass suicide that is taking place today with people who regard their own selfish pleasure more than they do their God-given temple, which is to be kept holy and clean for God.

There are many other texts that would surely apply to this question, but we are going to leave it at this and trust that the answer will be clearly evident from the scriptures in 1 Corinthians.

Here is the next question. "You seem to make the Christian life very prohibitive. Don't you think all the restrictions will drive the young people away from Christ?"

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Let me answer that by reading what Jesus said in Matthew 7:13, 14: "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Let's face it, friends, we are living in an age, not of restriction, but of license. For a long time now, youth have been on a freedom binge, rebelling against authority and law. What has been the result of it? Has it made better Christians out of young people? For the answer to that, consult your morning newspaper or read the latest FBI figures on juvenile crime and delinquency. One of the greatest mistakes made by parents and religious leaders has been to lower the requirements of entrance into the kingdom of heaven. No man has the right to make the path less narrow than Jesus made it. Those who are saved will be saved on God's terms only. They cannot make up their own rules of life. They cannot follow the standards of the world, they must take what God has given in order to reach the destination of heaven.

Jesus said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Anyone who thinks that modern youth are denying themselves too much must be seeing the world backwards, friends. And who thinks for a moment that the teenagers are being taught too much about the high standards of discipleship?

Many years ago the church leaders were not afraid to call sin by its right name. Most denominations held clear lines of belief which condemned worldliness in conduct, dress and recreation. Today those same practices that were once condemned are being sponsored in church recreation halls and basements. Dances, movies, and immodest dress, which brought ringing sermons of reproof once upon a time, are now defended by a liberalized clergy. And who can say that it has drawn the youth closer to religion or closer to the church? I maintain that it has actually driven them away. Why try to make that path to heaven a bed of rosy ease and self-pleasing. It is not! It will require self-denial and sacrifice of material, carnal pleasures. But it will bring to any young person the deepest joy and highest pleasure that he has ever known. The Christian youth is the happiest person in the world. Millions will be in heaven who died for their faith by burning at the stake or being torn apart by wild animals or being tortured to death on the cruel medieval instruments of persecution. Why should we expect to drift into heaven by following our every desire and whim. Religion, true religion that is, is a bold, daring, courageous denial of self and sin in all its alluring forms. The Bible is very clear in laying down requirements for salvation. The narrow road has been clearly defined, text by text. I pray not to make it repulsive or unattractive to young people or adults, but I pray also not to make it so broad and so liberal that anyone will be self-deceived about going there.

We must obey the commandments of God, we must follow the scriptures that are given to us and must be willing to put self and sin aside. These are certainly the basic things about going to heaven. Now, in order to do this, friends, we have to love the Lord with all our heart. No one can follow the plan of salvation, no one can obey the commandments laid down by our Lord Jesus, commandments which sometimes involve discipline and self-denial, without really loving God. If a person is in love with an individual they will do almost anything to please that person. If we love God, we will be happy to follow any path of self restriction in order to put Him first and to please Him above our own selves.

Recently, a letter came from one of our listeners, and I'd just like to read a portion of that letter which seems to indicate that this is the real problem among the denominations. This lady writes, "It looks like the churches have taken in the world and thrown out God. I am seeking and searching to find God's church where Christ is the head and where all born-again Christians belong to it by His Holy Spirit. Where each and everyone lives a Christian life, not only on Sunday, but every day in the week. Where sin is denounced at all times. What this world needs is to be told how Christ can cleanse them from their evil way and give them a new heart and mind to live a life of righteousness instead of one of sin. How He can take the most miserable and broken-down person in all the world and give him joy, peace and happiness. If ever there was a need for the true, unadulterated, old-fashioned gospel of Jesus Christ to be preached, it is now. What will become of these teenagers if they live to become fathers and mothers, and how can they teach their children to do rightly when they haven't even taught themselves? If only the preachers would start preaching against sin, I believe with all my heart that there would be a big change in this whole world. But if only a few preach it and others don't, the world will be going on as it is and getting worse all the time."

Well, that is a wonderful letter, friends, and it expresses exactly the truth about present-day religious conditions. Unfortunately, the whole truth of God's Word is not being proclaimed very much. In fact, many preachers, apparently, are afraid to call sin by its right name for fear of offending someone or maybe losing members. Jesus pulled no punches, spared no feelings in His presentation of truth. Of course, He was tactful and kind, and so must we be also, but He did not permit the attitudes and impressions of others to influence the preaching of His great message to the world. We need more of that holy boldness in these days of spiritual retreat and intimidation. Satan has actually frightened too many of God's children out of their moral convictions. We have no cause to flee before the devil, my friends. He is a defeated foe. He has been ever since the cross of Calvary. It is his program alone to varnish over and soften up the truth so that it loses its cutting edge and convicting power. That is the way with this idea of pleasing the people and tickling the ears of a multitude. The end of the world is upon us. The coming of our Lord is at hand. We dare not talk in generalities or platitudes. We must come down to the very heart of truth and announce the message in firm and uncompromising tones.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Sin Nobody Admits - Part 1 Listen to the audio version Now!

Our subject today is, The Sin That Nobody Admits.

It is the sin we are afraid to mention. We must be afraid to mention it, because no one ever mentions it about himself. People have confessed to me that they have committed terrible sins. I can recall people who confessed being drunkards, who confessed stealing, breaking up another's home, murder, taking the Lord's name in vain, trifling on the marriage partner, Sabbath breaking, all the rest; but as far as I can remember in all my time in the ministry, no one has ever admitted to me that he was guilty of the sin we are going to talk about tonight, and I suppose the reason for it is that it's the root sin-the basic sin-the foundation sin. The Lord Jesus Himself solemnly warned us about this sin in Luke 12:15: "And He said unto them, take heed and beware of covetousness, for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." The sin that nobody ever admits is covetousness, or coveting.

We might define it before we go any further. I would like to give you three definitions that overlap. You may have better definitions, but we need to have some definitions before we go any further. The first one is, "Evil desire for a good thing." The second one is, "Desire to obtain a thing that is not rightfully yours." The third, "A selfish desire to keep what is not yours." These are definitions of the sin that nobody admits-the sin of covetousness. People just simply do not say, "I'm a covetous person. I want to get hold of that extra dollar. I want to reach out and grab and pull in everything I can get hold of." No, they just do not do that. People never come to me and say, "Well, I want to admit something-covetousness. Greediness is my trouble." No, it's a strange thing. It has always amazed me a bit. People do not mind at all admitting the grosser sins, the blacker sins, but when it comes right down to covetousness, I guess it's just too humiliating and no one wants to say anything about it.

Of course, it's a sin that is not condemned very much by our materialistic age. It is not even condemned very much by the church, it seems. You break any of the other commandments and immediately you get into trouble. But coveting-well, no one knows if you are coveting. But it's a commandment of the Lord, and yet is one that most people seem to overlook." But in God's sight, it is one of the blackest of all sins, because it's the root of every other sin. Remember what the apostle Paul said in Romans 7:7. He said, "I had not known sin ... except the law said, 'Thou shalt not covet.'" And so the point he was trying to get across was this: every single sin has its root in the sin of covetousness, and that's why God thought it was important enough to include in the ten commandments. It is the sin that comes before, and leads to, every other sin that you could possibly ever commit.

Covetousness led to Lucifer's fall. There he was in heaven. The Bible says that he was an angel, perfect in wisdom and beauty. But covetousness began to creep in. He desired God's place and God's praise and honor. Isaiah 14, gives a picture of this. Sometime when you have the opportunity, read the whole chapter. Verses 12-14 mention this one word over and over again - "I, I, I, I." He began to think of himself. I will do this, or I will do that. "I will be like the Most High," he says. "I will exalt my throne above the stars of God." That's covetousness. That was his basic sin.

And I tell you, it is still our basic sin, for it is the root of every other sin. If we can stay away from this sin of covetousness, we might be able to get away from sin altogether-because it is the thing that leads to other sin. Now, I may as well warn you ahead of time. There's no way possible to get rid of coveting, except through the Lord Jesus Christ - absolutely no way at all. It takes special power from heaven to overcome this sin.

Now, going back to Luke 12 for a moment. After Jesus said, "Take heed now and beware of covetousness," He told a story to illustrate the point a little bit further. Let me read it to you, verses 16-20: "And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully. And he thought within himself saying, what shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do. I will pull down my barns and build greater: and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall these things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God." Now notice. God calls this man a fool. Now, I may call a man a fool and be entirely mistaken. But when God calls a man a fool, he's a fool. Now this man is a fool. Why? Well, because he was concerned about himself, - "I, I, I," and forgot all about the solemn fact that one of these days we will all stand before the Lord in judgment. And so God said, "You're a fool. Tonight your soul will be required of you. Then whose shall these things be?"

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

This is a very solemn story, and every single Christian should give it very earnest attention and heed. The Lord is just saying here, "Go ahead. If that is the way you want it, get anything you want. Keep the things that are not yours. Make provision for more and more sin. You have the right to do it, but when the day of reckoning comes, and your soul is required of you, then whose shall these things be?"

Solomon spoke of the same thing in Ecclesiastes 11. This is a very interesting passage of scripture. Verse 9: "Rejoice, oh, young man in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth; and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes." He says, "Do anything you want to. Have a good time." "But know thou that for all these things, God will bring thee into judgment." Yes, go ahead, have a good time, do anything you want to. Have it your way. But remember, "For all these things, God will bring thee into judgment."

And then in the next chapter of the same book, Ecclesiastes 12:14, we read: "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." You know a lot of people think they're getting by with secret sin, things that are in the inside, things that do not show up; like coveting, for example. It doesn't show. A person can go along and be quite a respectable Christian as far as other people are concerned, and yet be guilty of coveting. It does not show up, like many of the grosser sins. But mark you this. On the great judgment day, when the light from the judgment throne of God shines into every life, all of those things are going to be revealed, and people are going to see them in their rotten disgusting fullness. And one of the worst sins to be shown up on the judgment day will be the sin of covetousness.

I'm afraid we do not realize just how far this thing reaches. Take, for example, professional jealousy. Have you ever heard that expression? I want to tell you it is not limited to the professions. It is a term that we ought to use loosely, because it can apply to everyone everywhere. Wives are jealous of other wives, husbands of other husbands, workmen of other workmen. And it's covetousness, this professional jealousy, - coveting another person's praise or his honor, or his position. It's so widespread that there's hardly a place anywhere that it's not named. It even exists among preachers. And here's where the thing comes home. A person could build a very beautiful home, and I could go look at that home and say, "It's lovely. It's a masterpiece. You've done a very beautiful job." And that would take nothing from me. It would be easy for me to do that, because I'm not a builder. A person could paint a beautiful masterpiece-delightful, exquisite. And I could say, "It's superb. Never have I seen anything like it." I could lavish praise upon the man. And it would be nothing to me, because I'm not a painter. But when somebody stands up and preaches a better sermon than I can preach, then for me to say honestly and truly from the heart, "It was a masterpiece. The Lord was with you." That's something else. Do you see what I mean? Now, that's what we're talking about tonight. This matter of coveting somebody's else's praise, somebody else's success, somebody else's prestige, is one of the greatest sins mentioned in the Book of God. It is my prayer tonight that as we go a little further into this thing, every person in this auditorium will determine in his heart, to begin right now, laying hold of God for victory over that one specific thing until he or she is delivered from it.

It's a very terrible thing for a Christian to be guilty of coveting. It's bad enough for a worldling, but it's an awful thing when a person names the name of Christ and is guilty of coveting. We need to learn to give God the praise for everything. Then we'll stop worrying about credit-who deserves credit for this, and who deserves credit for that-and give it all to God, where it belongs. And then we will not have so much trouble with this thing of covetousness.

I want to read another passage here. It is 2 Corinthians 8:7: "Therefore as ye abound in everything, in faith, in utterance, in knowledge, in all diligence, and in your love to us. See that ye abound in this grace also." Now here is the apostle Paul speaking to the church at Corinth. And he was telling them what a good church group they were. And he said, "Ye abound in so many things. In faith." Well, that's a wonderful thing to abound in, isn't it, and we can all use more of it. He said, "As a church, I've noticed that you abound in faith. You abound in utterance. You're able to get up and say what you want to say and make your position clear to other people. You abound in knowledge. You know what God wants you to know. In diligence." They were not a lazy people. Oh, they would get out and work for the Lord. "And in your love to us." He says, "You just love us so much. I want to commend you for all these things, but see that ye abound in this grace also."

What grace? It was a wonderful church-bound to have been. All of these things, he said, are indeed praiseworthy and good. It was a marvelous church, but he said, "There is another grace that I want you to abound in." To what could he have been referring? As you read just a little further down into the chapter, you will discover that he was talking about the grace of giving. He was talking about taking a collection for the poor people at Jerusalem. And he said, "Now this is a grace, and I want you to abound in this too, as well as these other things." Why grace? Well, it was the grace of the Lord Jesus that saved us. Our giving to God's cause can be responsible for saving other people and therefore that's a grace too. Did you ever think of it that way? That's the way the Bible teaches it. And he said, "I want you to abound in this grace also."

Why did he mention that? Well, because, folk, here is where most of God's people fail when it comes to coveting. Right here on this one point-the point of giving. Far too many of God's professed people are guilty of embezzling God's money. And that's why we're going to spend a great deal of time talking about that one thing. It is the sin of the hour.

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Sin Nobody Admits - Part 2 Listen to the audio version Now!

We often pick up newspapers and read about individuals who have misappropriated millions of dollars. These embezzlers often skip the country, taking the money, and leaving financial ruin for scores of people who lost all they had. We secretly hope the law will catch up with them, and throw the book at them. But now, wait a minute. Let's not move too fast here. All of us handle money. I don't care who you are, you handle money that is not yours. You handle money that belongs to God. Could it be, that someone in this listening audience is guilty of embezzling heavenly funds? Did you know the greatest holder of lands and goods in the world has been chiseled and robbed repeatedly without going out of business? God is that great Owner of whom I speak. I'm referring specifically to tithes and offerings. In Leviticus 27:30, the scripture says that the tithe is the Lord's. There is just no possible way to miss it. Perhaps I should read that verse. This is what it says: "All the tithe of the land ... is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord." All the tithe is the Lord's. Now that's specific. And then in Malachi 3, we find something else added here. Malachi 3:8: "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." Now, notice, folk. A person who does not tithe is a robber, but in addition, a person who does not give offerings is guilty before God of robbing Him. So your tithes and your offerings belong to God. Oh, may it be engraved upon every heart listening with a pen of fire. Those things do not belong to us. They are God's. We are handling sacred funds, and the question is, -How are we handling them? Could it be that some of us are guilty of misusing God's money?

Now, Malachi 3:10 says: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse." That little word all is very important. I think we need to emphasize that for just a moment. If I make a hundred dollars, I owe ten dollars tithe. If I only pay nine dollars tithe, I am guilty of robbery. In fact, I'm not really tithing. You're not tithing until you give a tenth, because tithe means one tenth. The scripture for that is Numbers 18, verses 21 and 24. The Bible specifically teaches that the tithe is one tenth. Now, that's why the Lord said, "Bring ye all the tithes." It's not for me to say, "Well, now, let's see, how much does the tithe amount to?" God has already settled that, it's a tenth. Turn to Numbers 18:21, 24 and note how the Bible explains what the tithe is. "Behold I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance," Verse 24, "But the tithe of the children of Israel have I given unto the Levites to inherit." Now these two verses explain what the tithe is. The tithe was given to Levi and the Lord also called it tenth. And so, folk, on the authority of this book, tithe is a tenth. In fact, the word "tithe" itself means tenth. You look it up in your dictionary when you get home, and it will say tenth part, or just plain tenth. That's what it means.

Now, a great many people say, "I go to church and I pay my tithe," when what they really mean is, they go to church and give offerings; because nobody is a tithe-payer who does not give one tenth of his income, because tithe means one tenth. And that is what the Bible is speaking of, one tenth of a person's increase. Some people say, "Whew, isn't that a great deal to give, one tenth?" Well, now listen folk, if somebody came to you and said, "I would like to set you up in business. I would like to furnish the capital, the buildings, the equipment. Everything. I want you to go and run it. Then at the close of the month I want you to figure up the profit. When you have found the profit, I want you to keep nine-tenths and you give me one tenth." Would you say, whew, you mean you want a tenth?" No, you would look at the man and you would say, "You've made a mistake haven't you? You mean you want nine-tenths and give me one-tenth." Why you have never heard of an offer like that. People don't make offers like that today.

Not at all, but listen folk, that is the offer God has made. There is no question about it. This world and everything in it belongs to God. He made the whole thing and everything here is His. The Bible is so clear on it. I read from Psalms 24:1. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." Psalms 50:10-12. "For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee; for the world is mine, and the fullness thereof." And then Haggai

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

2:8. "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts." We forget that sometimes, but he says, "It is mine." And then Deuteronomy 8:18. "But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God; for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth."

Now, folk, when we add that all up and put it all together, the Bible is simply saying this. Everything is God's. If you have anything at all, God gave you the power and the strength, the intelligence to obtain what you do have. And then he says to you, "Now, ten percent of what you receive is mine. I want you to give it to me." Is that a fair offer? Ah, dear friends, I submit to you, today, you have never heard of a fairer offer anywhere, and remember the text, Leviticus 27:30 says that the tithe is the Lord's. Oh, may God impress us with that point today. It isn't a question of us deciding whether we ought to turn it over to Him, whether it should become His, or will become His, it already is the Lord's. That has already been settled. The tithe is the Lord's, and so one tenth of every man's income belongs to God. He may be a complete heathen and know nothing of our God, but still one tenth of everything that enters his hands belongs to the Lord God of heaven.

You may say, "Well, now wait a minute preacher. I thought that this tithe was a part of the old Mosaic law that was given at Sinai and ended at the cross. Isn't that right?" The answer to that is "No." And I would like to read you two verses of scripture that will help make that clear today. We go in our Bibles to the first book of the Bible, Genesis 14, and we find the story of Abraham. Abraham was a friend of God and the Bible calls him that. Did you ever note when he met God's priests what he did? The Bible says in Genesis 14:20, "And he gave him tithes of all." Here is Abraham, hundreds of years before Mt. Sinai, a tithe payer.

And we go on into the Bible 14 more chapters, and we come to Genesis 28. There is the story of a man called Jacob. Now Jacob wasn't always the most faithful servant of the Lord. In fact, he really got off on the wrong foot a number of times. And his name, "Jacob", means "deceiver." And that was his trouble, he lied. But one day he reconsecrated his life to the Lord. Oh, he had a wonderful little prayer meeting. He built an altar, and I would like you to note what he did when he really began in earnest to serve the Lord. Genesis 28:22 says he took the stone which he sat up and he said, "This stone which I have set for a pillar shall be God's house, and all that thou shalt give me I will surely give a tenth unto thee." Now note, friends, here we have two men hundreds and hundreds of years before Sinai who were tithe payers. You see the law of tithe is God's plan for the support of His work. It existed long before Mt. Sinai and remained effective after the law of Moses was abolished.

I have heard people say that Jesus abolished the tithing plan. I would like to read you a verse today and then ask you if you believe it. I would like you to note what God says. See if it sounds to you like He abolished. "Woe unto you, scribes and pharisees, hypocrites; for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cumin, and omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgement, mercy, faith. These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." Now I want you to get the setting. One day Jesus was down at the market, and he saw the pharisees there counting out their tithe. And they had their little tiny microscopic seeds, about like a caraway seed that you see on rye bread, and they were counting out nine little seeds and putting them over here and then one over there for God. Instead of putting nine bushels for themselves and one for God, which he would have accepted. They were meticulous - right down to the minutest detail, and He watched them. While they were doing it they were looking so holy, so sanctified, so smug, so complacent, as if to say, "We're tithe-payers. Don't you wish you could be as holy as we are?"

And you know, that is one thing Christ could not tolerate. Have you ever noticed that in His sermons? So He turned to them immediately and said, "You big hypocrites. There you are tithing." And then did He say, "I want you to quit tithing?" Is that what He did? Oh, no! No!! You see He was saying, "There you are counting out your tithe and so meticulously, little tiny seeds," but He continued, "You are not even merciful. You are not even kind. You are not even just." Then did He say, "Now I want you to just simply forget about the tithe? Is that what He said? No, he said, "These ought ye to have done, but not to leave the other undone." He is just simply saying here, you'll never buy your way to the kingdom of God by the tithing system. But it is important because He also plainly said, "You must do that all right, but not leave the other undone." Now, how anyone can say Christ abolished the tithing system, I do not know, because Matthew 23:23 here shows that he endorsed it.

You remember we read it a moment ago from Numbers 18:21. He turned it over to the tribe of Levi and that was His plan. The tribe of Levi, of course, were the ministers or the preachers, of the day. There was a whole tribe and all they did was take care of the services of the temple and minister before the people. They had no time to plant corn. The Lord said, "I want you to stay right here and spend your entire time helping the people get closer to me." And after all, that is the most important work in the world anyway. And so it was His plan that those Levites, or those priests, should be supported by the tithe. Now, folk, when Jesus came, He left the great commission. Before He left, He turned to his disciples and said, "I want you to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every single creature." This involves a great many evangelists, pastors, and teachers, and ministers, going everywhere giving their full time to the preaching of the gospel, and soul saving. It is God's plan that if a person dedicates his entire time to the gospel ministry, he is to be supported by the tithe.

You say, "Well, now, I am afraid I don't follow you there. I see that it was that way in the Old Testament, but I don't see that it is that way in the New." Where do you find that? I would like to read for you today from the New Testament, a text on tithing from 1 Corinthians 9:13, 14 that makes it very, very clear. I am so glad that Paul wrote this, I really am. So many people have said that Paul didn't believe in the tithing plan because he was a tent maker, but this is what Paul said. "Do you not know that they which minister about holy things, live of the things of the temple, and they which wait at the altar are partakers of the altar?" He is talking about the tithing system. We have already shown how God ordained tithing in the Old Testament for the priests. Now notice, "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel."

Isn't that wonderful? I tell you, all of our religious questions are answered in the Bible. The Lord said, "even so." The same way He has ordained. It isn't something man made. God set it up that way, that the gospel minister was to be supported by the tithe. Now it didn't say, "By banquets, bingo parties, or wrestling matches, or oyster suppers." No, it didn't say that. And I tell you, folk, plainly and frankly and clearly, I would rather preach in a tumbled down cow shed, or out under the trees the rest of my life, than preach in the world's most ornate and embellished edifices, if my salary had to be raised by those questionable methods, because God said that the gospel minister is to be paid from the tithe. The text says the Lord hath "ordained" it, or commanded it.

Now, how important is tithe-paying? You say, "Well, I see it, but just how important is it?" Let me read you something. Folk, I wouldn't dare say this, but God said it. So I can read it and must read it. Here it is. Malachi 3:8, 9. "Will a man rob God?" You say, "No." But he says, "Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say wherein have we robbed thee?" And He replies, "In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse for ye have robbed me even this whole nation." Now notice how clear and plain. Folk, this is a tremendously strong statement. The Lord says if a man does not tithe he is a robber. And 1 Corinthians 6:10 says, "No thief will ever enter the kingdom of God." Don't you see why we need to present this topic? The Lord is very, very definite about this thing, very, very much so. And no one can read Malachi 3:8, 9 without seeing that.

You know, the government recognizes the tithing plan. Did you ever notice that? When you go to figure your income tax, you can deduct 10% for tithe, and 20% for other philanthropic purposes, before you compute the tax due. The government allows us to do that, to deduct 30%, but the sad fact is this: America is giving about 2% for all religious and philanthropic purposes combined. Now, folk, I hate to say this, but it is true. America is robbing God. And she will pay the penalty, because the tithe is the Lord's. And He says if we withhold it from Him, we are robbers. Now let's come much closer home. Our city (and could it be our church, also?) is robbing God. People by the thousands (even good church members) are taking God's sacred tenth and spending it on themselves. They are stealing from the Lord. This is one of the most common and most dangerous sins in the world. Are you guilty of embezzling sacred money? God forbid!

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Sowing & Reaping Listen to the audio version Now!

In the state of Washington a law was passed taxing retail sales of gasoline but the Legislature slipped up on one important little thing. It failed to attach a penalty for violation of the law. Dealers began collecting the small tax but when they discovered the error in the law they refused to comply with it, and the Legislature had to be called back in a special session to attach a penalty to the violation of the tax law and thus make it effective.

Now let's think about God's law in relation to this. You know, friends, the Ten Commandments would mean absolutely nothing except mere pious platitudes if God didn't put some penalty in it. But the fact is that He has made a penalty for the violation of those Ten Commandment laws. The Bible says, "the wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Romans 6:23. And that death, my friends, is eternal death. If you're not, by faith, under the blood of Christ, you're under the curse of sin and headed for eternal loss.

In the Book of Revelation we find seven blessings or beatitudes. The last one is found in the very last chapter, verse 14. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the Tree of Life and may enter in through the gates into the City." Now I know some people think that God is just too good and too merciful and too long-suffering to be particular in this. Well, let me tell you that God is good and He is merciful and He is long-suffering but He does not overlook sin or transgression. The Book of God says, "He that confesseth and forsaketh his sins shall have mercy." Now there's where the mercy comes in. Anybody who comes with repentance to confess his sins will find forgiveness and salvation. Now in the Bible and in the book of nature also, we find plenty of evidence that God is very particular and means just exactly what He says. The laws of God must be strictly observed or else we'll not reach the goal of eternal life.

Now let's look into the Bible for a moment. You remember how God commanded Adam and Eve that if they just ate from one tree there, the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, they would die. That was to be the penalty of their transgression. Now that penalty would follow one transgression of God's law. That holy pair did eat of the forbidden tree and the results came. The impact of the awful consequences of that one act of disobedience has thrown the world of nature out of its order, and we feel the awful effect of it six thousand years later. Had it not been for the love of God for those He had created, the race of man would have been wiped off the face of the earth. But God said, "I'll send a deliverer." And that deliverer was to be the Son of God as well as the Son of man. Now because of that provision, man has a period here on this earth, a period of probation, when he must show whether he desires to serve God or whether he desires to keep on selling out to sin and transgression.

Now let me ask this question. Why didn't God overlook that one sin? Simply because God's laws are inflexible and they cannot be violated with impunity. God has tried to impress that truth on men right down through the centuries. Let me read one of the ten commandments which teaches this truth very, very clearly. "Thou shalt not make unto Me any graven image or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above or that is in the earth beneath or that is in the water under the earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them, for I, the Lord thy God am a jealous God visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments." Exodus 20: 4-6. Now God is a jealous God—not jealous as we define it in our modern parlance—not one of those base qualities such as we define. He is very particular because the character of God in man is of the very utmost importance and the happiness of every man depends upon this character of God being reproduced in him. And this comes only by obedience.

One day a little Jewish maiden was taken captive back in the days of Elisha the Prophet. This maid was in the home of Naaman, the Captain of the Host of Syria, and she waited

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

on Naaman's wife. Now this man, Naaman, was a great honorable man in the Syrian Empire but he was also a leper. And as this little captive maiden saw him there, she thought about Elisha, the prophet of God, who had worked such great miracles among her own people. So she said to her mistress, "Would God that my master were with the prophet who is in Samaria for he would recover him of his leprosy." Well somebody went in and told Naaman what the little girl said, and then somebody must have told the King about it too because the Syrian King told Naaman that he could go down to Israel and find Elisha. He even offered to make up a letter himself to send along to the King of Israel concerning the matter. So Naaman agreed to go, and he took with him the letter and a lot of gifts of gold, silver and valuable garments for the King of Israel as well as Elisha, the prophet. Well, the King of Israel read the letter in which he found this statement—now this is what the King of Syria wrote to him—"I have sent my servant that you may recover him of his leprosy." Well, the King of Israel was very perplexed and so distressed that he rent his clothes. And he said, "Am I god, to kill and to make alive that this man has sent unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? Wherefore consider I pray you, see how he seeketh a quarrel against me?"

Elisha the Prophet heard about the letter and he sent a message to the King of Israel saying, "Let this man come over to me and he'll know that there is a prophet in Israel." Well, Naaman was sent over to the Prophet. His chariots rumbled away from the King's palace and soon came to a halt right in front of Elisha's humble door. Now notice something, friends. The prophet didn't even go out to meet him, but he sent a messenger out there with the instructions to Naaman, "You go and wash in the River Jordan seven times and thy flesh shall come again to thee and thou shalt be clean." Well Naaman was very angry over this thing and he turned away. He was indignant at this procedure. What a strange way to treat him. He had come all the way down here to see this man and he hadn't even had the decency to come out and see him in person. Well, friends, this was God's way of doing it, of course, and healing was going to depend on following those instructions of God through the prophet in every detail. Well, Naaman had another idea. He wanted to go back up to Syria. He said, "We have better rivers up there—clean, clear rivers to bathe in, not this old muddy water of the Jordan." But his servants pleaded with him and begged him and finally they prevailed on him to go and follow the directions of the prophet. So he went over to the River Jordan and dipped six times but nothing happened. His leprosy was still just as bad as ever. Then maybe he was about to turn away in anger, but he dipped once more as the prophet said he should, and when he came up this time, the seventh time, his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a child, the Bible says, and he was clean. Now friends, the healing was not in the water nor in the dipping seven times. But the power of God lies at the end of perfect and explicit obedience to God's requirements. Were there no other incidents in the Bible, we would understand from this what God means when He says, "to obey is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams."

When Saul was King of Israel, he tried to deviate just a little bit from God's requirements and to substitute his own ways, but it ended up in tragedy and Saul lost his kingdom and it passed from his posterity to another family. The prophet told Saul that because he had sought to substitute for God's requirements, the Kingdom would be taken from him and given to another. Now God is the same today as He was then. His laws are always to be observed and He will never hold anybody guiltless who disregards them in the least way. The story of Ananias and Sapphira in the 5th chapter in the Book of Acts in the New Testament tells the same great truth—that God means what He says. The laws of God can't be disregarded with impunity.

Now let's look into the natural world and into the world of science and mathematics. The laws that govern those sciences are just as truly the laws of God as the moral law of the Ten Commandments. To the architect and the builder, the tensile strength of timbers and beams, of wood and steel, is computed upon known laws in the world of materials. If those laws were to be disregarded by those builders, what a catastrophe would occur. Should those laws change from time to time, what a loss it would bring upon the building trade. Because God's laws are rigid and inflexible, we have what we have today. Upon the basis of these laws, inventions have been made and perfected. Our automobiles are constructed on the certainty of those laws. Our skyscrapers stand because God's laws in the world of science stand fast and they never change. In the chemical world the laws of God are equally necessary. Perhaps nowhere else are the laws of God more inflexible than in the world of chemistry. Could we take you into the laboratory you would appreciate this fact. Also that these laws are absolute and that obedience to them is of primary consideration. One tiny misstep and what would otherwise be a blessing could bring disaster. The formulas have to be followed exactly in order to get the desired results. Now what is true in the chemical world, is equally true in the electrical world. Delicately balanced are the laws governing electronics. We have the wonders of sound and sight mechanically because we've discovered God's laws in the physical world. And when we follow them exactly, we get some wonderful results.

There's another field where we see the inflexible laws of God operate and that's in the human body. God made the body wonderful and perfect and then committed it to us to keep. What your body is and how it performs and how long it will last depends on how you treat it. The body requires certain elements of nutrition to keep it functioning properly. It's therefore the very highest importance that we understand foods and other things that affect our body. The laws that govern here also are the laws of God. It's a law of God from which there can be no deviation that if we want to maintain healthy bodies we must supply them with wholesome nutritious food in a well-balanced diet.

Can you deprive your body of certain required elements and hope to remain well and strong? Absolutely not. And for every violation we pay the price—cancer, diabetes, heart trouble, arthritis, and a thousand other ills follow as the price men and women are paying for their ignorance of the inflexible laws of God that govern the body. Can you smoke and drink and drink and drink and not pay a price for such folly and such disregard of the laws of health? God made man in His own image. Your obesity, your creaking bones in middle age, your muddy complexion, your broken-down hearts, and many other ailments are your sacrifice on the altar of ignorance or worse, your disregard of God's laws concerning your body. It's a fearful price and too high to pay, friends. When you complain that your grocery bills are too high, think of these other bills and ask yourself if these bills for your ignorance and self-indulgence are not too high also.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Successful Guide for Living Listen to the audio version Now!

Preparation for New Years on Times Square is a revealing process. The plate glass windows are boarded over, police reinforcements are strategically placed, for intoxicated people and overcrowded conditions make the work of the pick-pocket quite successful. Hotels and bars are filled with pleasure bent humanity. Middle-aged men with receding hair lines, and women far too old for such nonsense, enter into the spirit of the occasion with balloons, horns, noisemakers, crazy hats, etc. Inhibitions removed, and blood fevered with alcohol, this is the way the majority meet the New Year in Times Square.

And yet there is an unchangeable law, "Whatever goes up, comes down" and how hard the bottom is the next morning! That miserable hangover, head like a balloon, and far too often unable to do anything but stay in bed. What fools we mortals be!

Today I wish to assure you that this is not God's idea of happiness, for His plan never leaves a dirty brown taste in your mouth, His plan does not leave you sick and miserable the next morning, neither does His plan leave you with a headache. And yet He does have a plan for you. I want you to remember that the Bible is an integral part of that plan, listen, "These things write we unto you, that your joy may be full." 1 John 1:4. Within its pages you will find a reality of living, for there is found a way of life that brings happiness. No wonder Jesus said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." John 13:17. Never forget this vital truth—true happiness comes from right doing. The happy contented individual is the one who has learned these principles of right doing and is practicing them in his life.

Here is revealed one of the basic reasons why Jesus came. He wants you to find that life, He came to show it to you, and that you "might have it more abundantly." John 10:10. From the very beginning of His creation, He instituted certain basic, fundamental regulations to protect man's happiness. The same is true today. The happiest individual today is not the law-breaker, but the law-abiding citizen. Freedom comes with obedience, and it is the breaking of the law that leads to incarceration. The happy child is the child who has been taught obedience. Among such, delinquency has found no fertile ground in which to develop. Many times, life itself depends on how well the child learned obedience. Recently I heard the story of a little fellow who wandered from the parked car onto the busy highway as his parents were unloading it for a picnic. The father saw him just as cars were bearing down from opposite directions. He spoke just two words, "Charlie, stop" and little Charlie literally froze in the middle of that road as cars passed on both sides. He did not turn and say, "Why Daddy?" His obedience was immediate, and his life was saved.

I repeat the words of Jesus, "I come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10. He made us and therefore knows just how to give us the very best conditions for the more abundant life. We need some sort of a yardstick, something to measure ourselves by. Let us call it a standard of right-doing. And here He has not failed us. He has given us His standard of righteousness. Here it is, "For all Thy commandments are righteousness." Psalm 119:172. Here is our yardstick of that which is wrong and that which is right! In other words, to use a simple illustration, it is a mirror in which you can look and see wherein you need cleansing. Scripture uses this thought: "But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed (doing)." James 1:25.

And now let us look at this, or "look into" this perfect law, to use the words of James. It stands before you as God's mirror. Do not be just a hearer (or looker) but an obedient doer, for the promise is that you "shall be blessed in your doing." This is one of the basic ways God has for bringing real happiness. One of the unchangeable laws of the universe is that disobedience has brought misery, pain, and death. God's particular name for this disobedience is sin. It is defined by Him as the "transgression of the law." 1 John 3:4.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Therefore this mirror (law) as you look into it will reveal the blemishes, the "sin" in your own character, and thereby reveal just where the cleansing gospel of grace must be applied. It (sin) brings a terrible end. "The wages of sin is death." Romans 6:23. In other words humanity is in death row. But God in His love, made provision whereby we need not stay there, for our text continues, "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." He says, I paid the penalty—that you might leave death row and all you must do is accept it. In just a few words, my friend, this is how you pass from death to life! With what meaning we understand now, "For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace." Romans 6:14.

Saved from death row by the grace of Christ—what a wonderful gift! No longer condemned, my sins are now washed away, and my conscience is free! What relief! What freedom from guilt! What love! Now the meaning of Christs words are sharp and clear—"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

But wait, I have a very important question to ask you, Does the saving grace of Christ give you license to break His law from now on? Have you ever heard it said that once a person has been "saved by grace" he no longer needs to keep the law? I have heard this many times. God knew such would be taught in this time, so He inspired the writer of Romans to add that next verse 15, listen: "What then? shall we sin, (transgress or break the law) because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid!"

My friend, the grace of Christ takes a law-breaking, lost sinner, and makes him into a law-keeping, obedient child of God. And thus it is that law and grace meet at the cross! Oh what misery, sorrow and woe we are reaping today because man has turned his back on God's law, and thus turned away from the "more abundant" way of life! Here lies the root of our ills. In the words of Miss Charlotte Noland, headmistress of Foxcroft, "Morals have dropped at least 75%" during the years she has worked for girls. More than half her girls today come from broken homes. In her characteristic way she says, "It might be nice for a change to go back to the old idea of bringing children up—not down!" The only real guide to 20th Century living is God's guide! It works in this modern age equally as well as in any other age.

Let us look at these hearts of ours for a moment. I may think, Well, I am not such a bad fellow after all. I am just as good as any of my neighbors. I could go on patting myself on the back for a long time—it feels good! But I am brought up with a start when I remember, God says, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" Jeremiah 17:9. Could it be that I do not know my own heart? Could it be that I am deceived? Yes! And the worst kind of deceit is—self deceit! And the moment that I realize this, and humbly pray with David, "Create in me a clean heart O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psalm 51:10. That is the key—"a right spirit"—then it is that I really pass from death unto life!

Once a wealthy and well-educated young man came to Jesus with the question, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" The Master answered, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." Then this young ruler asked, "Which?" And the Master proceeded to quote from the ten commandments, "Thou shalt do no murder, nor steal, nor bear false witness, honor your parents," etc. Immediately came the rejoinder, "I've done all these things ... what lack I yet?" Oh, that young man with all of his wealth and all of his religion did not know his own heart! The Master did not call him a liar. No. But His next statement put the finger on the sore, the weak spot. There was something he loved more than God. Jesus said, "If you would be perfect, go sell what you have, give it to the poor, then come and follow me" (see Matthew 19). That young man went away sorrowful, for he had great wealth!

No, he did not know his own heart. He had lots of religion and outward form, but it was dead! Ask yourself, could it be that I don't know my own heart either? How deceptive it is! But never forget there is one who does know that heart of yours. He knows just what it needs. And that is the Master. He says: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me." Revelation 3:20. You may have never let Him in before, but I can promise you that when you do, things begin to happen! Out goes the evil and in come the good; out goes the sin, and in comes love; out goes that temper and in comes patience; out goes hate and in comes compassion; out goes suspicion and in comes warmth and happiness; out goes the feelings of guilt and in comes a clear conscience!

Thus it is that the very principles of God's law, up to this time written on cold stone, spring to life within your heart. This too was promised long ago: "This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws in their hearts, and in their minds will I write them." Hebrews 10:16. See now how it is that He "renews that right spirit within us?" It is a new spirit! Now "I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart." Psalm 40:8.

Then, and only then, will true happiness come into your life. With past sins forgiven the conscience no longer is heavy. With Him indwelling within you, and writing there in your life the very principles of happiness and obedience you can live a happy life each day. He is with you to help you over the rough spots as they come. But over and above that he has made provision for the future, and you can face that with a new feeling within you. Yes, "I delight to do thy will." The greatest happiness in the world comes from and is found in doing the will of God. My friend, have these ten golden words taken on new meaning for you this day? Then permit me this suggestion, turn to the twentieth chapter of Exodus and read them again, then remember the words of Christ, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." John 13:17. Here is the successful guide to happy 20th Century living. And may I add, it is the only road to real, lasting happiness not only in this life, but in the life to come. Let nothing hold you back from following Him all the way. n

^ Tops / m / t / w / t / f / sTell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Ten Commandments

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we're going to examine the foundation of this lawless age and its permissive psychology. The frightening statistics of our moral degeneracy are ever before us. We can't deny them or ignore them either, much as we'd like to do so. We've already discovered the responsibility of parents in this cascade of juvenile violence. It has also been seen that Hollywood and TV fare simply feed the flames of crime, perverted sex, and delinquency. But today we're going to dig deeper around the foundation of our weakness and reveal a startling basic cause for our trouble.

Now you may disagree with me, but God says the church is responsible. He says in Ezekiel 22:26: "Her priests have violated my law, and have profaned mine holy things; they have put no difference between the holy and profane, neither have they shewed difference between the unclean and the clean, and have hid their eyes from my Sabbaths, and I am profaned among them." Do you realize that since 1900 the churches in America have had a concerted program of undermining and doing away with God's holy Ten Commandment Law? I'm not talking about all churches, friends, but I'm talking about organized religions and a lot of theology. Many churches have taught that the Ten Commandments have been done away with and that God no longer requires us to be obedient to His Law. Do you know, back around 1900 there was hardly a church that didn't have the Ten Commandments hanging right up in front of the church. Every child in Sunday School was taught the Ten Commandments by heart. And your parents taught you to obey God, honor your parents, respect life and property of others.

A few years ago most every Christian could repeat God's Law from memory; today we find very few who can do it. In fact, today we find many young people who haven't even heard of the Ten Commandments, don't even know anything at all about God's Law. And the churches are to blame because they have literally thrown the Ten Commandments out of the church. Oh, I know that in the official teachings of every church you will find a sanction and acceptance of God's law but I'm talking about the practical aspects of it now, friends. Whenever anyone starts to emphasize the importance of obedience to those commandments, he is told that we don't come under the Law anymore and that we're not expected to keep it because it's been done away with. And thus we find the response to all authority just boils down to this. If God's Law has been done away with and isn't binding on us anymore, why should we worry about any authority? If you can get away with it, then go ahead and do it; it's alright. That's the modern psychology which has been born out of this attitude of a lot of the churches. Sometimes we're told that the Law was against us, therefore it had to be taken out of the way. But when I look at that wonderful moral code of God, my friends, I'm led to wonder just which one of them is against us. I'm of the opinion that if the whole world were to be obedient to all of the will of God, this would be a better place in which to live.

Now let's take a closer look at God's Law. The first commandment says that we're to have no other God before our Creator. We aren't to allow anything to come between us and our direct worship of God. Now certainly this rule is not in opposition to the desires of anybody who truly loves God with all his heart and wants to serve him. The second commandment forbids the worship of images or the making or serving of any images. This is certainly prevalent in the world today but surely nobody who is a true Christian would desire to worship any other God or bow down to any idol or image. The third commandment forbids the taking of God's name in vain. In other words, God is displeased by all the swearing and cursing which has become so much a part of our present-day conversation. But would any of us who love God supremely, desire this commandment to be taken away, making it alright for men to take God's name in vain? I don't think so at all. The fourth commandment tells us to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. This reminds us of something that God made for those who love Him. He promises a divine rest if we'll remember His day and keep it holy. Surely this is for our best good and it's not against us in the least.

Now these first four commandments deal with our relationship to God and nobody could

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

possibly improve on them. The last six deal with our relationship with our fellow men and if they were taught more fully, friends, what a tremendous change would come into this world of ours. The fifth commandment deals with our parents and commands us to honor and obey them. The sixth one says: "Thou shalt not kill." This certainly is not against any of us who are Christians. The seventh forbids immorality of every description. Jesus said the pure in heart shall see God. Surely this commandment is for our best good. The eighth says: "Thou shalt not steal." The ninth forbids the telling of lies, and the tenth requires us to be content with what we have and not covet the things of others. Now really friends, I fail to find anything at all in God's holy commandments that is against us. In fact, I believe they evaluate for us the kind of life God wants each of us to live. The Bible tells us it is a mirror that reflects our characters in comparison with the perfect character of Christ. I read in James 1:22-25: "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves. For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straight-way forgetteth what manner of man he was. But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed."

Now God says His perfect Law of liberty is like a mirror that shows how our life compares with the character of Jesus. God's Law will point out sin in our lives. It will show us wherein we fall short of being what God wants us to be. Just as a mirror is very useful to point out dirt on the face and to show us our need of washing our face, just so is God's Law very necessary to point out sin in our lives and to show us our need of making a change so that we'll be like Jesus. Truly, we might say that the Ten Commandments give us a picture of what God is like and what He want us to become.

As we read the Word of God we find that every attribute and characteristic which the Bible uses to tell us about God is used also in describing His Holy Law. Now let's take a look, and see if that isn't true, friends. God is described as being love, truth, righteousness, perfection, holiness, and of course, He is eternal. Did you know that the Bible also said those very same things about God's Law? First of all, look at I John 4:8. "He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." When Jesus was asked concerning His Father's Law, He said that the very basis of the Ten Commandments is found in love. You'll find that in Matthew 22:37,38. Yes, God is love and those Ten Commandments also are love. In John 14:6 Jesus describes Himself as being the Truth. "I am the Way and the Truth and the Life." Then in Psalm 119:142 God says, "Thy law is truth," There it is; the two are the same. I Corinthians 1:30 records that God is righteous, and we're told in Psalm 119:172 that all God's commandments are righteous statutes. In the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus told us that His Father in Heaven is perfect and we're told in Psalms 19:7 that the Law of the Lord is also perfect, converting the soul. Isaiah 6:3 calls attention to the fact that God is holy, while Paul tells us in Romans 7:12 that God's Law also is holy. Well, we could just go right on down the list, friends, and show you the comparison between God's character, the way the Bible describes Him, and the way the Bible also describes those holy Ten Commandments.

Where does the Bible tell us the Law of God is to be found? You'll find that it is written in the heart of Jesus. Notice what David said in prophesying about Jesus, in Psalm 40:8. "I delight to do thy will, O my God, yea, Thy law is within my heart." There it is! God's Law is found in Jesus' heart. Thus Jesus could say at the end of His life on earth, "I have kept my Father's commandments; I have done His will." He was tempted in all points as we are yet without sin. So we find God's Law in Jesus' heart and to throw out God's Law is simply to throw out Jesus, for Jesus and His Law are inseparately bound together. The Ten Commandments contain the very principles of what Jesus is and what He wants us to be in our own lives. We read in Hebrews 8:10. "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." Yes, Jesus wants to write His Law in our hearts also and do you know that when Jesus lives out His life in ours, it will be the same life of perfect obedience to His father's commandments which He lived while He was here in the flesh upon this earth. If we truly love Jesus, we'll show that love by doing His will and refraining from breaking His commandments.

Let's ask this question: "What is sin?" In I John 3:4 we are told that sin is the transgression of the law. Now that word "transgression" simply means breaking or disobeying. What will be the result of obeying God's Law? First of all we read in Psalms 119:165: "Great peace have they which love thy law and nothing shall offend them." Yes, God says that peace of mind will result from obedience. And don't you find that true, friends? Have you ever noticed how good we feel when we're doing what we ought to be doing. Sometimes we're driving along the highway when all at once we see a State Patrol. Unconsciously our foot comes off that accelerator and we look down at the speedometer to see how fast we're going. Now if we're going over the speed limit, our conscience bothers us because we know we're doing wrong, but if we're not we drive along in perfect peace. So it is with God's Law. If we're doing what God wants us to do, we live in peace; but if we know that we're doing things which He tells us in His Law that we ought not to be doing, our conscience troubles us and we're not happy. So God says peace will be the result of obedience.

Then in John 14:15-17 Jesus promises this, "If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth." Yes, the Holy Spirit is promised to those who are obedient to the Commandments of God. Then in Revelation 22:14 we read: "Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Isn't it wonderful to know that we have a right to enter into the city and partake of that tree of life? This is the result of obedience to God. And then, last, we read in Hebrews 5:9: "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Surely this is the kind of salvation we want, friends—the eternal salvation, and it's given to us as a free gift as a result of which we show our love to God by being obedient to Him.

Thus we found in God's Word that the cause of the great crime wave that is sweeping the land is actually the disobedience of God's commandments and too many people, even theologians, are saying that it doesn't matter any more.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

The Man God Tried to Kill Listen to the audio version Now!

During the Civil Rights movement of the 1960s, freedom marches were held all across the United States. Listen, friends, have you read the account of history's greatest and most successful freedom march? It was a nonviolent movement involving millions of people who had been held in virtual slavery. The heroic leader of the movement was almost killed before he could begin his work. And the strangest thing of all is that God tried to kill him. I wonder if you have read the story for yourself. Perhaps you didn't even know that there was such an account in the Bible. Let's read it then so that you will know that I'm not just making a play upon words. The text is found in Exodus 4:24, "And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the Lord met him, and sought to kill him." Now, there you have the man, friends. Why did God meet this individual in a hotel room and try to kill him? And what is the reason that God did not complete that work? Strange as it may seem, that man lived on to become one of the great leaders of God's work in the Old Testament.

The man, of course, was Moses. He was on his way to Egypt with his wife and son where he was to stand before Pharaoh and lead out the hard-pressed Israelites in the greatest freedom march on record. It had now been forty years since Moses fled as a refugee from Egypt after having slain an Egyptian. During those long years he had been employed as a shepherd in the backside of the wilderness of Sinai taking care of sheep and learning some of the humble lessons of patience and humility so necessary for his appointed work. He had also been unlearning some of the things that he had absorbed in the great universities of Egypt in his earlier years. He had finished his college course at the University of Heliopolis and was among the most wise, cultured scholars on the face of the earth at that time.

I'm sure that Moses must have wondered just why God was allowing him to remain in that Sinai desert during those forty years of shepherding. With his tremendous educational background, it would seem that he could do a greater and more important work. His first forty years had been spent in Egypt learning all of the political, social, economic and religious wisdom which would apply to an heir-apparent to the throne of Egypt. There was probably not another man in all the world who had such a preparation for leadership. Yet in that very year when he seemed so promising, God sent him back into the wilderness to spend another forty years just taking care of sheep. During that time he learned to be very patient and tender, and he also married a wife. Both of these are tremendous accomplishments. No doubt both also had much to do with his preparation for the future work God had in mind for him to perform.

Apparently Moses had a divine curiosity, because one day as he followed the familiar well-worn paths with his sheep, he noticed a bush burning over to the side of the trail. Strangely enough the bush did not seem to be consumed in the flame, and Moses drew near out of curiosity. As he came closer, suddenly God spoke to him out of that burning bush and said, "Come not near, but take off your shoes from your feet, this is holy ground where you stand." Then we have a dialogue recorded in the Scriptures between God and Moses. God wanted Moses to go down to Egypt and be the deliverer of the Israelites. He was to face Pharaoh and bring about a mighty emancipation of all the enslaved Jews from the land of Egypt. To Moses it seemed to be an impossible assignment. He had forgotten much of the language, and his speech, apparently, was rather stammering and hesitating. He pleaded with God to release him from the divine commission. In response, God gave him the assurance that Aaron could be his spokesman before the king. And through his shepherd's rod God demonstrated the great miracles of power that would be manifested before the king so he would be willing to release the people.

At last everything was settled, Moses was on his way to Egypt with his wife and son to join Aaron who was to be his spokesman before the king. It was on that trip toward Egypt that God met Moses in a hotel room and sought to kill him. What a strange thing this was for God to perform toward the man who was to be the great lawgiver and

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

deliverer of Israel. No, it is not so strange when you read the other verses in connection with the story. This strange interlude in the hotel becomes very clear when we understand that Moses had neglected to obey one of the commandments of God. My friends, please don't miss this point in our story today. God expects us to live the message we believe. He gave commandments in order that we might obey them, not neglect them. We must live and act the truth just as surely as we believe it and preach it to others.

Moses was to be God's man to stand before the people of Egypt. But he could not be God's man in Egypt unless he was God's man in his own household. Moses was to be used of God in reviving the commandments of heaven in the great land of Egypt. He was to tell the people what was right, and he was to show them by his life also what was right. But for some reason he had neglected, forgotten, or procrastinated in obeying one of the direct commandments of God, and that one had to do with circumcision. God had given Abraham the rite of circumcision. It was to be a mark of the chosen people of God. Moses, for some reason, had neglected to perform this rite upon his own son. Perhaps in all the hurry and rush of getting ready to go to Egypt the performance of the ceremony had been overlooked. But now, before he could get into his work, he was brought face to face with his accountability to God. If he was going to preach to others, he would have to live up to all the rules himself. It almost seemed as though God said to him, "Moses, settle it now, once and for all, that you will be my man or not. Are you going to do it with all your heart and soul? I can't have a man representing me who will not obey me in all things. Now which way are you going—settle it now." Well, you can read the whole story for yourself. Moses' wife quickly intervened and the act of circumcision was performed instantly upon the child, and Moses' life was saved.

Now what does this story have to teach us who live in this 20th century? My friends, there is a tremendous lesson concerning the way God deals with human beings. He means exactly what He says. There can be no excuse for neglecting or overlooking obedience to any commandment contained in God's word. God is particular about His orders. He doesn't say things that are not significant and meaningful. He gives no commands that are not to be obeyed by His children. We either show our love for Him and our loyalty by being completely faithful and obedient, or else we show our disloyalty by disobeying in even one point. This story illustrates that everything can be lost over the issue of one point of disobedience. How contrary this must appear to multitudes of people living in the age of relativity and existentialism. Modern church members and theologians alike are steering far away from any position of absolute laws of life and conduct. The obsessive urge to find more personal freedom has led millions of people to refute and deny the binding claims of God's holy ten-commandment law.

The popularity of the freedom movement has reached an alarming crescendo in the days in which we now live. The few feeble Protestant voices still trying to uphold the Bible and the Bible only as the platform for personal conduct are being completely overwhelmed and drowned out by the cries of the liberals and modernists. The great ten commandments of God are being ridiculed and belittled. The strangest thing of all is that the theologians are speaking in the loudest denunciation of that law. The ones who have the greatest light are also rejecting the greatest light. What does God think of this situation, friends?

Notice James 4:17, "Therefore to him who knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Religious leaders are going to be called to an accountability that very few others will have to face. The greater our knowledge of truth, the more responsible we are for living that truth and bearing witness of it to others. Jesus spoke these words in John 15:22. "If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloak for their sin." My friends, the man who refuses to walk in the light which has come to him is in the most deadly position of sin. One of the greatest insults to God is to reject truth that He has allowed to shine in our pathway. One of the greatest favors that heaven can bestow upon us is to lead us into an understanding of the truth of God's word. How strange it is that multitudes will actually pray for that truth and then refuse to walk in it after it does come. The guilt of certain people is much more emphasized in the words of Jesus in John 9:41, "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth." With these words in mind, we need but remind ourselves that we are living in the most enlightened period of earth's history. Spiritual revelation of truth has come from God's word, yet in terms of obedience to God's clearly revealed laws, it is undoubtedly the most dark and discouraging period that has ever been known to man.

The words of Jesus in Matthew 11:21 seem especially appropriate to our own unbelieving age. He said, "for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes." Surely we can say that no other generation has seen greater confirmation of the truth than the one in which we live. All the discoveries of archaeology have confirmed the Bible as the very word of God. Hundreds of signs have been fulfilled before our very eyes which were described in minute detail in the words of our Lord. The evidences are continually before us that not one word of divine prophecy has failed in describing the world as it is in this 20th century.

Yet, even as it was in the days of Jesus, men still refuse to believe the overpowering spiritual evidences of God before their very eyes. Modernists, theologians, and liberals will not relinquish their positions of unbelief and skepticism. But their refusal to believe the truth will only bring a more profound condemnation. Satan will be able to take such in his subtle snare of deception. In 2 Thessalonians 2:3-12 we read these words, "Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders. And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." That is very strange language, friends, to be found in the Bible, yet it describes those who will deliberately close their eyes to the revealed truth of heaven. By insisting upon their own way and their own interpretation, their own relative values, God at last abandons them to their course of self-made morality and righteousness. They are deluded into believing that a lie is actually the truth.

The only true security that anyone can find in these days of relative values is by clinging to the one infallible source of revelation, God's word. Unless a man believes that as the very revelation of truth, he will inevitably be swept away by the tides of human opinion and tradition. The man who rejects the word of God as inspired does not have a single foothold upon which to anchor a saving faith. In the light of these things today, may God enable you to gather up all the rays of light that have fallen on your pathway and walk in obedience to that light. Do not be deceived by the devious philosophizing and arguing of men. 1 John 3:7 says, "Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous. He that committeth sin is of the devil." There it is without a lot of sugar-coating and icing. The man who lives a righteous, obedient life is the man whom God can save. The one who commits and condones sin is of the devil. There can be no middle path, no compromise between the two. The cleansing power of God's grace is sufficient for us only as we continue to walk a path of obedience.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Two Laws - Part 1

Some people think God changed at the cross. If He did, the majority of people are all right. If he didn't, there are going to be a lot of people disappointed in the Judgment.

Now, I don't want to know and you don't care what this or that denomination says about a certain thing. We want the truth. We are going to be saved because we followed the truth, not because we belonged to a certain church or denomination. And it is salvation that we are really after, isn't it? I see little use in defending this denomination or that, or in arguing over this doctrine or that doctrine if we are not actually getting ready for heaven. Salvation is the most important thing in this life. There is nothing in all of life that even begins to compare in importance with it. Jesus Himself said: "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Mark 8:36, 37.

A young man came to Jesus one time, very much concerned over this question. He put the question to Him plain and straight: "What good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?" Matthew 19:16.

Jesus gave him the answer just as plain and just as straight. Verse 17. "If thou wilt enter into life,"—No. 1—"keep the commandments." And No. 2, in verse 21, "Come and follow me." There is the two-fold formula from the lips of Jesus Himself. And I submit to you on the basis of this statement from Jesus that anybody who is willing to keep God's commandments and follow Jesus is going to be saved, not primarily because he keeps the commandments, but rather because he follows Jesus. However, anyone who is willing to follow Jesus will certainly be unable to ignore the words of Jesus when He said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15.

There are millions of Christians who believe that people are saved by grace this side of the cross. They are absolutely right in that. But how were the people saved before the cross? If grace has been in evidence only this side of the cross, there must have been a different formula for salvation before the cross. Were they saved because they kept the law? Many people think so, but just imagine what a division that would make in heaven.

Suppose in heaven you are walking down the street of the Holy City and you see a man by the name of Abraham, and you sit down to talk with him. Jesus said we would do that you know. "And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 8:11. "Well, Abraham, I'm glad to meet you. I've read about you many times in the Bible, and have looked forward to talking with you. Tell me, how did you get into heaven?"

"Why, I got here because I kept the law."

"Oh, you kept the commandments?"

"Yes, I kept them meticulously in every little detail. I kept them so good that God permitted me into the Kingdom. How did you get here? You must have kept the commandments, too."

"No sir! I didn't keep the commandments."

"You didn't keep the commandments, and you are here in heaven?"

"That's right. You see, I lived in the New Testament times, and we didn't have to keep God's commandments. All we had to do was love, love, love. We didn't have to pay any attention to the commandments."

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Do you see what a difference that would make up in heaven? Some people would be there because they really worked and kept the Commandments, and some people would be there because they didn't do anything. They just loved.

Do you think there will be divisions like that in heaven? Do you? Not for a minute! Why Paul himself said: "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men." Titus 2:11.

To how many men? All men. Was Adam a man? Was Abraham a man? Then God's grace was revealed to them, and they were in the Old Testament! Think of it! God's grace revealed to men in the Old Testament! Such a statement really is not strange when you stop to think of it. You would think that God would reveal His grace to man just as soon as it was needed, wouldn't you? God is that way. In fact, He has bound Himself by promise that whenever there is a real need, He will be on hand to supply that need, He says: "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Philippians 4:19. When was grace first needed? Why Adam and Eve needed it way back there in the Garden of Eden, didn't they? And they received it, too.

So then, all men are saved by grace. But many may question, "Why the vast difference in the Old Testament worship and the New? There were laws that people in the Old Testament were required to follow that we do not have to follow in the New Testament. Why this great difference if we are saved in the same way?"

It is very important that we understand this. Right here exists one of the greatest misunderstandings of modern Christendom. It is because of a misunderstanding on this point that multitudes of honest Christians lay aside the Sabbath of the fourth commandment on the assumption that it is Jewish and belongs to the Old Testament ritual and, therefore, came to an end when Christ died on the cross.

Please follow me closely. There was a law that was added because of transgression. Paul says so in Galatians: "Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions..." Galatians 3:19. This law that was added did not exist before sin existed. It was added to meet the emergency of sin and obviously was of a temporary nature. There was also a law that came to an end at the cross of Christ. This was the law Christ nailed to His cross and was forever abolished by His death. "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." Colossians 2:14.

I am going to show you now that this law that was added or brought into being because of sin is the same law that came to an end at the cross of Christ. It had nothing to do with God's everlasting Ten Commandments. The Ten Commandments are a transcript of God's character and are as everlasting as God Himself. They did not come into being because of sin and will never throughout eternity be done away.

I would like to point out to you that the very day Adam and Eve sinned the blood of animals was shed. Our first parents walked out of the Garden of Eden clothed with the skins of the animals whose lives were shed because of sin. This was the beginning of the long centuries of blood sacrifices that were offered in the Old Testament. The animals were not to blame for man's sins. Yet, those animals had to die. Why was that? It was a powerful lesson to the penitent sinner that he, the sinner, could go free because an innocent sacrifice was dying in his place.

Now it wasn't possible, of course, for those animals to atone for sin. The Bible says, "For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins." Hebrews 10:4.

Those animals were only a type or an illustration to men that the Son of God, the innocent Victim of God, was to come down and die in their place. There was no other way for men in the Old Testament to show their faith in the promised Redeemer. Not to offer the sacrifice was to deny the blood atonement of their Redeemer and thus cut themselves off from their only hope of salvation.

Thus it was that when Cain and Abel brought their sacrifices before God, Cain's sacrifice was rejected and Abel's accepted. Why? Because there was no blood in Cain's sacrifice. His was a man-made religion, and like all man-made religions since it sought to improve a little bit on God's religion. The Bible says that Cain brought to God the fruits of the ground. I suppose he brought some gorgeous flowers; some beautiful peaches, ripe bananas—fruits that grew right next to the Garden of Eden. And I suppose as far as the eye of man could tell, it was even a more lovely gift than the bloody sacrifice of Abel, but it says that God despised Cain's offering.

There was Cain, the first modernist of all time, declaring, "I'll be religious. I believe in a good moral life. I believe in philosophy, in education and every good thing. But don't talk to me about a blood atonement. I don't need it and don't want it." But it did not pass. God despised and rejected his offering.

Abel offered a sacrifice with blood, thus showing his faith and dependence upon the shed blood of his Redeemer. God was pleased with Abel's sacrifice and accepted it.

Thus, down through the ages, men in the Old Testament indicated their faith in their Redeemer to come by their offerings of blood upon their altars. It was a worship of types and ceremonies, and it was a temporary thing to fill the need until the Redeemer should actually come.

This was the law that was added because of transgression. It was commanded by God, and a man could not be saved back there in the Old Testament without following its ritual. Thus, those millions of sacrifices offered back there in the Old Testament times all had a meaning. Christ was the center of it all. It was the same Christ and the same blood atonement that we look to today. Except we look back to it, and they looked forward to it.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

What Must I Do? - Part 2 Listen to the audio version Now!

Today I want to continue the subject that we introduced in the last broadcast concerning God's plan for saving mankind. We talked about the tragic fall of Adam and Eve into that first sin and how Jesus offered Himself to die in their place. What a tremendous hope it must have given our first parents when they began to understand the love that their Creator had for them.

On that fateful day when sin entered Eden, Jesus came down to the garden and called to Adam, "Where art thou?" as He had often done before. Adam was hiding in the shadows, filled with terror. He thought the death hour had come. But instead of coming to kill Adam, Jesus came to save him. As Adam watched, Jesus called an animal to Him, shed its blood, and of the skin made clothes with which to cover Adam and Eve. The animal had done no wrong. Then and then alone did Adam begin to realize how terrible, how fearful, how deadly are the results of sin.

In order that Adam might live, that very day someone else must give his life. That was the Lamb of God slain from the foundation of the world. It was just outside Eden, outside that beautiful home, that we find the first altar of sacrifice set up. Every one of those sacrifices in the Old Testament times, every one of those meat offerings and those drink offerings, those yearly sabbath days and rituals pointed forward unerringly to Jesus Christ. Even the incense burned in the sanctuary pointed to Jesus, our Passover, sacrificed for us.

Four thousand years after that first sacrifice—that first animal that was slain—Jesus gave His life upon Calvary. That is what He meant when He cried out, "IT IS FINISHED." Jesus had paid the price; He had cancelled the debt of all the faithful of the Old Testament times. He had consummated the sacrifice for all time. For the cross points both ways, to those in the past and those in the future. Those in the past looked forward to the cross, and we look back to the cross. We are all saved by the grace of Jesus Christ.

I like the way Paul puts it in Romans 4:2, 3: "For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; but not before God. For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness." Abraham was not saved by offering a sacrifice on the altar that he erected. He was saved by faith in Jesus Christ, just as you and I are saved.

It was not by making all the beautiful plans for the temple that Solomon built that David was justified, but as it tells us in Romans 4:6: "Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works." David was saved by righteousness, by faith in the righteousness of Jesus Christ. Every soul that has ever been saved was saved through the grace of Jesus Christ.

Salvation is a gift. We don't have to earn it. It is the most valuable gift of all. The Scripture says in Ephesians 2:8, 9: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." Salvation does not come from any human effort. It is a free gift without a penny and without price. It is the science of salvation that deserves our attention and our study.

In Revelation 5:9, the redeemed are pictured as standing before the throne of God, both those redeemed from the Old Testament times and from the New Testament times, singing glory to Jesus, the Lamb, "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation." A great, fundamental truth is expressed here—the only way a sinner can be saved is through the blood of Jesus. Since the time of Adam, sinners have been saved by believing in Jesus.

If men are saved through faith in Jesus Christ, where does the Ten Commandment law come in? Throughout all the ages of controversy between Christ and Satan, the devil has

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

sought to destroy the authority of God over man by casting the law aside and by preventing a knowledge of the truth about the law. The enemy of Christ brings this about by rejection of the law or a wrong concept of the dispensation of the law as opposed to the dispensation of the gospel.

Satan could bring in the principle of salvation through works, and prevent the functioning of the law according to God's design. The role that the law fulfills in relation to the gospel is two-fold. First, it is God's standard of what is right and true. As a standard the law expresses the mind or will of God, for in Psalm 40:8 it says, "I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, thy law is within my heart." The law also declares man's duty to God, for in Ecclesiastes 12:13 we read, "Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

How often I have heard Christians boast that they don't care about the law of God. They hide behind Romans 6:14, "For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace." They say that since they are saved by grace, through the atoning blood of Christ, they don't have to keep God's commandments at all. Have you ever heard that theory? Well, I am sure the Bible doesn't teach that.

In Romans 6:15, the very next verse in the chapter, Paul says, "What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid." The fourteenth verse has stated, "Sin shall not have dominion over us," or "it shall not be our ruler." We are not under sin, or the condemnation of the law either, when we obey God. Why? Because we are saved by grace. But does that license us to sin? "God forbid." Friends, when an individual is saved by grace, he is under greater obligation than ever before to keep the law of God.

As it says in Romans 3:31, "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea, we establish the law." Are we licensed to break the law of God because we are saved by grace and saved by faith? God forbid. "Yea," he says, "we establish the law." The law is firmer than ever in our lives. Who is under the law today in your city? Those who have broken it; they are under the law, and in jail. The man who keeps the law is the man who is free today. The law breaker is under the condemnation of the law.

Right here let us stop a moment and read the definition of sin in 1 John 3:4. "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." That is very clear. When a man sins he has transgressed the law. Every sinner has broken the law. What is sin? "The transgression of the law." When a man sins, what does he do? He breaks the law of God. There must be a law, otherwise he couldn't break it. We are not under the law unless we break it.

The governor of the state has life-and-death power. A man has been sentenced and condemned to die. He is under the sentence of death. Friends intervene. They present evidence to the governor, special factors involved in this case—contributing factors as to why this individual was caught in this particular crime. As the governor investigates the evidence, he feels that this man deserves clemency; so he uses his official prerogative as the head of the commonwealth. He takes his pen and dips it in the ink and signs across those condemnation papers, "PARDONED," and then signs his name.

That condemned man, my friend, has been saved by grace, not by his works or by his goodness. He was doomed to die, and being ever so good in that death cell would never, never in this world save him. That is very obvious. In other words, after an individual has broken the commandments of God, he cannot be good enough to save himself. The wages of sin is what? Death. We have all sinned, so are under the sentence of death. And there is only one way of salvation, through Jesus Christ.

Now the condemned man is pardoned. He can hardly believe his eyes as he sees the kindness, the stroke of generosity and love shown by that governor. PARDONED. SAVED. FREE. You meet the freed man a little later and he says, "Wonderful what that governor did for me, and wonderful this new freedom of mine. Now I can break the law all I like, for the governor set me free from the law and from the sentence of death. I was saved by grace." Did the governor pardon him so he could go out and become a greater law breaker? Shall we who are saved by grace continue law breaking? "God forbid." We are under even greater obligation to keep the law because we are saved by grace.

I hate to think of heaven divided into two camps. You come up to one group and say, "How did you folks get here?" And they answer, "Oh, we got here by our works. We did this and that. We obeyed the commandments, and we kept the law of Moses. We followed faithfully all those Old Testament services, and we are saved by our works." Then you ask another group, "How did you folks get here?" And the answer, "Oh, we were saved by love, saved by grace, saved by faith. We didn't have to keep the commandments, we were just saved by grace." Do you think heaven is like that?

I have heard some say, "Those commandments were only for the Jews." Then a Christian can lie and steal, and murder people, and do anything else that he pleases. Is that possible? Jesus says in John 14: 15. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." It was because these were broken that Jesus gave His life. If these were to be abolished, why not abolish them before Jesus came to die? Then His death would not have been necessary.

People are always looking for bargains, for special discounts. Some churches advertise, "Come to us, we will give you a bargain, 10% off of the Ten Commandments." But will that stand in the judgment? Just because some great churches tell you that they will make it easy and only ask you to keep nine of the Ten Commandments, is that sufficient? Will you pass in the judgment day? Has any church the right to discount the commandments of God? How do we dare to imagine that we are on the high road to heaven when we knowingly break any of God's commandments?

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

What Must I Do? - Part 3

Millions are wondering just what has happened to the American conscience when larceny continues to climb by an over-all 12 percent more every year. Shoplifting has reached scandalous proportions, and employees are stealing ten million dollars every day from their bosses.

You know, friends, some people believe that the religious establishment is partly to blame for these crime figures, because they have taken such a permissive, liberal attitude toward law enforcement. In fact, some large churches have given assurance that it is not a sin to break the ten commandments any more. Many have been comforted in their sins by this presumptuous attitude of the church. But let me assure you, friends, it is not a matter of whether a church says I am right, or whether I feel saved or not. It is a matter of what God says is right. God says in Revelation 22:14, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." I would be afraid to come up to the gates of life and say, "Lord, I want to enter in." And God would ask, "Have you been keeping the commandments?" I would answer, "Yes, Lord, I have faithfully kept nine of the commandments."

How will God answer you? He tells us in Matthew 25:41, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." I am reminded of one little wiry woman who jumped up and said, "We don't have to keep those old commandments any more!" And she really believed it for it was not long before she was unfaithful to her husband. Dear friends, unless we are willing to obey God and keep all his holy laws, there will be no place for us in that Holy City. That is what God says, and God never lies.

Here is a very important text, in 1 John 2:3, 4, "And hereby do we know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." Isn't that awful? "Why pastor, would you call a man a liar that doesn't keep the commandments?" No, indeed, I wouldn't! I never dared call anybody a liar. But God does. God says that anyone who claims to love Jesus and doesn't keep all of His commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him. I can't argue with that.

I hear someone say, "But pastor, I am having a wonderful experience. The Lord has heard my prayers." But God says in Proverbs 28:9, "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even HIS PRAYER SHALL BE ABOMINATION." Do not be deceived. Unless you are obeying God and keeping all of His Commandments that you know about your prayers are ascending no higher than the ceiling of the room in which you pray. That is just what God says, and I believe that He means it.

Now in 1 John 3:32 this same truth is expressed in a positive way, "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things which are pleasing in his sight." So the blessings of heaven are conditional upon obedience. You will remember that Adam and Eve lost their Eden home just because they disobeyed one small commandment of God. I tell you, it is important that we obey all of His commands.

In Romans 7:12, Paul says some very good things about the law of God. "Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." And in the seventh verse it says, "... I had not known sin, but by the law; for I had not known lust except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." You see, friends, if there were no law, you couldn't sin. Is that clear? If there were no speed laws, you would never get a traffic ticket, would you?

Romans 3:20 says, "For by the law is the knowledge of sin." Romans 7:7 states, "I had not known sin but by the law." This is again made very plain in Romans 4:15, "... where no law is, there is no transgression." So when people tell you that the law was

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

abolished at the cross, that is the same as saying that since the cross there has been no sin. But I have seen one or two sinners, haven't you? There has been sin ever since Jesus died on the cross. Sin is the transgression of the law, so that is the test. The commandments must still be in force today.

Now I would like to check these commandments and see why so many people wish to abolish them. Do you wish to worship other Gods? No. Do you want to worship images? No. Do you want to swear and take God's name in vain? No. Do you want to dishonor your parents? Of course not! Perhaps you want to steal, commit adultery or kill people? No, you don't want to do that. Well, then perhaps it is the commandment about coveting that you wish abolished? No, you say, that is very important.

Oh, we have forgotten one of the commandments, and that is the one that says, "REMEMBER." "REMEMBER the Sabbath Day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God." How strange that the churches forget the very one that God says to REMEMBER. That is the only commandment that God says to remember, and this is the only commandment that the churches forget to keep.

Why are we told to keep the seventh day Sabbath? "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it." Well, that takes us right back to creation. Why should we keep the fourth commandment? Because God created us all and gave us all the earthly blessings which we now enjoy. Now when some preacher tells you that it is not necessary to keep the Sabbath, how will you answer him? Suppose they tell you that now we worship on Sunday because Christ arose on that day? Is that what God says to do? No! How can we honor God by disobeying him?

God has never said His law was abolished. And who will be the judge at that great day when we will be judged by the law? It will be God, not the church. Now don't make the mistake of thinking that just keeping the fourth commandment will save you. Not at all. That will not guarantee anyone salvation. You might keep the Sabbath faithfully every week and still not be saved. Just because a man does not lie does not mean that he is going to heaven. It is not keeping the commandments that guarantees salvation, but the love that I have for my Savior that causes me to keep them.

There are people in the world who don't mind a bit breaking God's holy day, which is part of the law dealing with our duty to God, but they think it is awful to steal chickens from their neighbor, which has to do with the other part of God's law dealing with our duty to our fellow man. How can a person break one of God's commandments every week, saying that they are honoring Jesus by keeping Sunday in honor of His resurrection? Impossible. Utterly impossible to say that we are honoring Jesus Christ by breaking one of His commandments every week.

Now what about the individual who does steal chickens? We have had people in our audiences who have killed people, too. And the Lord loves them all. Now back to the chicken stealer. He keeps the Sabbath and all the other commandments, but he is supporting his family by stealing chickens. You ask him, "Brother, are you keeping God's law?" "Oh, yes, all but one commandment. I support my family by stealing chickens." "Don't you think you should give that up?" "Well, yes, if I can find some better job some where I will. I will have to keep on stealing chickens until the Lord finds me a better job." Do you think the Lord will help him?

But perhaps he says, "I know, pastor, what the Bible says, but one preacher says one thing, and another one another. You can prove anything from the Bible, so I decided to make it a matter of prayer. I know it says not to steal. but maybe stealing chickens to support my family is different. I've decided to make this a matter of special prayer and if God gives me a sign, a special revelation, then I will stop stealing chickens." I tell you, that is not the type of person to whom God gives revelations. God surely will never give a sign to anyone who is knowingly breaking the commandments.

But, you say, "I have been breaking the commandments for forty years." Well, that is all the more reason that you ought to change quickly, for God say in Hebrews 10:26, 27, "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgement and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries." When the light of truth comes, we must follow it and walk in the light. Isn't that a solemn thought? If we sin willfully after knowing the truth, then Jesus' blood will no longer atone for our sins.

There is no sacrifice in all God's universe that will cover known sin, and there never has been. There is only one way anyone can be saved and that is to come to the fountain of blood, to Jesus Christ, to climb up Calvary's hillside and bow before the cross and dip in that cleansing fount and have past sins washed away. Remember the law can't save you, of course not. That is why you need Jesus. But the law can help to point out the way we must go to gain salvation.

Proverbs 4:4 says, ". . . keep my commandments and live." This is the way the law works. In Romans 7:10 we read, "And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death." Why? Because that law was disobeyed. God never changed, so the only way to get a different law, or to change the one we have, would be to get a different God. And you know that is impossible. It is just as impossible to change God's law.

God has pointed out the way of salvation. First, accept Christ. Second, keep the commandments. Where did the Jews fall down especially? Ah, they followed the letter of the law, but they failed to follow Jesus. Where do Christians many times fall down? They say that they love Jesus but then fail to keep His commandments. Satan does not care if you keep the law ever so carefully if you will just stop there and not follow Jesus to the cross of Calvary. And Satan is equally pleased when you continually declare your love, but fail to obey Jesus.

When I have done my best, then I like to think of this wonderful text. 1 John 2:1, "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous. And he is the propitiation for our sins. . . ." No, we have the plan of salvation carefully outlined. Keep His commandments; but when I do stumble, when I do fall, I will go right back to Calvary and wash and be made clean. For Jesus died to make up for my lack. His grace is sufficient for me.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Whispers

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we're going to study about the most cruel word found in all the Bible. This word describes a class of people who indulge in the most devilish, despicable work ever invented by the evil one. Friends, I appeal to you to let this message do its searching work in your heart. Don't try to remember how many other people might need this message, just let it sink into your own heart. So terrible is this sin, that only a few have ever openly admitted being guilty of it. But few can escape the inward sense that they have been guilty at some time or other. Our main text is Proverbs 16:28, "A whisperer separateth chief friends." Put with that Leviticus 19:16, "Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people."

Friends, there are many types of sin that God despises; some of them are too awful to even discuss on the air. Sometimes I think we deceive ourselves by classifying sin. We look at certain ones as being quite respectable. They are usually the sins of the spirit, such as envy or pride. Then, on the other hand, is the disrespectable class of sins—usually the sins of the flesh. But listen, in Proverbs 6:19, seven deadly sins that God hates are listed, and right in the midst of them we find this one of which I am now speaking. Notice now in verse 19: "He that soweth discord among brethren ... a false witness that speaketh lies." In other words, a whisperer, that's what we are talking about. This is the word that has such a loud echo. It's a soft sounding word, but it has the noisiest, loudest echo of any other word—it has broken more hearts, it has wrecked more homes, destroyed more friendships than any other word, probably. A whisperer speaks in all languages, he crosses all boundaries, he's a member of all churches, he's the bearer of false rumor and report. We might as well face it, friends, one of the natural, evil traits of the human heart, of human nature itself is in telling evil things about other people. I cannot explain it—none of us can understand it, it is an unholy, ungodly bent of mind. It is a mystery. By the way, it's a sin which often besets those who are saints in every other respect. The whole body might be brought under the control of Christ, but the tongue is very difficult to control. In fact, it's practically impossible to control it.

In James 3:2-8, we read this: "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body. Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth. Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth. And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell. ... But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." Oh how true those words, friends. Here's where alienation and disaffection is often created. Why does God hate it so? Why did He say it was one of the seven deadly sins of man? I think because it is often done with a flair of religious sanctity.

The gossip often speaks as though he is defending some violated religious principle. Usually it is to justify conscience that he only implies or intimates some evil tidings about another individual. Listen, one false insinuation has more power than a hundred good deeds. A slanderous whisper never completely dies out, it will outlive a thousand sound arguments. The trouble is no one will let it die until it has scorched and slashed and slain a soul, scarring it for all time to come.

Satan is the father of lies. Remember that question, "Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree?" Genesis 3:1. Now why did Satan put it in those words? It was a lying implication. He knew that God had said that they should only refrain from one tree, yet he implied that God had forbidden them to eat of any tree. That's the earliest form of misrepresentation and exaggeration that we find in the Bible. The devil is the father of lies, and the father of exaggeration. But his modern disciples are called whisperers. They don't come out in the open very often and speak; they just go around whispering. And

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

the intimations of what they whisper are very, very poisonous and deadly. Perhaps it may be in this form. "What an unfortunate experience that poor girl had!" Or, "Many people have made mistakes, but we can't hold it against her." No details, mind you. Just the basic material there of some good, juicy gossip. And then somebody else picks it up and makes it a little bigger and passes it on in a more exaggerated form. And very soon that poor individual has been slashed by tongues that can kill. Yes, there's plenty of irresponsibility when it comes to this matter of the tongue. Imaginations begin to work overtime and to repeat half truths that have been twisted out of proportion. And by repetition they become horrible in their content. The self-righteous soul who started the suspicious rumor is ready to blame everybody else when the results are brought into the open.

I heard of two women who were walking along the street and they met another woman as they walked along. One of them said, "Do you see that woman over there? She's terrible. She's the biggest gossip in town. She repeats everything I tell her." And I am afraid this is very, very true concerning a lot of other women and a lot of men as well. Why? Why is this mania so wide spread to tell everything bad that we know about another? In much talk there is usually no lack of sin.

One old minister was approached in his study one day by a young woman of the parish. And she said, "Pastor, can you keep a secret?" He said, "Yes, can you?" And you know, she had nothing else to say because she was about to tell him something that shouldn't have been told.

What a solemn thing Jesus said in Matthew 12:36, 37. He said that we will give an account for every word we speak. Think of it! A record is being put down in heaven, in the books of heaven. Those phone conversations will all be recorded up there. The idle chatter that takes place in the home. The unkind words we say about someone behind their back. Who is not condemned by these verses, friends? Who cannot look back and blush to remember things that have been spoken in secret. Who has not spoken and would then give a hundred dollars to take back the words again? Oh, yes, but the damage has been done, and usually there's no way to repair it.

The story is told of an old farmer and his wife who were riding back from town in the old country wagon. As they rode along, the wife made this observation, "Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could pull along together like those horses are pulling the wagon?" The farmer said, "Yes, and we could too, if we only had one tongue between us."

And so it is that the tongue is a world of evil sometimes, bringing in dissension and division in the home. Someone has said that the first screw that comes loose in the head is the one that controls the tongue. The Apostle Paul, by the way, commended the women who were not busy-bodies and who would stay quietly at home. Now I am not making that reference to imply that only women are involved in the matter of gossiping and speaking idle things. But an interesting story has gone the rounds about an old Puritan pastor in London who had just come to his new parish. After a few weeks one of the ladies of the parish met him after the service and said, "Pastor, I have these scissors here and I wonder if you would give me permission to do something? I've observed you now for a number of weeks, and there's something that bothers me a great deal. And I wonder if you would give me permission to correct it?" She said, "The tassel on your robe is just too long and I'd like to shorten it." Well, the pastor went ahead and gave permission for it to be done. Then he said, "Madam, there is something also that I've observed about you, and I wonder if I could have the scissors and if you'd give me permission also to correct something." And she said, "Oh yes, surely." "Well," he said, "put out your tongue."

It has been said that we should make our words as palatable as possible because some day we may have to eat them. The old country doctor who would tell his patients to put out their tongue in order to find out about their physical condition suggests also that the tongue can reveal spiritual conditions as well.

Well, what did Jesus have to teach on this subject, anyway? He had a good chance once when some Pharisees brought a woman who had been taken in the act of adultery. Jesus, you remember, just bent down and wrote in the sand, and the accusers went out one by one. Now if Christ spared that guilty woman, who was obviously very, very much at fault, because he told her to go and sin no more, what would he say concerning one who had been judged on the basis of half truths and false rumor? I tell you, Jesus would show the accusers a flash-back of their own ugly past that would cause them to slink away in shame. It is so strange how we judge people so harshly, and yet we try to justify our own selves.

Somebody has said, "I've often thought what a heaven this world would be if only we behaved to our fellow men as we do to our dog." And that's true. Thousands of people would never, never hurt their dog for a moment, and yet they put thousands to the torture, perhaps, by their false, cutting remarks. Passing on gossip-it is curious how we misjudge and misinterpret.

Here is something that should teach us a real lesson about judging. Abraham Lincoln made his famous Gettysburg address, but how did it go over with the newspapers the next day? You know what appeared in some of the most famous newspapers of the day, after his speech had been made? The Chicago Times had this to say: "The cheek of every American must tingle with shame as he reads the silly, flat, dishwatery utterances of the man who has to be pointed out to intelligent foreigners as the President of the United States." The local Harrisburg paper wrote this the next day: "We pass over the silly remarks of the President. For the credit of the nation, we are willing that the veil of oblivion shall be dropped over them and that they shall no more be repeated or thought of." And the London Times said: "Anything more dull and commonplace it wouldn't be easy to produce." So see how Lincoln was misjudged and falsely represented by these newspaper reports!

Oh yes, it is easy to look back and see how Satan operates through whisperers, slanderers and gossipers. I think of Nehemiah, one of the Old Testament characters-heroes of the faith. He was the victim of a whispering campaign. He was building those walls of Jerusalem, you remember, and a malicious opposition sprang up against him. Three men were at the head of the opposing forces. Sanballat, Tobiah and Geshem, the Arabian. First they tried to ridicule the wall he was building; they made a big joke out of it. They said a fox could come by and knock it down. Next, they tried an armed attack, but he just put weapons in the hands of his men and they kept on building the wall. Then they hired counselors against him; and finally they began to slander him by false report. If you read Nehemiah 6: 6-8, you'll find these words: "It is reported ... and Gashmu saith it" that you're committing treason against the king. Notice those expressions: "It is reported," "and Gashmu saith it." Oh yes, Sanballat, Tobiah and Nehemiah have been dead for a long time, but this fellow Gashmu, strangely enough, is still alive. He's the author of "They say." Gashmu belongs to all races and languages. He has many aliases. Among them are these: "they tell me" ... "have you heard" ... "this is off the record, but." Yes, Gashmu is hard to locate. His name is never found in the phone directory, and if you locate an address, he has already moved on. He's the symbol of the tale-bearer, the defamer, the slanderer, the whisperer.

In the New Testament, the book of Romans, Paul gives a list of depraving sins. Beginning with Romans 1:29-32 he lists some of the most hateful, fleshly sins that men can commit. And among them, he puts whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, fornicators, murderers. But right in the midst is whisperers. And then he goes on to say, "They which commit such things are worthy of death."

Ah, friends, have you ever noted that of the twelve tribes of Israel only one name will be left out of the city of God? The names of the twelve tribes are on the gates of the New Jerusalem. But one is missing-that's Dan. In Genesis 49:17 we read that he was a backbiter. His name will not be on the gates of heaven; there will be no entrance for him as a gossip and slanderer.

You know, even those who repeat bad reports are condemned in the Bible as Proverbs 17:9 makes clear. "He that covereth a transgression seeketh love; but he that repeateth a matter separateth very friends."

Well, in closing friends, how shall we relate ourselves to false rumor and report? First, give no cause for it to be made. Phillips Brooks once said these very, very impressive words: "Keep clear of concealment, keep clear of the need of concealment. It is an awful hour when the first necessity of hiding anything comes. The whole life is different henceforth. When there are questions to be feared and eyes to be avoided and subjects which must not be touched, then the bloom of life is gone." So don't retaliate, friends. Keep at your task. We could be chasing the devil's dogs the rest of our lives and never get anything done for God. Just keep at your work and follow the admonition of the Scriptures in Psalm 34:13, "Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile." You can't do it alone, but by the power of God it can be done. Put Gashmu from our midst, dear friends, and let's not be a bearer of evil report and of gossip against others.

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Battle for the Mind - Part 2 Listen to the audio version Now!

We're living in an age of dishonesty and deceit. Everywhere we turn our eyes see the sham and pretense of a morally bankrupt society. The ridiculous posture of modern advertising has done much to destroy man's faith in what is true and false. One announcer blares forth the assuring words, "Plymouth is the finest car on the market. There's none better." But then another man flashes onto the television screen immediately with this dogmatic statement: "Ford is the greatest automobile available anywhere." This is only one aspect of society today which conditions us to disbelieve most of what we hear.

If we were to go down the street today and knock on the doors of a dozen different churches in our city and ask them what they believe in most any area of Christian doctrine, for example, baptism, what happens when a man dies, punishment of the wicked, second coming of Christ, millennium—name almost any subject you will—if we were to knock on the doors of a dozen churches in any city and ask, "What do you believe?" we'd get a dozen different answers. In fact, we'd get a different answer in every place.

Now what's the purpose of doctrine, friends? It's to teach us something about God. That is its only purpose. If that doctrine is not what the Bible teaches, then it's going to teach us something less than the truth about God. Does it make a difference what we believe? Let me ask you this. Did it make a difference to Adam and Eve? Of course it did. Is it possible for a man to be sincere and be sincerely wrong in his beliefs? Absolutely. We need to listen to the words of Jesus here. Now listen, this is an amazing statement right from the lips of our Lord. It's found in Mark 7: 7. "Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Friends, this is amazing because it doesn't say they are worshipping in vain because they're heathen. It doesn't say they're lost because they are not worshipping. It says they are worshipping Him—that's what it says—but they are worshipping in vain because they have put in the place of a "Thus saith the Lord" one of the traditions of men. Does it make a difference what a man believes? Jesus said, "Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Now the more you ponder that statement, the more amazing it becomes because these are not heathen people He's talking to. These are not the sinners. This is not the man in the gutter who is lost, who's worshipping in vain. It's the man who is worshipping but who has put in the place of a plain, direct commandment of God one of the traditions of men.

Do you see why we are concerned about truth here in this broadcast? The truth as it is in Jesus? Because the devil would like to counterfeit Bible truth and have us believe something less than the truth. Because the purpose of truth, the very purpose of a doctrine, is to lead us to God. If the doctrine we believe does not square with Scripture then it teaches us something less than the truth about God. I want to illustrate this. What we believe about a person influences our relationship to him. If I believe that my country was responsible for starting the Vietnam war with the carnage and bloodshed that resulted, it would influence my relationship to my country and prevent me from being a loyal American. What happens to the wicked at the end of the world? There are some churches where it's taught that when a man is lost, he's going to burn forever and ever and ever. There are some churches that teach that he goes through a period of probation, of torment, that gets him ready for glory. There are some who believe that man is going to be burned up, consumed. There are some who believe that he's going into a kind of never never land, a spirit world, somewhere and they're not quite sure just what does happen, but at least it's not eternal happiness.

Now listen, what I believe about how God is going to deal with the culmination of this sin problem influences my relationship to it. If I believe that God is going to boil and bake and burn men throughout eternity for 30 years of sin on this earth, is it going to influence my relationship to God? Now don't jump to any conclusions. We're going to deal with this in depth another day, but I want to illustrate here what we are talking about. These are not just pious platitudes, friends. The devil has successfully counterfeited somewhere every single truth in the world today. Every one of them. Not one has escaped his deception. Does it make a difference what we believe? Of course. It certainly did to Adam and Eve. They honestly believed the deception that Satan gave them and it cost them everything. Jesus said there will be those who are worshipping, but worshipping in vain because they've put in place of a plain commandment of God, a man-made tradition. I say it makes a great deal of difference what we believe.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

Somebody says, "Well, I can't leave my church." We're not talking about churches today, friends. We're talking about following God. Don't look at the people. Look at the Light. We need to take one more quick glance here at what Jesus said. Matthew 7:21. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Now notice verse 22. This is an amazing statement by our Lord. "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?" Oh yes, miracle workers in the name of Jesus. Don't you see? Notice Christ's answer now in verse 23. "Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Oh, this is one of the most sobering passages in the Word of God, because we're led face to face here with the understanding which we can't escape—that it makes a difference to God what we believe and how we live. It isn't enough to say, "Yes, I believe. I'm a church member." It's a matter of how we live and what we believe about our God that makes a difference. Many will say, "Lord, we've cast out devils. We've done miracles. We've prophesied." And yet, they'll be lost. It makes a difference what we believe. Anchor your faith firmly, my friends, to the rock of Scripture.

Now we come to point number 5 which we started in our broadcast yesterday and I believe that perhaps this is one of the most successful deceptions which the devil has turned loose in our day. I've called it simply spiritual procrastination—putting off the claims of Jesus Christ on our lives. The Bible says, "How shall we escape if we neglect?" Oh, it's so easy to get so busy we forget to put first things first. Starting for heaven on a gravestone is risky business, my friends, and really is it fair to burn the candle of life for ourselves and then give only the smoke to God? How many people we've talked to that say this, "Well, I know that's the truth. I know what I ought to do and I plan to but I just haven't gotten around to it yet." That reminds me of the story of a young Persian Prince. He decided when he came of age that he was going to spend the next ten years of his life getting an education. Then he was going to spend ten years making money, and then ten years in travel. The last ten years of his life he was going to spend getting right with God and getting things ready for eternity. There was only one thing that happened to mar his plan. He died during the first ten years. Now we're not calamity howlers, friends, but I'm saying this: The devil would like to have us postpone the day of making our peace with God. Everybody has said it at one time or another, "Well, I can see when things start to shape up, when I get along in life and see the times start to fulfill that Christ is coming, then I'm really going to get ready to meet the Lord and I'll get in earnest about my Christian experience." Do you know who suggested such a thing to you, friends? I think you do. I believe that unconcern—spiritual unconcern—is one of the greatest curses of our day.

So many go through life as though there were no God, no heaven, no hell, no tomorrow. You remember Paul and Felix were visiting together and Felix said, "Go thy way for this time, Paul. When I have a more convenient season, I'll call for you." As far as we know, he never did. You see, heaven is trying to take out of this world a generation of men and women alive. We talked the other day about some of the conditions which exist in our world and how God must feel as He looks down on this whole sordid mess. How anxious Jesus must be as He sees the place that He's prepared and sees us rather unconcerned about going there.

Some time ago one of the items of interest in the newspaper was about a cave-in in a mine down in Pennsylvania somewhere—I think you might remember it. There were some miners trapped but there was reason to believe they were still alive under ground. There was no way to dig down through the mine shaft that had caved in so they were hoping the miners were off to the side of the main shaft in a little room in a horizontal shaft. So they brought in a great drilling rig and started drilling down through that virtually solid rock trying to get into that room where they felt they were probably entombed. Hour after hour, day after day, while the world watched, virtually holding its breath, as the news media portrayed for us the picture of how they went down there 6 inches and then another foot and down finally to three feet.

The families camped at the mouth of the mine where the rescue operations were going on. Finally the day came when that great boring rig bore through the ceiling of that room where the miners were trapped. Rapidly it was withdrawn and they lowered a microphone to a little speaker down that hole. The man who was directing the rescue operation at the top spoke into his end of the microphone and said, "Are you alright? Are you alive? Are you there?!" And then a voice came back from the heart of the earth. "Yes, we're here. We're alright." A great shout went up from the rescue workers at the opening of that pit. Then the director said this into the microphone. "What do you want the most?" There was a pause and then a voice came back, "I want a cigar."

Oh friends, heaven is involved in the greatest rescue operation the world has ever known. All the universe is watching. Day after day, week after week, year after year, for the last six-thousand horrible years, God has been seeking to rescue those of us who have been entombed by the avalanche of sin. What must it do to His heart by our procrastination, our lethargy, our spiritual postponement of eternal things. We send back a message and say, "Oh, we're satisfied with the trinkets, we're satisfied with the things, but thanks just the same." How shall we escape if we neglect?

J. A. Kennedy of Birmingham, England, wrote these words, and I want you to listen carefully.

"When Jesus came to Golgotha they hanged him on a tree.

They drove great nails through His hands and made a Calvary.

They crowned Him with a crown of thorns.

Red were his wounds and deep.

For those were crude and cruel days and human flesh was cheap.

When Jesus came to Birmingham, they only passed Him by.

They never hurt a hair of Him.

They only let Him die.

For men had grown more tender and they would not give Him pain.

And so they passed on down the street and left Him in the rain.

Still Jesus cried, 'Forgive them, for they know not what they do.'

And still it rained a winter rain that drenched Him through and through.

The crowds went home and left the streets without a soul to see.

And Jesus leaned against the wall and cried for Calvary."

Friends, how shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation? Have you been guilty of neglecting the Saviour who loves you and died for you? It's so easy in this materialistic age to leave Him standing outside the heart's door. A hundred matters clamor for the first attention of our hearts. This is an hour for Christians to be very selective and cautious in the matter in which they spend their time and how they spend their money. Let me urge you to take more time to study that great guidebook to heaven, God's Word.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Bridges of Life Listen to the audio version Now!

The story is told of two prisoners who lived in the first century after Christ who found themselves under the custody of the laws of the land. On the surface it appears that these men must surely be very dangerous. The account of their arrest and the subsequent sentence would lead us to wonder about them. They were stripped of their clothing and beaten in accordance with the law of the Roman government for their alleged crime. Then, since they were considered so dangerous, they were cast into the inner prison, doubtless some dungeon reserved for the most hardened criminals, but even that was not enough because the record says that they were then placed in stocks for safe keeping. It would surely seem that men in such circumstances as these would be very sad and dejected concerning their plight. But the actual truth of the story is quite different.

You may read the entire account in your own Bible in Acts 16. You'll discover that the record tells us that these men were singing and praying at midnight there in the inner prison. Yes, friends, these were dangerous men, but not in the common sense of the word. Their power was greater than the power of all men and of all governments of earth. These men were the personal representatives of the greatest government of all time, the government of heaven, whose head is the God and Creator of all.

Our story continues that while these men sang, suddenly there was a mighty earthquake. The prison doors swung open, the chains fell off the prisoners and escape was now possible. The jailer seeing the situation was about to slay himself, thinking the prisoners had all fled and he'd be responsible for it, but Paul stays the jailer's hand by telling him that all the prisoners are still there. The jailer comes in before these men of God. He realizes that he stands in the presence of men who represent a new way of life for him and he cries out with a question that men everywhere are still asking: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" The answer is certain as it comes from the lips of Paul. Plainly and simply he says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." The question is simple. It has come from a deep heartfelt need, but the answer is likewise simple and uncomplicated. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ."

As we open this chapter on the marvelous story of the controversy between Christ and Satan, we want to examine the question and the answer. First the question, "What must I do to be saved?" Friends, today we want to know this. From what does a man desire to be saved? Romans 6:23 tells us that "the wages of sin is death." But how can we be saved from death? This is the great basic question of life. Isaiah 59:2 tells us that sin has separated us from God. Thus we need to be saved from separation from Him. Sin has caused a great gulf between man and God. We need to find the bridge that can cross this gulf of sin, the gulf of death, the gulf of separation from God. But there's something else from which we need to be saved. We need to be saved from the power of sin, the hold that sin has over our lives every day. First John 3:8 says, "He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the work of the devil." And then Hebrews 2:14. "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." We need this power that will give us the power over sin in the life and the power over Satan.

Thus, when we ask the question, "What must I do to be saved?," we're asking first to be saved from death, then to be saved from separation from God and thirdly, to be saved from the power of sin in the daily life and habits. The answer comes back the same no matter where or when the question is asked, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Only Christ can save us from death, from separation from God, from the power of sin. He is the only One that can bridge the awful gulf of sin.

Did you ever stop to seriously consider what it means to believe on Jesus? There's a tendency in modern theological preaching to tell us that to believe in Christ is merely a

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

work of the mental powers. We merely come to the place where we're willing to give mental assent to Christ. Perhaps we change a few of our ideas and readjust our thinking a bit thus giving mental allegiance to Christ alone. Now this is an important step, friends, we do need to change our minds from the natural thoughts to the thoughts of God and Christ, but far too often we stop right there. We say, "I believe." We may do certain things that reveal a change in our thinking, but too often we deny our belief by not going any further. In fact, the Bible says in James 2:19 that the devil believes in God. Now even a casual observer would admit that the devil is not going to be saved even though he does believe in Christ. The devil knows that Christ is right. He even knows that he is a lost cause himself. He knows that the coming of Christ is eminent and that his time is very short. All of these things are revealed in the Bible. Even though Satan believes all this, belief alone will not save him. Thus, we must surely see that unless belief is accompanied by more than theory, it is nothing.

Now let's look at an illustration that will help us understand the true relationship of our professing that we believe and our responsibility of putting these beliefs into action. In Luke 16:26, Christ mentions this great gulf of sin over which man cannot of himself cross. We recall that 1 John 5:12 tells us that there are two sides-one side leads to life, the other to death. On one side man has the hope of eternal life to come; he has the abundant life now, free from separation from God, free from eternal death, free from the power of sin. On the other side, man has no hope; his life is lived in sin, he suffers remorse and heartache of sinful deeds day by day; he faces the certainty of the judgment and the day when the wages of sin will be given to all whose names are not in the Book of Life in heaven.

Doubtless at some time in your life you, too, have had the frightening experience of being lost. Your surroundings for the moment were entirely strange to you. You didn't know which direction to turn and the more you tried to find your way to familiar ground, the more confused you became. Surely there is a great gulf fixed over which no man can cross. That gulf is the River of Death. We're lost, my dear friends, of ourselves in trying to find a way across that great gulf. Peter once said that there is only one name that can save us and that's the name of Jesus. Just before the birth of Christ, His mother was told that she was to call His name Jesus because He would save His people from their sins. The mysterious bridge, then, becomes no mystery at all. The bridge is Christ, for only Christ can bring the answer to the sin problem. This brings Paul's answer into sharp focus when he said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." There are seven points from the life of Jesus that we must consider in order to truly and fully believe on Him and be saved.

We'll call the first of the seven piers of the mysterious bridge, came-CAME. Paul says, "But when the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his Son." Galatians 4:4. At just the right time when the world situation was ready, when the time-clock of heaven had come to the right moment, Jesus came into this world of sin and rebellion. His coming was not accomplished by His appearance on the streets of Jerusalem and announcing that He was the Son of God. Surely He had the power and ability to appear in the form of men, coming quickly from heaven in such a manner, but in order for Him to fully pay the penalty of sin and in order to meet Satan on his own ground, Jesus was to affiliate Himself fully with men and their problems. You see, friends, Jesus must fully take the place of man and only then could the full wages of sin be paid. His coming then, as He did, being born of human flesh, allowing His every need to be supplied at the hands of human parents, growing as any baby and little boy grows, experiencing the problems of boys and youth, then of all mankind, provides the remedy and full answer to all of man's problems.

But Jesus must do more than just come, great miracle that it was, He must also live-live. His life was ever after to be an example in all things for all men. As we study His life recorded for us in the first four books of the New Testament, we find how He reacted to different situations in His life; situations, by the way, that were just as real as our own are today. In Hebrews 2:9 we read that He tasted death for every man. That certainly includes you and me, does it not? Yes, friends, it includes everyone who will fully believe and accept Jesus. Now it's obvious that Jesus was not the first man to ever die. The world was now some four thousand years old and men had been dying since the entrance of sin. It is significant that Jesus is not the first man to die on the cross for the cross was the means used in those days of putting all criminals to death for specific crimes against the government. Thus we must see that it's not merely the fact that Jesus died nor even that He died on a cross that made Him our Saviour. The difference is that when He died, He was not only man but God as well. This was God's gift to man. Jesus died without ever even once surrendering to temptation and thus He became the first and only man ever to live an absolutely perfect life. In life He had conquered every snare of the devil. He had proven to Satan and to the entire universe and to man on earth that God is not unreasonable and that God did not set an impossible standard for man. When on that Friday afternoon so long ago our Saviour died, He forever proved that Satan was a defeated, conquered foe. His death had paid the full and complete price of sin and the power of Satan over men and life and death was fully broken.

Well, we go on, friends, to think of the resurrection of Jesus. It tells us that He arose in Matthew 28, and by His resurrection, Jesus unlocked the grip that Satan had held over the grave. As He had proved His power over Satan in life, so now He proved Himself the victor over the grave. Because He arose we know that no grave where one who believes in Christ is ever so sealed, but will be opened up again and Christ will bring him forth to life again. The work of Christ was not completed at His resurrection. The fifth pier in the bridge of Christ is called, ascended. Oh yes, my friends, Jesus arose; He ascended back to heaven, and then the Bible tells us that He mediates there for us at the right hand of the Father. He's our high priest, our attorney, if you please, by which we may present prayers and by which Christ intercedes for us before the Father. And then the final pier of this great bridge over the River of Death is, returns. It's the second coming of Jesus to this earth again. The Bible says that every eye will see Him when that happens. He's coming in glory and power and all the angels in heaven will be with him at that time. In 1 Thessalonians 4:16 it says that the trumpet will sound, the graves will open, and Christ will bring forth the dead. What a day that will be, friends!

Listen to the audio version Now!

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Certainty of Salvation

Today we turn to a very important phase of the gospel story and the tremendous question, How can we know that we're saved? So many times men and women wonder about this. They ask, "How can I be sure? Or does God just keep us in the dark until that great day comes?" What we all need, friends, is assurance and there are no uncertainties in God's great plan. Every truth and doctrine is based on a plain "Thus saith the Lord" in the Bible. God doesn't expect men to base beliefs and practices on supposition or speculation. For every requirement there is a command clearly expressed. None of His promises are vague; they're very clear-cut and stated in explicit language.

You may take it, too, that God has made known how we may know that we're saved. We're not left to wonder. We can be sure beyond any shadow of doubt. First of all, God wants to save all men and He has made provision for this. All that men need to do is to follow His instruction. Do you remember that wonderful passage of Scripture in John 3:16? I want to read it again to refresh your mind and I hope it will come with new force and meaning. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his own begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Whosoever believeth—there's the first requisite, friends. We must believe. Believe what? First, that God loves the world. Second, that He gave His Son to die for us and pay our debt of sin. If we believe this and accept Him, we need not perish; then we may have everlasting life.

Now believing is the first requirement. We must believe that in Jesus Christ we have pardon, that He cancels our guilt of sin. The beloved apostle John said, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1:9. We must believe this. It's difficult for some to take that the way it reads. It's hard for some to believe that we're saved by what God does for us and not by what we can do for ourselves or do for Him. He will forgive us—He will cleanse us from all unrighteousness and this is God's part—if we confess to Him and believe that He has forgiven us according to His promise. Suppose you've wronged someone and you feel deeply over it. You go to him and tell him, "I'm very sorry. Won't you forgive me?" He answers, "Yes, of course. I'm glad to forgive you." You go away feeling better. Then you think and think and wonder if he really did forgive you. So you go to him again and say, "I'm sorry for what I did. Please forgive me." He replies, "Of course, but I have forgiven you." You come again the third time and say, "Won't you forgive me?" His eyes fall as he says, "Don't you believe me when I say I forgive? Don't you believe me that I do?" Oh friends, if that were kept up several times, he would be highly insulted and would know that you didn't really believe him. When God speaks, we must believe Him. So if we have confessed our sins to Him, we can know that He has forgiven them by faith.

And this is the next great question. Now that we've been forgiven, shall we go back and commit the same sins over and over again? No, the Good Book says, He that confesseth and forsaketh his sins shall have mercy (Proverbs 28:13). You remember, of Jesus it was said, "thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins." Matthew 1:21. Jesus will not save man in their sins but He saves from their sins. Paul declares, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Romans 1:16. Then further on in the same book, the apostle asks this question, "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein." Romans 6:1, 2. No, my friends, saved men do not live in sin. It never has been God's plan to save men in sin but rather from their sins. Not only from the guilt and penalty of past sins but also to save them from the present power of sin. The drunkard is forgiven when he confesses his sin, but he's not saved from drink until God has delivered him from his drink habit. The same is true of every other sin. God can and will do it for anyone who repents, who asks and believes.

You ask, "When one is saved does he never sin again?" John has this to say in his first epistle, "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not." 1 John 2:1.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Here's the purpose and power of the gospel clearly set forth and that is that ye sin not. The apostle also recognizes the possibility that men might fall so he adds this, "if any man sin" ... now notice, "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." So the purpose of the gospel is to forgive sin and thus deliver the guilty from the penalty of sin. It's purpose, though, is even wider than that. It is to deliver him from the power and bondage of sin right now—in the present—to enable him to live above sin. And yet there is ever an advocate if man should sin and that is Jesus, always at the right hand of the Father for us.

Now let's follow the apostle a little further and we'll hear him say this, "And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments." Verse 3. And then verse 4 shouts a stinging rebuke to those who say they're saved and don't keep His commandments. Listen to this, mark the language. "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." And then in verse 5, "But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him." Well, those are mighty, mighty clear passages, friends. We can't deny it—obedience is necessary, and it's one of the characteristics of those who are saved by grace. Thus the means by which we may know that we are saved are simply that we have sincerely repented of and confessed our sins and we have forsaken them. Now we are living a life in harmony with the commandments of God and we're doing it because His love has been planted in our hearts and we count it a joy to obey His precepts. We don't try to sidestep them by saying they were abolished or they were given to the Jews or that God is not particular.

If it weren't so tragic, friends, the excuses that some supposed modern Christians give for disregarding God's commandments could be almost amusing. Their reasoning is childish and senile and is an attempted whitewash of their own carnality. The Apostle Paul splits their reasoning wide open and lays it all out before us in chapter 8 of the book of Romans. Listen, "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Verse 7. Oh yes, death lurks in the carnal mind (see verse 6). "Because the carnal mind is ... not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." How could language be any clearer? A saved man will keep God's laws—the fruit of salvation. An unsaved man, no matter what his pretense, will fight God's law and sidestep it any way he can—he's not saved, he's still in his sins and he doesn't want to give up any sins, so he tries to rationalize the law. Jesus said in His sermon on the Mount, "Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matthew 7:21.

We may know we're saved by the way we live. If we keep His commandments we know we pass from death unto life. Obedience is the result of salvation and not the means of it. Jesus saves men and then they show in their lives the obedience that this salvation is real and not a theory. The gospel is called an everlasting gospel for its purpose is ever the same—to save men. It's power is ever the same—to enable man to live the life of obedience. The conditions are ever the same—believe in Him and submit yourself to Him that He may, by the Holy Spirit, live His life in you. Yes, friends, the gospel is the everlasting gospel. In Old Testament times obedience to the Law of God was required. When Jesus came He said, "I have kept my Father's commandments." Notice what James said in James 2:10, "whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." John the Revelator, looking down the ages of time to the last days of the Church, in the final struggle with Satan said this, "they keep the commandments of God." And when he saw people ready to go with Jesus when He comes in glory, he called them "saints" and he said in Revelation 14:12 that "they keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." Well it's wonderful to have the assurance of salvation in your own heart. This assurance comes only to those who've surrendered to Christ and who give evidence of it by obeying the commandments of God.

An old hunter in Michigan, when the country was new, got lost in the woods several times. He was told to buy a pocket compass which he did and a friend explained to him its use. He soon got lost again and lay out all night as usual. When he was found, someone asked him why he didn't travel by the compass. He answered that he didn't dare do that for, he explained, he wanted to go north and the compass wouldn't point that way. "I tried hard to make the thing point north," he told his friends, "but I'd shake it and shake it and shake it and then the crazy thing would point southwest every time." Well, friends, by the same method of reasoning, a great many people fail to find the right direction in life. The Bible is our compass. It's God's gift to man through Jesus Christ, always pointing right. If man will follow its guidance he's safe; if he tampers with it and alters it to suit his own ideas, he's no wiser than the old hunter and he'll be lost. But I'm sorry to say too many people do just that thing.

Mark this well, friends. No man is saved by works of obedience but a saved man will live a life of obedience. He will not tamper with the compass. He will not say, "Well, this commandment of God doesn't mean what it says, but it means this or that or something else.” He will not say that the ten commandments are abolished just to find a way to evade them. No, no, he will observe the guideposts, reading it just as it is printed and watching those directions, he’ll set out to travel the way it points. Be not deceived. No amount of tampering with the compass will alter the directions or change the way. The evidence that you are a saved person is in your willingness to obey God’s Word and live a life in harmony with His commandments which are as eternal and unalterable as God Himself. It’s foolish to think that God would ever change what He wrote with His own hand. He wrote it on tables of stone. They will not ever fade away. They’ll never perish. They were made for all mankind and given to all mankind and they apply to our modern society just as much as they did to Moses and the children of Israel.

How are you doing, friends, in obeying those commandments? Have you tried to avoid them? Have you taken one perhaps and rationalized about it and tried to get by without keeping it? The Bible says that if we keep all nine and disobey in one, we’re guilty of all—we’ve broken the law. So let’s take all of them and by the grace of Jesus—by His wonderful saving power—let’s walk in all the light we have.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Choosing - Part 1

Have you every been aggravated at people because they make so many mistakes? Well, just remember one thing, friends, that only one person in all the world has lived without making any mistakes, or committing any sins, and that was Jesus Christ, Himself.

Heaven itself is going to be filled with sinners saved by grace. There has never been a son of Adam but who came to the realization that his own strength was not enough. Again, and again, Satan has used the same weapons in fighting against God and His people.

We find Solomon giving way to the same temptation that David fell under. And David committed the same sin that Sampson had committed. Somehow or other, people can't seem to learn by the experience of others. For example, with David's story fresh in his mind, Solomon had to go taste sin to its bitter dregs for himself. In bitterness of heart, David had repented, yet, Solomon set himself to try everything, good and bad that was under the sun. He delved into the most evil experiments with sin. Finally, he concluded, as all the others had before him, that there was only one thing worthwhile, and that was following God.

But why does the sad story have to be repeated, friends. In Romans 15:4 we read that things have happened for our admonition; we should learn from the stories of the Bible, and not have to go through the process of making the same mistakes. Of course it's not confined to the Bible. Today there are so many broken lives who had to experiment with sin just like Solomon did. But, listen, there is not an influence in this world that can make you follow any pattern of sin. No man or devil can control your life. You are a free moral agent. You have the power to oppose any pattern of conduct in your life. It's not necessary to taste sin in order to know what is right and good. I heard once of a river boat owner who wanted to find a pilot to take his boat up; and down the river. Several men applied, each one professing to know all of the turns and bends and obstacles in the river. Finally, one man came, and when he was asked if he knew where the obstacles were, he said, "No, sir, I don't know where any obstacles are in the river." The owner said, "Do you expect me to give this boat into your hands if you don't know any of the obstacles?" The applicant said, "Well, I don't know where the obstacles are, but I know where they are not, and that's where I plan to take the boat." Friends, how true that is.

So many young people today think they have to try everything. The grass always looks greener on the other side of the fence. In order to sin, you must choose to do so, you must consent to it. No man can force your will. Solomon consented every step he took in transgressing. He chose each path from the age of nineteen when he came into the throne of Israel.

What an impressive thing it must have been for him to be coronated as king at such a young age. They took him out to the hill of Gibeon, 6 miles from Jerusalem to hold the coronation services. There were solemn sacrifices, trumpets were blown, and then there was a parade back to the palace in Jerusalem again. In the late night season, God spoke to Solomon, as we find it recorded in 2 Chronicles 1:7, and asked what he would like to have. There seemed to be no restriction at all in what God offered to him. It was just as though God pushed a blank check across and said, "Here it is Solomon, fill it out whatever you'd like to have." What an opportunity that seems to be. Friends, choosing is a test of character. Virtue is tried innocence. Our destiny actually depends upon the choices we make.

Solomon started out in the right way, he certainly made the right decision when he asked God to give him wisdom. And if he had always chosen like that, his future life would have been very, very outstanding.

Of course, few people are willing to make a beginning like Solomon. The average

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

teenager today feels that he has about as much wisdom as anyone. Especially if he has only finished high school. But, listen, if God handed you a blank check on the bank of heaven, what would you choose? If you should be awakened at 3 o'clock tomorrow morning by an angel offering you anything you would desire or request, what would you take? Health? position? beauty? money? Once upon a time it was said that John Wannamaker, the great store man, took Billy Sunday into his store and offered him anything he would choose in that great department store. Where would you head, friends, if you were to receive such an offer? Would you go towards the clothes department, the sports goods, the tools, or where?

Now, I'm talking about spiritual things, you understand. I'm talking about character building, where would you turn, friends, if you had the choice of anything in life, if you had just one wish? Well, let's eliminate the "if" here today, because actually in the Bible, God offers us anything we want in the realm of spiritual things. Listen to this text in 2 Peter 1:3, "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue." Now notice, friends, that it says, "All things" are offered to us that pertain to life and godliness. Your character is assured, your salvation is assured. By choosing, you may be absolutely certain of eternal life.

Now, the only reason men have been lost is because they chose to be lost. The only reason Lot is not listed in the Bible with faithful Abraham is because he chose the wrong city to live in. Every failure of human life can be traced back to a wrong choice. The only reason Lot's family was lost to him was because he wanted Sodom, and he chose Sodom. This free will of ours is a wonderful thing, but it can also be a fearful curse to us if we misuse it. If you will read Hebrews 11:24-26, you will find the name of Moses listed as the great overcomer for God. It says, "By faith, Moses when he was come to years refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." My friends, the secret of Moses' triumph is found right here in the way he chose. It says that he chose to suffer with God's people than to be the king of Egypt. He might be one of the mummies today in the great mummy room of the Cairo museum. But, he made another choice instead. Moses could have been another Lot, he could have taken a rich city and enjoyed all the luxury of a pagan palace, but he chose not to receive it. The question of character in salvation is set before us as two doors. If we are lost, we will choose to be lost; if we're saved, we will choose to be saved. But, friends if we choose to be lost, it will be in spite of the countless examples before us. Why do you think Solomon wrote down all the details of his own folly. Why is the Bible so unbiased in its recital of David's sin with Bathsheba. Why friends, God is trying to lead you to choose the good instead of the evil. He wants you to settle it in your heart before the temptation ever arises. We must learn to move by principle instead of impulse. We must do good because it is good, and not be influenced by any others emotions in any other direction. Decisions must be made before we actually come up against the fiery temptation.

Daniel had purposed in his heart long before he was invited to eat at the king's table. There was no problem or struggle in his life about that decision. Listen, God has held nothing back from you friends. His power, His wisdom can be yours. He gives you just what He offered to Solomon. All things that pertain unto life and godliness may be yours for the asking. Joseph is another example of those who chose the things that pleased the Lord. He chose to build a character as strong as a rock. One translation of Genesis 39:2 is quite unfortunate. It is Tyndales translation and this is the way it reads: "The Lord was with Joseph, and he was a lucky fellow." Now, friends, if you call settled convictions luck, then of course Joseph was lucky; if you call it luck that he did not yield to Potiphar's wife, then of course that is what it is. But the simple truth is that he had determined to do nothing at any time that would displease the Lord.

Really, the word "lucky" is unfortunate here. There is no such thing as luck where the Lord is concerned. It is not chance but choosing, and there is all the difference in the world in these two words. We do not leave the forming of our character to luck or chance. It is a matter of our deliberately choosing to do the right thing, so that we prepare for the Kingdom of God. What is it that forms character anyway? Well, friends, it is what we see, hear and speak, more than anything else. The things you desire and choose here will have eternal results. In Philippians 4:8, we are told to think upon the things that are pure, lovely, just, true and of good report. Again, the Bible tells us that "out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh," and "whatsoever a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." We cannot escape the little things that we choose day by day, and these little things will determine to a very large degree the outworking of our destiny. Do you have some rule, friend, in making these decisions? Is there a distinct line through your life which determines what you do about these daily choices? There is no such thing as a little decision, or a small sin. Everything will tell for something in the building of your character.

When the Standard Oil Company was in it's infancy, it's founder, John D. Rockefeller was touring a factory one day. He watched as one of the workman sealed up a can of oil. He noticed that it required 39 drops of oil to seal up the can of oil. Rockefeller interrupted the workman and asked him if he knew exactly how many drops were required to seal the can. The workman replied that he was not exactly sure, so Rockefeller suggested he try 38. It worked. My friends, the saving of that one drop of oil on every can of standard oil, saved the company $50,000 a year. So sometimes a little thing can be a very important thing.

The absence of one habit in your life can mean the difference between life or death. It may not seem that way right now friends, but later on when character begins to grow and develop into its more permanent mold, this will be very apparent.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Citadel of Decision

Today we're going to look into the amazing secret of the Christian's victory over self. Self is the greatest enemy any person has ever encountered. If we can overcome in this one area, every other victory will be gained as well, and eternal life will be assured. From the very first sin of Lucifer to the sin that's being committed this very moment, self is the great, deadly enemy.

Now let's notice that it's the hidden factor in every life that leads to defeat or victory. Sin invariably originates in the mind, defiling the will and conscience. Philippians 2:5 says, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." Sometimes we speak about giving the heart to Christ, but actually what we mean is to give the mind to Him. God operates through the will of the individual. His power in us can save and sanctify us.

Satan also works from the inside to destroy us. He will also operate through the will and mind to gain control of the individual. We consider too little about the operations of our mind and how to surrender them to heavenly, rather than carnal influences. Now, how does Satan manage to move in and subdue an individual? In Romans 6, verses 12 and 13, we have a significant Bible statement: "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God." Now this is talking about the citadel of our will—the private sanctum of the heart. The devil failed in heaven in his attempt to capture the universe; he failed even to conquer this earth; he was defeated at the cross of Calvary. The deathknell of Satan was sounded at the time of his defeat at the cross. One last resort remains as far as Satan is concerned. In only one other place can he possibly conquer and rule and that's in the human body—in the mind of an individual. 1 Corinthians 3: 16, 17 describes this sanctuary of the soul or the body: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." Put with that now 2 Thessalonians 2: 3, 4: "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God." Now, of course, I realize that this is speaking about the great antiChrist who is going to be set up as a counterfeit god in this world and be worshipped by men; but we've discovered that the body also is the throne room of Jesus Christ. God is to rule the individual from that sacred citadel of the human mind. The devil is going to come along and try to set himself up in that sacred temple of the body to control every individual.

Now, what is the throne room of the body, anyway? Well, it's the brain. There is no doubt at all but that our destiny will be settled at last by the decisions centered in the incredible brain. The more we study about it, the more amazed we are and the more persuaded we are that this is really the secret. Here is the control center of all thought and decisions. This is the central control point of the will, the conscience, and the reason. In Proverbs 23: 7, we read, "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Someone has said, "We're not what we think we are, but what we think, we are." Yes, there is a powerful influence upon the body of the processes of thought. Some tremendous secrets of the mental processes have been recently discovered. Have you ever wondered how memory is able to summon instantly and at will those hundreds of mental pictures of places and people from years gone by? We're told by the scientists that our body is similar to a wet-cell electric battery generating a direct current of about 1/10 of a volt. Roughly speaking, this is just about what an ordinary flashlight battery would generate. The electric charge is created by two body chemicals, sodium and potassium, operating on nerve tissues which are bathed in fluid, mostly water. Now the nerves are these thread-like fibers extending to every part of the system, and they carry impulses to and from the four message centers of the brain. Did you ever hear anybody talk about the wrinkles in the brain? Well, actually, friends, there is a covering spread over the cerebrum, and the electric process that enables us to think is not a continuous, steady

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

current of electricity, but a rhythmic pulsation that spreads like sheet lightning over that brain covering.

When we're asleep, these pulsations are very slow— in fact, they almost disappear entirely. But the slightest stirring of the mind will speed them up again to hundreds of times per second. In reality, then, the whole body is like a vast telegraph system with electrical connections here and there throughout. For instance, if the finger touches a hot stove, there is an incredible mechanism which flashes a signal to the brain. There, the problem is weighed and a decision is made. Then an appropriate message is telegraphed back through those nerves, ordering the muscles to contract and get off the hot stove. Believe it or not, there are ten million nerve cells in the brain, and each one of them acts almost like an electronic tube. Some of them are on, and some of them are off all the time, depending on the signals coming in from various parts of the body. Now, each one of those ten million devices, or neurons, actually is a battery-powered cell operating on 1/10 of a volt of electricity. At the end of each one of them is a little sac or cell containing electrical energy. By the way, when you get tired and completely exhausted, it means that the electrical energy is depleted. You become like a battery that is run down.

From the eyes alone, three hundred thousand separate, private telegraph lines reach back to the brain. When you look at a red rose, thousands of separate, distinct messages are transmitted to the brain pertaining to the size, shape, color and details of that flower. In the brain, those signals are rearranged in some fashion unknown to man to give the impression of actually visualizing the scene. Hearing, tasting, smelling, and feeling are all experienced in this same way; electric signals are wired to the brain and there the actual functions take place. In a certain sense, then, we can say that the brain is like a train dispatcher who sits high up above and gives orders to avoid collisions and short circuits. Now, friends, as long as God is in control of this central control point, we're absolutely safe. But if Satan ever gains control, you can imagine what might happen; collisions will take place, lines will become crossed, the nervous system, in fact, will simply go to pieces. The body will move only as the brain directs, and so Satan could actually control our conduct and action if he ever acquired full authority in that brain.

Friends, can't you see how vital it is to guard the avenues of the mind? Those avenues are the five senses, of course. This is the only way Satan could ever get in. He can only reach the brain center of your life through sight, sound, and all of the other physical senses. Thought patterns are also developed through these senses. You really might think of your mind as a plastic, pliable surface. Every time you think a new thought, it cuts a groove on that surface. And when you think the same thing again and again, or even one like it, the groove is cut deeper. Soon it becomes just like a wagon rut on an old country road, and it's almost automatic that the thought patterns fall into that rut. Once these thought grooves are established, thoughts just tend to slip into them whether they're good or bad. If you wish to establish new patterns, you have to exercise the will and place decision blocks before those undesirable grooves and begin cutting new ones.

Now we come to the most exciting part of the whole thing. Science can now measure the electric currents that sweep over the brain. These thought processes are triggered by electrical energy, just like physical exercises. They've even discovered that sometimes these electric currents are positive and sometimes they're negative. They've learned that anger and impurity, under conditions of great excitement, actually generate a negative charge of electricity which disrupts and weakens the electrical energy of the brain. Physicians understand the relation of the mind to the bodily health. They understand that ulcers and other diseases, especially of the nerves, are caused by the improper function of the thoughts and of the brain.

Notice this text in Proverbs 16:24: "Pleasant words are an honeycomb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones." In other words, happiness and cheerfulness will help build up the electric power of the brain. Now we can understand, perhaps, something else. In Philippians 4:8 it says, "Whatsoever things are pure, and honest and just and good, think on these things. Of course, the Bible admonishes us to think upon themes that are noble and elevated and pure. Only by this mode of thought can the bodily health be as God intended it to be.

About a hundred years ago, Dr. Hunter, a famous English heart specialist, recovered from a severe heart attack himself. After his recovery, he was talking to another doctor and he said, "My life is in the hands of any rascal who chooses to annoy me." Sure enough, right after that he got very angry at someone and dropped dead as a result of it. So the emotions, the thought, have much to do with our physical well-being.

Another text, in Proverbs 17:22, reads: "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine, but a broken spirit drieth the bones." Yes, in the marrow of the bone, red corpuscles are made. When a person is angry or depressed, the body can't really manufacture those red corpuscles. People can get sick and die just because of a broken spirit. This, of course, is a part of Satan's great work. He seeks to discourage and to harass people mentally so that they will not have the will to think positively. Sometimes electric shock treatments are used to try to build up this electrical energy of the brain which has been depleted by discouragement or depression.

Now here's a vital question, friends. If a man is able to think and communicate through electrical energy, how does God communicate with us? I believe that He does it through the same brain waves and impulses that are carried by the nerves all through the body. Just as there are nerve cells controlling sight, hearing, etc., there are cells affecting the reason and the will. Pure thoughts and prayer can strengthen the electrical energy and can actually build up the will and mental resources.

Both God and Satan are contending for control of your will. It's the governing power that can bring all other faculties under its control. The senses are the doors by which the will can be reached. No wonder Satan has created a television world of sex and impurity. Every entertained evil will weaken that will and deplete that spiritual energy. Who can say how much of the brain has deteriorated through sin? Noble, elevating thoughts have been replaced by degrading thoughts as a result of Satan's program. Now don't misunderstand me, friends. There are many highly intelligent people who are not Christians, necessarily. But the area of the will and conscience can be weak, even with men who are great intellectual giants. Even scientists and Ph.D.'s are often overcome by habits and by human passions which they can't control.

You know, all conscious functions seem to originate in the cerebral cortex, which is only about one cubic inch of the brain's total capacity. Yet we have 64 cubic inches in the brain altogether. Now, friends, what do we do with the other 63 cubic inches? I suppose that's the 63-cubic-inch-question, isn't it? And how much has been lost as the result of sin's terrible curse? It's intriguing to think of how we might be when all the effects of sin are completely removed.

Have all our senses degenerated? We have some reason to think so. Biology has proved that man's taste is on the way down, and also his smell. We actually have only four tastes left. By the way, why can't we hear sounds below 20 or above 20,000 decibels? If we could see infrared, we would be able to see things at night. Is it possible that once upon a time our eyes, man's eyes, could see infrared, before sin came in, perhaps? Is it possible that when God restores us with that spiritual body at the resurrection, that we'll be able to recapture these lost powers? Well, it's something interesting to think about.

There are 13 cranial nerve groups now radiating out to the various organs of the body, but one of them has no known function. Is it possible that we've lost some senses completely because of the inroads of sin? For example, have we lost the ability to tap the subconscious memory of mind? Everyone might have had a photographic mind before sin came in. Of course, I think some people still do, but nothing ever develops there. Perhaps God communicated with man's mind directly through that cranial nerve that now is apparently useless. Like a closed circuit TV, perhaps. Maybe even thoughts were transmitted and communication was possible by that means before sin came in. Maybe God will restore that in the resurrection body.

I tell you, friends, very little is understood about this marvelous brain: for instance, the subconscious. Some recent discoveries have been made that are very tantalizing, indeed. In Montreal, the famous neurosurgeon, Dr. Wilder Penfield, experimented with some of the gray matter of the brain. Since it is insensitive to pain, he was able to work upon fully conscious patients. He inserted electrodes gently into one area after another of the living brain. One area apparently controlled the vision, and the patient would see shooting stars. In another area, the patient would raise his arm and cry out aloud. Now here is the most astonishing thing of all: When he touched another area with that electrode, the patient began to remember things. He would say: "There's a piano, and Mother's playing. I can see what she wears and hear everything." Evidently that was the part of the brain which controlled the memory. And from these experiments, it was very evident that some complete record is kept of the life right in that subconscious portion of the mind. In that one, small organ may be stored the record of a lifetime. It takes only the touch of an electrical needle to draw it out.

Can we doubt that God can keep an account of our words and acts, friends, in the judgment? If our poor brain is able actually to record and restore the record of a lifetime, how much better would God be able to keep an account of our words and thoughts and deeds. Everything we do is recorded in that subconscious brain. Just as a businessman, at the end of the day, pulls out his cash register with all its credits and debits, so at the end of life there may be pulled out of the subconscious mind a record of all thoughts, words, and deeds. And this will be used as the basis of the judgment.

I'm sure we can see more and more how those senses should be guarded. Satan can't read our minds, and so he has to travel such roads as he can. And those roads are, of course, the avenues of our soul, the five senses. By these he seeks to enter in and reach the will. Once that control center of the will has been brought under his control, we would have no resistance against him. Feeling would simply take over, instead of our sanctified reason. By the way, we're only safe as long as we are kept under the control of conscience, reason, and the will. If Satan ever takes over, he will no doubt allow the bodily emotions to rule the conduct instead of that sanctified control center of will.

In that case, we would simply allow feeling and sensual impression to dominate the life. Sin would completely master the body if this should ever take place. May God help us to raise up a standard against the flesh and against the devil. Through physical appetite and temptation, the barriers of the mind may be breached. Only by constantly surrendering the will and the spiritual mind will victory be ours. This suggests a daily experience. Every morning we ought to kneel before Him and make an entire surrender of the mind and body and spirit to God. Without this daily experience, without dying to self continually, we may provide an avenue of entrance for Satan into the citadel or control center of the will. May God help you to be firm and faithful in holding the lines firmly and in allowing Christ to be the ruler of your life day after day.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Cities of Refuge Listen to the audio version Now!

It has been well said that the religion of many people is like a headache—they have no desire to lose their head, but it hurts them to keep it. This leads to the question—Is Christianity hard or easy? Or put another way—Is Christianity possible only to those who have a strong will, or can even moral weaklings “hold out” and “hold on”? A third way of asking the question is to inquire—“Does salvation depend mostly upon God’s doing or mine?”

In seeking for the answer to these questions today, I’d like to read a text which formed the basis for one of D. L. Moody’s most famous sermons. Isaiah 32:2: “And a MAN shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.” When you read that word, “MAN,” I hope you will spell it with a capital “M.” Let me read it again: “And a MAN shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.” There is a picture of Jesus Christ, how He would come to this world and shepherd and keep His people. A Man shall be as an hiding from the tempest, a covert in time of storm. An individual finds himself out in the storm and must flee somewhere for protection and hiding. If you are willing to flee to Jesus, you will find shelter from the tempest raging all about you.

First of all, I wish to emphasize that the matter of salvation, the matter of peace in the life, is not a matter of penance and probation. Jesus never asked His followers to go through penance, nor did He ever deal with them mistrustingly. Go through the sacred records, and you will find how God dealt with men in days gone by. That is the only way to be sure of how God deals with men today. The one way to find salvation is through faith and acceptance. There is never a case where God asked a man to go through penance and afflict his body, or where God held a man off. The moment you come, you have salvation. God does not say, “I know you are sincere and a truth-seeker all right, and if you prove yourself in a month’s time, you will be accepted.” No. Finding salvation is instantaneous and not a matter of going through penance or probation.

Listen to the invitation of the Bible, I John 1:9, “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.” Bring your sins to Jesus, my friend. That is what it says—He wants to forgive your past; He longs to take your sins. All Jesus asks you to bring is your old life. My friends, your old life, your old ways, all the evil in your life, bring to the foot of the cross and with no exception Jesus will give salvation.

But another says, “That isn’t the point in my case. I confessed my sins to God and asked Him to forgive them, but after I asked, I didn’t feel a bit different. I still had that awful overwhelming feeling of regret and burden of past sins.” Please put this down. Let it be burned in your heart—salvation is not a matter of feeling, it is a matter of faith. Let me repeat it. Salvation is not a matter of feeling, it is a matter of faith. If we confess our sins, He forgives and cleanses those sins. But you say, “I can’t forget them.” God says, “I will cleanse you from all unrighteousness.” Take hope in God’s word. These promises are written for you. The devil is the one who would tempt you and taunt you with past sins. Away with feelings! Let faith water the heart and lighten the life.

But some insist they must have a feeling; they ought to feel different. If you are going to go by feelings, you will have one kind of Christian experience at six in the morning, another kind at ten in the morning, another kind at noon, when you are hungry, another kind at two and another at five. Why, our feelings go up and down. Religion is not a matter of feeling, but a matter of faith. Jesus holds out these promises to you. Don’t let Satan fool you. Jesus had you in mind when He offered salvation so freely.

Noah prepared an ark, not for himself, but for every soul living in the world at that time. But you say, “There was not enough room in the ark for everyone.” If the world had accepted Noah’s warning, there would have been a big enough revival to have prepared

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

a big enough ark to have cared for every soul who would enter. Noah prepared that ark. He got it all ready; he built it up on the mountainside. The throng cheered and mocked. The day finally came when God was about to close the door. Here comes a repentant soul out of that multitude who has made his decision that he is going in the ark of safety. Now he is outside and longs to step over the threshold of that door. The moment he takes that step he is a saved man. A moment ago he was a lost soul; he stepped into the ark and is saved. It would make no difference if he were just outside that door or 100 miles away; as long as he was outside the ark, he was a lost man. You may be very close to the church; you may have relatives who are members; but if you are not inside, if you have one foot inside and one foot outside, you are still a lost man. To step over the line is instant salvation.

I think of that man, Lot, living in that wicked city of Sodom. He was climbing in politics; he was a success as far as this life was concerned. But the judgments of God were about to fall. God sent angels to tell Lot to flee for his life. He got his wife and daughters and tried to escape. The angels took them by the arm in order to move them a little faster. The Bible picture is very dramatic. Picture it again today. As they made their way across the plains, the words of the angel ringing in their ears: "Sodom is going to be consumed, we are going to rain fire and brimstone on this wicked city." Lot was a lost man as long as he was in the vale of Sodom. Genesis 19:23 tells us that when Lot entered into Zoar, the sun was just rising. Just as he put his foot inside Zoar, he glanced up and saw the sun rising. Out there in the valley Lot was a lost man, we know so because his wife lost out. But Lot didn't stop there, he kept right on with his two daughters; and as he stepped over the city limit sign into the town of Zoar, God began to rain down fire and brimstone and literally consumed that valley.

Lot was in a lost condition, my friends, until he took that step and went over the line to safety. It wasn't his feelings that saved him, for he felt pretty bad in Zoar; but he was saved instantly upon completely obeying the commands of God. When God talked things over with him, he didn't have the Bible to read, Lot was simple enough to believe that when God says a certain thing, you should believe it, not change it. Lot thought that when God said this, that is what you should do. He hated to do it; it seemed like one of the most impossible things for Lot to leave all that he had and go to Zoar, but he went out through the valley and did what God told him to do, and the experience meant his salvation.

Suppose I am on a sinking ship which is going down in the terror of a storm at sea. I rush here and rush there for help. The captain says there is no safety. But I say, "Captain, can't you do something to save it? Can't you cut off the compartments?" He says, "I have done everything I can, but the ship is going to sink." "But what are we going to do?" The Captain says, "I am telling you for the tenth time, get into one of the life boats." But I still plead, "But Captain, here I am, I just don't feel that the ship is going to go down." "If you want to be saved, man, get into the life boat." I stand there and linger. I don't want to get down there and cut all ties from that big ship which feels so safe. But I finally take my stand and decide I'll pay any price; it dawns on me that the ship is actually going down out of sight, and about that time I take a last minute spring into a life boat, the ropes are cut and it surges down into the ocean, soon to be picked up by a rescue ship. I'm not saved through any goodness of my own, nor through feelings, but because I throw myself through faith upon the mercies of the life boat. In the same way I am saved through faith in Christ.

A little child in Egypt is lying in his bed. The angel has said "I will pass over you when I see the blood on the door post." Those who had applied the blood to the door post would be safe when the death angel passed over. The child's life hung on the condition of blood being applied to the door post. If there was no blood on the door post, the child was without hope. One moment the child, the first born, is lost, without hope; then the father takes that lamb, catches that blood which flowed for his sins, and applies it to the door post of his house. The moment that blood was applied, it meant instantaneous salvation to that first born child. In the same way we must allow the Holy Spirit to take the blood of Jesus Christ and apply it to our hearts and save us through faith in Him.

When the children of Israel entered the promised land, God made some special arrangements to protect people who accidentally killed another person. We read about it in Numbers 35:15. "These six cities shall be a refuge, both for the children of Israel, and for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them: that everyone that killeth any person unawares may flee thither." And also from Deuteronomy 19:3, "Thou shalt prepare thee a way, and divide the coasts of thy land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither."

When God built up the commonwealth of Israel, He made the plan that all through the land there should be provided cities of refuge which could be reached quickly from any part of the kingdom. These were not provided just for the Jews, they were just as much for the strangers as for the Israelites; it says so. The cities of refuge were for everyone. Let us take one as an example today and show how the cities worked. Let us take the one down at Hebron. Let us imagine over on the side away from the city a man is working in the woods. All of a sudden, while he is chopping down a tree, his axe flies off the handle and hits a man working next to him, mortally wounding him. He is terrified. Nearby is a relative working who is watching and he becomes angry and springs at the man and says, "I will get even with you because you took my brother's life." The man flees; he flees for his life to the city of refuge. He starts running as fast as he can. He knows it is only 10 or 15 miles; the cities were arranged that they might be reached easily. All his life is given over now to making that city of refuge, that is all that counts; he is making a run for his life. He is in a lost condition, until he can reach that city of refuge. The highways were always kept repaired and open to the city of refuge. That was God's instruction, "Make thy way clear so that he that runneth may read." The signs were plain enough so anyone could see them. So the poor man runs on, he watches the signs, and the road is perfectly clear, as it always is to the foot of the cross. He becomes weaker and weaker, and feels that he must stop. He looks back and there in the valley he sees the avenger of blood pursuing him. He prays, "Lord, give me strength again." The enemy is catching up with him, trying to overtake him before he reaches that ark of safety, that city of refuge. His breath begins to come heavy, but a surge of power comes down upon him as he can now hear the breathing of the man who is bringing death to him. He must run, run, run and get to salvation, and he makes one last desperate effort as he almost feels the grasp of his pursuer. And in his desperation, with those watching cheering him on as he approaches the city, he finally falls across the threshold of that city and is safe inside of Hebron away from the avenger of death. Out there he was a lost man. Inside he is safe.

The devil haunts your footsteps; he is always on the trail of those who flee to Jesus for refuge in time of storm. To linger is to lose, to step over the line is to find peace and safety. There is a MAN and He "shall be an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest...the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Conversion
Listen to the audio version Now!

The moon is the nearest body in the heavens to this earth, and man has taken the giant step of mastering the lunar space travel problems. But then we realize that the other heavenly bodies are much farther away, and tremendous new problems appear as we contemplate traveling to the planets. How can there be any hope of ever reaching the more distant planets or worlds much farther away than the moon? Voyage II did it, but is there any hope for manned space ships to reach those distant planets?

Our present satellites travel in orbits at speeds of around 18,000 miles an hour. To reach Venus, the nearest planet—which is some 27 million miles away when nearest to us — would take 1,500 hours, or about two months. This poses the problems of providing food, oxygen, and man's other needs over that period, and then doubling the supplies in order to allow for the return journey. Mars is nearly twice as far away as Venus. But if we were to think of going to the next major planet, Jupiter, we should, depending on where it was in its orbit, have perhaps 391 million miles to go, a journey of two and one-half years. By now the problems would seem to have increased beyond any conceivable possibility of solution.

Suppose we step up the speed of our space ship to 100,000 miles an hour. Such speeds are said to be in the range of possibility, since once a ship has cleared the earth's atmosphere it can keep on increasing its speed as long as it can keep on burning fuel. However, upon reaching our destination—supposedly a world the size of ours—it would require the same amount of fuel to slow us down that it took to speed us up. Furthermore, to get off the ground on our way home, and to decelerate again upon reaching the earth, would double that amount. In other words, a journey to Mars could be made in about three weeks with a ship traveling at 100,000 miles an hour, but think of the fuel necessary to operate it! A trip to Jupiter would take more than five months, and landing there would be a much greater problem because of the tremendous gravitational pull of that planet, which has more than ten times the diameter of the earth. This means that if the average density were the same as our earth's, the gravitational pull would be a thousand times as great. Landing there would indeed be a problem.

But let's go on. Suppose we succeed in arriving at Pluto, the farthest out of all the planets, an average of 3,577 million miles from us. That would take about four years. And then, when we reach the outer limits of our solar system, where would we be? The gap between Pluto and Alpha Centauri, the nearest fixed star, takes light traveling at 186,000 miles a second four and one-half years to bridge the gap. Our ship, even at 100,000 miles an hour, would take 680 years! Is there any need to say more, friends?

It is evident that space travel, if ever achieved, will be extremely limited in terms of celestial distances. Furthermore, would God allow sinful man to introduce himself and his inventions among the inhabitants of other worlds who have never known sin? For one, I am content to wait until the Creator Himself comes to take me on the great space journey He has promised. I trust His power, but have little confidence in man's attempts to conquer space. So we cannot get out of this world by our own power, but only by the power of God. Therefore we want to consider these three easy steps by which we can reach heaven—that heaven which is far out beyond the earth's own satellite system.

Throughout all the ages men have been seeking for some sure way into a blissful hereafter, but the Holy Scriptures alone really show us the way.

We can find the way only in the Word of God. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm 119:105. In this dark world we need the Word of God. It brightens the pathway before us. Somehow the world must be drawn back to the Bible. Almost every home has one, but it is not read or studied. Often people say, "I can't understand the Bible, it doesn't seem to make sense."

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

Have you ever been in a dark woods at night and had your light go out, and as you tried to find your way in the dark, you stumbled over logs and over stones? If that has ever happened to you, you can realize what the Bible means when it says that the Word of God is a light unto our feet.

We are in a dark world, a world that is lost, that is troubled. We want to know the way to heaven. We want to live in that better land. Most of us are getting homesick for heaven. I want to live in that land of peace some day, don't you? There is only one way whereby we can be saved, and that is by faith in Jesus Christ.

In Ephesians 2:8, 9 we read, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast." We cannot buy our way into heaven, and we cannot build any kind of machine that will take us there. Only in Jesus Christ can we have salvation. We must have faith in God, if we hope to be saved from this old dark world of sin. Some people may think they can do some meritorious deeds of their own by which to get to heaven. If that were so, they would be buying their way into heaven, and nobody in heaven will have been able to do that. All our righteousness is as filthy rags (Isaiah 64:6). We need a Saviour. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." Ephesians 2:8. It is only in Jesus, only in the cross, that we can ever find salvation.

Step One: The first step toward heaven is to experience pardon and cleansing from sin.

"And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." Revelation 21:27.

In other words, there will be no sin in heaven. We cannot take any sin to heaven with us. We must confess our sins and have victory over our sins. We cannot take evil habits into the presence of God. We must have victory. By the help of God we must be cleansed of sin. There will be no evil, sinful thing in heaven. "There shall in no wise enter into heaven any thing that defileth." Those who enter into the city of God will be pure, holy, cleansed by Jesus Christ. That place will be a pure place. There will be no swearing there, no whiskey stores in heaven, no brothels there, no blasphemy there, no unclean habits; there will be no tobacco chewing in heaven, nor any snuff dipping. None of these evil habits will be there.

So the first step toward heaven is a work of cleansing, for the Bible says that there shall in no wise enter into heaven anything that defileth.

Step Two: In addition to obtaining pardon for all our sins through Christ's blood, we must also be born again.

Jesus said to the Pharisee who came to Him by night, inquiring of Him the way of life, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3:3. Jesus is talking about the spiritual birth, and He made that very clear to Nicodemus. He was not talking about a natural birth, but about a spiritual birth as He said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again."

The first step in the way to heaven is that we must be cleansed of defilement, and the second step is, "Ye must be born again."

Step Three: After being pardoned and born again, we must be obedient to the Lord's commandments each day.

"And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Hebrews 5:9. "And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us." 1 John 3:24.

We must be obedient to the Lord's commandments each day. Jesus is the Author of eternal salvation to all those who obey Him. Jesus does not say that He became the Author of salvation to those who belong to the church. Some might think that, that is all that is necessary—to belong to the church in order to be saved. But the Bible does not say that if we give good gifts, or perform some outstanding deeds, we shall be saved, but "unto them that obey Him." And any man who says that he has been saved by grace and does not obey God has not really been saved by grace. That kind of man has not been born again. Those who are unwilling to obey God are in open rebellion against Him and are holding out against Him.

"He that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us." 1 John 3:24. Some say Jesus is in them, that they have received Him by faith and been born again, and yet these individuals do not obey God. If a man or woman says, "I have been born again," and does not obey God, then they speak something that is not true. It cannot be true.

The only path is the path of obedience. And anyone who refuses to obey God is not a child of His. Some people say to us, "You teach that we have to obey God in order to be saved." No, I do not teach that, but I do teach that we must accept Jesus Christ as our only Saviour from sin and that when we really, truly fall in love with Jesus it will not be grievous to us to obey God. We will not obey God in order to be saved, but because we are saved. We will obey God because we love Him. We will not say, "I do not believe in obedience; I do not think it is necessary," for if we really love Jesus, it will be the greatest desire of our hearts to please Him and to do His will in all things. Jesus has made eternal salvation certain unto all them that obey Him.

Do you think we could get to heaven if we are not obeying Christ? Would we have any more desire to obey Him after we got there than before? No, we would do just like Satan. Satan rebelled against God. He did not like the restrictions of God, and he tried to overthrow God's government, and he is still in open opposition and rebellion against God's commandments. He is fighting them, and he uses many men in the world to help him in his warfare against the commandments which he hates—the commandments of God which he wants to get rid of.

There is nothing wrong with God's commandments. "The law of the Lord is perfect." Psalm 19:7. What would we do if we did not have the commandments, "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not worship other gods," "Thou shalt not bear false witness," "Thou shalt not kill"? Dear friends, is there anything wrong with these commandments? No. And anyone who loves God will be willing to obey Him.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Corroded Spirits - Parts 1&2

One of the most popular beloved parables which Jesus introduced, was the parable of the Prodigal Son. How many times we've recited it and dwelt upon that wasted life, the hogs, the husks and the homeward trek of that wandering son. But the climax of the parable is often missed entirely. The last section containing more than one-third of the story usually is omitted entirely. Do you know why it is omitted? It has to do with the boy that stayed home. Now, I'm not here to belittle the powerful love appeal of the prodigal, but I still feel that the older son has a tremendous lesson to teach most of us.

You know there are two types of prodigals revealed in this story, and both of them are backslidden. One of them has gone away from his father into open sin, the other one has stayed at home in apparent fellowship, but still indulging some secret sins of the spirit. One of these boys exhibits the result of the gross outward sins on the life of a man. The other one exhibits the subtle inward sins and what they can do to the heart of the man. I believe that almost every sin falls into one category or the other. Jesus said, "Some men are lost like sheep, some men are lost like coins, some men are lost like the prodigal son, some men are lost like the elder brother who stayed at home and didn't even know that he was lost.

Now, we are not attempting to classify sins today, although it would be very easy to do in some instances. There are the sins of the flesh, the sins of the spirit, the gross sins and the subtle sins. Let me say this, that the vast numbers of people today affected with the carnal pride of that older son are probably in the majority. I think it's easy to pass over the older son because he mirrors an image of ourselves. If we had written that story of the prodigal son friends, we would have ended it with a feast, music, rejoicing, "and they lived happily ever after." But, an ugly reality strikes our hearts as we see the reaction of the older boy when his brother came home. Is it not strange and frightening how the father's love could have the opposite affects on those two boys? It melted the heart of one who had sinned after fleshly passion. But the same love hardened the other one in his sins of the disposition.

Friends, I'm reminded that the most defeat which Christians experience takes place in the circle of the home. Jesus portrays the human heart with all of its hypocrisy. He makes havoc of our little list of virtues. By His standards, attitudes actually count more than actions. The shadow of that elder brother is cast over practically every church and every home that we know anything about. Do you realize how compassionate Jesus was to those who were swept by sins of passion? There was Mary Magdelene who had fallen so many times into transgression. There was the thief on the cross who had never committed a good deed in all of his life as far as we know, and yet, Jesus had loving words to speak to those individuals.

Then compare that with the withering condemnation He brought against the Pharisees who were the spiritual leaders of Israel. He said, "You whited sepulchers, you generation of vipers." Now, friends, I'm not saying that the things were right that the thief did or that Mary Magdelene did, but I am saying this, that to willfully cherish a wrong disposition, to maintain a spiritual pretense in religion, to encourage hypocrisy and ugly pride, is often more deadly than some of the outward sins of the flesh.

Isn't it true that personal revival is often desperately needed among Christians whose outward lives are circumspect in almost every way. There lurks within all men, the elements of pride. Conceit can be veiled so cleverly. Envy also can be covered and disguised and made to appear as a mask of humility. A barren sullen spirit breeds much malice. Stubbornness can lie dormant and needs only a small occasion to spring forth in all of its fury. Have you ever noticed how some men nurse a grievance or harbor a resentment, or pout over a trifle? Outwardly they may be very correct, but, in the home they are hard to live with because of their arbitrary domineering disposition.

What's the trouble with such a man? Well, friends, the fact is he lacks love. Every other

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

virtue becomes almost nothing when it's separated from love. You'll find that out by reading I Corinthians 13.

The older son illustrates the hindrance to a holy life. I've marked down three tragedies to such an example. It's possible to assume the place and privileges of a son while refusing the obligations and love of a brother. Let me ask you this, "Can a proper son be an improper brother at the same time?" And here's another question, "Will lovelessness toward a brother affect one's love for a father?" Yes, indeed it does. Let's see how it works.

Look at this boy for example. Outwardly he was perfect and exemplary, conscientious, correct, industrious and dutiful. His father proudly called him son, there was no question about the relationship. The trouble was though, that this son was satisfied with his own integrity. He proudly regarded himself as perfectly alright. He knew that he enjoyed a settled relationship with his father, but he was blinded to the obligation that, that relationship brought. We certainly would expect him to react differently when his brother came home, would we not? It seems that he should have been overjoyed to welcome that prodigal brother back to his father's house. He should have said, "I'm so glad to see you, our prayers have been answered, how father will rejoice, I must run and tell him that you are here." No, he did not share at all in the father's joy. In Luke 15:28 we read that he was angry and went not in to the feast. In contempt for his brother he even begins to find fault with his father now. So the good son becomes a poor son as well. His own place now seems to be threatened. That other brother now becomes the only competitor for his father's blessings. Ah, friends, this sin is so tragic, but it has been repeated a thousand times over.

Perhaps that oldest boy so blameless and correct, carried a secret pang of jealousy for the brother who was having his fling at worldly pleasures. Listen, could it be that you who are so quick to discern and condemn sin in others, cherish a secret desire to taste the same thing? Some people secretly resent the fact that their spirituality keeps them from indulging in a secret desire to do wrong. It's a strange thing, is it not, friends; his very goodness became the basis of a wrong attitude.

As somebody said, "He was good in the worse sense of the word." Did you ever think that our strong point and weak point are often one and the same thing? We are most liable to stumble on the very point we regard as our strongest one.

The older son's spirit had never been broken. He had taken it for granted that every blessing was his by natural right. Ah, friends, I believe the father was more grieved by the heartlessness of the elder son, than by the weakness of the younger son. Don't you think so? He was more saddened by the success, which hardened that older boy, than by the failure, which softened the younger son's heart. All the excesses of the younger son could not keep him from coming back to the father. But all the virtues of the elder son could not avail to bring him to his father's table of rejoicing.

Notice how the wrong relationship to his brother brought the elder son into a wrong relationship with his father also. Indifference to his brother hardened him against his father. He became angry with the brother and that made him rebellious also against his father. Oh, if we could see the sin against God in every mistreatment of our fellowman. I am convinced, dear friends, that it's worse to be wrong in spirit though right in deed, than to be wrong in deed but right in spirit.

Let me ask you something, those of you who profess a real and mature Christian experience. Are you guilty of trying to assume the place and privileges of a son, while you are refusing the obligations and love of brothers? If so, right now begin to make adjustments in your life to remedy that situation.

The second tragic possibility of this whole picture is this, it's possible to serve the Father according to the letter, and yet, have no fellowship at all. In Luke 15:29, we read "these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment." Now, friends, it's only fair to say that the service of the elder brother was unusually correct and acceptable. Yet, evidently, much of it was also self-service. Why do I say that? Because service appeared a burden when his brother was going to share the least benefit of it. How easy it is for the spirit of sonship to degenerate into the spirit of a hireling. It's strange but true, the more we think ourselves worthy of God's blessing, the less worthy anybody else seems to be of it.

Was the elder brother busy with important matters? No question about it friends, but that wasn't enough. Was he diligent and uncomplaining? Yes, but that wasn't enough either. He missed the thing uppermost in his father's mind.

I can imagine this elder brother talking to himself as he went about his work at the barn. He would say, "My, this is the greatest year we've ever had, the flocks have doubled, the barns are expanding, we have more employees than ever. But, father, I can't understand him. I give my full time to the work and don't even go for recreation of my own, and yet when I speak to father about the progress, he hardly seems to care. There is a faraway look in his eye. I just don't understand my father." And you know friends, he didn't understand his father. The elder son's interest, though it was good and necessary, was simply different from that of his father. He was doing a great deal there on the farm, yet he was not fulfilling the father's true heart interest. He did not grasp the fact that true service consists in love and devotion to the one thing the father desires.

How does that find you today, friends? Are you proud of being busy all the time for the Lord, yet, truthfully, are you a little bit weary of it and fed up with it? Yet, you feel you ought to go on because it is expected of you. What is your motive for doing things for God? Is love behind it? Or do you just create services that you can do for others, but which bring you most of the rewards. Just examine your own heart.

Now, we come to a third tragic possibility for a Christian. It's possible to be the heir to all that the father possesses, and yet have less joy than the one who possesses nothing. Do you know why I say this? On the day of the feast, the servants of that household were happier than the elder son. They were close enough to the father to be happy with the things that made him happy. Though they were hirelings, yet they had much of the spirit of the family. The elder son's happiness though was restricted to what fulfilled his desire. He was restricted by self. He was not happy with the things that made the father happy. Ah, friends, if we don't share the Father's burden, we can't share the Father's joy. He could not even perceive what that joy was. He wasn't even present when it happened. His father, of course, had seen the prodigal approaching from a great distance. The elder son, though, was too busy in the fields. Through the years that father had been praying for nothing and looking for nothing and expecting nothing except the eventual return of that son. The elder brother had not been expecting anything. He had gone only so far and had stopped short of brotherly kindness and love. What made the elder son that way, friends? It's important to understand the cause and the course of such spiritual decline.

First of all there was no conviction that his father's house had a surplus. The servants were all there and there was enough to spare. Now the truth of the gospel is based upon this tremendous fact, friends. There is enough to spare for every hungry heart in the world. Do you find it easy to enjoy the privileges of the gospel alone, or do you go out and find others to share it with? The reason there are so many empty pews is not so much the competition of the world, or sub-standard sermons, but the spirit of that elder brother which prevails among those who profess so much but who care so little.

The elder brother never talked things over with his father—especially about the young boy. If he had, his father would have told him. His father would have said, "Son, your brother is ever on my heart, it's the greatest burden I bear. You say things are going well on the farm, fine, why not take some time off, you can afford to do it, make a journey to that far country, try to locate your brother and persuade him to come back. Tell him his father yearns for him to return." Oh, how quickly that son would have received the commission from his father if he had sought to understand the father's mind. But no, he was too busy. He would have been offended at his father's charity also. Remember when the father said, "This thy brother had returned," the elder son said, "This thy son has come back." He didn't even want to acknowledge the boy as his brother. He was ready to speak of the sins of the brother, and there was no concern beyond the condemnation that he made of him. He actually had to ask a servant the meaning of the music. He could not trust whatever his father did to be the right and good thing. He would not go to join in. He stood outside and pouted. He lost the joy of what he himself possessed in his envy for what the younger man had now received. What was the reason for it? Well, a petty "Thou never gavest me," Luke 15:29 he said, "Thou never gavest me this kind of a feast." The father entreated him, he said, "Son, thou art ever with me, all I have is thine." But this didn't satisfy the envious soul. You know friends, it's often more difficult to reconcile a jealous, bitter believer, than it is a penitent sinner.

Do you see a glimpse of yourself in all of this? Are you waiting for an apology from somebody before you serve the Lord again? Are you miffed over some trifling offense? Do you refuse to teach or serve because you don't like the way things are done by other people? How fortunate it was that the prodigal didn't meet his brother first when he came back! The truth is, that it was probably that elder brother and his arrogance who had turned the prodigal away from home in the first place. I just sometimes wonder if it wasn't his self-righteous, proud, unbearable attitude that really disgusted the younger boy of the family. Maybe it was his exacting ways that drove the prodigal from home.

Well, over-sensitivity to personal slights is a common mark of a careless Christian. The imagined offenses, the strain for undue recognition—demanding appreciation for everything; these things have a way of crushing the Christian spirit. We often envy the first-love of a convert because we've lost it ourselves. These and a thousand other characteristics exhibit the spirit of the elder brother in countless defeated, bitter Christian lives.

Doctrinally orthodox in every detail, fastidious in conduct as men see it, yet dead to the real ministry of the Spirit of God in the life. Well, we're not told whether the elder brother went into the feast or not. I'm quite sure though if he had, the Father in heaven would have been delighted to reveal it to us. The shocking possibility is that he was never reconciled to his brother. This may be the very thing God wants to impress upon our hearts. He wants us to heed this warning. Do we marvel at the grave of God in our brother's behalf? Does it remind us of His grace for us? Or do we secretly begrudge God's goodness to others. This is a false spirituality friends. Is it not evident that the sins of the spirit are uglier and more difficult to deal with even than the sins of the flesh?

Now, it seems as though the father had said to his elder son, "Think of your privilege, you're my son; think of your position, you are ever with me; think of your possessions, all I have is thine." How wonderful it is to be a child of God. He is adequate. There is only one answer to the problem of the prodigal's brother. He had not made Christ the center, and he had not made love the center. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself." Jesus said. Will you do that today, dear friends? Will you deny self and put Christ into the very heart of your life so that you can be like the repentant returned prodigal rather than the prodigal who never went away from home?

Ah, won't it be a great day when we dare believe that we may become all that it is in His power to make us. Every specious form of sin must be put to death. The new life must cast its holy influence over us. Look at that oak tree, friends. How do you think it was born. Well, it was born in a grave where an acorn was planted. The grave was made in order that the acorn might die. It did die and disappear, but then it began to cast its roots down and its shoots upward. And there it has been standing for a hundred years or more in all of its grandeur and strength. Where is it standing? In the grave where it died. Yet, all the time it's growing deeper and higher and becoming more beautiful. All the fruit that is born on that tree, all the foliage that is manifested, is due to the grave in which those roots were kept. So death, is put before us as a condition of life. Only such an experience enables us to live above pretense and above comparison with our fellowman. Death can turn our experience into life.

Centuries ago in Formosa, the island was governed by a Chinese governor by the name of Goho. He was a very kind and gentle man who persuaded the savage tribes of that island to abandon their yearly human sacrifice. He convinced them that it was alright to offer an ox or a pig, or some other animal. But after 40 years of trying this, a terrible drought came over the island, and the people were having a bad harvest with their grain. The leaders came to Governor Goho and said that their gods were angry and that a human sacrifice was needed. Some victim was needed to offer to the gods. Goho pleaded with them, but he failed to dissuade them. Finally, he said, "Alright you go, and tomorrow morning in such and such a place in the forest you will find a victim tied to the tree wearing a white robe of sacrifice and a red cloth over his face. When you find the victim—strike—because he will be your sacrifice."

Well, the next morning the men came to the place in the forest and saw the victim tied in his white robe and red cloth. In a frenzy they cut off the head of the victim and then only did they behold that it was the face of their own governor, Goho. From that time until now, no human sacrifices has been offered on the island of Formosa.

So he reconciled the people by the sacrifice of his own life. He did what his rule and teaching had required for others. And it changed the lives of the people of that island permanently. And what happened after that? A white robe became the symbol of a changed life. Men discarded their former dingy robes and began to wear the white robe of Goho, as if to say, "I'm a Goho's man, I'm different." They became known as the men of the robe.

Friends, will you do something for me as you listen to this broadcast? You need not move a muscle, but if you're in earnest about being saved, please do this. Imagine you are at this moment standing and looking at yourself in a full-length mirror. You are clothed in black garments—the black of failure and defeat. Then as you continue to look, Christ, wearing His own white robe of purity comes along side and puts that robe right around you. Now, when you look in the mirror, you are a person who is clothed in white, and you are very close to Jesus. Already you are a changed person. Something has begun in you. It has already taken the guilt and darkness of your life. In faith, you believe His promise that the old life is gone. You receive His life, His forgiveness, you become a new man in Christ Jesus. You dwell in Him, abide in Him, and your life is hid in Him. You're His friends, you belong to Him, you are a man of the white robe of Christ's righteousness. Self has been crucified, buried and blotted out by the righteousness of Jesus. Pride in all of its ugly forms has been put to flight. This is what it means to be cleansed and sanctified. Have you taken His robe, dear friends? If not, will you do it now?

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Enoch

Listen to the audio version Now!

Today, and in our next broadcast, we are going to deal with a question which frequently comes to us from radio listeners. The question is: Where are Enoch and Elijah? Now the Bible is crystal clear on this question as we shall see. Probably, there never would have been a question raised about these two men at all except for another passage of scripture. That other scripture is John 3:13 which states that "no man hath ascended up to heaven, but He that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven."

Now the Bible indicated that God took Enoch and Elijah to heaven without seeing death. Is there a contradiction in these two verses of scripture? Let us look at John 3:13 and see. This is the record of a conversation between Jesus and a prominent Jewish teacher—Nicodemus.

The subject of conversation between Christ and Nicodemus centered in the mysteries of the Holy Spirit and the new birth. Nicodemus professed ignorance concerning the subject of conversion, and Jesus reacted with surprise. Then He said to Nicodemus, "If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you heavenly, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven."

In other words, Nicodemus would have a harder time accepting Christ's words about heavenly things because no man had ever been there to come back and report on it. Jesus alone had come from there to testify about those heavenly things, and Nicodemus would have to accept it purely by faith. The question was: who is qualified to testify of those spiritual, heavenly truths? Jesus said, "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen, and ye received not our witness. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things. And no man hath ascended up to heaven."

Throughout the chapter Christ harked back to the point of His own authority and credentials as a truthful witness of heavenly truth. "He that cometh from above is above all; he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth; he that cometh from heaven is above all. And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth: and no man receiveth his testimony. He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true. For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure to him." Verses 31-34.

Jesus assured Nicodemus that He was a reliable and true witness of the truth because He came down from heaven with the Father's words. No man could make such a claim, therefore a man could only speak of earthly things. Some have used these verses to support a theory that no one has been, or ever will go, to heaven. This could not be true because of texts to the contrary. The saints will certainly be there for 1,000 years before the Holy City descends to this earth. Here is the evidence:

1. John 13:36—14:3. Here Jesus promised Peter that, afterwards, he would follow Him where He was going. Then Jesus said, "I go to prepare a place for you." All the saints will follow Jesus to that place in the Father's house, when He comes the second time.
2. Matthew 5:12. Jesus promised a reward "in heaven" to those who were persecuted for His sake.
3. 1 Peter 1:4. Peter spoke of the incorruptible inheritance "reserved in heaven for you."
4. Revelation 19:1. The Revelator "heard a great voice of much people in heaven." This group of people in heaven is later identified as the bride of Christ which is the church. Verses 7,8.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

5. Revelation 4:12, and 5:1,9. These verses clearly describe a multitude in heaven who have been redeemed from the earth.

We have answered this question more fully in another broadcast. There is no contradiction in the Bible on this subject, when the texts are considered in their contexts.

Now, friends, let's get back to that question of what happened to Enoch? Genesis 5:24-25 tells us, "And Enoch lived sixty and five years and begat Methuselah; and Enoch walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters. And all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years. And Enoch walked with God and he was not, for God took him."

So God's Word says that Enoch walked with God. This means that he lived such a faithful, obedient life for 365 years on this earth, that God was able to take him to heaven without seeing death. Paul records that same event in Hebrews 11:5: "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and he was not found because God had translated him." How clearly these verses describe the destiny of this righteous patriarch! Genesis says "He was not for God took him." Paul says "he was not found because God had translated him," and then, the most conclusive words of all, "that he should not see death."

Friends, no matter what else we may decide about these expressions, we have to concede that Enoch did not die. If words have any meaning at all, these verses teach that Enoch did not see death. In fact, that is exactly what the words say, "that he should not see death." Whether we like it or not, whether it agrees with our thinking and theology or not, is quite beside the point. The Bible says it and we ought to believe it.

"But," someone says, "there are other verses which seem to teach the contrary." Then let's look at them in their context and find out if there is a contradiction. For instance, what about the expression "all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years"? Does this mean that he died at that age instead of being taken to heaven? Of course not. If we concluded that all the days of his life were only 365, we would be precluding him from any life in the future also. When we speak in terms of a person living only sixty years or seventy years, we always, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, are referring to the years he lived IN THIS WORLD. We are not assuming in the least that he will not have more years in the Kingdom of God. The fact is that the Bible writer goes on to explain that very thing concerning Enoch. After saying that all his days were 365, he immediately says "for God took him." That explains why he only lived 365 years in this world!

But how did God take him? By killing him, or letting him die? Or, as some teach, by just removing him to another place to protect him? No. We need not speculate at all about the meaning of the term "God took him." Other verses explain how God took him. Paul's explanation is that God translated Enoch "that he should not see death." Now let's reason together for a moment concerning this statement. If God had merely taken Enoch to some other location, would that have provided "that he should not see death?" Of course not! Death would have come to him just like it would to all mankind. But, friends, all these verses about Enoch are given to us to show that he did not have the common experience of other men. This is why we do not read concerning others in the Bible that "he was not" or "he was not found" or "God took him" or "God translated him."

By the way, how foolish it would be to assume that God had to spirit Enoch away in some miraculous manner to save him from his enemies. (This is one popular explanation.) The truth is that we have no reason to think his life or safety was being threatened, and we limit God's power by such an explanation. It is hardly reasonable to think that God was unable to protect him where he was. The Scriptures teach, "A thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh unto thee. There shall no evil befall them . . ." The Bible account gives not the slightest support to the fabrication that Enoch's life was being threatened by his enemies.

Another strained interpretation explains that Paul's statement simply means that Enoch was translated that he should not see the second death. But are we justified in adding that to the text?

Now it is true that the Bible speaks of two deaths. One is the death that befalls every mortal man by the decaying process of sin. Hebrews 9:27, "And it is appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment." This death is common to all, but there is a second death for all the wicked who refuse to let God give them eternal life. It is a final death, a complete eradication of sin and sinners. The second death is mentioned in Revelation 20:14. "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire, this is the second death."

But why would God assert that he had translated Enoch spiritually, so that he would not taste of the second death? This is true of all the righteous of all ages. "Blessed and holy," says the Bible, "is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." Why single out Enoch for this designation when it is true of all of God's people then and now?

The final objection to Enoch's translation to heaven is found near the end of the chapter in which Paul described how Enoch "should not see death." Hebrews 11:5. After describing a long list of faithful servants of God, including Enoch, Paul says "all these died in faith." Verse 13. Some claim that this would mean that Enoch died in faith also. But, friends, mark this point! Paul had already excluded Enoch from the experience of death by explaining in the context of the same chapter how he was translated "that he should not see death." Having already made an exception of Enoch, he did not need to explain again, just a few verses further, that Enoch did not die like the rest. When he said "all these," Paul's readers knew Enoch was not one of them because of his careful explanation of Enoch's unique translation "that he should not see death."

The crux of the matter, I repeat, is whether any people go to heaven or not. Again, if you would write for broadcast message #419 which explains the matter in detail, you would be most interested in further study of this subject.

Let's take only a moment now to prove that many have already gone to heaven—as exceptional cases. Do you remember what happened at the moment Jesus died? Let's read it in Matthew 27:50-53. "Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost. . . And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." Now, friends, these were righteous people who had died once. But only the wicked die twice. Since these saints could not suffer a second death, what happened to them after they were resurrected? The answer is found in Ephesians 4:8. Reading from the New English Bible: "He ascended into the heights with captives in his train." These were the saints resurrected with Jesus! They were no longer captives to death; they were captives to Christ. How could they die again? They couldn't, because that would have been a second death. So they must have been the host of captives that Jesus took back to heaven with Him. Perhaps these are the twenty-four elders of Revelation 4 and 5. We read in Revelation 5:9 how they praised Christ with these words: "thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kingdom and tongue and people and nation."

Yes, friends, people have gone to heaven, many of them. And that is where faithful Enoch has been since God took him "that he should not see death."

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Excuses

The psychologists have a word which they use in describing those who constantly run away from responsibilities and making decisions. They call it rationalization. Most of us refer to the same thing as making excuses. Somehow it seems to be an outstanding human characteristic to justify oneself about everything. We will not face true reasons for our action, but are constantly occupied with inventing excuses which often have no reason in them whatsoever.

Perhaps the classic Bible example of this problem is one of the best-known. Certainly it seems to be the one with least reason in it. It has to do with some individuals who were invited to a sumptuous wedding feast. Notice how the Bible describes their squirming excuses. It sounds like something that could happen in the 20th century instead of the first. We read it in Luke 14:18-20.

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must go and see it: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come."

No sooner does anyone begin to preach the gospel then men and women begin to "make excuse". It is the old story. There is not an unsaved person but has got some excuse. If I were to go to each of you and ask why you do not accept God's invitation to the gospel feast, you would have an excuse ready on the end of your tongue; and if you had not one ready, the devil would be there to help you to make one. And if they could be answered, he is ready to make new ones. He has had six thousand years experience, and he is very good at it; he can give you as many as you want.

Do you know the origin of excuses? You will find it way back in Eden. When Adam had sinned, he tried to excuse himself. "The woman whom Thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." He tried to lay all the blame on God; Eve tried to lay it on the serpent; and down to the present time men and women with one consent begin to make excuse.

Remember that these men Luke tells us about, were not invited to a funeral, or to hear some dry, stupid lecture or sermon; they were not invited to visit a hospital or a prison, or a madhouse; to witness some terrible scene or execution—something that would have pained them. It was to go to a feast.

The gospel is represented in the Bible as a feast. In the evening of this dispensation there is going to be a marriage supper of God's Son. Blessed is he that shall be at the marriage supper of the Lamb! If I know my own heart, I would rather be torn limb from limb, or have my heart taken from my body this moment, and be present on that glorious day, than have the wealth of the world rolled at my feet, and miss that wonderful banquet at the marriage of the Lamb.

Not only was this a feast, but it was a royal feast. If you had the honor of an invitation from the President—if you were invited to some great banquet, you would not hesitate to accept the invitation. You would want it to be put into the papers, to show how you had been honored. But here is something worth more than that. Here is an invitation from the King of Kings, the Lord of Lords, God's only Son.

The invitations are going out now to every corner of the earth. "All are invited." For over nineteen hundred years God's messengers have been crossing over valley and mountain, over desert and sea, from end to end of the earth, inviting men and women to the gospel feast. What an honor for worms of the dust!

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

When man prepares a feast, there is a great rush to see who will get the best place. But God prepares His feast, and the chairs would all be empty if His disciples did not go out and compel them to come in.

Then, when man prepares a feast, he invites his friends, those who love him; but God invites His most bitter enemies, those who are in rebellion against Him. And yet men make excuse! No sooner is the invitation given by God than the excuses begin to rain in.

Did you ever stop to think what would take place if God should take at his word, everyone who makes excuse?— if He were to say, "Yes, if you want to be excused from this feast, I will excuse you," and with the next stroke should sweep them all from the face of the earth? Supposing every one in this land should be taken at their word, and laid in the arms of death, how many stores would be closed tomorrow, how many homes would be filled with mourning and tears? Oh, my friends, it would be a solemn time if God should take men at their word. The grass would soon be growing in the streets, and the living would be occupied in burying the dead.

Now, be honest with God! God is honest. He means what He says. This is an honest invitation, and He wants us to be honest. If you do not want to be at this supper, why not say so? Why make excuses? They are nothing but lies. If you can rise up and give a reasonable excuse—if so, tell us what it is—why you don't accept this invitation. Think for a minute. What valid reason can you give? You have none. It is not often we get an invitation to attend a royal feast, but here comes one to be present at the marriage supper of God's only Son. Is it not downright folly for any one to refuse? Just think what you are asking to be excused from. From heaven; from the society of the pure; from those who have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb. Man asks to be excused from the mansions which Christ has prepared; from the society of the angels; from God the Father, and Christ the Son and the Holy Ghost. You talk of the great men in England and America, but I tell you, the best this earth has ever had will be gathered at that feast. Yes, we shall sit down with the patriarchs and prophets, the apostles and martyrs, with the best that have lived upon this earth.

I would rather die today and be sure of meeting the bliss of the purified in that world of light, than live for centuries with the wealth of this world at my feet, and miss the marriage supper of the Lamb. I have missed many appointments in my life, but, by the grace of God, I mean to make sure of that one. Why, the blessed privilege of sitting down at the marriage supper of the Lamb, to see the King in His beauty, to be forever with the Lord—who would miss it?

Let us take up these three men, who "with one consent begin to make excuse."

1. What did the first one say? "I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it," Someone has asked "Why did he not look at the ground before he bought it?" If he had been a good businessman, he would have seen his ground first. He couldn't make the bargain any better by going to look at it now, and now that he has got it, he can go and look at it anytime—the land could not run away! It was not that he had made a partial bargain and might withdraw, or that someone might step in ahead of him and get the ground from him. He did not even have that excuse. He had bought the land. There was no fear that he should lose his title to it. Yet he must needs go and see it. Strange time to go and see ground at supper-time!

On the face of it, it was a downright lie. He did not want to go to the feast, and so he manufactured this excuse to ease his conscience. This is what the people make excuses for. The devil gets men into that cradle and rocks them to sleep in it.

2. What did the second man say? "I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them. I pray thee have me excused." Why not prove them before he bought them? It was no time to prove oxen after they were bought, and now that the bargain was closed he could prove them any time. Why not let them stand in the stall till he had accepted this invitation? Don't you see that was another lie?

3. The third man's excuse was the most ridiculous of them all. "I have married a wife and therefore I cannot come." Why did he not take his wife along with him? Who likes to go to a feast better than a young bride? He might have asked her to go too; and if she were not willing, then let her stay at home. The fact was, he did not want to go.

Nineteen hundred years have rolled away, and they tell us the world has grown wiser; they say it has improved wonderfully during these years; but tell me, have men got any better excuses? Young lady! Can you give a better excuse? Have you got an excuse that will stand the light of eternity, have you got an excuse that will even satisfy yourself? Men try every kind of excuse, but the man does not live who can give a good one. Let some terrible disease lay hold of a man, let death come and look him in the face, and his excuses are gone in a moment. My friend, your excuses will look altogether different when you come to stand before the great tribunal of your Judge.

I would just like to take up some of the popular excuses of the present day. There is one very common one, "I do not like this minister or that preacher."

Well, what has that to do with it? What have you to do with the messenger? Suppose a boy comes and gives me a dispatch, some good news from my wife. I don't turn around to see who brings it. He may be black or white, that is nothing to me. It is the message I care for. Is it not the fact that God invites you to a feast? What are you looking at the messenger for? I have heard this excuse till I am tired. "I don't like this minister or that minister, this person or that one who calls himself a Christian." Never mind about the messenger. The question is—are you willing to receive the message from God?

Do you believe the Word of God is true, and that God invites you to this feast? Do you believe that the invitation is to "every creature" in the world? You have nothing to do with the preacher who brings the message. If the message is from God, I ask you, why not accept it? If you are going to wait until you find some perfect man or woman to bring you the invitation, you will never accept it. There was never but one perfect Man. You will find a good many flaws in our character, a good many things you may not like in the followers of Christ, but I challenge you to find a flaw in the character of our Master. He bids you come. Anyone who accepts the invitation He will receive.

Another excuse. "There are so many things I cannot understand."

No doubt about that. God says the carnal man cannot understand spiritual things, and the Bible is a spiritual book. How can the unregenerate heart understand the Bible?

"Well," you say, "if it is a sealed book, how am I going to be saved?"

Well, when God put salvation before the world, He put that very plain. The Word of God may be darkened to the natural man, but the way of salvation is written so plain that the little child of six years old can understand it if she will. Take this passage and see if you do not understand it:—"The Spirit and the bride say, Come; and let him that heareth say, Come; and let him that is athirst, Come." Are you not thirsty? God says - Come! "And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." You know what it is to take a gift? God puts salvation before you as a gift. "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not: but as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God." You can understand that? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." You know what it is to believe? At any rate you know what it is to trust, to commit your soul to the Lord Jesus Christ—that is all.

There are dark and mysterious things in the Bible now, but when you begin to trust Christ your eyes will be opened, and the Bible will be a new book to you. Many things that are dark and mysterious today, tomorrow will have a new beauty. It will become the Book of Books to you. Today Christ may be a root out of a dry ground, without form or comeliness, but He will become to you the Chief among ten thousand, the altogether lovely, the bright and morning star, if you take Him as your Saviour. Then you will understand the Bible.

No book in the world has been so misjudged as the Bible. Men judge it without reading it. Or perhaps they read a bit here and a bit there, and then close it, saying, "It is so dark and mysterious!" You take a book now-a-days, and read it. Someone asks you what you think about it. "Well," you say, "I have only read it through once, not very carefully, and I should not like to give an opinion." Yet people take up God's book, read a few pages, and condemn the whole of it. Of all the skeptics and infidels I have ever met speaking against the Bible, I have never met one who read it through. There may be such men, but I have never met them.

It is simply an excuse. There is no man living who will stand up before God and say that kept him out of the kingdom. It is the devil's work trying to make us believe it is not true, and that it is dark and mysterious. The only way to overcome the great enemy of souls is by the written Word of God. He knows that, and so tries to make men disbelieve it. As soon as a man is a true believer in the Word of God, he is a conqueror over Satan.

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Rich Man & Lazarus Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we want to consider the same theme that we've been dealing with for a number of days on the broadcast. We want to look into one of the most controversial texts of the Bible. It's a parable Jesus gave although some people don't believe it is a parable. Today we're going to establish from the Scripture itself that this is a parable indeed. It's found in Luke 16:19-31. We'll read a little bit of this story in order to acquaint you with the details. "There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores, And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence. Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house: For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

Now there's the story, friends, and it's often read to prove that the good go to heaven and the bad to hell and the very next minute after death. But it should be remembered that never can parables be used to contradict other plain statements of the Bible which are not parables. Jesus taught in another place that the wicked are not punished and the righteous are not rewarded until after the resurrection. This we find in John 5:28, 29. "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." Now, notice friends, that Jesus declares all, both good and evil, are in the graves, and when the time comes, both shall come forth—not from heaven and torment but from the graves. Second Peter 2:9 plainly teaches that the wicked are not at present in a place of torment. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." Now since the day of judgment has not yet come, it is plain that the lost are not suffering in torment now. This would be gross injustice even on the part of a human judge. But we can't imagine the God of the universe dealing in something like that.

Now let me kindly remind those who read the story of the rich man and Lazarus to prove that man has an immortal soul, that the words "soul" and "spirit" are nowhere in the Bible mentioned at all in relation to eternal existence. And the words soul and spirit, are not used anywhere in this story. The subjects here have physical bodies with eyes, fingers, tongue, etc. Since this is the case, no one should read this story to prove that man exists in a bodiless state after death. This man who is in torment has a body, and he wants water to be placed on his tongue, and he lifts up his eyes; so this could not be proving man in a spirit form.

To those who would insist that all this is literal and pictures the actual condition of the saved and the lost after death, we ask: Do you believe that the saved in heaven and the damned in torment are so close to each other that they can see and hear one another and talk back and forth? The loved ones, for example, that are suffering in the torment—can their loved ones on the other side hear their pitiful pleading for somebody to relieve them of their misery? If that is what Jesus meant to teach, then no one can deny that a mother in heaven, every minute of eternity, will have to listen to the pleading voices of son, daughter, husband, mother or father to "do something, oh, do something that will give me a moment's relief from this terrible agony." Could that mother be entirely happy and enjoy the peace of heaven, seeing and hearing the sufferings of her loved ones? If this parable is to be taken literally as many preachers insist, then there's no escaping of this horrible picture. If the suffering of loved ones now in beds of affliction keep us from being happy, will we contend that in the future life we'll be so hard-hearted that these sufferings multiplied millions of times in intensity would not disturb our happiness in the least? Who would wish to live in a heaven like that, friends?

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

To those who, in spite of all this, persist in contending that this story is to be taken in a literal sense, that it pictures what actually happens right after death, let's ask this question: Do you believe that all the saved go into Abraham's literal bosom as soon as they die? Now obviously, friends, that is a figurative expression. And it's not unfair for us to ask you whether you take that literal or not. So far we have been attempting to prove that this parable does not mean what it is often contended. It does not teach that the good go to heaven and the bad to torment the next minute after death. It does not teach that there is an immaterial spirit or soul which comes out of the body at death and remains in a conscious state. It does not teach that in the future world the lost and saved are so close to each other that they can see and talk to each other.

Now having found what it does not mean, let's see if we can discover, by comparing spiritual things with spiritual, just what Jesus meant to teach when He gave this story. I believe it can be proved that the rich man represented the proud, self-righteous Jews, and that the poor man represented the despised Gentiles; that Jesus was tactfully warning the Jews that if they continued to reject the Messiah of Moses and the prophets, the time would come when they would die to their national relationship with God as a chosen people, and that the Gentiles whom they despised and ignored would come in to take their place. The fact that he kept praying to father Abraham certainly proves that he was a Jew. None will deny that Abraham was the father of the Jewish nation and that they put a great deal of confidence in being Abraham's seed.

When John was appealing to them to repent, he added this: "And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." Matthew 3:9. On another occasion Jesus said to them, "ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Their answer was, "We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man." John 8:32, 33. It seems that this is quite sufficient to prove that the rich man who prayed to Abraham represented the Jewish nation.

This story says that the rich man fared sumptuously every day. No nation was ever favored with so many blessings as was the Jewish nation. Reminding them of this Moses said in Deuteronomy 4:7, 8, "For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon him for? And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?" Friends, this is very, very true. And then notice how he continues. "Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of fire, as thou hast heard and live, Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation ... by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, ... and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, ... Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice." Verses 33-36.

Oh yes, friends, it was a purpose of God that they should share these favors and spiritual blessings with the Gentile people. There are plenty of texts to prove that God wanted the Jews to go out and preach these things to the Samaritans, to the Greeks, to the Romans, and to all the Gentiles. In the parable the rich man, instead of sharing his blessings with the poor man, he ignored him and looked upon him with scorn. This was precisely the attitude of the Jews toward the Gentiles. The Jews associated the Gentiles with the dogs and ignored them completely. We find an illustration of this in Matthew 15:21-28. "Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon. And, behold, a woman of Canaan (now this is a Gentile) came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil." Notice next that Jesus assumed toward her the same attitude as did the Jews in order to teach his disciples how wrong it was. "But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us. But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me."

Now notice, friends, how she's acting the part of a beggar. "But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs. And she said, Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table." Yes, we remember similar language in the parable. She meant that she would be satisfied with just the crumbs of His service. "Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour." Oh, how strikingly this illustrates the story of the rich man and the beggar. It will be remembered that the rich man had no dealings with the poor man, and it's a fact that the Jews had no dealings with the Gentiles. When Jesus spoke kindly to the woman at the well, she was surprised and said, "How is it that thou, being a Jew, asketh drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans." John 4:9. This woman had Gentile blood in her and that's why the Jews had no dealings with her. Even the disciples were infected with this Jewish prejudice against the Gentiles, and they marveled that He talked with the woman.

When Peter was instructed in a vision to visit the Gentile family of Cornelius, when he went into the house, "he said ... Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation." Acts 10:28. So the very feelings of the rich man toward the beggar in the parable was to illustrate the feelings of the Jews toward the Gentiles.

The time came when the rich man died and lifted up his eyes in torment. Now what happened to the Jewish people, friends? We know that the time came when they died to their former relationship to God as a chosen people, and the Gentiles did come in and take their place. We don't have time in the last moments of our broadcast today to tell of the great sufferings that have come to the Jewish people and how those things were mentioned in the Bible even—especially in the book of Deuteronomy, chapter 28. God said that these torments would come to them because of the way they dealt with others and the great message of truth that had been delivered to them. They did not share it with others, therefore the Gentiles did come in. They were grafted into the tree and took the place of the Jews as far as the spiritual blessings of God were concerned.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Second Coming

The question, "How would you order your life if you had the chance of living it again?" is an interesting one. Often, as we look back over our past life and see the many mistakes we have made, we think: "How I wish I could go back and change that!" So many of our mistakes are made through ignorance! Had we known better at the time we would not have committed such follies. In some religious circles this questioning is carried further, and the query is raised: "Will not a just God give mankind a second chance—another period in which he can live, profit by the experiences of the present existence, and show to the universe that he can obey God's law?" Many men who, after a life of sin, have repented on the deathbed, have uttered the thought: "Oh, that I might live my life over again, how different it would be!" Such conditions as these have led many to assert that God will grant to all humanity another period of time, in which they will, by right living, atone for their present evil lives.

Although this belief has spread rapidly throughout the world during the past few years, it is not a new conception. It is as old as history. If we go back to the time when records were first kept we find that the Egyptians believed in metempsychosis, or transmigration of the soul. That is merely another way of saying that if an entity had lived an evil life in one existence, he would have a chance in another existence to redeem himself.

The Hindus have carried this idea to its furthest limit. They hold that the soul passes from one existence to another. If its conduct in one life is exemplary, it will go a step higher in the next. If its conduct there is evil, it will go a step down again. According to their belief, a wicked man will, in his next existence, perhaps be a woman or a sheep. If he does not do better in that life, he may descend still lower and become an insect or even a vegetable. If, however, the man lives a good life, he will be born into a higher cast in his next existence he may even be a Brahman, or a priest. So, the Hindus believe, the soul goes on and on through hundreds and thousands of lives, until it eventually perfects itself, and finally becomes a part of the essence of God Himself.

Does the Bible say anything about a second chance? Yes, it does. When Adam and Eve were created, they were perfect and were not by nature subject to sin. God gave them the Garden of Eden for a dwelling place. A spot more delightful the heart could not desire. One thing, and only one, reminded them that they were not supreme in the universe—the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. God had said to Adam and Eve, regarding the eating of the forbidden fruit: "... in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Genesis 2:17. As long as they kept away from this tree of the knowledge of good and evil, men were to enjoy their happy state of existence without interruption. But Adam and Eve did not obey God.

They partook of the forbidden fruit and became subject to death. "The wages of sin is death." Romans 6:23. "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." Romans 3:23. According to these Scriptures, all mankind is subject to death because of sin. We have all broken God's immutable law, and thus incurred the penalty of eternal death.

But no sooner had Adam and Eve partaken of the forbidden fruit, than Christ, the Son of God, made possible the second chance. It was as if He said: "Adam and Eve have sinned. They have broken God's law, and are therefore subject to death. They cannot save themselves, and their only chance to escape the penalty must come from without. I, who am sinless, will die in their stead, that they may have eternal life." Christ made this offer in the beginning. In Revelation 13:8 He is called "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." So when Adam and Eve had sinned and were driven forth from the Garden of Eden, they were not left in despair, but were told of the second chance they should have. "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." Genesis 3:15. In these words, spoken to Satan, is the essence of the gospel. They foretold that one day the Saviour would come into the world, that He would suffer affliction at the hand of Satan, but that ultimately He would bruise the serpent's head—that is, conquer

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

him.

Adam and Eve had their second chance in this life. They did not continue in sin and then depend upon a future existence to right themselves before their Creator. They accepted the promise at once, and began striving to live right lives. As Paul said to the Corinthians, "... behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." 2 Corinthians 6:2.

The second chance that Christ offers is not only available now, but it is of faith, not of works. "A man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." Romans 3:28. This same truth is made even more emphatic in Galatians 2:16: "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." In this verse three times the truth is laid down that the works of the law cannot justify. That means that our attempts to live good lives can never redeem us, once we have sinned. Salvation comes only by faith in Jesus Christ.

The doctrine of a second chance in a future period of time, after this life is ended, is merely another phase of salvation by works. How prone man is to attempt to work out his own salvation! The Hindu attempts to save himself by lying on planks studded with nails. He attempts to atone for his sins by thrusting needles and hooks through his flesh. I've seen this myself. But all such attempts are futile. Salvation, our second chance, is not by works, but by faith.

Now it's true that if we had the privilege of living our lives again, with the experience we have had in this life, some of us would avoid many mistakes we have made and would live a far better life than this one. But my friend, a better life is not enough. Nothing short of perfection pleases God. Could we in a second chance live a perfect life? Would we stake our eternal existence on our ability to live another life without committing one small sin? Not one of us would. The idea of a second chance is just another phase of salvation by works—being saved by our own efforts. To try to save ourselves is to spurn Jesus Christ. What we should do is to substitute His perfect life, by faith, instead of our sinful one.

Friends, salvation is the work of a moment. It does not require a lifetime of righteous living to atone for our sins. There is no need of another life to make preparation for our present misdeeds. All that is necessary is to believe on Jesus Christ now. If we will not do that, if we will not believe the teachings of Moses and the prophets regarding the gift of eternal life, then we need not expect to have another span of life granted to us to do the work of a moment—accept the sacrifice of Christ.

It is faith in Christ that saves, but this faith must be proved by good works. "For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified." Romans 2:13. It matters not whether this doing, this keeping of the law, is for a period of a few hours, as in the case of the thief on the cross, it is righteous living that proves to God and our fellowmen that we have faith.

But somebody asks at this point: "What about the thousands and millions of heathens who have never heard of Christ and have never had a chance to accept Him? Will they not have the privilege of another life in which to hear of Christ and believe in Him?" Let us read what the Bible has to say on this point, "When the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves." Romans 2:14.

Here's another verse on it, "... unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required." Luke 12:48. We are assured that every man has a minimum of light at least; for John writes, "That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John 1:9. If a man lives in accordance with the light he has, however little that light may be, God accepts him as well as that of a man who is more enlightened.

Again some may ask: "How is it that every person who has ever lived has had this minimum of light, when so many people live or lived in benighted lands, where no missionary has ever reached them?" The answer is evident. Those who have never heard the written word of God have heard the voice of God through His other book, nature. Does not inspiration teach this in Psalm 19:1-4? "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork. ... There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world."

By the study of God's Word we find that all have sinned and are subject to eternal death.

Through Jesus Christ, eternal life is offered to all men. This is the second chance. The man who has never heard of Christ, and yet lives up to the light he has, is accepted as though he had faith in Christ, and he gets his second chance in this way. We know that many persons receive repeated calls to forsake their sins and accept Jesus Christ. They have many chances; but their punishment if they spurn these chances is the greater because of the greater light they have rejected. God has made it possible for Christians, as light bearers, to bring tidings not only of a second chance, but of a third, a fourth, and many more. "The Lord is ... longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." 2 Peter 3:9. All who have ever lived on the earth have had their chance at salvation and will confess in the judgment that God has been just with them. Bear in mind that these chances of ours to escape eternal death come to us now, not in a future period. In this life every human being who has ever lived has had ample opportunity to be saved. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." Hebrews 9:27. When our eyes close in death, then ends our opportunity for salvation. Our records as they stand at that moment must be met at the judgment bar of God.

Let me repeat that salvation is by faith. It is the work of a moment. Salvation makes us perfect in the sight of God, and we need only keep perfect in His sight until life shall close. If we sin again, we must ask for salvation again. Paul said that he died daily. By this he meant that he called afresh on the salvation of Jesus Christ every day. This is our privilege, too. We have a new chance of salvation every day, whenever we succumb to the tempter's power. As long as we keep hold of God in this way we are sure of eternal life. But if we continue in sin who knows when we shall be called to lay down our lives without having made our peace with God?

This is God's plan of salvation. It is ready for us at any time, any hour of the day or night. We can receive it when we are young or when we are old. He is ever ready to extend it to us when we sincerely desire it, and as often as we want it. With such a beautiful plan in operation now, what need is there for a future period of probation? The doctrine of a second probation, another chance in a future existence, is one of Satan's greatest deceptions. He seems to whisper in the ear of the unwary: "You need not fear. There is another time when you can be good and gain a place in heaven. Enjoy the pleasures of this world now, and later you can prepare for the delights of heaven." What pleasant reasoning! But how fatal! It is like an opiate. It soothes an aching conscience, but does not remove the cause of the disease nor stop its ravages. It only conceals the presence of the cancer that eats away our vitals, and allows it to work unhindered.

The divine fiat is, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matthew 6:24. If we attempt to follow such a course, the toils of sin will wrap us more tightly about, till there is no desire to escape. We cannot dally with sin. We must not put off until another time the acceptance of salvation. To do so is fatal. When Paul urged Felix to repent, Felix answered, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." Acts. 24:25. But he never called. If we think that in the future there will be another opportunity for salvation, we are tempted to put off the present call. Yet this call may be our last. Let us heed it while we may.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Three Steps to Heaven

If you want to really humble yourself, let me make a suggestion. Go outside some clear night and look up at the gigantic star fields overhead. In 1975 astronomers at UCLA discovered a great galaxy of stars, eight billion light years from earth—three billion light years beyond any stars previously known to exist. The light from this vast galaxy, traveling at the rate of about six trillion miles per year, has just reached planet earth. According to astronomers, the new galaxy contains thousands of billions of stars and is at least five times larger than our own illustrious Milky Way galaxy.

In spite of new discoveries, astronomers admit they have not found an "end" to space. They surmise that thousands of galaxies probably exist beyond even this farthest of galaxies.

Yet far beyond this most distant galaxy lies the pearly gates of God's heavenly home. Nobody knows how far it is in miles, of course, to the heavenly Jerusalem, the place where Christ has prepared a place for us. But this I know, friends, no matter how far it is, every soul in this listening audience can get there in just three steps if he wants to.

Do you ever feel that salvation is too complicated to really understand? I'm afraid that millions of sincere people have actually stumbled over the amazing simplicity of the gospel. Listen, only one thing is absolutely necessary. Only one thing will keep you out of heaven, and that is sin. Get rid of sin in your life and the only problem is immediately solved. You say, Well, that's easier said than done! Yes, maybe. On the other hand, it may be easier done than you ever realized. God has made it so simple that even little children can come into His kingdom. It's only the imagination and, I'm afraid, the unbelief of misguided adults which makes the road to heaven seem so heavy and unhappy. Listen to this text in Revelation 21:27 speaking about heaven and those who go there. "And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth." Now, the only thing that defiles is sin, therefore, all sin must be removed before we can gain entry to the presence of God.

The greatest problem facing the world today is how to get rid of sin. Everybody has it. This is something that we cannot boast about. There's not a living individual today who has not been guilty of transgression. But, if we can just learn how to get rid of sin, we will have taken the first great step from earth to heaven. Thousands would like to be Christians, but they just don't know how. Today we want to try to make it so simple that even a child can understand it. The strange thing about salvation is its utter simplicity. Many people stumble because they can't believe it is really so simple.

The duty of the doctor is not merely to tell the patient that he is sick. He must give a medicine to cure the sickness. We can't tell a man, You're a sinner, without showing the way to get rid of sin. So many people are like the little girl who was lost and crying bitterly as she walked along the street. A kind man met her and asked what she wanted. She sobbed out, "I want to be found. I want to be found." Maybe you are one of those discouraged, miserable people who are groping in the dark. If so, just remember that God wants to save you in the simple way we shall tell you about right now.

I have marked down three conditions to having our sins forgiven. The first is repentance. We will try to break down this long word into more easily understood phrases. Of what shall we repent? Romans 3:23 says: "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." That doesn't leave out a single soul living in the world today. Even the tiny baby is born with the tendency to disobey, and it will be the most natural thing in the world for that child to sin as he grows older. All right, what are the wages of sin? Romans 6:23: "For the wages of sin is death." That means we are all under the penalty of death and have no power to deliver ourselves from it. No amount of effort can satisfy the claims of a broken law. We fall into the same state as the apostle Paul who had a desire to do right but always found the law of sin present, forcing him to transgress. It's that law of sin, that naturally carnal condition, which no man can overcome alone. We cannot simply lift ourselves by our own bootstraps. We are born with this weakness, we have inherited it from our parents, and they from their parents, all the way back to our first parents in the Garden of Eden. Paul said: "... the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Romans 8:7. It is just as impossible for an individual to change himself as it is for the leopard to change its spots. Jeremiah puts it this way: "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil." Jeremiah 13:23.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

More Free Books!

More Radio Messages!

The thought of our lost and helpless condition should startle us, friends. As the fact sinks in upon us that we are like prisoners in jail who can't pardon ourselves, we begin to lose confidence in our own strength to save ourselves. Then we turn our eyes away from ourselves and "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." John 1:29. When I look to Jesus and see Him dying upon the cross, the awfulness of sin begins to register in my mind. A new unworthiness grips me as I finally understand that sin meant His death or mine. As a sinner, I should suffer death, but there He is, suspended between heaven and earth dying in my stead. Oh, what a thought that is, friends! How can we grasp the significance of what Jesus did?

What does it do for us when we see Him dying in our place? It causes us to be sorry for our sins because we know it was our sins which put Him there, put Him to death. Our sins crushed out the life of Jesus on Calvary, and that sorrow I feel is repentance. I'm not talking about sorrow which springs from fear of punishment. There is a godly sorrow and there is a sorrow after this world, which thinks only of itself. Worldly sorrow is well illustrated by the story of a minister who was walking down the corridor of a prison. He heard a certain prisoner over to the side weeping aloud. The kind minister stepped over and spoke to the man saying, "Why are you weeping?" The prisoner answered between his sobs, "Oh, I'm so sorry, so sorry!" "But why are you sorry," asked the minister. "Because I sneezed," said the prisoner. "I was robbing a house at night and I sneezed. The house owner woke up and the police caught me. Oh, I'm so sorry I sneezed!" Friends, genuine repentance is grief because of what my sin did to Christ. It put Him to death.

The second step in forgiveness is called confession. This is beautifully described in 1 John 1:9: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." This promise from God to forgive is conditioned only by our confession of sin and by our faith in believing that He does what He promises to do. Just as soon as we meet the condition, the promise becomes a fact, and our sins are gone. It is a transaction of faith which we act upon solely because we know God's word is true. We are not to ask God to prove that He kept His word. There will not be any certain feeling as evidence that our sins are forgiven. Some people wait, thinking that some ecstasy will come upon them, that they will know their sins are gone because of some strange, ecstatic feeling. Friends, this is not the way it is. We must accept this fact by faith. God said He would forgive us if we ask Him. And after we ask Him, we must believe that God meant what He said and that our sins are gone. We know they are forgiven, not because we feel anything, but because He said it would happen. The only requirement for us is to believe that He did what He promised. That's why we ought to thank Him even before rising from our knees. Here is where so many stumble in unbelief. They are not able to believe that the act is done, and because they question God's truthfulness, their guilt remains. The moment they believe what God said, as soon as they believe that He has forgiven them, that very moment they are delivered from condemnation. Now, I don't deny that feeling will come later. After our faith has made forgiveness a fact, great peace will flood the heart. Notice Romans 5:1: "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

The third condition to having sins forgiven is restitution. Some people think this is just too hard to do. And I'll confess, friends, it often is the most difficult part we are required to perform. It means that wrongs must be righted. If anything has been stolen, it must be returned. Often confessions will have to be made to man as well as to God if we have wronged our neighbor or our brother. Letters may need to be written to make matters right and to dissolve differences and grudges. Oh friends, if all the Christians in the world would make full and honest restitution, the greatest, the mightiest revival of all time would break out.

After meeting these three conditions to forgiveness, we come to the second great step to heaven, which is found in John 3:3: "Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." You must be born again. We have already talked about the natural state of sin in which every man is shrouded. The carnal heart must be converted so that the life will be inclined to obedience instead of to disobedience. How is that done? John 1:12: "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."

Here's the great secret of being born again. We must receive Jesus into our hearts. It is not enough to merely receive His teachings. He must become a living reality in the soul. I tell you, something happens to a man when he kneels at the foot of the old rugged cross. The burden of sin is lifted. The whole life is often reversed completely. That's how we know that the rebirth has taken place. 2 Corinthians 5:17 says, "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." Old sinful habits lose their hold and attractiveness. Our feelings so change that we love spiritual things instead of carnal things. The world loses its appeal in the light of spiritual reality.

Now let's quickly consider the third step from death to life. It's found in Hebrews 5:9. "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Many people try to leave out the third step of obedience, but Jesus put it in. He said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Of course it's true that we cannot obey in our own strength, but Paul gives the secret in Galatians 2:20. "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Translation of Elijah Listen to the audio version Now!

Today we are going to continue the subject which was introduced in our last broadcast. In that broadcast we gave the evidence that the patriarch Enoch was translated and taken to heaven without seeing death.

Today we will consider the case of Elijah, God's prophet who was caught up to heaven in a whirlwind. But again let me urge you to get the full background on the subject by writing for broadcast 419. Will people go to heaven? That is broadcast 419. It provides the necessary background that we don't have time to go into now.

But let's take a close, Bible look at the experience of Elijah. Many distortions have grown up around the simple account of his translation to heaven. The words of the Bible are exceedingly plain. 2 Kings 2:11 says, "It came to pass as they still went on and talked, that behold there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven." Friends, what could be clearer?

But those who hold that no human being ever has or ever will go to heaven, have objected that Elijah was only caught up into the atmospheric heaven and not into Paradise where God's throne is located. They contend that God had decided Elijah's work was complete, and he needed to be removed to make way for Elisha. Therefore God sent a whirlwind to scoop up Elijah and deposit him safely in a remote area out of sight of the people.

Now, friends, it is undeniably true that the Bible speaks of three heavens, and one is the atmospheric heaven where the birds fly. Then there is the stellar heavens where the stars and planets are whirling in space. The third heaven, which Paul described as Paradise, 2 Corinthians 12:2, 4, is where the throne of God is located, far above the sun, moon and stars. But we will show clear evidence that this unique whirlwind of fiery horses and chariot did not merely move the prophet from one earth spot to another.

You know, friends, this theory that God just picked up Elijah and dropped him somewhere else is nothing new. When Elisha, Elijah's successor, returned from witnessing the translation, he was met by fifty sons of the prophets. They said, "Behold now there be with thy servant fifty strong men, let them go we pray thee and seek thy master lest preadventure the spirit of the Lord hath taken him up and cast him upon some mountain and upon some valley." 2 Kings 2:16. Elisha said, "Ye shall not send." But they pressed him until finally he told them to go. They searched high and low, mountaintop and valley, for three days, but did not find Elijah. At last they gave up, for it is impossible to find a man who is in heaven, no matter how thoroughly one searches on the earth. When the fifty came to Jericho, where Elisha was, he dryly observed: "Did I not say unto you, Go not?"

The mountain or valley idea must have become widespread immediately following the translation. According to Elisha's experience with the mocking children it seems to have been a common topic of conversation in the homes. As the prophet went from Jericho to Bethel "there came forth little children out of the city and mocked him. And said unto him, 'Go up, thou bald head. Go up, thou bald head,' and he turned back and looked on them and cursed them in the name of the Lord. And there came forth two she-bears out of the woods and tare forty and two children of them." 2 Kings 2:23, 24. Now, friends, here is conclusive evidence of God's disapproval on those who disbelieve Elijah's translation. It was a costly but needed lesson. Is not God as displeased with today's disbelief as He was with that of the sons of the prophets and the mocking children?

The Bible gives even further evidence that Elijah is still alive. Matthew, Mark, and Luke all record the experience of the transfiguration of Jesus on the Mountain. Jesus appeared in all of his glory just as He will at the Second Coming. On either side of Him, also glorified, were Moses and Elijah. Proponents of the view that Elijah died raise two

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

➤ More Free Books!

➤ More Radio Messages!

questions about this experience. First, they point out that the Bible clearly states that Moses died and was buried. No one can deny this, but the same Bible also describes the special resurrection of Moses from his Nebo grave. Notice how Satan tried to prevent Michael, the Angel of the resurrection, from raising Moses to life again. "Yet Michael the Archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, the Lord rebuke thee." Jude 9. According to 1 Thessalonians 4:16 it is the "voice of the archangel" which opens the graves of the righteous dead when Jesus comes at the end of the world. We have to conclude that this Angel by the side of Moses' grave, contending with Satan over the body of Moses, had to be there for one purpose only—to resurrect Moses. And the transfiguration experience is proof positive that Michael prevailed over Satan. Moses was taken to heaven and later appeared with Elijah and Jesus on the mountain top. Paul adds the final proof of Moses' resurrection in Romans 5:14. He said "nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses ...," proving that the power of death was broken for the first time in the resurrection of Moses.

The second point that critics make is that Jesus called the transfiguration a "vision" when talking to the disciples in Matthew 17:9. They contend that the disciples only saw a vision or a dream and not real people at all. But in Mark 9:9 it says, "tell no man what things they had seen." And Luke 9:32 specifically states that they were awake, not asleep or in a trance, when they "saw His glory and the two men that stood with Him."

Besides, friends, the Greek word that is translated "vision" can mean to see a vision alright, but it can also mean to see someone in the body and recognize them physically. In fact, the same word is used in Luke 24:34 to describe Christ after his resurrection, and in Hebrews 9:28 to describe the second coming of Jesus. Are we to believe that Jesus at the resurrection and at the second coming appears only as a vision or apparition? It is preposterous to even suggest this. The Apostle Peter made completely clear what the transfiguration was all about in 2 Peter 1:16-18. "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount." The transfiguration was a miniature of the Second Coming, and Moses was there to represent those who died and would be resurrected when Jesus comes, and Elijah was there to represent those who would be alive when Jesus returned and would never taste even the first death.

Friends, I hope you get that point, for it is the death-blow to this whole false idea that no one has ever gone to heaven. It is claimed that Elijah must have died because "In Adam all die," 1 Corinthians 15:22, and because it is "appointed unto men once to die." But this is wresting Scripture, for Paul clearly states in 1 Corinthians 15:51 "That we shall not all sleep" (that is die); and in 1 Thessalonians 4:17 he says, "we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them (the resurrected righteous) in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air."

No, friends, there is no contradiction in Scripture. Enoch, Moses, Elijah and a number of others are in heaven right now. But most important of all, Jesus is there and He is preparing a place for us.

Here is what he said in one of the most beautiful passages of scripture. "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you and if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:1-3.

Throughout the ages, heaven has been the goal, the objective of God's people. In the book of Hebrews, Paul lists many of the great heroes of the Bible and tells how their faith made them righteous. But what was this faith? Paul calls faith the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Faith, then was a steadfast belief in the existence of a particular goal for which they were striving and their earnest seeking of their objective was counted to them for righteousness by God. What was that goal?

Ah, friends, this ought to settle forever the question of whether people go to heaven or not. Listen to the plain words of Scripture: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from which they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city."

Yes, friends, the great goal of God's people throughout history is the city He is preparing in Heaven. And He promises to come again to take His people to that city. This is the blessed hope Paul talks about—the second coming of Jesus. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17.

Notice the two groups of God's people. Those who are in their graves, and those who are alive when Jesus comes. The dead, who are called to life by the voice of the archangel were represented by Moses at the transfiguration of Jesus and the living who are caught up to Jesus were represented by Elijah who also was caught up to heaven without seeing death. Both groups are taken to the city Jesus has been preparing.

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

Bureau of Information

Questions are answered, as far as possible, in the order received; hence those who seek information through this Bureau must not become impatient if the answer to their queries does not appear for several weeks after we receive same.

After the death of a man's wife, would the laws of the Church permit him to marry his deceased wife's sister, who is at present tenderly caring for his children, and whom he loves for the sacrifice she is making, without any sonal or private nature are best answered by one's confessor.

Please explain the letters on the picture of "Our Lady of Perpetual Help."

The first two letters near the feet of the Divine Child are Greek circumstances to be taken into consideration, these matrimonial cases should always be referred to the local pastor.

Please publish the address of the Benedictine Monastery of Monks in Indiana.

St. Meinrad's Abbey, St. Meinrad, Indiana.

What relation is my mother's cousin to me?

Second cousin.

Why does my letter not appear in your columns? I have waited six or seven weeks, thinking you published all letters in rotation, but I saw some letters in your last issue dated later than my own. So I have come to the conclusion that all this "Readers Speak to Readers" dope is just an invention of your own. If you don't want to publish my letter, please return it. I can get some other paper to publish it.

It would be impossible for us to publish all the letters and communications sent to our office for publication. Many of them would be of local interest, but of no general interest. We endeavor to

A good Catholic will obey the laws of the state enacted for the maintenance and support of our Public School system.

What are the letters supposed to be in the Pope's crown, and what do they signify, if anything?

The letters inscribed in the Pope's mitre are these: Vicarius Filii Dei, which is the Latin for Vicar of the Son of God. Catholics hold that the Church which is a visible society must have a visible head. Christ, before His ascension into heaven, appointed St. Peter to act as His representative. Upon the death of Peter the man who succeeded to the office of Peter as Bishop of Rome, was recognized as the head of the Church. Hence to the Bishop of Rome, as head of the Church, was given the title "Vicar of Christ."

Enemies of the papacy denounce this title as a malicious assumption. But the Bible informs us that Christ did not only give His Church authority to teach, but also to rule. Laying claim to the authority to rule in Christ's spiritual kingdom, in Christ's

WANTED Persons of intelligence and character, 16 years experience, for position of agent. Address E-42, Care Sunday Visitor.

FREE In connection with the Sunday Visitor, a free copy of the "Bible of the Future" is given to all who send in a subscription for the "Bible of the Future."

FOR SALE On account of the death of my husband I will sell his house with many well equipped with many. Write to me, Mrs. L. VAN SCHENDEL, Milwaukee, Wis.

INVENTORS Write for list of inventions wanted and how they can be patented. E. J. LAMBERT, Patent Attorney, 1211 Webster Building, Chicago, Ill.

INVEST your money in the best business in the world. We will not be affected by war or any other cause. We will pay you 4 per cent and make it grow. Write for free of expense. I have the largest bank in North Dakota. References by Chicago, Ill. and North Dakota banks furnished on request. Write for list of names. H. F. MURPHY, Grand Forks, N. Dak.

The "Secret" of the Pentateuch, The Little and Great Books, Revelation and History, The Kingdom of Heaven is—1—, lost of the strongest and most important by a man of letters, and EXTRAORDINARY OFFER—We have a special offer in this line of bicycles—the "Ranger." We will give you a bicycle for 30 days free trial without a cent deposit. This offer is absolutely genuine. WRITE TODAY for our big catalog showing our full line of bicycles for men and women, boys and girls at prices never before quoted for this quality. It is a symphony of bicycles, sundries and useful bicycle information. It's free.

TIRES, COASTER-BRAKE rear wheels, fender tubes, lamps, accessories, equipment and parts for all bicycles at half retail prices. A limited number of second-hand bicycles taken in trade will be cleared out at once, at 50¢ to 60¢ each.

RIDER AGENTS wanted in each town to ride and exhibit a sample 1915 model Ranger furnished by us.

It Costs You Nothing to learn what we offer and how we can do it. You will be astonished and surprised. Do not buy a bicycle, tires or sundries until you get our catalog and new special offers. Write today to HEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. E-224 CHICAGO, ILL.

The Coward Shoe

be of local interest, but of no general interest. We endeavor to please our readers in as far as this is possible. The letters which appear in our "Readers Speak to Readers" column are not fabricated in our office, but are sent in by the persons whose name and address they bear.

I asked a question months ago and wanted a personal answer. I enclosed a two-cent stamp for return, but as yet have received no answer.

It would be impossible for us to answer questions by personal letter. Questions of a purely per-spiritual kingdom, in Christ's stead, is not a whit more malicious than laying claim to the authority to teach in Christ's name. And this every Christian minister does.

A Worried Inquirer—There is no reason for doubting your worthiness.

Worried Wife—Have confidence that your prayers to the Sacred Heart will be answered.

L. W.—1. Yes. 2. No. 3. It is not necessary.

Let this be the slogan of every reader: $20,000 by May God!

Back to Nature

The natural foot is shapely and healthy, and the

COWARD ORTHOPEDIC SHOE

is patterned to keep it so. If your feet tire, ache and burn after a day's work, they will come back to nature in this shoe, because it is restful and helpful—a shoe neither too tight nor too loose; one that feels natural from the first wearing.

SOLE COWARD'S

JAMES S. COWARD

224-226 Broadway St., N. Y.

(New York City)

Mail Order Filled

Send for Catalogue

From Page 3 of OUR SUNDAY VISITOR SUNDAY, APRIL 18th, 1915

OUR SUNDAY VISITOR

A NATIONAL CATHOLIC WEEKLY

HUNTINGTON, INDIANA, APRIL 18, 1915

NUMBER 51

A Short Instruction on the Holy Bible

By Rev. J. E. Vaughan

THE HOLY BIBLE is the inspired Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life. It is the Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life. It is the Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life.

THE HOLY BIBLE is the inspired Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life. It is the Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life. It is the Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life.

THE HOLY BIBLE is the inspired Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life. It is the Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life. It is the Word of God, and as such it is the foundation of our faith and the source of our life.

A Masked Organization Deserving Contempt of All Americans

The American people are entitled to know the truth about the masked organization that is at work in the United States. This organization is the one that is at work in the United States. This organization is the one that is at work in the United States.

The Ghostly Ghost of Suspicion Flayed

THE GHOSTLY GHOST of suspicion flayed the body of the Catholic Church. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years.

THE GHOSTLY GHOST of suspicion flayed the body of the Catholic Church. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years.

THE GHOSTLY GHOST of suspicion flayed the body of the Catholic Church. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years. It was a ghost that had been flayed for many years.

Page Two

OUR SUNDAY VISITOR

Issued Weekly by the CATHOLIC PUBLISHING COMPANY
Huntington, Indiana

REV. JOHN F. NOLL, Editor

Entered as second-class matter May 3, 1912, at the postoffice at Huntington, Indiana, under post office No. 1879.

Subscription price (in advance).....50c the year

Foreign Countries, $1.00 the year.

To advertising rates address the OUR SUNDAY VISITOR office.

HUNTINGTON, INDIANA, APRIL 18, 1915.

Rome, May 17, 1914.
"Rendering very great thanks to our beloved son and priest, John Noll, and imploring the Lord to grant him every favor and blessing for his services, we most lovingly impart to him, as a testimony of our special good-will, the apostolic blessing, which we likewise extend to all who write for and read his paper."
PIUS PP. X.

Apostolic Delegation, 1911 Biltmore St., Washington, D. C.

April 27, 1913.

The nature of your work tends to supply, in a popular and practical way, the religious needs of both the Catholics and non-Catholics.

With pleasure I congratulate you on this good work and express my hopes that your success will continue to increase.

With best wishes I am, sincerely yours in Xto.

✠ JOHN BONZANO, Archbishop of Melitane,
Apostolic Delegate.

Dear Rev. Father:—

Fort Wayne, Indiana, March 28, 1912.
Your work of bringing home to our people the better knowledge of the teachings of the Church, and of informing non-Catholics of the claims of Holy Mother Church, is truly an apostolic work, worthy of the highest commendation and encouragement.

To furnish a weekly paper, for an annual subscription of 50c, appears to me to be more than remarkable.

Wishing you God's abundant blessing on your work, I remain,

Devotedly yours in Domino,

✠ H. J. ALERDING, Bishop of Fort Wayne, Indiana.

EDITORIALS

OUR THIRD ANNIVERSARY.

On May 2nd OUR SUNDAY VISITOR will enter upon its fourth year. With that issue we will open our fourth volume. We want our friends and enthusiasts to make this a memorable day by making it possible for us to announce a circulation of 500,000 on that date. We're Off For The Half-Million Mark!

—O—

ATTENTION! GUARDIANS!

In the March 23rd edition of the American Issue at Rome, Tunis latter discover by the Catholic

"Indeed, th dare not tell, v
Sunday, as the
was the day th to observe. Th the Bible, and authority' is a

Will the Po

(Continued from 1

for them when they ge won't have to wait fo million (?) brave 'po country have or will that pilgrimage, and it just right for those come back to Americ hands and wiser heads.

"Just Now the 'patr
low this latest 'ultim to conceive and beyond they suck it down ar wanted that those have such an easy time will be given the keys served upon a gold plat

"What fools these
"What a jolly old tri neys' will have on th
nished by the easy m falling for the game.

"The most interestin program that I shall c is to notice what kind the 'attorneys' will br them for their failure to on the deposition stunt.

"You poor fools, you'l ing stock of the entire even ATTEMPT such a
you suggest.

In the March 23rd edition of the American Issue (Maryland edition), appears an editorial by the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Levister, containing the following re-

you suggest.
"I'd be willing to bet
is never made.
"And if the start is n

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

In the Days of Noah

The Final Battle is also Over Obedience!

"But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

Matthew

24:37

Jesus told us that just prior to His second coming the world would be like it was when Noah was on the earth. How were Noah and his family different from the multitudes who were lost during the flood? What lessons does Jesus want us to learn from this history?

"God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. . . . The earth also was corrupt before God; and the earth was filled with violence."

Genesis 6:5,11

God had given men His commandments as a rule of life, but His law was transgressed, and every conceivable sin was the result. The wickedness of men was open and daring, justice was trampled in the dust, and the cries of the oppressed reached unto heaven.

"But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord... Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God."

Genesis 6:8-9

Amid the prevailing corruption, Methuselah, Noah, and many others labored to keep alive the knowledge of the true God and to stay the tide of moral evil. A hundred and twenty years before the Flood, the Lord by a holy angel declared to Noah His purpose, and directed him to build an ark. While building the ark he was to preach that God would bring a flood of water upon the earth to destroy the wicked. Those who would believe the message, and would prepare for that event by repentance and reformation, should find pardon and be saved. Enoch had repeated to his children what God had shown him in regard to the Flood, and Methuselah and his sons, who lived to hear the preaching of Noah, assisted in building the ark.

"Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he."

Genesis 6:22

God gave Noah the exact dimensions of the ark and explicit directions in

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

"The Beast, the Dragon, and the Woman" is a concise study of the primary prophecies of the last book of the Bible. This small book will help you find the Bible keys which unlock the important last day prophecies.

More Information

regard to its construction in every particular. Human wisdom could not have devised a structure of so great strength and durability. God was the designer, and Noah the master builder. It was constructed like the hull of a ship, that it might float upon the water, but in some respects it more nearly resembled a house. The building of this immense structure was a slow and laborious process. On account of the great size of the trees and the nature of the wood, much more labor was required then than now to prepare timber, even with the greater strength which men then possessed. All that man could do was done to render the work perfect, yet the ark could not of itself have withstood the storm which was to come upon the earth. God alone could preserve His servants upon the tempestuous waters.

"By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." Hebrews 11:7

While Noah was giving his warning message to the world, his works testified of his sincerity. It was thus that his faith was perfected and made evident. He gave the world an example of believing just what God says. All that he possessed, he invested in the ark. As he began to construct that immense boat on dry ground, multitudes came from every direction to see the strange sight and to hear the earnest, fervent words of the singular preacher. Every blow struck upon the ark was a witness to the people.

"And Noah did according unto all that the LORD commanded him." Genesis 7:5

It was not multitudes or majorities that were on the side of right. The world was arrayed against God's justice and His laws, and Noah was regarded as a fanatic. Satan, when tempting Eve to disobey God, said to her, "Ye shall not surely die." Genesis 3:4. Great men, worldly, honored, and wise men, repeated the same. "The threatenings of God," they said, "are for the purpose of intimidating, and will never be verified. You need not be alarmed. Such an event as the destruction of the world by the God who made it, and the punishment of the beings He has created, will never take place. Be at peace; fear not. Noah is a wild fanatic." The world made merry at the folly of the deluded old man. Instead of humbling the heart before God, they continued their disobedience and wickedness, the same as though God had not spoken to them through His servant.

Of the vast population of the earth before the Flood, only eight souls believed and obeyed God's word through Noah. For a hundred and twenty years the preacher of righteousness warned the world of the coming destruction, but his message was rejected and despised. So it will be now. Before the Lawgiver shall come to punish the disobedient, transgressors are warned to repent, and return to their allegiance; but with the majority these warnings will be in vain. Says the apostle Peter,

"There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of His coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning." 2 Peter 3:3, 4.

Do we not hear these very words repeated, not merely by the openly ungodly, but by many who occupy the pulpits of our land? "There is no cause for alarm," they cry. "Before Christ shall come, all the world is to be converted, and righteousness is to reign for a thousand years. Peace, peace! all things continue as they were from the beginning. Let none be disturbed by the exciting message of these alarmists." But this doctrine of the millennium does not harmonize with the teachings of Christ and His apostles. Jesus asked the significant question, "When the Son of man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" Luke 18:8. And, as we have seen, He declares that the state of the world will be as in the days of Noah. Paul warns us that we may look for wickedness to increase as the end draws near: "The Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." 1 Timothy 4:1. The apostle says that "in the last days perilous times shall come." 2 Timothy 3:1. And he gives a startling list of sins that will be found among those who have a form of godliness.

As the time of their probation was closing, the antediluvians gave themselves up to exciting amusements and festivities. Those who possessed influence and power were bent on keeping the minds of the people engrossed with mirth and pleasure, lest any should be impressed by the last solemn warning. Do we not see the same repeated in our day? While God's servants are giving the message that the end of all things is at hand, the world is absorbed in amusements and pleasure seeking. There is a constant round of excitement that causes indifference to God and prevents the people from being impressed by the truths which alone can save them from the coming destruction.

When great and wise men had proved to their satisfaction that it was impossible for the world to be destroyed by water, when the fears of the people were quieted, when all regarded Noah's prophecy as a delusion, and looked upon him as a fanatic--then it was that God's time had come. "The fountains of the great deep" were "broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened," and the scoffers were overwhelmed in the waters of the Flood. With all their boasted philosophy, men found too late that their wisdom was foolishness, that the Lawgiver is greater than the laws of nature, and that Omnipotence is at no loss for means to accomplish His purposes. "As it was in the days of Noah," "even thus shall it be in the days when the Son of man is revealed." Luke 17:26, 30. "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Peter 3:10. When the reasoning of philosophy has banished the fear of God's judgments; when religious teachers are pointing forward to long ages of peace and prosperity, and the world are absorbed in their rounds of business and pleasure, planting and building, feasting and merrymaking, rejecting God's warnings and mocking His messengers--then it is that sudden destruction cometh upon them, and they shall not escape. 1 Thessalonians 5:3.

Continue...

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History |
Sabbath Resources | Home

This 27 lesson online Bible course will help you understand God's plan for your life!

Topics of study range from the second coming of Christ, the mystery of death, facts about diet and health to the major end-time prophecies of Daniel and Revelation.

This course makes a clear and simple presentation of Bible truths. It is a easy and fun way to study God's Word.

Through these free Bible studies, thousands have come to know the Creator and now experience peace and joy.

Start this Free online Bible course today.

Take the first lesson

New Student Enrollment

Returning student logon

Student Name

Password

Forget your Password?

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

Embedded Secure Document

The file <http://www.sabbathtruth.com/Resources/Download/PBLib/BK-HECE.pdf> is a secure document that has been embedded in this document. Double click the pushpin to view.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History |
Sabbath Resources | Home

Current Category - History

Conscientious Objector, The (DVD)

A True Story of An American Soldier, documentary film.

Infantrymen who once ridiculed and scoffed at Desmond's simple faith and refusal to carry a weapon-now owed their lives to him. Director Terry Benedict tells Desmond's incredible story through the eyes of the men who witnessed this humble man's heroic acts. Winning the respect of his fellow soldiers, they recommended him for the highest honor America can bestow on one of her sons-The Medal of Honor.

DV-CO $19.99

From Sabbath to Sunday

A brief but comprehensive history of the Sabbath, this book tells of its transfer from the seventh day of the week to Sunday. By Carlyle B. Haynes.

BK-FSS $7.99

History of Protestantism, The(4 Vol set)

The History of Protestantism by J.A. Wylie pulls back the divine curtain and reveals God's hand in the affairs of His church during the Protestant Reformation. As God's church faces the last days, this compelling book has unique appeal and relevance to all who love the truth. 4 volume set.

BK-HOP $99.95

History of the Sabbath

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

Product Categories:

- > Bible Studies
- > Books
- > Creation / Evolution
- > General
- > History
- > Prophecy

> Your Satisfaction is 100% Guaranteed!

If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with your purchase, simply return it for a full refund, no questions asked!

J.N. Andrews. Finally, one of the most comprehensive, detailed analyses of the Sabbath-Sunday controversy returns to print! Understand in amazing detail the 6,000-year story of the Sabbath, from its foundation at creation to its final return to prominence in the last-days, and understand step-by-step how forces have tried to use Sunday to usurp the place of God's eternal day. A must-have classic for your study library!

BK-HOS $22.95

---

History of the Waldenses

J.A. Wylie. An extraordinary look at a persecuted Christian people given the guardianship of God's Word in the Dark Ages. Even before the Reformation, these godly witnesses maintained the ancient faith and declared the Bible as the only source of truth—even at the peril of their lives. A profound, thrilling portrayal of sacrifice and courage that will change your life.

BK-HOW $9.95

---

Israel of The Alps, The (DVD)

A three part documentary tracing the almost forgotten history of the Waldenses, who for over a thousand years, and intense sufferings, clung to the word of God. See how they lived, how they trained their children, how they shared their faith. Scattered over many lands, they planted the seeds of the Reformation that began in the time of Wycliffe, grew broad and deep in the days of Luther, and is to be carried forward to the close of time by those who also are willing to suffer all things for the ...

DV-IOTA $20.00

---

John Wicliffe-The Morning Star of The

This biography is a reproduction of a book which has been out of print for many years. His faithfulness to the Word of God and his courage in opposing the ecclesiastical powers of thirteenth century England has such an effect on those who followed, that he is often referred to as the Morning Star of the Reformation.

BK-JWMS $5.95

---

Keepers of the Flame Set Video

This eight episode video series documents the development of the church since its earliest days in the Reformation. Filmed on location, it provides a vivid way to learn about or to teach church history. Hosted by Dr. Allan Lindsay.

VT-KOF $79.95

---

Romanism and the Reformation

H. Grattan Guinness. This generation is dangerously close to falling prey to the horrors of the church's darkest age. A loud cry for a return to Scriptures rooted in the lesson of the Reformation.

BK-RATR $12.95

---

Seventh Day Part 1, The

From Creation through Old Testament times - 52 min. Hosted by veteran actor Hal Holbrook, part one of this five-part documentary series considers various views of human origins from ancient myths to Darwinism, and finds the most satisfactory answers in the book of Genesis. It recounts the loyalty and courage of people who saw the seventh-day Sabbath as a special sign between them and their Creator. Packed with special effects, brilliant graphics, and historical documentation. On DVD.

DV-SD1 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 2, The

From the time of Jesus till the 4th Century - 47 min. Part II of the Seventh Day, exposes the political and religious intrigue behind the Saturday - Sunday controversy in the early Christian Church. Hal Holbrook, in his intimate and captivating style weaves little known historical data and expert testimony into a tapestry of compelling truth.

VT-SD2 $20.00

---

Seventh Day Part 2, The

DVD. From the time of Jesus till the 4th Century - 47 min. Part II of the Seventh Day, exposes the political and religious intrigue behind the Saturday - Sunday controversy in the early Christian Church. Hal Holbrook, in his intimate and captivating style weaves little known historical data and expert testimony into a tapestry of compelling truth.

DV-SD2 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 3, The

From the time of St. Patrick to the 11th Century - 48 min. In Part III of the Seventh Day, Hal Holbrook tells of the battle over the seventh day Sabbath in medieval times. It's a story riddled with fakes and forgeries, warped by legend and propaganda, and steeped in the schemes of patriarchs, popes and kings. With the testimony of experts from England, Scotland and the United States, Part III of this 5-part documentary series presents new Revelations from the Lost Pages of History. (DVD)

DV-SD3 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 4, The

Part four in the riveting Sabbath Day documentary series spotlights the resurgence of Sabbath observance in an era of religious upheaval--from the spiritual revolution in late 15th-century Russia, the religious rebellion of the Protestants, and a radical Sabbath revival in England. Learn even more amazing history and facts about the special gift God gave to humanity! Hosted by Hal Holbrook.

DV-SD4 $19.95

---

Seventh Day Part 5, The

In this final episode, Hal Holbrook shares today's view of God's holy day and projects the gift of Sabbath rest into the eternal future. Blending history and current events, this epic story travels around the world, from the Taiping revolutionaries in China to the millions of Indigenous Sabbatarians of Africa and the remote village of Paruima in South America. It also spans the centuries from Roger Williams' heroic stand for religious liberty in 17th-century America to the crisis of conscience f ...

DV-SD5 $19.95

---

Trials and Triumphs

by Crystal Earnhardt. Each week Norman, a commercial fisherman, drifts at sea for 24 hours and catches a triple amount of fish the next day. Teri lost her job and nearly every earthly possession, then wound up in court fighting for justice. What do they have in common? A desire to obey God's fourth commandment, regardless of the cost.

BK-ETT $4.95

---

Truth About The Sabbath, The

by Jim Pinkoski.
An illustrated study of the seventh-day Sabbath, from Creation to today.

BK-TAS $3.95

---

Truth Triumphant

B.G. Wilkinson. God has preserved His Word in miraculous ways throughout the centuries, using His faithful workers to spread the gospel even in the most dangerous times. An amazing narrative that will increase your faith for the coming time of trouble.

BK-TTRI $14.95

---

Waldenses: The Church in the Wilderness,

Eulend Borton. Now your children can understand the amazing true story of the faithful witness of the Waldenses in a format appropriate for them. They'll be amazed at God's great faithfulness even in the darkest of times.

BK-WTCI $8.95

1 - 19 of 19 found.

Select how many records to display

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Martin Luther - Before the Diet at Worms

A new emperor, Charles V, had ascended the throne of Germany, and the emissaries of Rome hastened to present their congratulations and induce the monarch to employ his power against the Reformation. On the other hand, the elector of Saxony, to whom Charles was in great degree indebted for his crown, entreated him to take no step against Luther until he should have granted him a hearing. The emperor was thus placed in a position of great perplexity and embarrassment. The papists would be satisfied with nothing short of an imperial edict sentencing Luther to death. The elector had declared firmly that "neither his imperial majesty nor any other person had shown that Luther's writings had been refuted;" therefore he requested "that Dr. Luther should be furnished with a safe-conduct, so that he might appear before a tribunal of learned, pious, and impartial judges."--D'Aubigne, b. 6, ch. 11.

The attention of all parties was now directed to the assembly of the German states which convened at Worms soon after the accession of Charles to the empire. There were important political questions and interests to be considered by this national council; for the first time the princes of Germany were to meet their youthful monarch in deliberative assembly. From all parts of the fatherland had come the dignitaries of church and state. Secular lords, highborn, powerful, and jealous of their hereditary rights; princely ecclesiastics, flushed with their conscious superiority in rank and power; courtly knights and their armed retainers; and ambassadors from foreign and distant lands,--all gathered at Worms. Yet in that vast assembly the subject that excited the deepest interest was the cause of the Saxon Reformer.

Charles had previously directed the elector to bring Luther with him to the Diet, assuring him of protection, and promising a free discussion, with competent persons, of the questions in dispute. Luther was anxious to appear before the emperor. His health was at this time much impaired; yet he wrote to the elector: "If I cannot go to Worms in good health, I will be carried there, sick as I am. For if the emperor calls me, I cannot doubt that it is the call of God Himself. If they desire to use violence against me, and that is very probable (for it is not for their instruction that they order me to appear), I place the matter in the Lord's hands. He still lives and reigns who preserved the three young men in the burning fiery furnace. If He will not save me, my life is of little consequence. Let us only prevent the gospel from being exposed to the scorn of the wicked, and let us shed our blood for it, for fear they should triumph. It is not for me to decide whether my life or my death will contribute most to the salvation of all. . . . You may expect everything from me. . . except flight and recantation. Fly I cannot, and still less retract."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 1.

As the news was circulated at Worms that Luther was to appear before the Diet, a general excitement was created. Aleander, the papal legate to whom the case had been specially entrusted, was alarmed and enraged. He saw that the result would be disastrous to the papal cause. To institute inquiry into a case in which the pope had already pronounced sentence of condemnation would be to cast contempt upon the authority of the sovereign pontiff. Furthermore, he was apprehensive that the eloquent and powerful arguments of this man might turn away many of the princes from the cause of the pope. He therefore, in the most urgent manner, remonstrated with Charles against Luther's appearance at Worms. About this time the bull declaring Luther's excommunication was published; and this, coupled with the representations of the legate, induced the emperor to yield. He wrote to the elector that if Luther would not retract, he must remain at Wittenberg.

Not content with this victory, Aleander labored with all the power and cunning at his command to secure Luther's condemnation. With a persistence worthy of a better cause, he urged the matter upon the attention of princes, prelates, and other members of the assembly, accusing the Reformer of "sedition, rebellion, impiety, and blasphemy." But the vehemence and passion manifested by the legate revealed too plainly the spirit by which he was actuated. "He is moved by hatred and vengeance," was the general remark, "much more than by zeal and piety."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 1. The majority of the Diet were more than ever inclined to regard Luther's cause with favor.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

With redoubled zeal Aleander urged upon the emperor the duty of executing the papal edicts. But under the laws of Germany this could not be done without the concurrence of the princes; and, overcome at last by the legate's importunity, Charles bade him present his case to the Diet. "It was a proud day for the nuncio. The assembly was a great one: the cause was even greater. Aleander was to plead for Rome, . . . the mother and mistress of all churches." He was to vindicate the principedom of Peter before the assembled principalities of Christendom. "He had the gift of eloquence, and he rose to the greatness of the occasion. Providence ordered it that Rome should appear and plead by the ablest of her orators in the presence of the most august of tribunals, before she was condemned." --Wyllie, b. 6, ch. 4. With some misgivings those who favored the Reformer looked forward to the effect of Aleander's speech. The elector of Saxony was not present, but by his direction some of his councilors attended to take notes of the nuncio's address.

With all the power of learning and eloquence, Aleander set himself to overthrow the truth. Charge after charge he hurled against Luther as an enemy of the church and the state, the living and the dead, clergy and laity, councils and private Christians. "In Luther's errors there is enough," he declared, to warrant the burning of "a hundred thousand heretics."

In conclusion he endeavored to cast contempt upon the adherents of the reformed faith: "What are all these Lutherans? A crew of insolent pedagogues, corrupt priests, dissolute monks, ignorant lawyers, and degraded nobles, with the common people whom they have misled and perverted. How far superior to them is the Catholic party in number, ability, and power! A unanimous decree from this illustrious assembly will enlighten the simple, warn the imprudent, decide the waverers, and give strength to the weak." --D'Aubigne, b. 7, ch. 3.

With such weapons the advocates of truth in every age have been attacked. The same arguments are still urged against all who dare to present, in opposition to established errors, the plain and direct teachings of God's word. "Who are these preachers of new doctrines?" exclaim those who desire a popular religion. "They are unlearned, few in numbers, and of the poorer class. Yet they claim to have the truth, and to be the chosen people of God. They are ignorant and deceived. How greatly superior in numbers and influence is our church! How many great and learned men are among us! How much more power is on our side!" These are the arguments that have a telling influence upon the world; but they are no more conclusive now than in the days of the Reformer.

The Reformation did not, as many suppose, end with Luther. It is to be continued to the close of this world's history. Luther had a great work to do in reflecting to others the light which God had permitted to shine upon him; yet he did not receive all the light which was to be given to the world. From that time to this, new light has been continually shining upon the Scriptures, and new truths have been constantly unfolding.

The legate's address made a deep impression upon the Diet. There was no Luther present, with the clear and convincing truths of God's word, to vanquish the papal champion. No attempt was made to defend the Reformer. There was manifest a general disposition not only to condemn him and the doctrines which he taught, but if possible to uproot the heresy. Rome had enjoyed the most favorable opportunity to defend her cause. All that she could say in her own vindication had been said. But the apparent victory was the signal of defeat. Henceforth the contrast between truth and error would be more clearly seen, as they should take the field in open warfare. Never from that day would Rome stand as secure as she had stood.

While most of the members of the Diet would not have hesitated to yield up Luther to the vengeance of Rome, many of them saw and deplored the existing depravity in the church, and desired a suppression of the abuses suffered by the German people in consequence of the corruption and greed of the hierarchy. The legate had presented the papal rule in the most favorable light. Now the Lord moved upon a member of the Diet to give a true delineation of the effects of papal tyranny. With noble firmness, Duke George of Saxony stood up in that princely assembly and specified with terrible exactness the deceptions and abominations of popery, and their dire results. In closing he said:

"These are some of the abuses that cry out against Rome. All shame has been put aside, and their only object is . . . money, money, money, . . . so that the preachers who should teach the truth, utter nothing but falsehoods, and are not only tolerated, but rewarded, because the greater their lies, the greater their gain. It is from this foul spring that such tainted waters flow. Debauchery stretches out the hand to avarice. . . . Alas, it is the scandal caused by the clergy that hurls so many poor souls into eternal condemnation. A general reform must be effected."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 4.

A more able and forcible denunciation of the papal abuses could not have been presented by Luther himself; and the fact that the speaker was a determined enemy of the Reformer's gave greater influence to his words.

Had the eyes of the assembly been opened, they would have beheld angels of God in the midst of them, shedding beams of light athwart the darkness of error and opening minds and hearts to the reception of truth. It was the power of the God of truth and wisdom that controlled even the adversaries of the reformation, and thus prepared the way for the great work about to be accomplished. Martin Luther was not present; but the voice of One greater than Luther had been heard in that assembly.

A committee was at once appointed by the Diet to prepare an enumeration of the papal oppressions that weighed so heavily on the German people. This list, containing a hundred and one specifications, was presented to the emperor, with a request that he would take immediate measures for the correction of these abuses. "What a loss of Christian souls," said the petitioners, "what depredations, what extortions, on account of the scandals by which the spiritual head of Christendom is surrounded! It is our duty to prevent the ruin and dishonor of our people. For this reason we most humbly but most urgently entreat you to order a general reformation, and to undertake its accomplishment."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 4.

The council now demanded the Reformer's appearance before them. Notwithstanding the entreaties, protests, and threats of Aleander, the emperor at last consented, and Luther was summoned to appear before the Diet. With the summons was issued a safe-conduct, ensuring his return to a place of security. These were borne to Wittenberg by a herald, who was commissioned to conduct him to Worms.

The friends of Luther were terrified and distressed. Knowing the prejudice and enmity against him, they feared that even his safe-conduct would not be respected, and they entreated him not to imperil his life. He replied: "The papists do not desire my coming to Worms, but my condemnation and my death. It matters not. Pray not for me, but for the word of God. . . . Christ will give me His Spirit to overcome these ministers of error. I despise them during my life; I shall triumph over them by my death. They are busy at Worms about compelling me to retract; and this shall be my retraction: I said formerly that the pope was Christ's vicar; now I assert that he is our Lord's adversary, and the devil's apostle."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 6.

Luther was not to make his perilous journey alone. Besides the imperial messenger, three of his firmest friends determined to accompany him. Melanchthon earnestly desired to join them. His heart was knit to Luther's, and he yearned to follow him, if need be, to prison or to death. But his entreaties were denied. Should Luther perish, the hopes of the Reformation must center upon his youthful collaborer. Said the Reformer as he parted from Melanchthon: "If I do not return, and my enemies put me to death, continue to teach, and stand fast in the truth. Labor in my stead. . . . If you survive, my death will be of little consequence."-- Ibid., b. 7, ch. 7. Students and citizens who had gathered to witness Luther's departure were deeply moved. A multitude whose hearts had been touched by the gospel, bade him farewell with weeping. Thus the Reformer and his companions set out from Wittenberg.

On the journey they saw that the minds of the people were oppressed by gloomy forebodings. At some towns no honors were proffered them. As they stopped for the night, a friendly priest expressed his fears by holding up before Luther the portrait of an Italian reformer who had suffered martyrdom. The next day they learned that Luther's writings had been condemned at Worms. Imperial messengers were proclaiming the emperor's decree and calling upon the people to bring the proscribed works to the magistrates. The herald, fearing for Luther's safety at the council, and thinking that already his resolution might be shaken, asked if he still wished to go forward. He answered: "Although interdicted in every city, I shall go on."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 7.

At Erfurt, Luther was received with honor. Surrounded by admiring crowds, he passed through the streets that he had often traversed with his beggar's wallet. He visited his convent cell, and thought upon the struggles through which the light now flooding Germany had been shed upon his soul. He was urged to preach. This he had been forbidden to do, but the herald granted him permission, and the friar who had once been made the drudge of the convent, now entered the pulpit.

To a crowded assembly he spoke from the words of Christ, "Peace be unto you." "Philosophers, doctors, and writers," he said, "have endeavored to teach men the way to obtain everlasting life, and they have not succeeded. I will now tell it to you: . . . God has raised one Man from the dead, the Lord Jesus Christ, that He might destroy death, extirpate sin, and shut the gates of hell. This is the work of salvation. . . . Christ has vanquished! this is the joyful news; and we are saved by His work, and not by our own. . . . Our Lord Jesus Christ said, 'Peace be unto you; behold My hands;' that is to say, Behold, O man! it is I, I alone, who have taken away thy sin, and ransomed thee; and now thou hast peace, saith the Lord."

He continued, showing that true faith will be manifested by a holy life. "Since God has saved us, let us so order our works that they may be acceptable to Him. Art thou rich? let thy goods administer to the necessities of the poor. Art thou poor? let thy services be acceptable to the rich. If thy labor is useful to thyself alone, the service that thou pretendest to render unto God is a lie."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 7.

The people listened as if spellbound. The bread of life was broken to those starving souls. Christ was lifted up before them as above popes, legates, emperors, and kings. Luther made no reference to his own perilous position. He did not seek to make himself the object of thought or sympathy. In the contemplation of Christ he had lost sight of self. He hid behind the Man of Calvary, seeking only to present Jesus as the sinner's Redeemer.

As the Reformer proceeded on his journey, he was everywhere regarded with great interest. An eager multitude thronged about him, and friendly voices warned him of the purpose of the Romanists. "They will burn you," said some, "and reduce your body to ashes, as they did with John Huss." Luther answered, "Though they should kindle a fire all the way from Worms to Wittenberg, the flames of which reached to heaven, I would walk through it in the name of the Lord; I would appear before them; I would enter the jaws of this behemoth, and break his teeth, confessing the Lord Jesus Christ."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 7.

The news of his approach to Worms created great commotion. His friends trembled for his safety; his enemies feared for the success of their cause. Strenuous efforts were made to dissuade him from entering the city. At the instigation of the papists he was urged to repair to the castle of a friendly knight, where, it was declared, all difficulties could be amicably adjusted. Friends endeavored to excite his fears by describing the dangers that threatened him. All their efforts failed. Luther, still unshaken, declared: "Even should there be as many devils in Worms as tiles on the housetops, still I would enter it."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 7.

Upon his arrival at Worms, a vast crowd flocked to the gates to welcome him. So great a concourse had not assembled to greet the emperor himself. The excitement was intense, and from the midst of the throng a shrill and plaintive voice chanted a funeral dirge as a warning to Luther of the fate that awaited him. "God will be my defense," said he, as he alighted from his carriage.

The papists had not believed that Luther would really venture to appear at Worms, and his arrival filled them with consternation. The emperor immediately summoned his councilors to consider what course should be pursued. One of the bishops, a rigid papist, declared: "We have long consulted on this matter. Let your imperial majesty get rid of this man at once. Did not Sigismund cause John Huss to be burnt? We are not bound either to give or to observe the safe-conduct of a heretic." "No," said the emperor, "we must keep our promise."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8. It was therefore decided that the Reformer should be heard.

All the city were eager to see this remarkable man, and a throng of visitors soon filled his lodgings. Luther had scarcely recovered from his recent illness; he was wearied from the journey, which had occupied two full weeks; he must prepare to meet the momentous events of the morrow, and he needed quiet and repose. But so great was the desire to see him that he had enjoyed only a few hours' rest when noblemen, knights, priests, and citizens gathered eagerly about him. Among these were many of the nobles who had so boldly demanded of the emperor a reform of ecclesiastical abuses and who, says Luther, "had all been freed by my gospel."--Martyn, page 393. Enemies, as well as friends, came to look upon the dauntless monk; but he received them with unshaken calmness, replying to all with dignity and wisdom. His bearing was firm and courageous. His pale, thin face, marked with the traces of toil and illness, wore a kindly and even joyous expression. The solemnity and deep earnestness of his words gave him a power that even his enemies could not wholly withstand. Both friends and foes were filled with wonder. Some were convinced that a divine influence attended him; others declared, as had the Pharisees concerning Christ: "He hath a devil."

On the following day Luther was summoned to attend the Diet. An imperial officer was appointed to conduct him to the hall of audience; yet it was with difficulty that he reached the place. Every avenue was crowded with spectators eager to look upon the monk who had dared resist the authority of the pope.

As he was about to enter the presence of his judges, an old general, the hero of many battles, said to him kindly: "Poor monk, poor monk, thou art now going to make a nobler stand than I or any other captains have ever made in the bloodiest of our battles. But if thy cause is just, and thou art sure of it, go forward in God's name, and fear nothing. God will not forsake thee."--D'Aubigne, b. 7, ch. 8.

At length Luther stood before the council. The emperor occupied the throne. He was surrounded by the most illustrious personages in the empire. Never had any man appeared in the presence of a more imposing assembly than that before which Martin Luther was to answer for his faith. "This appearance was of itself a signal victory over the papacy. The pope had condemned the man, and he was now standing before a tribunal which, by this very act, set itself above the pope. The pope had laid him under an interdict, and cut him off from all human society; and yet he was summoned in respectful language, and received before the most august assembly in the world. The pope had condemned him to perpetual silence, and he was now about to speak before thousands of attentive hearers drawn together from the farthest parts of Christendom. An immense revolution had thus been effected by Luther's instrumentality. Rome was already descending from her throne, and it was the voice of a monk that caused this humiliation."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8.

In the presence of that powerful and titled assembly the lowly born Reformer seemed awed and embarrassed. Several of the princes, observing his emotion, approached him, and one of them whispered: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul." Another said: "When ye shall be brought before governors and kings for My sake, it shall be given you, by the Spirit of your Father, what ye shall say." Thus the words of Christ were brought by the world's great men to strengthen His servant in the hour of trial.

Luther was conducted to a position directly in front of the emperor's throne. A deep silence fell upon the crowded assembly. Then an imperial officer arose and, pointing to a collection of Luther's writings, demanded that the Reformer answer two questions--whether he acknowledged them as his, and whether he proposed to retract the opinions which he had therein advanced. The titles of the books having been read, Luther replied that as to the first question, he acknowledged the books to be his. "As to the second," he said, "seeing that it is a question which concerns faith and the salvation of souls, and in which the word of God, the greatest and most precious treasure either in heaven or earth, is involved, I should act imprudently were I to reply without reflection. I might affirm less than the circumstance demands, or more than truth requires, and so sin against this saying of Christ: 'Whosoever shall deny Me before men, him will I also deny before My Father which is in heaven.' [Matthew 10:33.] For this reason I entreat your imperial majesty, with all humility, to allow me time, that I may answer without offending against the word of God."--D'Aubigne, b. 7, ch. 8.

In making this request, Luther moved wisely. His course convinced the assembly that he did not act from passion or impulse. Such calmness and self-command, unexpected in one who had shown himself bold and uncompromising, added to his power, and enabled him afterward to answer with a prudence, decision, wisdom, and dignity that surprised and disappointed his adversaries, and rebuked their insolence and pride.

The next day he was to appear to render his final answer. For a time his heart sank within him as he contemplated the forces that were combined against the truth. His faith faltered; fearfulness and trembling came upon him, and horror overwhelmed him. Dangers multiplied before him; his enemies seemed about to triumph, and the powers of darkness to prevail. Clouds gathered about him and seemed to separate him from God. He longed for the assurance that the Lord of hosts would be with him. In anguish of spirit he threw himself with his face upon the earth and poured out those broken, heart-rending cries, which none but God can fully understand.

"O almighty and everlasting God," he pleaded, "how terrible is this world! Behold, it openeth its mouth to swallow me up, and I have so little trust in Thee. . . . If it is only in the strength of this world that I must put my trust, all is over. . . . My last hour is come, my condemnation has been pronounced. . . . O God, do Thou help me against all the wisdom of the world. Do this, . . . Thou alone; . . . for this is not my work, but Thine. I have nothing to do here, nothing to contend for with these great ones of the world. . . . But the cause is Thine, . . . and it is a righteous and eternal cause. O Lord, help me! Faithful and unchangeable God, in no man do I place my trust. . . . All that is of man is uncertain; all that cometh of man fails. . . . Thou hast chosen me for this work. . . . Stand at my side, for the sake of Thy well-beloved Jesus Christ, who is my defense, my shield, and my strong tower."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8.

An all-wise Providence had permitted Luther to realize his peril, that he might not trust to his own strength and rush presumptuously into danger. Yet it was not the fear of personal suffering, a dread of torture or death, which seemed immediately impending, that overwhelmed him with its terror. He had come to the crisis, and he felt his insufficiency to meet it. Through his weakness the cause of truth might suffer loss. Not for his own safety, but for the triumph of the gospel did he wrestle with God. Like Israel's, in that night struggle beside the lonely stream, was the anguish and conflict of his soul. Like Israel, he prevailed with God. In his utter helplessness his faith fastened upon Christ, the mighty Deliverer. He was strengthened with the assurance that he would not appear alone before the council. Peace returned to his soul, and he rejoiced that he was permitted to uplift the word of God before the rulers of the nations.

With his mind stayed upon God, Luther prepared for the struggle before him. He thought upon the plan of his answer, examined passages in his own writings, and drew from the Holy Scriptures suitable proofs to sustain his positions. Then, laying his left hand on the Sacred Volume, which was open before him, he lifted his right hand to heaven and vowed "to remain faithful to the gospel, and freely to confess his faith, even should he seal his testimony with his blood."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8.

When he was again ushered into the presence of the Diet, his countenance bore no trace of fear or embarrassment. Calm and peaceful, yet grandly brave and noble, he stood as God's witness among the great ones of the earth. The imperial officer now demanded his decision as to whether he desired to retract his doctrines. Luther made his answer in a subdued and humble tone, without violence or passion. His demeanor was diffident and respectful; yet he manifested a confidence and joy that surprised the assembly.

"Most serene emperor, illustrious princes, gracious lords," said Luther, "I appear before you this day, in conformity with the order given me yesterday, and by God's mercies I conjure your majesty and your august highnesses to listen graciously to the defense of a cause which I am assured is just and true. If, through ignorance, I should transgress the usages and proprieties of courts, I entreat you to pardon me; for I was not brought up in the palaces of kings, but in the seclusion of a convent."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8.

Then, proceeding to the question, he stated that his published works were not all of the same character. In some he had treated of faith and good works, and even his enemies declared them not only harmless but profitable. To retract these would be to condemn truths which all parties confessed. The second class consisted of writings exposing the corruptions and abuses of the papacy. To revoke these works would strengthen the tyranny of Rome and open a wider door to many and great impieties. In the third class of his books he had attacked individuals who had defended existing evils. Concerning these he freely confessed that he had been more violent than was becoming. He did not claim to be free from fault; but even these books he could not revoke, for such a course would embolden the enemies of truth, and they would then take occasion to crush God's people with still greater cruelty.

"Yet I am but a mere man, and not God," he continued; "I shall therefore defend myself as Christ did: 'If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil.' . . . By the mercy of God, I conjure you, most serene emperor, and you, most illustrious princes, and all men of every degree, to prove from the writings of the prophets and apostles that I have erred. As soon as I am convinced of this, I will retract every error, and be the first to lay hold of my books and throw them into the fire.

"What I have just said plainly shows, I hope, that I have carefully weighed and considered the dangers to which I expose myself; but far from being dismayed, I rejoice to see that the gospel is now, as in former times, a cause of trouble and dissension. This is the character, this is the destiny, of the word of God. 'I came not to send peace on earth, but a sword,' said Jesus Christ. God is wonderful and terrible in His counsels; beware lest, by presuming to quench dissensions, you should persecute the holy word of God, and draw down upon yourselves a frightful deluge of insurmountable dangers, of present disasters, and eternal desolation. . . . I might quote many examples from the oracles of God. I might speak of the Pharaohs, the kings of Babylon, and those of Israel, whose labors never more effectually contributed to their own destruction than when they sought by counsels, to all appearance most wise, to strengthen their dominion. 'God removeth mountains, and they know it not.'"--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8.

Luther had spoken in German; he was now requested to repeat the same words in Latin. Though exhausted by the previous effort, he complied, and again delivered his speech, with the same clearness and energy as at the first. God's providence directed in this matter. The minds of many of the princes were so blinded by error and superstition that at the first delivery they did not see the force of Luther's reasoning; but the repetition enabled them to perceive clearly the points presented.

Those who stubbornly closed their eyes to the light, and determined not to be convinced of the truth, were enraged at the power of Luther's words. As he ceased speaking, the spokesman of the Diet said angrily: "You have not answered the question put to you. . . . You are required to give a clear and precise answer. . . . Will you, or will you not, retract?"

The Reformer answered: "Since your most serene majesty and your high mightinesses require from me a clear, simple, and precise answer, I will give you one, and it is this: I cannot submit my faith either to the pope or to the councils, because it is clear as the day that they have frequently erred and contradicted each other. Unless therefore I am convinced by the testimony of Scripture or by the clearest reasoning, unless I am persuaded by means of the passages I have quoted, and unless they thus render my conscience bound by the word of God, I cannot and I will not retract, for it is unsafe for a Christian to speak against his conscience. Here I stand, I can do no other; may God help me. Amen." --Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8.

Thus stood this righteous man upon the sure foundation of the word of God. The light of heaven illuminated his countenance. His greatness and purity of character, his peace and joy of heart, were manifest to all as he testified against the power of error and witnessed to the superiority of that faith that overcomes the world.

The whole assembly were for a time speechless with amazement. At his first answer Luther had spoken in a low tone, with a respectful, almost submissive bearing. The Romanists had interpreted this as evidence that his courage was beginning to fail. They regarded the request for delay as merely the prelude to his recantation. Charles himself, noting, half contemptuously, the monk's worn frame, his plain attire, and the simplicity of his address, had declared: "This monk will never make a heretic of me." The courage and firmness which he now displayed, as well as the power and clearness of his reasoning, filled all parties with surprise. The emperor, moved to admiration, exclaimed: "This monk speaks with an intrepid heart and unshaken courage." Many of the German princes looked with pride and joy upon this representative of their nation.

The partisans of Rome had been worsted; their cause appeared in a most unfavorable light. They sought to maintain their power, not by appealing to the Scriptures, but by a resort to threats, Rome's unflinching argument. Said the spokesman of the Diet: "If you do not retract, the emperor and the states of the empire will consult what course to adopt against an incorrigible heretic."

Luther's friend, who had with great joy listened to his noble defense, trembled at these words; but the doctor himself said calmly: "May God be my helper, for I can retract nothing."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 8.

He was directed to withdraw from the Diet while the princes consulted together. It was felt that a great crisis had come. Luther's persistent refusal to submit might affect the history of the church for ages. It was decided to give him one more opportunity to retract. For the last time he was brought into the assembly. Again the question was put, whether he would renounce his doctrines. "I have no other reply to make," he said, "than that which I have already made." It was evident that he could not be induced, either by promises or threats, to yield to the mandate of Rome.

The papal leaders were chagrined that their power, which had caused kings and nobles to tremble, should be thus despised by a humble monk; they longed to make him feel their wrath by torturing his life away. But Luther, understanding his danger, had spoken to all with Christian dignity and calmness. His words had been free from pride, passion, and misrepresentation. He had lost sight of himself, and the great men surrounding him, and felt only that he was in the presence of One infinitely superior to popes, prelates, kings, and emperors. Christ had spoken through Luther's testimony with a power and grandeur that for the time inspired both friends and foes with awe and wonder. The Spirit of God had been present in that council, impressing the hearts of the chiefs of the empire. Several of the princes boldly acknowledged the justice of Luther's cause. Many were convinced of the truth; but with some the impressions received were not lasting. There was another class who did not at the time express their convictions, but who, having searched the Scriptures for themselves, at a future time became fearless supporters of the Reformation.

The elector Frederick had looked forward anxiously to Luther's appearance before the Diet, and with deep emotion he listened to his speech. With joy and pride he witnessed the doctor's courage, firmness, and self-possession, and determined to stand more firmly in his defense. He contrasted the parties in contest, and saw that the wisdom of popes, kings, and prelates had been brought to naught by the power of truth. The papacy had sustained a defeat which would be felt among all nations and in all ages.

As the legate perceived the effect produced by Luther's speech, he feared, as never before, for the security of the Romish power, and resolved to employ every means at his command to effect the Reformer's overthrow. With all the eloquence and diplomatic skill for which he was so eminently distinguished, he represented to the youthful emperor the folly and danger of sacrificing, in the cause of an insignificant monk, the friendship and support of the powerful see of Rome.

His words were not without effect. On the day following Luther's answer, Charles caused a message to be presented to the Diet, announcing his determination to carry out the policy of his predecessors to maintain and protect the Catholic religion. Since Luther had refused to renounce his errors, the most vigorous measures should be employed against him and the heresies he taught. "A single monk, misled by his own folly, has risen against the faith of Christendom. To stay such impiety, I will sacrifice my kingdoms, my treasures, my friends, my body, my blood, my soul, and my life. I am about to dismiss the Augustine Luther, forbidding him to cause the least disorder among the people; I shall then proceed against him and his adherents as contumacious heretics, by excommunication, by interdict, and by every means calculated to destroy them. I call on the members of the states to behave like faithful Christians."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 9. Nevertheless the emperor declared that Luther's safe-conduct must be respected, and that before proceedings against him could be instituted, he must be allowed to reach his home in safety.

Two conflicting opinions were now urged by the members of the Diet. The emissaries and representatives of the pope again demanded that the Reformer's safe-conduct should be disregarded. "The Rhine," they said, "should receive his ashes, as it had received those of John Huss a century ago."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 9. But princes of Germany, though themselves papists and avowed enemies to Luther, protested against such a breach of public faith, as a stain upon the honor of the nation. They pointed to the calamities which had followed the death of Huss, and declared that they dared not call down upon Germany, and upon the head of their youthful emperor, a repetition of those terrible evils.

Charles himself, in answer to the base proposal, said: "Though honor and faith should be banished from all the world, they ought to find a refuge in the hearts of princes." --Ibid., b. 7, ch. 9. He was still further urged by the most bitter of Luther's papal enemies to deal with the Reformer as Sigismund had dealt with Huss--abandon him to the mercies of the church; but recalling the scene when Huss in public assembly had pointed to his chains and reminded the monarch of his plighted faith, Charles V declared: "I should not like to blush like Sigismund."--Lenfant, vol. 1, p. 422.

Yet Charles had deliberately rejected the truths presented by Luther. "I am firmly resolved to imitate the example of my ancestors," wrote the monarch.--D'Aubigne, b. 7, ch. 9. He had decided that he would not step out of the path of custom, even to walk in the ways of truth and righteousness. Because his fathers did, he would uphold the papacy, with all its cruelty and corruption. Thus he took his position, refusing to accept any light in advance of what his fathers had received, or to perform any duty that they had not performed.

There are many at the present day thus clinging to the customs and traditions of their fathers. When the Lord sends them additional light, they refuse to accept it, because, not having been granted to their fathers, it was not received by them. We are not placed where our fathers were; consequently our duties and responsibilities are not the same as theirs. We shall not be approved of God in looking to the example of our fathers to determine our duty instead of searching the word of truth for ourselves. Our responsibility is greater than was that of our ancestors. We are accountable for the light which they received, and which was handed down as an inheritance for us, and we are accountable also for the additional light which is now shining upon us from the word of God.

Said Christ of the unbelieving Jews: "If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloak for their sin." John 15:22. The same divine power had spoken through Luther to the emperor and princes of Germany. And as the light shone forth from God's word, His Spirit pleaded for the last time with many in that assembly. As Pilate, centuries before, permitted pride and popularity to close his heart against the world's Redeemer; as the trembling Felix bade the messenger of truth, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee;" as the proud Agrippa confessed, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian" (Acts 24:25; 26:28), yet turned away from the Heaven-sent message--so had Charles V, yielding to the dictates of worldly pride and policy, decided to reject the light of truth.

Rumors of the designs against Luther were widely circulated, causing great excitement throughout the city. The Reformer had made many friends, who, knowing the treacherous cruelty of Rome toward all who dared expose her corruptions, resolved that he should not be sacrificed. Hundreds of nobles pledged themselves to protect him. Not a few openly denounced the royal message of evincing a weak submission to the controlling power of Rome. On the gates of houses and in public places, placards were posted, some condemning and others sustaining Luther. On one of these were written merely the significant words of the wise man: "Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child." Ecclesiastes 10:16. The popular enthusiasm in Luther's favor throughout all Germany convinced both the emperor and the Diet that any injustice shown him would endanger the peace of the empire and even the stability of the throne.

Frederick of Saxony maintained a studied reserve, carefully concealing his real feelings toward the Reformer, while at the same time he guarded him with tireless vigilance, watching all his movements and all those of his enemies. But there were many who made no attempt to conceal their sympathy with Luther. He was visited by princes, counts, barons, and other persons of distinction, both lay and ecclesiastical. "The doctor's little room," wrote Spalatin, "could not contain all the visitors who presented themselves."--Martyn, vol. 1, p. 404. The people gazed upon him as if he were more than human. Even those who had no faith in his doctrines could not but admire that lofty integrity which led him to brave death rather than violate his conscience.

Earnest efforts were made to obtain Luther's consent to a compromise with Rome. Nobles and princes represented to him that if he persisted in setting up his own judgment against that of the church and the councils he would soon be banished from the empire and would have no defense. To this appeal Luther answered: "The gospel of Christ cannot be preached without offense. . . . Why then should the fear or apprehension of danger separate me from the Lord, and from that divine word which alone is truth? No; I would rather give up my body, my blood, and my life."--D'Aubigne, b. 7, ch. 10.

Again he was urged to submit to the judgment of the emperor, and then he would have nothing to fear. "I consent," said he in reply, "with all my heart, that the emperor, the princes, and even the meanest Christian, should examine and judge my works; but on one condition, that they take the word of God for their standard. Men have nothing to do but to obey it. Do not offer violence to my conscience, which is bound and chained up with the Holy Scriptures."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 10.

To another appeal he said: "I consent to renounce my safe-conduct. I place my person and my life in the emperor's hands, but the word of God--never!"--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 10. He stated his willingness to submit to the decision of a general council, but only on condition that the council be required to decide according to the Scriptures. "In what concerns the word of God and the faith," he added, "every Christian is as good a judge as the pope, though supported by a million councils, can be for him."--Martyn, vol. 1, p. 410. Both friends and foes were at last convinced that further effort for reconciliation would be useless.

Had the Reformer yielded a single point, Satan and his hosts would have gained the victory. But his unwavering firmness was the means of emancipating the church, and beginning a new and better era. The influence of this one man, who dared to think and act for himself in religious matters, was to affect the church and the world, not only in his own time, but in all future generations. His firmness and fidelity would strengthen all, to the close of time, who should pass through a similar experience. The power and majesty of God stood forth above the counsel of men, above the mighty power of Satan.

Luther was soon commanded by the authority of the emperor to return home, and he knew that this notice would be speedily followed by his condemnation. Threatening clouds overhung his path; but as he departed from Worms, his heart was filled with joy and praise. "The devil himself," said he, "guarded the pope's citadel; but Christ has made a wide breach in it, and Satan was constrained to confess that the Lord is mightier than he."--D'Aubigne, b. 7, ch. 11.

After his departure, still desirous that his firmness should not be mistaken for rebellion, Luther wrote to the emperor. "God, who is the searcher of hearts, is my witness," he said, "that I am ready most earnestly to obey your majesty, in honor or in dishonor, in life or in death, and with no exception save the word of God, by which man lives. In all the affairs of this present life, my fidelity shall be unshaken, for here to lose or to gain is of no consequence to salvation. But when eternal interests are concerned, God wills not that man should submit unto man. For such submission in spiritual matters is a real worship, and ought to be rendered solely to the Creator."--Ibid., b. 7, ch. 11.

On the journey from Worms, Luther's reception was even more flattering than during his progress thither. Princely ecclesiastics welcomed the excommunicated monk, and civil rulers honored the man whom the emperor had denounced. He was urged to preach, and, notwithstanding the imperial prohibition, he again entered the pulpit. "I never pledged myself to chain up the word of God," he said, "nor will I." --Martyn, vol. 1, p. 420.

He had not been long absent from Worms, when the papists prevailed upon the emperor to issue an edict against him. In this decree Luther was denounced as "Satan himself under the form of a man and dressed in a monk's frock."-- D'Aubigne, b. 7, ch. 11. It was commanded that as soon as his safe-conduct should expire, measures be taken to stop his work. All persons were forbidden to harbor him, to give him food or drink, or by word or act, in public or private, to aid or abet him. He was to be seized wherever he might be, and delivered to the authorities. His adherents also were to be imprisoned and their property confiscated. His writings were to be destroyed, and, finally, all who should dare to act contrary to this decree were included in its condemnation. The elector of Saxony and the princes most friendly to Luther had left Worms soon after his departure, and the emperor's decree received the sanction of the Diet. Now the Romanists were jubilant. They considered the fate of the Reformation sealed.

God had provided a way of escape for His servant in this hour of peril. A vigilant eye had followed Luther's movements, and a true and noble heart had resolved upon his rescue. It was plain that Rome would be satisfied with nothing short of his death; only by concealment could he be preserved from the jaws of the lion. God gave wisdom to Frederick of Saxony to devise a plan for the Reformer's preservation. With the co-operation of true friends the elector's purpose was carried out, and Luther was effectually hidden from friends and foes. Upon his homeward journey he was seized, separated from his attendants, and hurriedly conveyed through the forest to the castle of Wartburg, an isolated mountain fortress. Both his seizure and his concealment were so involved in mystery that even Frederick himself for a long time knew not whither he had been conducted. This ignorance was not without design; so long as the elector knew nothing of Luther's whereabouts, he could reveal nothing. He satisfied himself that the Reformer was safe, and with this knowledge he was content.

Spring, summer, and autumn passed, and winter came, and Luther still remained a prisoner. Aleander and his partisans exulted as the light of the gospel seemed about to be extinguished. But instead of this, the Reformer was filling his lamp from the storehouse of truth; and its light was to shine forth with brighter radiance.

In the friendly security of the Wartburg, Luther for a time rejoiced in his release from the heat and turmoil of battle. But he could not long find satisfaction in quiet and repose. Accustomed to a life of activity and stern conflict, he could ill endure to remain inactive. In those solitary days the condition of the church rose up before him, and he cried in despair. "Alas! there is no one in this latter day of His anger, to stand like a wall before the Lord, and save Israel!"--Ibid., b. 9, ch. 2. Again, his thoughts returned to himself, and he feared being charged with cowardice in withdrawing from the contest. Then he reproached himself for his indolence and self-indulgence. Yet at the same time he was daily accomplishing more than it seemed possible for one man to do. His pen was never idle. While his enemies flattered themselves that he was silenced, they were astonished and confused by tangible proof that he was still active. A host of tracts, issuing from his pen, circulated throughout Germany. He also performed a most important service for his countrymen by translating the New Testament into the German tongue. From his rocky Patmos he continued for nearly a whole year to proclaim the gospel and rebuke the sins and errors of the times.

But it was not merely to preserve Luther from the wrath of his enemies, nor even to afford him a season of quiet for these important labors, that God had withdrawn His servant from the stage of public life. There were results more precious than these to be secured. In the solitude and obscurity of his mountain retreat, Luther was removed from earthly supports and shut out from human praise. He was thus saved from the pride and self-confidence that are so often caused by success. By suffering and humiliation he was prepared again to walk safely upon the dizzy heights to which he had been so suddenly exalted.

As men rejoice in the freedom which the truth brings them, they are inclined to extol those whom God has employed to break the chains of error and superstition. Satan seeks to divert men's thoughts and affections from God, and to fix them upon human agencies; he leads them to honor the mere instrument and to ignore the Hand that directs all the events of providence. Too often religious leaders who are thus praised and revered lose sight of their dependence upon God and are led to trust in themselves. As a result they seek to control the minds and consciences of the people, who are disposed to look to them for guidance instead of looking to the word of God. The work of reform is often retarded because of this spirit indulged by its supporters. From this danger, God would guard the cause of the Reformation. He desired that work to receive, not the impress of man, but that of God. The eyes of men had been turned to Luther as the expounder of the truth; he was removed that all eyes might be directed to the eternal Author of truth.

To read this in its original source see chapter #8 of The Great Controversy (a .pdf viewer is required)

Back to the 15th Century of The Sabbath in History

^ Top

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History |
Sabbath Resources | Home

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

NOW, DOES IT MAKE ANY SENSE THAT MEN CAN COME ALONG AND ALTER GOD'S TEN COMMANDMENTS ?? THE LORD HIMSELF BLESSED AND SANCTIFIED THE SEVENTH DAY, YET MODERN CHRISTIANS IGNORE SATURDAY AND WORSHIP ON SUNDAY INSTEAD!

LET'S PUT IT THIS WAY: SUPPOSE YOUR DOCTOR OFFICIALLY TOLD YOU THAT HE'D SEE YOU EACH MONDAY FOR THE REST OF YOUR LIFE — WOULD YOU THINK IT WAS RIGHT TO CHANGE THE APPOINTMENT ON YOUR OWN ACCORD MERELY BECAUSE IT WAS "CONVENIENT" WITH YOU, WITHOUT EVER RECEIVING YOUR DOCTOR'S APPROVAL ??

WOULD THIS WORK ?

NO.

OR THIS: SAY THAT YOUR BIRTHDAY WAS ON JANUARY 7th, BUT YOU INSISTED ON CELEBRATING IT ON JANUARY 1st —

HAVE YOU SUCCEEDED IN ACTUALLY CHANGING YOUR BIRTH DAY JUST BECAUSE YOU OPT TO CELEBRATE IT ON ANOTHER DAY ??...

OF COURSE NOT !!

IT'S THE SAME THING HERE WITH THE "SABBATH" — THERE ARE LITERALLY MILLIONS OF CHRISTIANS WHO THINK THAT THE SABBATH HAS BEEN LEGITIMATELY CHANGED FROM SATURDAY OVER TO SUNDAY... BUT HAS IT REALLY ??

POINT :

THE BIBLE IS A COLLECTION OF 66 SEPARATE WRITINGS, 66 SEPARATE BOOKS, AND FROM BEGINNING TO END, FROM GENESIS TO REVELATION, THE HOLY SCRIPTURES SPEAK CONSTANTLY OF THE IMPORTANCE OF GOD'S HOLY SABBATH!

EVERY TIME WE REST UPON THE SEVENTH DAY, AS GOD DID AT CREATION, WE COMMEMORATE THAT GRAND EVENT !!

POINT : THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH WAS COMMANDED BY THE VOICE OF THE LIVING GOD! (DEUTERONOMY 4:12-15)

POINT : IT IS THE SIGN OF THE TRUE GOD, BY WHICH WE ARE TO KNOW HIM FROM FALSE GODS! "I AM THE LORD YOUR GOD; WALK IN MY STATUTES, AND KEEP MY JUDGMENTS, AND DO THEM; AND HALLOW MY SABBATHS, AND THEY SHALL BE A SIGN BETWEEN ME AND YOU, THAT YE MAY KNOW THAT I AM THE LORD YOUR GOD." (EZE. 20:19-20)

POINT : INSTEAD OF ABOLISHING THE SABBATH, JESUS CAREFULLY TAUGHT HOW IT SHOULD BE OBSERVED !... (MATT. 12:1-13)

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

34) THERE IS NOT AN INTIMATION THAT THEY EVER HELD A MEETING UPON IT BEFORE OR AFTER THAT. 35) IT WAS NOT THEIR CUSTOM TO MEET ON THAT DAY. 36) THERE WAS NO REQUIREMENT TO BREAK BREAD ON THAT DAY. 37) WE HAVE AN ACCOUNT OF ONLY ONE INSTANCE IN WHICH IT WAS DONE. (ACTS 20:7) (BUT ACTS 2:46 SAYS THEY BROKE BREAD DAILY!) (NOTICE ALSO: ACTS 20:7 MENTIONS NOTHING ABOUT WINE, SO THEY MUST NOT HAVE HELD A FULL COMMUNION SERVICE!) 38) JESUS CELEBRATED IT ON THURSDAY EVENING (LUKE 22), NEVER ON SUNDAY. 39) THE BIBLE NOWHERE SAYS THAT THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK COMMEMORATES THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST. BAPTISM COMMEMORATES THE BURIAL AND RESURRECTION OF JESUS! (ROMANS 6:3-5) 40) FINALLY, THE NEW TESTAMENT IS TOTALLY SILENT WITH REGARD TO ANY CHANGE OF THE SABBATH DAY OR ANY SACREDNESS FOR THE FIRST DAY.

THERE YOU HAVE IT, 40 BIBLE FACTS CONCERNING SUNDAY, THE DAY THE BIBLE REFERS TO AS "THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK"! SO!

THE QUESTION WE NEED TO ASK IS THIS:
IF THE BIBLE NEVER AUTHORIZED "SUNDAY"
AS THE WEEKLY DAY OF WORSHIP,

WHO DID ??

— BEFORE I ANSWER THIS EXTREMELY IMPORTANT QUESTION, I WANT YOU TO AGAIN REVIEW THOSE 40 POINTS. EACH AND EVERY ONE OF YOU SHOULD BE READING YOUR BIBLE TO VERIFY EVERYTHING THAT I OR ANYONE ELSE TELLS YOU IN REGARD TO GOD'S HOLY WORD!

AND:

IF YOU'RE GOING TO BELIEVE
IN JESUS CHRIST, YOU HAVE TO SPEND TIME IN HIS WORD!
AND REALIZE THAT THE BIBLE IS THE INSPIRED WORD OF GOD !...

GOD'S WORD IS TRUTH, IT IS AS ETERNAL AS GOD HIMSELF! ACCORDINGLY, WHOEVER TURNS AGAINST GOD'S WORD COMMITTS A GRIEVOUS ERROR ...

NOW I'LL ANSWER THAT QUESTION...

//

Table of Contents < - Previous Next - >

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH CHANGED THE WEEKLY SABBATH FROM SATURDAY OVER TO SUNDAY...

THIS CHANGE CAME ABOUT IN THE 200-400 A.D. TIME PERIOD! AROUND 200 A.D. THERE AROSE A DISPUTE OVER PICKING ONE DAY DURING THE YEAR TO HONOR CHRIST'S RESURRECTION — AND ROME PICKED A SUNDAY FOR THIS! LATER, WHEN LENT WAS BROUGHT INTO THE CHURCH, EACH SUNDAY DURING THE FORTY DAYS WAS DESIGNATED TO HONOR THE RESURRECTION.

THEN, IN THE 4th CENTURY, THE CHURCH MADE THE DECISION TO KEEP EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR!

... AND TO STOP CHRISTIANS FROM "JUDAIZING" ON THE SEVENTH DAY OF THE WEEK, THE POWERFUL ROMAN CHURCH PASSED

LAWS TO ENSURE SUNDAY OBSERVANCE — ON PAIN OF DEATH!

THUS THEY FORCEFULLY ANNULLED THE SABBATH DAY!

(NOW, REMEMBER: THIS IS THE SAME CHURCH THAT INSTIGATED THE INQUISITION, TO ENSURE "TOTAL OBEDIENCE"! IT'S A WELL-KNOWN HISTORICAL FACT THAT 50-100 MILLION SUPPOSED "HERETICS" WERE PUT TO DEATH BY THE CHURCH OF ROME DURING THE MORE THAN 12 CENTURIES THAT THEY DOMINATED EUROPE! *)

* NOT UNTIL 1965 DID THE CHURCH OF ROME STOP BRANDING PROTESTANTS AS "HERETICS." THEY NOW DEEM IT FIT TO REFER TO PROTESTANTS AS "SEPARATED BROTHERN."

13

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Table of Contents < - Previous Next - >

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

THERE WAS A STRONG PARTY EVEN OF THE CATHOLICS WITHIN THE COUNCIL WHO WERE IN FAVOR OF ABANDONING "TRADITION" AND ADOPTING THE SCRIPTURES ONLY AS THE STANDARD OF AUTHORITY! THIS VIEW WAS SO DECIDEDLY HELD IN THE DEBATES THAT THE POPE'S LEGATES ACTUALLY WROTE TO HIM THAT THERE WAS "A STRONG TENDENCY TO SET ASIDE TRADITION ALTOGETHER AND TO MAKE SCRIPTURE THE SOLE STANDARD OF APPEAL." BUT TO DO THIS WOULD MANIFESTLY BE A BIG STEP TOWARD JUSTIFYING THE CLAIMS OF THE PROTESTANTS...

BY THIS CRISIS THERE WAS DEVELOPED WITHIN THE ULTRA-CATHOLIC PORTION OF THE COUNCIL THE TASK OF CONVINCING THE OTHERS THAT "SCRIPTURE AND TRADITION" WERE THE ONLY SURE GROUND TO STAND UPON — IF THIS COULD BE DONE, THE COUNCIL COULD BE CONVINCED TO ISSUE A DECREE CONDEMNING THE REFORMATION, OTHERWISE NOT...

THE QUESTION WAS DEBATED DAY AFTER DAY, UNTIL THE COUNCIL WAS BROUGHT TO A STAND-STILL! FINALLY, AFTER A LONG AND INTENSIVE DEBATE, THE ARCHBISHOP OF REGGIO INTRODUCED INTO THE COUNCIL SUBSTANTIALLY THE FOLLOWING ARGUMENT:

THE PROTESTANTS CLAIM TO STAND UPON "THE WRITTEN WORD ONLY" — THEY PROFESS TO HOLD THE SCRIPTURE ALONE AS THE STANDARD OF FAITH. THEY JUSTIFY THEIR REVOLT BY THE PLEA THAT THE CHURCH HAS APOSTATIZED FROM THE WRITTEN WORD AND FOLLOWS TRADITION. NOW THE PROTESTANTS' CLAIM THAT THEY STAND UPON THE WRITTEN WORD ONLY, IS NOT TRUE. THEIR PROFESSION OF HOLDING "THE SCRIPTURE ALONE AS THE STANDARD OF FAITH" IS FALSE!

THE PROOF:

THE WRITTEN WORD EXPLICITLY ENJOINS THE OBSERVANCE OF THE SEVENTH DAY AS THE SABBATH! THEY DO NOT OBSERVE THE SEVENTH DAY, BUT REJECT IT! IF THEY DO TRULY HOLD THE SCRIPTURE ALONE AS THEIR STANDARD, THEY WOULD BE OBSERVING THE SEVENTH DAY AS IS ENJOINED IN THE SCRIPTURE THROUGHOUT! YET THEY NOT ONLY REJECT THE OBSERVANCE OF THE SABBATH ENJOINED IN THE WRITTEN WORD, BUT THEY HAVE ADOPTED AND DO PRACTICE THE OBSERVANCE OF SUNDAY, FOR WHICH THEY HAVE ONLY THE TRADITION OF THE CHURCH... CONSEQUENTLY THE CLAIM OF "SCRIPTURE ALONE AS THE STANDARD" FAILS, AND THE DOCTRINE OF "SCRIPTURE AND TRADITION" AS ESSENTIAL, IS FULLY ESTABLISHED, THE PROTESTANTS THEMSELVES BEING THE JUDGES!

BY THIS OBSERVATION THE ARCHBISHOP SCORED A TELLING POINT, FOR THE PROTESTANTS' OWN STATEMENT OF FAITH (THE AUGSBURG CONFESSION OF 1530) HAD CLEARLY ADMITTED THAT "THE OBSERVANCE OF THE LORD'S DAY" HAD BEEN APPOINTED BY THE CHURCH ONLY!

THE ARGUMENT WAS HAILED IN THE COUNCIL AS PURE INSPIRATION — THE PARTY FOR "SCRIPTURE ALONE" SURRENDERED... AND THE COUNCIL AT ONCE UNANIMOUSLY CONDEMNED PROTESTANTISM AND THE WHOLE REFORMATION AS ONLY AN UNWARRANTED REVOLT FROM THE COMMUNION AND AUTHORITY OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH...

(THIS INFORMATION IS FROM THE ROME'S CHALLENGE PAMPHLET, PAGES 25-27.)

21

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

ROME'S CHALLENGE

HERE ARE QUOTES FROM WHAT THE EDITOR OF THE CATHOLIC MIRROR WROTE :

- "IN THE OLD TESTAMENT, REFERENCE IS MADE 126 TIMES TO THE SABBATH, AND ALL THESE TEXTS CONSPIRE HARMONIOUSLY IN VOICING THE WILL OF GOD COMMANDED THE SEVENTH DAY TO BE KEPT, BECAUSE GOD HIMSELF FIRST KEPT IT, MAKING IT OBLIGATORY ON ALL AS 'A PERPETUAL COVENANT.' NOR CAN WE IMAGINE ANY ONE FOOLHARDY ENOUGH TO QUESTION THE IDENTITY OF SATURDAY WITH THE SABBATH OR SEVENTH DAY, SEEING THAT THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL HAVE BEEN KEEPING THE SATURDAY FROM THE GIVING OF THE LAW, A.M. 2514 TO A.D. 1893, A PERIOD OF 3383 YEARS..." *
- "EXAMINING THE NEW TESTAMENT FROM COVER TO COVER, CRITICALLY, WE FIND THE SABBATH REFERRED TO 61 TIMES. WE FIND, TOO, THAT THE SAVIOR INVARIABLY SELECTED THE SABBATH (SATURDAY) TO TEACH IN THE SYNAGOGUES AND WORK MIRACLES. THE 4 GOSPELS REFER TO THE SABBATH (SATURDAY) 51 TIMES..."
- "... THE REDEEMER REFERS TO HIMSELF AS 'THE LORD OF THE SABBATH'... HE NEVER ONCE HINTED AT A DESIRE TO CHANGE IT... ... THUS THE SABBATH (SATURDAY) FROM GENESIS TO REVELATION !!!"
- "HENCE THE CONCLUSION IS INEVITABLE... THAT OF THOSE WHO FOLLOW THE BIBLE AS THEIR GUIDE, THE ISRAELITES AND SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS HAVE THE EXCLUSIVE WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE ON THEIR SIDE, WHILST THE BIBLICAL PROTESTANT HAS NOT A WORD IN SELF-DEFENSE FOR HIS SUBSTITUTION OF SUNDAY FOR SATURDAY..."
- "... WHILST THE PHARISEES OF OLD KEPT THE TRUE SABBATH, OUR MODERN PHARISEES HAVE NEVER ONCE IN THEIR LIVES KEPT THE TRUE SABBATH, WHICH THEIR DIVINE MASTER KEPT TO HIS DYING DAY, AND WHICH HIS APOSTLES KEPT, AFTER HIS EXAMPLE, FOR 30 YEARS AFTERWARD, ACCORDING TO THE SACRED RECORD..."
- "THE BIBLE AND THE SABBATH CONSTITUTE THE WATCHWORD OF PROTESTANTISM; BUT WE HAVE DEMONSTRATED THAT IT IS THE BIBLE AGAINST THEIR SABBATH... WE HAVE SHOWN THAT NO GREATER CONTRADICTION EVER EXISTED THAN THEIR THEORY AND PRACTICE! WE HAVE PROVED THAT NEITHER THEIR BIBLICAL ANCESTORS NOR THEMSELVES HAVE EVER KEPT ONE SABBATH DAY IN THEIR LIVES..."

NOW, REMEMBER, THIS WAS FROM THE PEN OF AN EXTREMELY KNOWLEDGEABLE CATHOLIC THEOLOGIAN—

AND HE TOLD IT EXACTLY LIKE IT IS...

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

- "THE CATHOLIC CHURCH FOR OVER 1,000 YEARS BEFORE THE EXISTENCE OF A PROTESTANT, BY VIRTUE OF HER DIVINE MISSION, CHANGED THE DAY FROM SATURDAY TO SUNDAY..."
- "WE SAY BY VIRTUE OF HER DIVINE MISSION, BECAUSE HE WHO CALLED HIMSELF THE 'LORD OF THE SABBATH' ENDOWED HER WITH HIS OWN POWER TO TEACH, 'HE THAT HEARETH YOU, HEARETH ME'... AND PROMISED TO BE WITH HER TO THE END OF THE WORLD. SHE HOLDS HER CHARTER FROM HIM— A CHARTER AS INFALLIBLE AS PERPETUAL..."
- "THE PROTESTANT WORLD AT ITS BIRTH FOUND THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH (SUNDAY) TOO STRONGLY ENTRENCHED TO RUN COUNTER TO ITS EXISTENCE... IT WAS THEREFORE PLACED UNDER THE NECESSITY OF ACQUIESCING IN THE ARRANGEMENT, THUS IMPLYING THE CHURCH'S RIGHT TO CHANGE THE DAY, FOR OVER 300 YEARS..."
- "...THE ISRAELITES AND SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS ARE WITNESSES OF THIS WEEKLY DESECRATION OF THE DAY NAMED BY GOD SO REPEATEDLY..."
- "THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD CANNOT PRESENT A MORE STUPID, SELF-STULTIFYING SPECIMEN OF DERELICTION OF PRINCIPLE THAN THIS... THAT IMMENSE CONCOURSE OF BIBLE CHRISTIANS, THE METHODISTS, HAVE DECLARED THAT THE SABBATH HAS NEVER BEEN ABROGATED, WHILST THE FOLLOWERS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, TOGETHER WITH HER DAUGHTER, THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH OF THE UNITED STATES, ARE COMMITTED BY THE 20th ARTICLE OF RELIGION THAT THE CHURCH CANNOT LAWFULLY ORDAIN ANYTHING CONTRARY TO GOD'S WRITTEN WORD, YET GOD'S WRITTEN WORD ENJOINS HIS WORSHIP TO BE OBSERVED ON SATURDAY ABSOLUTELY, REPEATEDLY, AND MOST EMPHATICALLY... ALL BIBLICAL SECTS OCCUPY THE SAME SELF-STULTIFYING POSITION WHICH NO EXPLANATION CAN MODIFY, MUCH LESS JUSTIFY."
- "THEY HAVE IGNORED AND CONDEMNED THEIR TEACHER, THE BIBLE... AND THEY HAVE ADOPTED A DAY KEPT BY THE CATHOLIC CHURCH... THE 'MOTHER OF ABOMINATIONS'..."
- "...THEIR PRETENSE FOR LEAVING THE BOSOM OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH WAS FOR APOSTASY FROM THE TRUTH AS TAUGHT IN THE WRITTEN WORD. THEY ADOPTED THE WRITTEN WORD AS THEIR SOLE TEACHER, WHICH THEY HAD NO SOONER DONE THAN THEY ABANDONED IT, AS THESE ARTICLES HAVE ABUNDANTLY PROVED..."

25

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH WAS INTRODUCED IN THE GARDEN OF EDEN, AND WAS INTACT FOR GOD'S PEOPLE UP UNTIL THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH TOOK CONTROL OF CHRISTIANITY!...

AGAIN...

IN THE EARLY THIRD CENTURY THIS CHURCH INTRODUCED WORSHIP ON ONE SUNDAY A YEAR IN HONOR OF THE RESURRECTION. THEN WHEN "LENT" WAS ESTABLISHED THEY INSTIGATED SUNDAY-WORSHIP ON EACH SUNDAY DURING THE FORTY DAYS — BUT UP TO 300 A.D. BOTH SATURDAY AND SUNDAY WERE KEPT!

THEN CAME THE "WORSHIP-ON-SUNDAY-UPON-PAIN-OF-DEATH" ORDERS FROM CONSTANTINE, THE WORLD'S FIRST SUNDAY BLUE LAWS! THIS WAS SOON FOLLOWED UP BY POPES WISHING TO DO AWAY WITH THE SUPPOSEDLY "JEWISH" SATURDAY SABBATH THAT THE CHRISTIANS KEPT, SO THEY MADE SATURDAYS A DAY OF ENFORCED FASTING AND MOURNING, WHILE FEASTING AND CELEBRATING THE RESURRECTION ON SUNDAYS! AND THIS HELPED THE CHURCH TO CONVERT THE SUN-WORSHIPPING PAGANS WHO WISHED TO KEEP THEIR "SUN" DAY!

SO, THERE'S THE BREACH!!

BROUGHT ABOUT BY NO ONE ELSE BUT THE PAPACY! THE "BREACH," THE PERIOD DURING WHICH MOST OF THE CHRISTIAN WORLD IGNORED THE LORD'S HOLY SABBATH!

27

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

GOD KNEW THAT MOST OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE WOULD REJECT HIS SON, AND THERE WAS NO NEED IN OVER-BURDENING THE GENTILES WITH NUMEROUS SYMBOLIC CEREMONIES THAT THEY THEMSELVES NEVER HISTORICALLY PARTICIPATED IN — SO JESUS "SIMPLIFIED" THE CEREMONY!

TODAY WE:

- 1 ACCEPT CHRIST,
- 2 ARE BAPTIZED,
- 3 TAKE COMMUNION, AND

OBEY GOD'S LAWS!

... AND THE REST OF THE CEREMONIES WERE "NAILED TO THE CROSS"!

CRITICS ALSO LIKE TO POINT TO ROMANS 14 TO SAY THAT GOD NO LONGER CONSIDERS THE SEVENTH DAY OF THE WEEK AS "HOLY," "BLESSED," OR SANCTIFIED, BUT PAUL'S LETTER TO THE ROMAN CHURCH WAS MERELY ADDRESSING THE PROBLEMS THAT WERE WELLING UP BETWEEN THE TWO MAIN GROUPS OF FIRST CENTURY CHRISTIANS! JEWISH CHRISTIANS AND GENTILE CHRISTIANS WERE CONSTANTLY JUDGING EACH OTHER... MEAT WHICH WAS OFFERED TO IDOLS WAS AN ITEM OF CONTENTION, AS WAS THE RELUCTANCE OF THE JEWISH CONVERTS TO LET GO OF THE AGE-OLD SYMBOLIC SHADOWS AND CEREMONIES!

THAT'S WHY PAUL WROTE "ONE MAN ESTEEMETH ONE DAY ABOVE ANOTHER: ANOTHER ESTEEMETH EVERY DAY ALIKE. LET EVERY MAN BE FULLY PERSUADED IN HIS OWN MIND." (ROMANS 14:5)

BUT THIS HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH OF THE MORAL LAW OF GOD WHICH WAS INDEED A HOLY DAY IN ITSELF !!

THE ONLY LOGICAL CONCLUSION ...

THE SABBATH OF CREATION WEEK WAS NEVER "A SHADOW OF THINGS TO COME"!

"TYPES" AND "SHADOWS" CAME INTO EXISTENCE AS A RESULT OF SIN, AND POINTED FORWARD TO THE DELIVERANCE FROM SIN!

THE SABBATH WAS MADE BEFORE SIN EXISTED! THEREFORE IT WAS NEVER A TYPE OR SHADOW !!

THE SEVENTH-DAY SABBATH WAS NEVER "NAILED TO THE CROSS" !!

NOR ANY OF THE OTHER TEN COMMANDMENTS!

SEE MATTHEW 5:17!

31

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

TO THOSE WHO THINK THE DISCIPLES TAUGHT TO WORSHIP ON THE DAY OF THE RESURRECTION :

SERIOUSLY, DEAR FRIENDS, DO YOU BELIEVE THAT THE DISCIPLES TAUGHT THEIR FELLOW JEWS THAT JESUS WAS THE MESSIAH AND THAT THE NEW DAY TO WORSHIP WOULD BE SUNDAY ???
DO YOU REALLY BELIEVE THAT ??

LOOK:

STEPHEN WAS STONED TO DEATH BY THE JEWS IN 34 A.D. FOR TEACHING THAT JESUS HAD RISEN FROM THE DEAD AND TRULY WAS THE LONG-AWAITED MESSIAH, AND THIS HAPPENED APPROXIMATELY THREE AND A HALF YEARS AFTER CHRIST WAS CRUCIFIED! THEN THE BIBLE TELLS US THAT THE GOSPEL WAS TAKEN TO THE GENTILES...
(SEE ACTS 7:59, 8:1, 13:46)

... NOW, COMMON SENSE SHOULD TELL YOU THIS: IF THE APOSTLES WERE SPREADING THE WORD THAT "SUNDAY" WAS THE "NEW DAY TO WORSHIP," THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN

- ① HUGE CONTROVERSIES OVER IT !!
- ② NONE OF THOSE APOSTLES OR THEIR CONVERTS WOULD HAVE LIVED OUT THE YEAR !!

REMEMBER, THE JEWS STONED PEOPLE FOR SABBATH-BREAKING ! IF THE APOSTLES TAUGHT THAT "SUNDAY" WAS TO REPLACE SATURDAY, THE BIBLE WOULD BE FILLED WITH THE VIOLENT JEWISH REACTION TO IT !!

DO YOU REALLY THINK THE JEWS WOULD HAVE TOLERATED THE TEACHING OF ANOTHER WEEKLY HOLY DAY ?? NO WAY !!

SO LET'S GET THIS FANTASY OUT OF OUR HEADS THAT THE APOSTLES EVER TAUGHT TO WORSHIP GOD ON "SUNDAY" — IT'S TOTALLY OUT OF THE QUESTION. THE CHANGE TO SUNDAY WORSHIP CAME FROM ONLY ONE PLACE: THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH !

33

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

HERE'S WHAT JESUS SAID ABOUT THE "TEN" COMMANDMENTS :

For verily I say to you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."

MATTHEW 5:18

SO!

ALL OTHER BIBLE VERSES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT ABOUT THE SABBATH MUST AGREE WITH THIS SIMPLE AND DIRECT STATEMENT!

- THE BOOK OF ACTS COVERS A PERIOD OF 23 YEARS AFTER JESUS' ASCENSION, AND MENTIONS THE SABBATH IN 8 DIFFERENT CHAPTERS WITHOUT A HINT OF ANY CHANGE !!
- CHRISTIAN GENTILES KEPT THE SABBATH ! ACTS 13:42 ! AND VERSE 43 GOES ON TO SAY THAT THE SABBATHKEEPING GENTILES WERE LIVING UNDER GRACE !
- PAUL TOLD FELIX THAT HE BELIEVED "ALL THINGS WHICH ARE WRITTEN IN THE LAW AND IN THE PROPHETS" ! ACTS 24:14 !
- PAUL TESTIFIED TO FESTUS THAT HE HAD OFFENDED IN NOTHING "AGAINST THE LAW OF THE JEWS" ! ACTS 25:8 ! AND ACTS 26:22 SAYS THAT PAUL TAUGHT "NONE OTHER THINGS THAN THOSE WHICH THE PROPHETS AND MOSES DID SAY SHOULD COME" !

HOW DID THE HEATHEN CONVERTS RECEIVE INSTRUCTION AS TO KNOWING WHAT DAY WAS HOLY ?? IT'S SIMPLE ! THEY READ THE NUMEROUS REFERENCES TO THE SABBATH IN THE WRITINGS OF THE APOSTLES — SIXTY OF THEM !! (AND ONLY ONE MENTIONS ABOLISHING CERTAIN "SABBATH DAYS"...)

THE HEATHEN CONVERTS ALSO READ THE OLD TESTAMENT — AND HAD NO PROBLEM UNDERSTANDING THAT THE SEVENTH DAY WAS GOD'S HOLY DAY OF THE WEEK !

AND THEY KEPT IT !

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

37

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

ANOTHER STORY...

THERE WAS A MAN WHO OWNED A FABRIC STORE, AND A WOMAN BOUGHT TEN YARDS OF MATERIAL FROM HIM — WHEN SHE LATER LAID OUT THE MATERIAL AT HER HOME, SHE FOUND THAT IT WAS TOO SHORT FOR HER PATTERNS! SHE MEASURED IT AND DISCOVERED IT WAS TEN INCHES TOO SHORT.

THE LADY TOOK THE MATERIAL BACK TO THE STORE AND TOLD THE OWNER THAT HE DIDN'T GIVE HER THE FULL TEN YARDS.

"OF COURSE I DID," HE SAID TO HER. "WE ARE ALWAYS HONEST IN OUR MEASUREMENT OF MATERIAL." THE OWNER MOTIONED TO THE YARDSTICK ATTACHED TO THE EDGE OF HIS TABLE.

THE LADY BROUGHT WITH HER A BRAND NEW YARDSTICK, AND SHE PLACED IT ALONG SIDE THE SHOPOWNER'S OLDER YARDSTICK, AND SAID, "LOOK — YOUR YARDSTICK IS ONE INCH SHORT."

IT WAS TRUE! THE SHOPOWNER WAS VERY, VERY SURPRISED. HE'D NEVER NOTICED IT BEFORE.

THE MAN'S FATHER HAD OWNED THIS STORE, AND HIS GRANDFATHER BEFORE THAT — BUT EVIDENTLY OVER THE YEARS THE END OF THE YARDSTICK HAD WORN AWAY! THE SHOPOWNER MADE GOOD ON THE LADY'S MATERIAL, AND IMMEDIATELY REPLACED THAT OLD YARDSTICK!

NOW, HE UNKNOWINGLY HAD BEEN SHORT-CHANGING PEOPLE ON MATERIAL, AND PERHAPS EVEN HIS FATHER BEFORE HIM — SO, WHAT WOULD HE DO NOW? LEAVE THAT OLD YARDSTICK RIGHT THERE ?? AND CONTINUE TO USE THE SHORTENED YARDSTICK ??

NO, OF COURSE NOT!

— BECAUSE HE'S DISCOVERED THE TRUTH OF THAT YARDSTICK!

THAT'S THE WAY IT IS WITH THE WORD OF GOD! WE MUST NOT CONDEMN OUR PARENTS, BECAUSE THEY LIVED UP TO ALL THE LIGHT THAT THEY KNEW — BUT WE MUST NOT BE CONTENT TO "STAY" WHERE THEY WERE WHEN WE DISCOVER THE COMPLETE

TRUTH OF THE WORD OF GOD FOR OURSELVES!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

NOW LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT WHAT THE EARLY CATHOLIC CHURCH THOUGHT ABOUT THE "JEWS"...

* THE 48 STEPS DOWN IS FROM THE GREAT CONTROVERSY EDITION PUBLISHED BY PILGRIM'S REST.

45

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

HISTORY IS PEPPERED WITH WRITINGS
ESPousing ANTI-JEWISH SENTIMENTS! TOTALLY INCORRECT AND EVIL THINGS WERE MADE UP AND TOLD ABOUT THE JEWS — THEY SUPPOSEDLY CELEBRATED THE DEATH OF CHRIST BY ABDUCTING AND SACRIFICING YOUNG CHRISTIAN BOYS...
THEY WERE CONSTANTLY REFERRED TO AS "THE CHRIST KILLERS"...

CENTURIES OF HATE AND MISUNDERSTANDING RESULTED MOST RECENTLY IN THE HOLOCAUST WHEREIN HITLER MURDERED MILLIONS — AND EVEN TODAY WE CAN HEAR CONTEMPTUOUS HATE-RUMORS THAT ARE TOTALLY GROUNDLESS...

THE HATRED OF THE JEWS...

... THAT'S WHAT PROMPTED EARLY ROMAN CHRISTIANS LIKE JUSTIN MARTYR (100-165 A.D.)
TO DO THEIR BEST TO PROMOTE JUSTIFICATION FOR SUNDAY WORSHIP! JUSTIN MARTYR
WROTE THAT GOD HAD MADE THE SABBATH ON ACCOUNT OF THE WICKEDNESS OF THE JEWS, DEEMING IT "A MARK TO SINGLE THEM OUT FOR PUNISHMENT THEY SO WELL DESERVED FOR THEIR INFIDELITIES." AND HE CLAIMED THAT "THE EIGHTH DAY POSSESSES A CERTAIN MYSTERIOUS IMPORT, WHICH THE SEVENTH DOES NOT POSSESS," RELATING IT TO THE EIGHTH DAY OF THE CIRCUMCISION, AND ARBITRARILY TO THE EIGHT PEOPLE THAT GOD SAVED FROM THE FLOOD — COUPLED WITH THE FACT THAT PAGANS HONORED
SUN-DAY, JUSTIN MARTYR MADE MISUSE OF NUMEROUS BIBLE VERSES LIKE JOHN 1:9,
MALACHI 4:2, LUKE 1:78-79, MATT. 17:2, AND REV. 22:4, ETC., TO "PROVE"
THAT SUNDAY WAS THE WAY TO GO!...

BUT NO MATTER HOW "LOGICAL"
THE ARGUMENTS, THE MAIN REASON
BEHIND ALL THESE CHANGES IN
THE 7TH-DAY SABBATH WAS A VERY
UN-CHRISTIAN ONE: HATE!

LITERALLY THERE WERE "CANNONS TO THE RIGHT OF THEM," AND "CANNONS TO THE LEFT OF THEM" — CANONS, PROCLAMATIONS, AND EVIL LAWS

ABOUNDED !!

THE BEAUTY
OF THE TRUE
SABBATH
WAS DEFACED!

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

49

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

OBVIOUSLY, FOR A PERSON TO BE A PART OF GOD'S REMNANT MEANS THAT ONE MUST BECOME A PART OF A SABBATH-KEEPING CHRISTIAN CHURCH! AND FOR OVER 140 YEARS THE SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST CHURCH HAS OPENLY CLAIMED THE DISTINCTION OF BEING "THE LORD'S REMNANT CHURCH."

CURRENTLY THERE ARE OVER FIVE MILLION SABBATH-KEEPING PEOPLE THAT ARE MEMBERS OF THE SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST CHURCH, AND THESE GOD-LOVING CHRISTIANS ARE LOCATED IN OVER 190 COUNTRIES! SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS ARE WELL-KNOWN FOR THEIR QUIET CHRIST-LIKE BEHAVIOR, AND THEIR LOVE FOR GOD AND MAN.

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS SET ASIDE THAT ENTIRE 24-HOUR PERIOD FROM SUNDOWN FRIDAY TO SUNDOWN SATURDAY AS THE MOST HOLY PERIOD — IT'S THE TIME TO REST FROM THE WORRIES AND CARES OF THE WORLD, TO STOP "WORKING" AND SPEND QUALITY TIME COMMUNING WITH THE LORD. THIS WEEKLY PRACTICE IS A TRUE BLESSING, HELPING TO REVITALIZE BOTH THE MIND AND THE SPIRIT!

* * *

SOME OF YOU MAY CONSIDER IT A "STRANGE" THING TO DO, GOING TO CHURCH ON SATURDAYS — IN MOSES'S DAY THE PEOPLE PROMPTED THIS COMMENT FROM THE LORD: "I HAVE WRITTEN TO HIM THE GREAT THINGS OF MY LAW, BUT THEY WERE COUNTED AS A STRANGE THING..." (MOSES 8:12)

... AND THERE'S A GOOD CHANCE THAT MANY OF TODAY'S PEOPLE WILL RESPOND IN THIS SAME WAY IF YOU, THE READER, SHOULD DECIDE TO BEGIN TO KEEP THE GREAT AND HOLY SABBATH OF GOD'S LAW. BUT JUST REMEMBER THIS:

YOU'LL BE IN EXCELLENT COMPANY!

MOSES KEPT THE SABBATH, AND ABRAHAM, AND DANIEL, AND DAVID, AND ISAIAH, AND EZEKIEL, AND ELIJAH, PLUS ALL THE DISCIPLES, JOHN, MARK, LUKE, MATTHEW, ETC...

ALL THE HOLY MEN OF THE BIBLE KEPT THE SABBATH!!

THAT PUTS YOU IN REAL GOOD COMPANY, IN MY OPINION! A "STRANGE" THING TO DO ?? HARDLY! THE ONLY STRANGE THING GOING ON HERE IN OUR WORLD IS THAT SO MANY GOOD CHRISTIANS IGNORE THE LORD'S HOLY SABBATH, AND INSTEAD THEY OPT FOR THAT OTHER DAY OF THE WEEK...

Sabbath-keeping Men of the Bible:

- 1) Matthew
- 2) Mark
- 3) Luke
- 4) John
- 5) Paul

... THE DAY OF THE WEEK THAT SHOULD CLEARLY BE CALLED "THE CATHOLIC DAY OF THE WEEK!"

53

Table of Contents < - Previous Next - >

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

HOW WOULD YOU FEEL IF YOU SAW SOMEONE THOUGHTLESSLY TREAD UPON OUR FLAG?...

... THIS IS EXACTLY WHAT MOST CHRISTIANS DO : THEY TRAMPLE UNDERFOOT THE SABBATH COMMANDMENT, IGNORING IT AND THINKING "IT'S OF NO CONSEQUENCE"...

ISAIAH 58:13

YET IN 1 PETER 2:21 THE LORD TELLS US TO FOLLOW IN HIS STEPS, AND NO CHRISTIAN CAN CONTEST THE FACT THAT JESUS KEPT THE SEVENTH DAY ALL HIS LIFE ! "THE SON OF MAN IS LORD EVEN OF THE SABBATH." (MATT. 12:8) SHOULDN'T WE FOLLOW IN HIS STEPS AND FOLLOW OUR LORD'S EXAMPLE ? OF COURSE WE SHOULD !

"THOU HAST DESPISED MINE HOLY THINGS, AND HAST PROFANED MY SABBATHS..." (EZEKIEL 22:8) GOD HAS TOLD US VERY CLEARLY THAT IF WE BREAK EVEN ONE OF HIS COMMANDMENTS, WE ARE THEN HELD "GUILTY OF ALL"... (SEE JAMES 2:10)

AT THE CLOSE OF THE 1,000-YEAR MILLENNIUM WHEN THE LORD CREATES THE NEW EARTH, THE SABBATH WILL FOREVER BE OBSERVED ! WE READ ABOUT IT IN ISAIAH 66:22-23...

"AND IT SHALL COME TO PASS THAT FROM ONE NEW MOON TO ANOTHER, AND FROM ONE SABBATH TO ANOTHER, SHALL ALL FLESH COME TO WORSHIP BEFORE ME, SAITH THE LORD !"

AND THAT SABBATH IS THE 7th-DAY SABBATH !

55

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

The Keys of This Blood, by Malachi Martin

"John Paul's goal is a geopolitical structure for the society of nations designed and maintained according to the ethical plans and doctrinal outlines of Christianity as taught by the Roman Pontiff as the earthly Vicar of Christ." The Keys of This Blood, Malachi Martin, Page 455

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

> The Truth about the Sabbath

The History of the origin of Sunday Worship. View it.

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

This page is coming soon, please check back later

Thank you for your patience.

Enter a description of what you are looking for.

> The Truth about the Sabbath

The History of the origin of Sunday Worship. View it.

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

WAS THE WEEKLY SABBATH DAY EVER INTENDED FOR ONLY THE JEWISH PEOPLE?

NO!

FIRST, IT WAS NEVER CALLED "THE JEWISH SABBATH DAY." IT WAS ALWAYS CALLED "THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD!"

JESUS SAID THE SABBATH WAS MADE FOR MAN (MARK 2:27), THAT IS, FOR THE RACE, AS THE WORD "MAN" HERE IS UNLIMITED — HENCE, THE SABBATH IS FOR THE GENTILE AS WELL AS THE JEW!

REMEMBER: THE SABBATH WAS CREATED 2,000 YEARS BEFORE THE JEWS EXISTED!

"THE BIBLE ALSO SAYS THAT "WOMAN" WAS MADE FOR MAN (COR. 11:3) —

SO: IF THE SABBATH IS "ONLY FOR THE JEWS," THEN MARRIAGE WOULD ONLY BE FOR THE JEWS AS WELL!!

MARRIAGE AND THE SABBATH ARE TWO HOLY INSTITUTIONS WHICH GOD SET UP IN EVEN BEFORE SIN CAME INTO EXISTENCE — BOTH WERE MADE FOR ALL MANKIND!

GOD EVEN PRONOUNCED A SPECIAL BLESSING UPON ALL THE GENTILES WHO KEEP THE SABBATH! AND HE SAID THAT "ALL PEOPLE,"

ALL PEOPLE

WOULD BE WELCOMED WITHIN HIS HOUSE OF PRAYER! (ISAIAH 56:6-7)

Table of Contents <- Previous Next ->

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

14

Table of Contents < - Previous Next - >

s / m / t / w / t / f / s

Tell a friend about this site

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

NOTE:

OBVIOUSLY, THE PREVIOUS TWO PAGES MAKE THE POINT THAT THE SABBATH HAS "ALWAYS" BEEN IN EFFECT —

NOW, SOME OF YOU MAY SAY THAT, "THERE WAS NO WEEKLY SABBATH BETWEEN THE TIME THAT GOD SANCTIFIED THE SEVENTH DAY AT CREATION TILL THE TIME OF MOSES." YES, THE FIRST MENTION IN THE BIBLE OF GOD EXPECTING HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE TO REST ON THE SEVENTH DAY WAS WHEN THEY RECEIVED THE MANNA IN THE DESERT ON THEIR WAY TO THE PROMISED LAND, AND THEN CAME THE MOUNT SINAI EXPERIENCE WHERE IT WAS "PUT IN WRITING"! SO SOME MAY THINK THAT THERE WAS NO WEEKLY SABBATH TILL AROUND 1400 B.C.

BUT: DOES THAT MEAN THAT THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD HAVING BLESSED THE SEVENTH DAY WAS "NON-EXISTENT"??

LUKE 3:23-38 LISTS THE GENEALOGY OF JESUS ALL THE WAY BACK TO ADAM, AND IT'S FAIR TO ASSUME THAT EVERY ONE OF THOSE RIGHTEOUS GODLY MEN PASSED ON WHAT THEY HAD SEEN AND KNOWN! AND THERE'S NO DOUBT THAT GOD INFORMED ADAM THAT THE SEVENTH DAY WAS HOLY!! ACCORDINGLY, EVERY ANCESTOR OF JESUS UNDOUBTEDLY KNEW THE SEVENTH DAY WAS HOLY!

A POINT TO KEEP IN MIND IS THAT WRITING WAS A RARE AND "UNKNOWN" ART TO MEN UP UNTIL MOSES' DAY — THIS WAS THE FIRST CHANCE MAN HAD, REALLY, TO PUT GOD'S STORY INTO WRITING! AND THE FOURTH COMMANDMENT BEGINS WITH "REMEMBER"... REMEMBER THE SEVENTH DAY... SEE, DURING THE TWO HUNDRED-YEAR EGYPTIAN CAPTIVITY THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN LITTLE CHANCE TO PRACTICE ACTUALLY KEEPING THE SABBATH: THEY WERE ENSLAVED IN EGYPT!

SO, WERE THEY TOLD TO REMEMBER SOMETHING THAT THEY HAD NEVER KNOWN ??

THE TRUTH IS THAT THEY WERE BEING TOLD TO REMEMBER WHAT THEY ONCE KNEW!

PROOF:

IN GENESIS 26:5 IT SAYS THAT "ABRAHAM OBEYED MY VOICE, AND KEPT MY CHARGE, MY COMMANDMENTS, MY STATUTES, AND MY LAWS!"

ABRAHAM KEPT THE LORD'S SABBATH !!

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

THE BIBLE SAYS THAT "GOD IS NOT THE AUTHOR OF CONFUSION" (1 COR. 14:33), YET HOW IS IT THAT THERE CAN BE OVER 200 DIFFERENT DENOMINATIONS WHEN ALL OF THESE CHURCHES CLAIM ONLY ONE SOURCE FOR "TRUTH," THE BIBLE ??...

A QUESTION :
WHY
DO PEOPLE GO TO THE CHURCH THAT THEY GO TO ?

SOME GO "BECAUSE IT'S CLOSE," SOME BECAUSE "I LIKE THE PREACHER," SOME BECAUSE "I LIKE THE SPECIAL ACTIVITIES," OR "THEY HAVE A BEAUTIFUL BUILDING," OR, PROBABLY THE MOST COMMON ANSWER :
"I GO TO MY CHURCH BECAUSE MY PARENTS DID. I WAS BROUGHT UP IN THIS CHURCH..."

...ARE THESE GOOD REASONS ?!?

THE BIBLE SAYS IN 1 PETER 3:15 THAT WE SHOULD BE ABLE TO GIVE A SANCTIFIED REASON FOR THE HOPE THAT IS WITHIN US, BECAUSE OF WHAT WE BELIEVE IN ...
AND JESUS SAID IN JOHN 17:17 TO "SANCTIFY THEM THROUGH THY TRUTH, THY WORD IS TRUTH "!

TRUTH, SANCTIFYING TRUTH, IS REVEALED THROUGH THE WORD OF GOD, THE BIBLE ! SO THEREFORE WE CAN CONCLUDE THAT OUR BELIEFS, THE REASON FOR THE HOPE WITHIN US, SHOULD BE BASED UPON GOD'S WORD ! AND FINALLY, WHEN WE "BELONG" TO A CHURCH, (AND WE END UP "ENDORISING" THE TEACHINGS OF THAT CHURCH), WE SHOULD ENDEAVOR TO SEEK AND FIND THAT CHURCH WHICH IS UNCOMPROMISINGLY TEACHING AND PRACTICING BIBLE TRUTH !!

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

SABBATH TRUTH

"Come unto me...and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Sabbath Purpose | Which Day? | Sabbath in Prophecy | Sabbath Questions | Keep It Holy | Sabbath History | Sabbath Resources | Home

Table of Contents < - Previous

"Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath."

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.

“Everything you wanted to know about the Sabbath.”

Copyright © 2008. All rights reserved.